

Tomato Crop Brings Profit at Rocky Ford

Tomatoes, according to Fred Gahagan, division freight agent of the Santa Fe railroad company, are the coming crop in the vicinity of Rocky Ford and Manzanola, the farmers in that territory reaping large gains the past summer from that product alone.

How the industry has grown in a space of a few years is told in the following statement made by R. W. Helper, superintendent of the Libby, McNeill and Libby packing plant at Manzanola.

"The proposition is an excellent one from the farmer's point of view. For instance, $12. a ton for the tomatoes this year. The average production was fourteen tons per acre, and some farmers raised as high as twenty-five tons. The picking of tomatoes comes to $2.50 per ton. The plants are furnished the farmers at cost.

"The tomatoes are paid for as each load is brought in. The pay roll for help at the plant amounts to $4,500 a week. The total amount expected to be paid out for labor and stock this year will amount to $200,000. The plant will operate about nine months of the year, and something more than 300 car loads of products will go in and out of Manzanola.

"The plant has canned 4,500 tons of tomatoes and 300 tons of beans.

"The beans bring $60 a ton to grower, the highest yield being five tons per acre. The average is three and a half tons. Dr. Helper mentioned two girls who cleared $285 from three-fourth of an acre of beans.

"Up to date the factory at Manzanola has canned over 60,000 cases of tomatoes or 100 cars. The average made by the tomato growers per acre is fifteen tons or $180. Deducting $2.50 per ton paid for picking, grower is left $142.50 an acre. Some growers grow as high as twenty-five tons per acre.

The color of Colorado grown tomatoes is darker and present a better appearance after canning than do those grown in other localities, and the factory is unable to supply the demand.

"In addition to the tomatoes 30,000 gallons of catsup were made this year, using garlic and onions to give the proper flavor.

"These figures are sufficient to show that the possibilities for intensive and profitable farming in this section of the country have hardly been scratched. While beans are a reliable crop, and returns good yields, a few acres devoted to some of these crops would bring greatly increased returns, and these crops are easily grown here. --- Gazzett --- Topic, Rocky Ford Colorado.

Dr. Hanley Will Give Entire Time

Dr. J. E. Hanley, Chiropractic Massuer, is making the announcement in this issue, that he will have to give his entire time to the people of this territory. His practice is growing so rapidly it will take all his time to look after his practice here. He stated that this place was bound to make a city and he was proud of his friends and would make this his future home.

Bailey County Is To Be Or Is Not To Be

Southern California and Florida have been made powerful thru the improvements made by their land owners. Other sections that have been made are equally the result of vision and faith. They have grown and prospered in proportion to that vision and the faith they put into it.

There are probably few acres in America today having land as valuable as that of Bailey county with as little under cultivation. If there was some doubt as to the denial Nature lack of water, an alkaline soil, severe temperatures, or other drawbacks there might be more reason for Bailey county's idle acres.

In the beginning much Bailey county land was bought as an investment. As an investment it has made good. It has advanced markedly in value but can you conscientiously expect to keep it advancing unless you show faith and make improvements necessary to that advancement.

If the thing we are urging you to do meant a donation on your part, if every dictate of good business didn't approve it, if thru making the improvements we are asking you would fail to greatly enhance the value of your land and make good interest on your investment, then we wouldn't be asking it.

But with everything to your advantage and the advantage of the Muleshoe country, of which you are a part, and in which you have shown your faith, we feel that you will find the thing which we ask you to do is a thing you will be glad you have done many times during the next few years.

Many have decided to improve their Bailey county lands as the result of the suggestions and appeals set out in this series of articles. Many are seriously considering the matter. Won't you be one who will build a modest house, well, sheds and lots on your place at a modest expenditure to help make investment better and to help us care for the hundreds of families who are seeking location here?

Your representative here will be glad to make arrangement for you and to superintend the improvements.

Bees Sting Bear Cats Last Friday

The Yellow Jackets defeated the Happy Bear Cats last Friday, the score being 45 to 0. Moeller raced the entire length of the field on the initial kickoff for a touchdown. The Yellow Jackets play Portales here Friday, but BO watch for the Yellow Jackets when they hit Olton here Armistice day.

What Are You Going To Do With Our County Roads

To build up the country, three things are most essential. Good churches, schools and roads. Of the three, good roads are the most important. You can not derive full benefit from good churches and schools unless you have good roads to give you access to them.

Good roads increase the value of your land, cut the cost of hauling of your products to market. In this day of automobile transportation, hard surfaced roads cut the cost of automobile up keep in half. Your tire life will be more than doubled, your repair bill cut into, your regular gas mileage increased at least one third when travelling on hard surfaced roads.

We believe that hard surfaced roads would be of more importance to Bailey County than another railroad for these reasons; first The people who buy your land and settle up the country travel in automobiles, not railroads. Hard surfaced roads bring more people thru your country, more land seekers, more buyers and more settlers.

Second: Each automobile passing thru your country leaves a good deal of money, hard surface roads will bring more automobiles thru your country, thereby leaving more money there.

Third: Under the gross gasoline tax, the money returned by the state to a county depends on the gasoline sales greatly and hard surfaced roads increase the gasoline sales in your county.

The State Highway Commission has designated a new highway from Del Rio to Midland and Muleshoe. This highway will run thru Bailey county from north to south via Baileyboro. This designation was granted with the provision that it be improved by Bailey county and unless we improve it we loose the traffic that will originate on the border and pass thru the county.

The state will give Bailey county 50 percent of the cost to hard surface roads across the county.

Unless this offer is taken advantage of it will be withdrawn in a short time and this aid will be given other counties. Lubbock County is building hard surface roads, Lamb County is planning a bond election to take advantage of the State Aid offer. Can Bailey County afford to do less?

Bailey County Health Nurse Arrives Monday

The Bailey county health nurse Miss Dorothy Wentland, is now in Muleshoe and is busy making plans and preparations for the beginning of her work thru out the county. Her first step in health work will be in the schools where she will not only weigh measure and inspect the children but where she will give health talks, demonstrations, distribute literature, posters and games dealing with the health and well being of the children of our county. Her work is based upon the teaching of health and as such a teacher she will endeavor to be of service to the county.

The success of such a project as Community Health will not be assured unless the worker has the full cooperation of all the people with whom she comes in contact this service requires not only the skilled worker but the help of the community. The health nurse is going to fill a long felt need in the county and with her a member of the community let us give her our utmost cooperation and help to further the cause of health.

With Miss Wentland is Miss Katherine Hagquest of Austin, who will assist the nurse in perfecting her plans for work in the county the coming year. Miss Hagquest will be here this week only.

Yellow Jackets Are Entertained Here

Mrs. C. F. Moeller entertained the Yellow Jackets football crew Tuesday afternoon. Ice cream and cake were served.

The Yellow Jackets, after feast ing, expressed the following slogan: 'We'll knock the OH out of Olton. Watch them do it Armistice.

The football crew feels as if they can win more games if a few more people would feed them cream and cake like Mrs. Moeller did.

Civic League Fosters Celebration Nov. 11

The Civic League of Muleshoe requests all ex soldiers, all school of Bailey county, teachers and every citizen in the county to be present Wednesday Nov. 11 at a big celebration and county get together meeting.

A parade is to be held of soldiers with the schools which will begin at 11 o'clock. All teachers are asked to make arrangements for the parade of their own schools.

At noon a free picnic dinner of such foods as may be easily prepared without dishes will be served to all.

Everyone who can do so is requested to bring a well filled basket.

There will be music and speaking before the football game between Olton and Muleshoe.

This will be a good game as both teams are fine players.

The guests of honors for the day will be all exsoldiers, all teachers, and the state and the county nurses who will be present.

Mrs. J. O. Lewis and children came in Thursday from Crosbyton to make their future home. Mr. Lewis is the new druggist at McCarty Drug Store. A. V. McCarty Jr. is building them a new house on the lot by his home in the Warren addition.

Crop Contest Closes On November 15th

If there are any more farmers who desire to enter the contest on the best yield of cotton and maize, get your name to the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce by Nov. 15, for on this day the contest will close and the prizes will be awarded on January 1st. That will give all the contestants a chance to gather weigh up the crop. See the Secretary the next time you are in town. Closing date is Nov. 15th 1925.

Mrs. Nina Elrod Entertains With Hallowe'en Party

A fine Hallowe'en party was given at the home of Mrs. Nina Elrod on last Saturday night. The reception rooms were tastefully decorated in black and yellow. The house was darkened, except for the softly shaded lights thus making the ghosts and hobgoblins placed in the most unexpected places assume an even more spooky appearance. As the guests entered they were greeted by a real live ghost. Various Hallowe'en games were played among the most exciting being the Dead Man's game. The witches also left a fortune for everyone present. The unmasking afforded much amusement each guessing who the others were.

A course of pimiento sandwiches fruit salad, pumpkin pie and 'witches brew' from her specially arranged pot was served.

At a late hour each guest left assuring the hostess of a most delightful evening. Those sharing in the pleasures were: Misses Eunice Page, Dovie Morris, Lotie Houk, Reta Lea Dodson, Gertrude Tucker, Helen Elrod, Ethel Kistler, Miss Vivian Courtney and little Norma Elrod, Mesdames Carl Elrod, and Nina Elrod.

The New High School Nearing Completion

The new high school building will probably be completed by November the fifteenth. This will relieve the crowded conditions that have existed heretofore. All 'undres' who were six years old on or before September the first, nineteen hundred and twenty five, may attend when we get in our new building. Tuition will be three dollars ($3.00) per school month, payable in advance. No more 'undres' will be admitted after the first semester, that is after the fifteenth of January, nineteen hundred and twenty six.

Mrs. DeShazo has been added to the ward school faculty. She has had three years college work and several successful experiences. She will begin work when the new building is completed.

"A member of the school board may not be an officer, director, or stock holder in a school depository." This ruling caused us to loose two valuable members of the school board recently. Mr. A. V. McCarty Jr. president of the board, and Mr. Ray Griffiths have been untiring in their efforts and have worked faithfully to better the schools of Muleshoe. We regret to loose their services.

Mr. L. S. Barron has been elected president to take the place left vacant by Mr. McCarty. Mr. G. A. Hutto takes the place of Mr. Ray Griffiths. Both of these men are experienced, and we welcome them into our midst.

The Muleshoe Public Schools now boast an enrollment of 213. There has been a steady increase in enrollment since school started. It is believed that the enrollment will reach 250 by January 1st, 1926.

The school board is to be commended for their earnest and untiring work. In addition to the regular work of the board they have put over a High School building program of which we are all justly proud.

Notice to Muleshoe Onion Growers

The Chamber of Commerce is very anxious to assist the farmers with the problem of securing onion slips or plants. So they have decided to plant a large onion bed at the farm of Taylor White, (field Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.) To furnish plants at cost, to the farmers. If you are going to plant onions let Mr. White know at once how many acres you expect to put in, so he can make the bed large enough to take care of you. Last year farmers had to pay as high as $3.00 per thousand to get plants. Next year we want to raise our own plants at cost.

If you do not want to buy plants, now is the time to plant your bed so you can raise them your self. Let's do this now.

NOTICE TO EX-SERVICE MEN

Green Manuring Improves Soil

Crop Turned Under Contributes Fertilizing Elements Needed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Green manuring as a means of increasing or maintaining soil productivity has come down to us from ancient times. The agricultural fraternity early discovered the value of turning under crops while green or soon after ripening for the purpose of soil enrichment. Nitrogen, a very costly element when purchased in concentrated form, exists in unlimited quantity in the atmosphere. When a green-manure crop is turned under it contributes to the soil not only the various fertilizing elements that have entered into the production of the crop itself, but it also adds to the soil a quantity of organic material theretofore not present. This organic matter, or humus, is beneficial in a number of ways. It makes the soil more porous and therefore capable of absorbing a large amount of water. This increased supply of humus is especially desirable in the case of heavy clays and sandy soils.

Requirements of Roots.

The roots of most crop plants need a moderate amount of air and moisture. They are thus enabled better to withstand drought and to produce greater yields. Soils rich in humus admit air more readily and retain larger quantities of water. Like the camel on a transdesert journey, such soils often imbibe sufficient water to last until the next oasis or drought-breaking rain is reached. It has been shown that while 100 pounds of sand can hold only 25 pounds of water and 100 pounds of clay 50 pounds, the same weight of humus or decaying organic matter will hold 100 pounds. This is a most convincing argument that the farmer should so increase the moisture-retention capacity of his soil as to provide reservoirs of water against the time of drought.

As the green manure, after it is turned under, decays, it provides food for soil bacteria. These bacteria break down and make available for use by crop plants the organic matter contained in the soil.

The roots of legumes, the most desirable of crops for green manuring purposes, have on them growths of varying sizes known as nodules. These nodules are produced by bacteria, the latter drawing their sustenance from the host plant, the legume. These bacteria, however, in the beneficial work they do, more than earn their board. The nodules serve as laboratories for the bacteria, whose task is to bring down into the soil for plant use a supply of free nitrogen. When these legumes are turned under the nitrogen, after passing through certain chemical processes, is changed into nitrates, a food as popular with crop plants as baked beans with Boston Yankees.

The question as to whether the entire crop of legumes should be turned under or the hay cut and merely the stubble plowed under is one to be determined largely by the degree of soil fertility and porosity, the system of agriculture followed, and other local conditions. In general, however, where the need for soil improvement is urgent, the entire crop can, with greater profit, be turned under.

Rodents Destroy Great Deal of Farmer's Grain

The saving of grain from rats and mice and other rodents is of vital importance in making the farm pay a maximum of profit. Every farmer knows that rodents destroy a great deal of grain, even though he may not know how much. The United States Department of Agriculture estimates that every rat eats or destroys at least $2 worth of feed in one year.

Proper storage of grain in strong corn cribs and granaries which have been so built as to resist the encroachments of rats and mice will save the farmer a large sum of money each year.

Concrete corn cribs and granaries are being built by many farmers nowadays because concrete construction is proof against rodents. They cannot gnaw their way into a concrete granary, nor are the surfaces in these structures such that they can climb the walls and enter.

Added to the fact that concrete granaries are rodent-proof are the many other important considerations in connection with this permanent type of construction. Concrete structures are fire-safe; the farmer need not be fearful that his grain supply will be destroyed by fire. Such construction is proof against weather, thus eliminating the danger of the grain being spoiled by dampness.

Chemical Action Caused by Use of Lime on Soil

Lime is a form of plant food. Analysis will show that it is found in all plants the same as nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash. It is not usually what we may call an essential element, since most soils contain lime enough for plant requirements. Clover and alfalfa contain considerable lime, and also the wood growth in trees, and seeds. Many soils are quite lacking in nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, so that these elements must be used in manures or fertilizers, but the common need of lime is to bring about some chemical action in the soil.

Hints Suggested to Prevent Calf Scours

Cure Will Be Simpler if Animal Is Treated Quickly.

Indigestion or inflammation in the stomach is the common cause of scours in calves. If the calves are watched closely and treated at the first indication of scours, the cure will be much simpler. Always begin the treatment by cutting down the ration, thus giving the calf a chance to rid itself of the irritating material.

In slight cases, after one or two feeding periods have passed, the calf will appear normal and full feeding can be gradually resumed. In more obstinate cases, however, it may be necessary to give a physic of two or three ounces of castor oil in a little milk. Formalin, one-half ounce in fifteen and one-half ounces of water, as a stock solution also is recommended. This should be given to the calf at the rate of a teaspoonful of the solution in each pint of milk fed.

But, since the "ounce of prevention" is all important, the following hints to calf feeders are suggested by dairy specialists at the New Jersey State Agricultural college:

1. Always have milk at the same temperature when feeding. Different temperatures will cause scours. The correct temperature is blood heat, or 98 degrees Fahrenheit.
2. Keep all feeding pails clean and sweet.
3. Do not overfeed. It will cause scours.
4. Keep calves in a bright, airy pen. Sunlight is essential to the growth of vigorous calves.
5. Always supply clean, fresh water.
6. Salt aids digestion. Keep it before the youngsters at all times.
7. Pens should be warm but not hot and damp.
8. Do not crowd too many calves in one pen.

Decreased Feed for Cow Lessens Flow of Milk

Now that the pasture season has come to a close, the dairyman's mind is turned toward the feeding of his cows this winter.

With high-priced grains and a shortage of hay in many sections, the first impulse is to rough them through as well as possible without feeding what the owner knows they really ought to have. This practice never pays with good cows, and if the cows are poor ones, then it does not pay to feed them anything. The place for the poor ones is the butcher and the sooner they go there, the less expense they will be to their owners.

As evidence of the fact that stinted feeding to good cows does not pay, a case is cited in one cow-testing association where the herd having the lowest feed cost of all the herds in the association, $33.41, produced the lowest average milk production, 3,026 pounds, the lowest average butterfat production, 133 pounds, and the lowest return above feed cost per cow, $16.36 per year. In the same cow-testing association the herd having the highest cost of feed per cow, $60.40, yielded the highest average production of milk, 7,202 pounds, the highest average production of butterfat, 359 pounds, and the highest return above feed cost per cow, $105, of all the herds in the association.

Return in dollars and cents over and above feed cost only comes with liberal feeding of the right feeds.—H. R. Lascelles, Fieldman, Colorado State Dairy Commission.

Squashes and Pumpkins Not Difficult to Keep

Squashes and pumpkins for feeding or house use are not difficult to keep. First cut the stem two or three inches away from the squash instead of pulling away. Squashes keep better than pumpkins, but both like a dry airy room, and no place is better than haymow. Piled here and covered with hay they will keep far into the winter. Squashes often keep well until spring. If you cannot use the haymow pile them in a granary bin if it is in the barn and provided stock is kept under the same roof. When covered with straw or hay they will generally keep safely. A few may be kept in a closet or in the basement if it is warm and airy.

FARM NOTES

A little paint on farm implements will prevent a lot of rust.

Keep the boy on the farm and make him a better farmer than yourself.

The road to successful farming is bordered with clover and alfalfa and paved with limestone.

Keeping good fences has a lot to do with keeping good friends, and every farmer needs both.

The good farmer owes it to his community as well as to himself to exhibit his best products at the fairs.

One way to increase the years and pleasure of the farm housewife is to decrease the drudgery of her work by installing labor-saving conveniences.

Avoid selecting corn which shows signs of mold or which is extremely rough and starchy. Off-colored ears or ears with discolored shredded butts make poor seed.

SICK WOMEN ATTENTION!

Read this Remarkable Testimony Regarding Results from Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Norfolk, Virginia.—"If you only knew how many women and girls have taken your medicine by hearing my testimony, it would seem wonderful to you. Every day and every chance I have I advise some one to try it. It was in June, 1904, when I had given up to never get well, that I wrote to you. My husband went to the drug-store and brought the Vegetable Compound home to me. In a few days I began to improve and I have often taken it since. I am now passing through the Change of Life and still stick by it and am enjoying wonderful health. When I first started with your medicines I was a mere shadow. My health seemed to be gone. The last doctor I had said he would give me no more local treatments unless I went to the Hospital and was operated on. That was when I gave the doctors up. Now I am a healthy robust woman. I wish I could tell the world what a wonderful medicine Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is. I will be only too glad to answer letters from anywhere. I wish all sick women would take it."—Mrs. J. A. Jones, 317 Colley Avenue, Norfolk, Virginia.

Helpfulness to Others, Man's Great Achievement

The man whose picture appears here was in every sense of the word helpful to mankind, as it was he who gave to the world Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which has brought restored health to countless people. One of them says: "I suffered from indigestion for about three years without finding any relief until I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and this medicine helped me wonderfully."

Lore for Dog-Owners

By Albert Payson Terhune

"PROVE TO YOUR DOG YOU HAVE GOOD SENSE"

"The Poor Dogs Scratch Like Fury."

HOT weather had struck Vine street. Also in one way or another hot weather had struck most of the pampered dogs owned on that exclusive street of the exclusive suburb.

Old Man Negley's regular job of trimming hedges and mowing lawns and tending flower-borders was interrupted more and more by calls for expert advice on handling such canine problems.

"I can't be a lawn doctor and a dog doctor at the same time," he complained at last, after Joel Berdan Lad taken up a solid half-hour of the old man's time one day in describing the warm weather's effect on the coat of his cocker spaniel. "Besides, mighty few of the dogs on Vine street or anywhere else really need a doctor. They need something that's harder to find. They need common-sense treatment. Suppose you folks whose dogs have things the matter with them meet on that big porch of the Vellers, at say about eight o'clock this evening; and let me come up and answer all your questions in a lump? It'll save time."

Accordingly, when the old man climbed the Veller's veranda steps that night he found no fewer than twelve dog owners awaiting him. Patiently he listened to their long-winded stories full of repetitions concerning the welfare or ill-fare of their dogs. Then he spoke.

"Mrs. Pahl," he began, "I notice you're wearing a thin muslin dress. Last winter you wore a big fur coat. It's the same principle with your collie dog. He can't put his fur coat in storage the way you do. So he put it, in bunches, on your rugs and carpets and hall floors. And he rubs stray hairs off it onto the furniture and onto folks' clothes.

"That's the only way he can get rid of it. Nature makes him shed his winter coat in summer, just the way she makes you shed your mink coat when the days get warm.

"In fall he'll have started a brand-new beautiful winter coat. Till then, you've got to be patient. It's no fun to have to pick up bunches of fur off the rugs. But it would be a lot less fun for him to have to tote all that dead hair in summer.

"Mr. Jansen, wasn't it you who said you're worried by the way your little fox terrier pants so hard all day in summer?

"I notice you're mopping your forehead pretty steadily this hot evening. You're perspiring all over. Well, a dog can't perspire anywhere except through his tongue. When he pants he is perspiring. That's his only way of perspiring.

"When a dog has been taking exercise in hot weather he perspires, just as you do. He does it by panting. When the day is hot enough he pants, whether he's been exercising or not. So do you.

"That's one of the cruelest things about a tight muzzle. It keeps the dog's mouth so close shut that he can't perspire. That's torture to him and a danger to his health. If you've got to muzzle a dog, get some kind of muzzle that will keep him from biting, of course, but that will let him pant and that will let him lap water, too.

"Speaking of lapping water, the unkindest thing you can do to any dog is to keep him where he can't get a drink of cool water any time he wants to winter or summer, but ten times as much in summer.

"A dog's mouth isn't shaped like a horse's or a cow's. He can't suck great draughts of water into it to last him half a day. He can only lap up about a teaspoonful at a time. So he must drink often.

"Mrs. Fletcher, you were asking how to keep your Peke from getting any more fits; like the one I brought him out of. That wasn't an ordinary fit, the kind a vet has to be called in for. You took the poor little cuss out in the burning hot sun and made him walk for three miles with you in the middle of the day on the leash. "Lucky he tumbled over in that "fit" at a time when I happened to be around and when there was a hydrant near! You'll remember I just sloshed a gallon or two of cold water over him and then told you to keep him quiet, in a cool cellar, the rest of the day.

"Dogs ought not to be dragged out for walks in the sun in the middle of a hot day. It's almost the worst thing that can happen to them. Lapping and spells give them their exercise in the cool of the morning or the evening, and let them loaf around in the shade or indoors during the heat of the day.

"Many a dog gets a 'fit' from going out into the heat with his owner. Then, generally, folks say he's gone mad and they kill him. It's his owner that's gone mad. Not the dog.

"Your dog knows enough to keep out of the sun, if he's left to himself. But he loves you and he's loyal to you. He'll suffer and take risk for your sake. So when you go for a walk in the sun he'll follow you, if you let him. Don't let him.

"Judge Beasley, that chow of yours hasn't got mange any more than I have. Neither has Mrs. Craig's collie pup. They have fleas. The fleas get busier at some particular part of their backs than anywhere else, especially over the hips.

"The poor dogs scratch like fury. They scratch a place raw. The fleas and the heat get into it. That's not mange.

"But it'll get more serious if you neglect it. Here's a simple and sure way to cure it:

"Buy some liquor cresolis. You can get it cheap at any drug store. Put three pints of it in a barrel, along with 40 gallons of water (rain water is best); and dip your dog in the barrel. Hold him in it for about two minutes, all but his eyes and nose. Then take him out and rub some good soap into his coat; and then turn the hose on him and wash him thoroughly with clean water.

"It will kill the fleas and make him beautifully clean. He'll smell a little bit of carbolic acid for a few days, but not much. It's a clean smell.

"Do this every ten days in summer and you'll keep him in great condition, especially his skin.

"If ever he scratches any spot raw pour a handful of the mixture from the barrel over the sore place. Nine times out of ten it will cure the spot at once.

"That's a boon to all dogs, especially long-haired dogs, in summer. It isn't a patent medicine, either, and it's harmless.

"I've got to finish whitewashing my hencoop tonight. Maybe the rest of you will drop around here tomorrow evening? I'll answer the rest of your questions then."

Married at a Distance

Possibly the most unconventional and peculiar marriage ceremony on record was that performed years ago by a consular agent at Cincinnati. The bridegroom was a well-to-do resident of that town, and the bride lived in Italy. When the wedding was performed the contracting parties were thousands of miles apart.

The consul filled in a blank certificate, which was forwarded by him to the authorities in Italy, who, in the presence of the parish priest, exhibited it before the bride, who in turn affixed her signature, accepting it as her action. The marriage became perfectly binding, of course, the newly-married couple could not possibly live together for quite a little time owing to the distance they were apart.

Predicts Use for Smoke

Fine dust from chimneys will, in the near future, find commercial use in the industries either as filler for plant, fertilizer, or other products or as a base for some building material. Much work now is being done to develop methods of catching the fine particles which fly up the chimney with the flue gases.—Prof. A. G. Christie, in Popular Science Monthly.

Rural School Graduation Exercises.

Here is a suggestion that is worth more than this newspaper will pay for these articles in ten years. It is not my idea, but came to me from Mrs. George R. Felter, county school superintendent of Travis county, and is not copyrighted. It was adopted unanimously by 70 teachers of rural schools when it was proposed in that county. It is merely to hold graduation exercises for all county schools at one time and at some central point in the county. It is a wonder that it has not been done before. Think what a crowd of happy county school graduates and still happier parents it will bring together, and with what pride each school will show the others its achievements of the year. Such a thing would not have been possible anywhere in Texas a few years ago, but good roads and automobiles make it altogether practical now.

Pageantry and Pies.

It is proposed to include in the exercises, which will continue all day, an impressive historical pageant, in which each school will have a part. Schools having bands will bring them along for single band and massed band concerts. There will be some speech-making, of course. There will be a big picnic dinner of fried chicken and homemade pies and such things. The children will be dressed in their best. They will proudly wear their school colors with the school names on arm-bands and hatbands. The delivery of diplomas will be impressive. Good-natured rivalry will exist between schools and the less ambitious will be stimulated to greater effort. It will be an event to inspire every child who sees it to strive for a coveted county school diploma and to make every parent eager to sacrifice, if need be, that the ambitions of their children may be gratified. There is plenty of time for this county to start such a movement.

The Headlight Law.

It is stated that in some counties ninety per cent of the car owners have complied with the headlight law while in others forty-eight per cent have ignored it. The observance of the law increases safety of night travel all agree, and it is also easily seen that the driver of a car with lights properly adjusted is at a disadvantage when meeting a car with lights out of adjustment, and is then in greater danger than if he were violating the law instead of observing it. Public sentiment and public safety demand that this law be observed and that indifferent officers be invited to see that it is enforced. Observers of the law are entitled to the protection of the law. Public officials owe it to them.

Confidence in Officials Weakened.

Charges and counter-charges are made with such frequency in regard to State highway transactions these days that weekly papers can hardly keep pace with them even if they should try. The average man hardly knows what to think under such conditions for he can not be sure that he knows the facts on which to reach a conclusion. The questions now being most closely studied are: Is the State, of which we are every one a part, paying too much for maintaining its highways, in which we are all interested? If it is paying too much, to whom is this money going, and why? What can be done to prevent the waste of public monies and to insure efficiency in public officials? Will grand jury investigations and court actions or legislative inquiries secure best results?

Since the grand juries are already busy, the general feeling seems to be that before reaching any decisions ourselves we should wait to learn what those bodies discover and decide to do. Then, if any further action seems necessary, Texans can "do a plenty." That is the conservative view of good citizenship.

Making the Streams Work.

Down Cotulla way they have worked out preliminary plans for spending $7,300,000 to make the Nueces river get to work in the interest of the valley instead of allowing its waters to go to waste. It is the same old story so much heard lately of conservation, irrigation and water power in the operation of manufacturing industries. This writer can't think hard in terms of millions, but he knows that it means that Texans are deciding that Texas hasn't been doing all that it should have done with Nature's gifts, and that they must be no longer wasted, but used.

Deserves the Compliments, But—

Although the Dallas News deserves all the compliments being paid it and reproduced in its columns, readers are beginning to wonder if it will get through publishing the nice things said about it on the occasion of its fortieth birthday and has to start all over again.

What About the Quality?

Some of the largest cities of Texas are quarreling about the number of people the census bureau is crediting them with having, all of them claiming more than the bureau found in them. Why complain of a little thing like that? I know some towns of a thousand or so people that are far more delightful living places than any of the cities of the country, and there are hundreds of rural districts that are more inviting than the towns. Quantity of population and congestion are more often harmful than helpful.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

"No girl or woman should 'purge' and 'physic' herself every few days. This is very injurious. Besides, it isn't necessary."
—DR. CALDWELL

Tells Girls and Women to Avoid "Physics"

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many women had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all headaches, biliousness, sallow skin, indigestion and stomach misery, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" every day or two was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time even for those chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

The Parent Teachers Association met again Friday night, October 23. The school gave a short program. The opening song was "America", sung by the audience, followed by "Texas", a song by the school.

The seventh grade gave a play of their own making called, "Hanging a Picture". Miss Lela Bickle was the director.

Following the play was a debate on the question: "Resolved that a National Uniform Divorce Law is the best Remedy for the Divorce Evil of Today".

O. N. Robison and Willis Branscum debated on the affirmative and Fred Boone and Wm. Wilterding on the negative. Fine talks were made by both sides.

Millen Shofne and Farrell were the judges who decided for the affirmative. The business meeting followed the debate.

Fred Gaede and wife of Kansas are here visiting relatives.

E. H. Burhman and wife and Fred Gaede and wife took dinner with Fritz Gaede, Sunday.

Some of the Liberty school teachers attended the Parent Teachers Meeting at West Camp last Saturday. They reported having a good time and enjoyed the program.

School was dismissed this week so that the farmers might have help harvesting their crops.

Miss Radie Williams left Monday for Vinson Oklahoma where she will visit home folks. She will return in time to begin school next Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Shofner spent Sunday at the Farwell home.

Mr. and Mrs. Westfall and son Isaac were visitors in the O. N. Robinson home Sunday.

Ethel and Inez Farell, Letha Robinson, Jimmie Pickard and Emma, Helen, and Ruth Bearden were at Dorthy Priboths home Sunday. They report a good time and a delicious dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Johnson and families of Amarillo visiting Hiram Bearden Sunday afternoon.

Gladys and Edwina Buhman, Kathleen Williams, Zora Mae Shofner, Louis King and Lucy Robinson spent Sunday with Oleta and Alice Wilterding.

Mrs. I. F. Williams entertained Mr. and Mrs. Adams and children and Mr. Boone Sunday.

New homes are being built over the country. That means more neighbors, more crops and more good times.

A singing convention was held at the Y L schoolhouse, Sunday Nov. 1st. The crowd was estimated at about 300. John F. Taylor and his singers from Clovis, were here and rendered several good quartets. We all wish we could have a singing like this one more often.

Mrs. Bearden gave a hallowe'en party last Saturday night. After guessing who the masked people were, many interesting games were played after which sandwiches, fruits and hot chocolate were served the guests.

School has started again after being turned out a week. The children are glad to be back in school and will work hard to make up for the week they lost.

Mrs. R. W. Cox of Excelsior Springs Mo. spent Saturday and Sunday with Mrs. Hiram Bearden.

Goodland News

Figure 4 is wide awake and is growing fast. To think of a town growing out of the lone pastures of a ranch and we believe that Goodland will make a city some day.

The first spark of community spirit was fired Hallowe'en night when Goodland and her neighbor schools enjoyed a delightful masquerade party

The affair was held in the Goodland schoolhouse which was erected this summer by the McCelvey Bros. owners of the Figure 4 ranch.

The wierd lights of the Jacko lanterns, the blackboard drawing the gruesome decorations of yellow, red and black crepe paper transformed the house into a spooky den of witches, ghosts and clowns.

After the guests were welcomed by official ghosts partners were found after which followed a series of games.

The people next heard addresses from Messrs. White, Brown, Baron and Clark, representatives of the Muleshoe Chamber of Commerce. These men are full of loyalty for Bailey County.

Mrs. Barber of Goodland responded to the talks made by our guests of honor and thanked the men for their cooperation.

Last but not least came the eats and such an amusing situation! Ghosts and goblins ate with relish the delicious cookies and hot chocolate.

T. B. Duncan and F. B. Blanchard of Coryell county and J. A. Beaty of Hale county have all purchased homes on the Figure 4 ranch and will move on them as soon as possible.

H. M. McCelvey left Friday for a business trip to Amarillo.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Conlon and son of Plainview spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Barber.

Cellar Storage for Vegetables

Well Ventilated Basement Is Satisfactory Place if Kept Cool.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A cool, well ventilated, properly insulated cellar under the dwelling or outhouse is a satisfactory place to store vegetables for winter use. Cellars containing a furnace for heating the dwelling are usually too warm and too dry for the storage of root crops. In such cases a portion of the cellar can be partitioned off for storage purposes. Natural earth makes a better floor than concrete or brick, as a certain amount of moisture is desirable. If the cellar is square or rectangular, a storage room can be built in one corner. If it is in the shape of an ell, it is sometimes possible to partition off a storage room with one straight wall. Where more than one wall is constructed, they should be parallel with those of the cellar.

Plan for Storage Room.

Lay 2 by 4-inch scantling flat on the floor and fasten them with pegs driven into the floor or by nailing them to the top of short posts set in the ground. Set 2 by 4-inch studding from this sill to the ceiling, spacing them 16 inches apart from center to center. Locate the door to the storage room at the most convenient point, making it large enough to admit barrels, boxes, etc., a good size being 2½ feet by 6½ feet. Set the studs on either side of the door 32 inches apart, which will allow for the door and the frame. Put a header over the door, allowing 1 inch for the frame and seven-eighths of an inch for the sill at the bottom. Set the studs against the walls where the cellar walls and storage-room walls meet. Care in making the frame square and plumb will enable the builder to get the structure tight with a minimum of labor. A good room is made by covering the studding on the outside with tongue-and-groove material, but a better way is to sheathe the outside with plain lumber, tack building paper on this and side with tongue-and-groove material. This construction in connection with lath and plaster or wall-board on the inside makes an excellent room.

Regulate Temperature.

The temperature of the storage room can be regulated by means of outside windows. At least one window is necessary and two or more are desirable for light and ventilation. Two or more joints of 6-inch stove pipe with a damper and one elbow can be used to bring cool air from the outside to the bottom of the room. The pipe may be fitted into the window by removing one of the lower panes of glass and substituting a board in which has been cut a hole the size of the stovepipe. An outlet for the warm air in the storage room may be provided by removing an upper pane from the window and in its place fitting a small hinged door. This door, when opened, will allow the heated air to escape. Both the damper in the pipe and the hinged door in the window should be closed during cold weather. The windows in storage rooms should be darkened to protect the vegetables from the light.

Movable containers, such as barrels, crates and boxes, are preferable to built-in bins, as the former can be readily moved for cleaning. It is advisable to construct shelves or a flat floor to keep the containers off the ground, to insure a free circulation of air and to prevent the containers from harboring mice, rats, and other vermin. The shelves for canned goods along one side of the room need not be more than six inches wide.

Dairy Specialists Say

Pint Not Always Pound

A pint is not a pound the world around, declare dairymen at New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca. Even a pint of water weighs more than a pound, and milk is heavier than water. So that a literal interpretation of the old rule that a pint is a pound might mean the difference between profit and loss to a dairyman selling milk on a narrow margin.

The standard quart of milk of average composition weighs 2.153 pounds, and a 40-quart can of milk weighs 40 times 2.153, or 86.12 pounds.

In some plants where milk is bought by the can and later converted to a weight basis, 2½ pounds is used as the weight of a quart and a 40-quart can is credited at 85 pounds.

In no case, though, say the dairymen of the college, should anyone take the old adage at its face value, and accept payment for a 40-quart can of milk on the basis of 80 pounds for the full can.

Blanch Vegetables Well

Certain vegetables are highest in quality only if well blanched. Many gardeners neglect this practice, and consequently they market brownish sun-burned heads of cauliflower, green celery, and bitter endive. Blanching should be given careful attention by the home gardener who desires only quality vegetables.

Storage for Potatoes

Store the winter supply of potatoes in caves, cellars, or cool places where the temperatures can be kept below 40 degrees Fahrenheit. The best temperatures are between 34 degrees and 38 degrees, since less loss from shrinkage and dry rot occurs.

Controlling Frost on Walls of Stable

Ventilating System Will Take Care of Moisture.

How to prevent the heavy accumulation of frost in stock barns during cold weather is a problem which often confronts farmers. Three things can be done to correct this condition, according to R. L. Patty, head of the Iowa agricultural engineering department at State college. One is to ventilate the building; another is to keep enough stock in the building so the temperature will be controlled, and a third is to insulate the walls and ceiling as thoroughly as possible.

"A ventilating system alone will prevent an extreme accumulation of moisture in the air and thereby help to control the frost deposits," he says. "It will not prevent the accumulation of a certain amount of frost without the other two factors mentioned above. Frost is not an indication of foul air unless the deposit is extreme. Air that is 100 per cent pure will frost under favorable conditions for it. By keeping the overhead space low and the building filled with the amount of stock intended for the space, the frost will not be had if a proper ventilating system is provided."

The ventilating system must be put in exactly right, Patty states, if frost is to be controlled best. Insulating the walls and ceilings helps greatly in controlling frost. A dead-air space will insulate the walls and a layer of hay on the new floor above will insulate the ceiling and prevent a deposit of frost.

The practice of building low and insulating, Patty believes, is a good one when the building is ventilated. If no ventilation is provided, it is a dangerous one.

Proper Packing Is Big

Factor in Ice Storage

Studies of icehouses throughout New Jersey by E. R. Gross, agricultural engineer at the college of agriculture, New Brunswick, have shown that when the ice is lost it is not always the fault of the house, and that proper packing is the most important factor in ice storage.

According to the engineer's report, two points must be observed; namely, proper amount of packing material, usually sawdust, and proper pack of the ice block itself.

A very simple frame building, roughly boarded up both inside and outside of studdings will keep ice when the ice is packed correctly with 12 to 15 inches of sawdust on all sides, top and bottom. Better construction is obtained, however, by double boarding both inside and outside of studdings, using paper between the boards. In this type of house, the top and the bottom of the walls must be made very tight to secure real dead air spaces in the walls. The shrinkage of ice in this house is much less than in one of simpler construction.

The ice cakes must fit closely together and all crevices should be filled with finely crushed ice or snow. Failure to fill these crevices tight starts air channels which can seldom be effectively stopped. Skipping in the amount of sawdust used and carelessly leaving cracks in the ice block are the causes of much loss of ice. Daily attention when the pack starts settling in the first warm weather of spring also is necessary.

Asparagus More Uniform

When Set in the Spring

Asparagus roots are set in the spring rather than in the fall. Probably many of the roots would live if set in the fall, but the stand would be more uniform by spring setting. The usual distance is 4 by 2½ feet. The roots are set in furrows 8 to 10 inches deep, so that the crown is 4 inches below the surface of the ground. After setting, the roots are gradually covered by cultivation so that by fall of the first year they will be completely covered. For the first three years the plants are given ordinary cultivation between the rows with a hand hoe occasionally to keep out the weeds. In the fall the tops are thoroughly disked up and an application of manure is desirable. The cutting season would begin in the spring of the fourth year.

FARM FACTS

Home-grown feeds are cheapest.

Prompt storage of apples help eliminate scald injury.

Save a little pig and add a lot of pork profit.

Cleaning up the garden after harvest will help to keep down the insect crop.

Mineral mixtures are not necessary for pigs being fattened for market if enough tankage is fed to supply a sufficient amount of protein.

If you think the small per cent of business done by the co-operatives is against their success, why not join and add your business to theirs?

If you would have something that will serve day and night all fall, winter and early spring, striving to protect and make your lands richer, sow cover crops.

SUNDRY GOOD USES FOR GREEN TOMATOES

Making Green Tomato Pickle.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When the first hard frost leaves a large supply of green tomatoes on hand, some of them will undoubtedly be made into pickles, but they are also good to use in many other ways. Green tomatoes cut into half-inch slices, sprinkled with salt, dipped in flour or fine bread crumbs, and fried till tender in a little fat, are excellent. They may also be fried with sliced onions. The following recipes for using green tomatoes have been tested by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture:

Stewed Green Tomatoes.

8 large green tomatoes 4 tablespoonfuls sugar
1½ teaspoonfuls 4 tablespoonfuls salt bread crumbs
Pinch of pepper Scraped onion for 2 tablespoonfuls seasoning
2 tablespoonfuls butter

Scald the tomatoes and remove the skins. Cut into small pieces, boil until tender, season, and thicken with bread crumbs which have been browned in the butter.

Cream of Green Tomato Soup.

12 green tomatoes 2 tablespoonfuls 1 cupful water 1 flour
¼ teaspoonful 1 small onion, cut ¼ fine
4 tablespoonfuls Pinch of pepper
2 cupfuls milk and 2 cupfuls butter
½ teaspoonful salt

Boil the tomatoes with the water until tender, and put through a strainer. Sauté onion, pepper, and curry powder in butter, remove the pieces of onion, then add the flour, and later the milk, to make a white sauce. Add the soda to the hot tomato pulp. When the white sauce is thoroughly cooked, blend the two mixtures and serve at once.

Green Tomato Pie.

4 or 5 medium-sized green tomatoes ½ teaspoonful salt
1½ cupfuls cornstarch 1½ cupfuls sugar
¼ lemon, sliced 1 cupful sugar
¼ teaspoonful cinnamon 1 tablespoonful butter

Slice the tomatoes and heat slowly in a saucepan with the sugar, lemon, salt and spice until the tomatoes are tender. Add the cornstarch and cook until the cornstarch does not taste raw. Take from the fire and add the butter. Line a pie tin with pastry and bake the lower crust for 12 minutes in a moderately hot oven until a delicate color begins to appear. Put the tomato filling in this prebaked crust, cover with an upper crust, and bake about 12 minutes in a hot oven, or until the upper crust is done.

If there is insufficient liquid in the tomatoes to cook them, a small amount of water may be added when stewing them. It may be necessary to use more or less cornstarch, according to the amount of tomato juice present.

Green Tomato Marmalade.

6 pounds green 1½ teaspoonfuls tomatoes salt
6 lemons 6 cupfuls sugar

Wash and trim the tomatoes and cut them into small pieces and add the sugar. Cut the lemons into very thin slices and boil for about five minutes in one cupful of water to which the salt has been added, and add this to the tomato and sugar. Heat this mixture slowly, then cook rapidly, stirring constantly, for about one-half hour or until the marmalade has the consistency of thick, heavy jam. These proportions will make about three quarts of marmalade.

Green Tomato Mince-meat.

4 quarts sliced green tomatoes ¼ teaspoonful allspice
2 quarts pared and sliced tart apples 1 teaspoonful cloves
½ pound seeded raisins 5 cupfuls brown sugar
½ pound currants 2 cupfuls vinegar
4 tablespoonfuls minced citron or less water
4 tablespoonfuls cinnamon if the latter is very acid

Chop the tomatoes and the apples fine. Add the other ingredients and boil the mixture slowly until the tomatoes are tender and the mince-meat is thick and not watery. Stir it occasionally to prevent burning. If desired this may be sealed in scalded jars for later use. The quantities given in this recipe should make about three quarts of mince-meat.

When a large number of green tomatoes must be handled they may be brined. Directions for brining vegetables may be obtained from the bureau of chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture. The brined tomatoes, when freshened, can be used for pickles and relishes of various kinds and also for mock mince-meat.

"A WELL-BALANCED DIET" IS DEFINED

Provides Fuel Needed to Maintain Best Body Weight.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A good many people like to talk about "a well-balanced diet," but very often are quite vague as to what they really mean by the phrase. The bureau of home economics in the United States Department of Agriculture has an important division devoted to foods and nutrition, and has made a study of the relation of foods to health.

The well-balanced diet, say the scientists in this division, provides within the limits of the fuel, or calories, needed to maintain the best body weight for age and height; protein, right in kind and amount; iron; calcium; phosphorus, and vitamins A, B and C. The diet should be either bulky or potentially bulky, that is, capable of increasing in volume as it passes through the body.

The right kind of protein may be obtained from milk or cheese, eggs, meat, fish or other flesh foods; soy beans or peanuts. One of these should be supplemented by vegetables and by refined or whole-grain cereals. Vegetables should predominate when garden- and market conditions permit.

Iron is insured by the use of eggs, meat, fish, or other flesh foods; whole-grain cereals; green leaves; fruits, fresh, dried, or carefully canned. All four kinds should be included if possible, and when one or more is lacking the others take on added importance.

Phosphorus and vitamin B are so widely distributed that it is easier to list the foods that lack them than those that supply them. Fats lack them; so do the sugars and refined cereals. The "balance" in this case is best obtained, therefore, by limiting these foods in general to the amounts needed for richness, sweetness and palatability.

Vitamin A comes from certain protein foods, such as milk and eggs; from certain fats, such as butter and cream, and from certain vegetables, such as spinach and other green leaves. A generous supply from one source makes it unnecessary to take others. Green leaves can serve as the sole source only if reduced in volume by cooking.

Practically all fresh fruits supply vitamin C, and oranges, grapefruit, lemons, raspberries and tomatoes are particularly rich sources. Green-leaf vegetables, such as lettuce and cabbage, which can be eaten raw, are also valuable.

Cabbage Scalloped With Spaghetti and Cheese

For children who need a good hot dish at noon, quickly and easily made, or for a "one-piece" supper dish which, if supplemented by some fruit or a simple dessert, will be a completely balanced meal, try cabbage scalloped with spaghetti and cheese. Foods cooked together in a baking dish which can be brought to the table help to reduce the number of sauce pans and serving dishes to be washed, and in this case the combination is particularly delicious. The amounts given have been found by the United States Department of Agriculture sufficient to serve eight persons.

Cabbage Scalloped With Spaghetti and Cheese.

2 quarts of shredded raw cabbage.
2 cupfuls cooked spaghetti
1 quart milk
½ cupful butter
½ cupful flour
½ pound grated cheese (or more)
Buttered crumbs
Salt and pepper

Make a white sauce of milk, flour, and butter; add grated cheese and seasonings. Place layer of shredded cabbage in baking dish, cover with cheese sauce, then a layer of spaghetti with cheese sauce and arrange a layer of buttered crumbs over the top. Bake for 20 minutes in covered dish, uncover, and bake 10 minutes to brown.

JUNIOR COATS IN PARIS MODE; FROCK OF BLACK OR NAVY SATIN

THAT there is an intangible something not to be defined in set terms which distinguishes Paris designed clothes from others has until recently been held throughout fashion circles. However, we are somewhat changing our mind as to this point, except in the case of junior modes whereof the fact remains that as a rule French children adopt more sophisticated styles than does American youth.

A passing glance at the accompanying illustration bespeaks the fact that these two handsomely befringed and braided coats were "made in Paris." This season particularly the Parisian fashionist is designing children's cos-than another which brings contentment in the possession thereof, it is a soft silke, afternoon frock—the sort which serves as "a happy medium" between the simple sports frock and the formal evening gown.

Considering the importance of the afternoon frock, it behooves one to give thought and care to its selection. The success of a gown depends largely upon the material of which it is made. For real service and satisfaction satin crepe has stood the test so admirably that it still remains the favorite, although it finds quite a rival in flat crepe because of its dull finish.

In deciding on color one never makes a mistake in choosing navy or tumes in replica of those of their elders. Is there not quite a sophisticated air about the coat to the left braided as it is in most ornate manner? This charming model is of putty-colored duvetyne with black galons of individual patterning elaborating the deep collar and hem border. There is also the cleverest sort of a yoke suggestion outlined with the braid.

Bottle green cloth with border, collar and cuffs of gray fur sounds sort of "grown-up" in description, does it not? Not only does this tell the story of the child's coat shown to the right in this picture, but it emphasizes the fact that dark green cloakings have become the fashion for little daughter. In keeping with the general style black. This season these dark shades are most fashionable enlivened with a dash of gray color. For instance the modish frock of crepe satin shown to the right in the picture depends on bandings of pausy velvet ribbon for its "touch of color." That this ribbon is elaborated with gold thread patternings is not surprising, for scarcely anything in the way of trimming escapes the influence of the vogue for metallic effects.

The same is true in regard to the companion frock shown, its decorative feature consists in a braiding of brick, blue and silver. Note the word silver for even more popular than gold is silver in the scheme of millinery and costume decoration. This trend, velveteen has become a very popular material for children's coats. A fetching junior model of velveteen employs circular side portions for the now-so-frequent flare. The collar is high, tipped with an edging of fur. The sleeves are long, showing a decided fullness below the elbow. There are wrist bands of the fur. Approved shades for a velveteen coat of this genre include wine, navy, bright blue, hunter's green and a lovely shade known as twilight blue.

Precept and experience teach us that "a happy medium brings contentment." Even in the matter of dress this age-old adage rings true, for if there is one among our frocks more green in all its versions is strongly endorsed in the fall collection of afternoon gowns. Aside from the green range mahogany and henna are very popular. In dull finished crepe bois de rose finds special acceptance, while purples and the wine shades are in high favor, not forgetting the brilliant blue shades for which there is a remarkable demand. It will be seen by the above list of colors that fashion is not following in its usual course, but records a definite departure when it comes to colors for this season.

SYNOPSIS.—PART ONE—At a merry party in the studio apartment of Carter Blake, New York, Jerry (Geraldine) Harmer, Prudence's daughter, meets Duane Allerton, wealthy idler. He admires her tremendously, and she likes him. But Allerton gets a bit exhilarated, with unfortunate results. Jerry, resenting his assumption of familiarity, leaves the party abruptly. The story turns to Jerry's childhood and youth at her home in Des Moines. Only child of a wealthy father, when she is twenty she feels the call of Art and asks her parents to let her go to New York for study. With some misgiving, they agree to her going. In New York Jerry makes her home with a Mrs. Delaney ("Mimi"), an actress, who, with Theresa, a painter, occupies the house. Jerry takes an immediate liking to Theresa, who is talented and eccentric, and the two become fast friends. Jerry now devotes herself to Theresa, who returns her liking. Jerry poses for Theresa's masterpiece, "The Ocean Rider." Allerton calls on Jerry. The girl refuses to see him. At a hotel dinner Jerry sees Duane and is conscious of his admiration, but refuses to change her attitude toward him. Jerry becomes convinced she has not the ability to become an artist. At a party Jerry again sees Duane, and will not recognize him. Theresa hints that Jerry should go home, and promises her a "present." Returning from an evening of gaiety, Jerry is shocked at hearing from Mimi that Theresa has killed herself. She also learns that Mimi is Theresa's mother. The "present" Theresa had promised Jerry proves to be her picture, "The Ocean Rider."

"How should I know? She didn't tell me. She should have told me." "Prudence would know," was all Jerry could say to that. Mimi lay rigid among the cushions, twisting her hands into painful knots, cutting her flesh with the gaudy stones. Jerry looked at her—the lavish toss of the hennaed hair, the carefully ivoryed skin with its layers of cream and rouge, the voluptuous figure with its molding of fine French stays. Jerry saw her in a cloud of artificial lights, the center of artificial laughter, flirtations, affairs and intrigues—saw also the light kindness, the generous delicacy of speech and manner, the friendly camaraderie. And she saw Theresa dead by her own hand in the window, Mietta's on the corner.

And then, as poor, suffering Mimi faded out, Jerry saw Prudence, clear-cut and vivid, saw the fine-lined, tender face, the gentle twist of the humorous mouth, the laughing, plaintive sympathy of the soft, sweet eyes.

Jerry stared and stared. Her eyes burned painfully, her throat throbbled, there was a great longing in her heart. In that moment, Prudence's daughter, she ran suddenly to Mimi, caught her in her strong, tender arms, kissed her, cried over her, fondled her, and Mimi, after one slight, apologetic, high-strained laugh, buried her face in Jerry's arms and broke into helpless weeping.

Jerry helped her out of the lavish gown, out of the confining closeness of the French stays, and into a loose, light robe. She bathed her face, stroked her hair, hung over her with pitiful, sweet solicitude. And Mimi clung to her all night long, sobbing brokenly, writhing in hysterical anguish, and would not let her go.

Jerry stayed with Mimi in the house on Reilly's alley until after the funeral—Theresa's funeral—when groups of her brilliant, wandering friends crowded into the little flower-filled room at Mietta's to do last honor to her tragic memory, and went away again, afterward, slowly, talking it over, agreeing that after all, in a way, it seemed rather a congruous thing, that such a one as Theresa, divinely driven, should flash like a meteor across a starry sky to fade at once in a final, dominant flash at the height of her brilliance, rather than fade away, as many do, into a dull and doddering mediocrity.

The night after the funeral Jerry, slipping softly down the hall toward Mimi's room, was arrested by the silken, silvery voice.

"Oh, you bad boy! This is the third—at six dollars a pint!" Jerry turned slowly back to her room. She was not deceived by that brave resumption of the old routine. She knew that Mimi's heart, artificial, shallow though it might be, had suffered a grievously cruel shock and she marveled that the hollow shell could send back an echo so musical to a world that had given her only its bitter dregs.

Jerry went into her room, pulled out her bags, and began at once to pack the things of her possession. Jerry was going home.

Part Two

CHAPTER I

The Coming of Jerry

It was a bustling, blizzard night in early March. The state of Iowa lay flat and bare under the lash of an angry winter, reluctant to loose its hold.

Inside the Harmer home was quiet warm and cheery light. In the wide fireplace a great pine log crackled in gay defiance of wintry wind and sleet. At the round table in the dining room Prudence and Jerrold sat opposite each other across a bowl of fragile Cecil Brunner roses.

"It's a nice night to be in," she said cheerfully. She was wondering if Greenwich Village was whipped with a gale like this.

"Rotten weather to be out," agreed Jerrold absently. He was remembering the dangerous rush of taxis, when city streets are glassed with ice. And so they smiled cheerfully at each other, and rejoiced with pleasant words that they were warm and bright by the fireplace, with the pine log, and the rosebuds and the candle lights. But in their hearts they were trying to assure themselves that Jerry was a very alert and self-possessed young person who could certainly take care of herself if anybody could, and what childishness to worry!

The doorbell sounded suddenly. Upon intense inward thoughts like theirs, even the soft reverberation of the most carefully modulated electric bell in the world could not sound less than clamorous.

"Such a night!" gasped Prudence at that sudden ringing, thinking that a telegraph boy would have to face the gale to carry a message.

Jerrold shoved his chair back quickly from the table, and both listened, intent, alert, as Katie opened the door. Above the incoherent breathlessness of her murmurs of amazement, a fresh voice sounded brightly.

"Where's mother?" And Jerry herself, wrapped in her great fur cloak, a soft fur tam drawn protectively low over her ears, ran in upon them, leaving the maid and the driver to handle boxes, bags and trunk as best they could.

"Look who's here!" she cried, as she caught Prudence in her arms. And a moment later she went to her father, to be lifted bodily from her tiptoes and kissed a dozen times.

"And you'd better help him with the trunk, father," she said, when she could think of it. "It's terribly heavy." "Your trunk, Jerry!" Prudence was amazed. "Did you bring your trunk?"

"Yes, I brought everything," Jerry assured her gayly. "I'm coming home. I'm moving back!"

Then she kissed Katie, who was hastily laying another place on the table and setting a chair for her—which Prudence slyly pulled nearer to hers, and Jerrold whipped back toward his own. And very soon they were at the table, three of them now, smiling almost tearfully at one another across the bowl of Cecil Brunners, with never a thought for the dangerous icy streets of Greenwich Village and New York.

"But, Jerry, we never dreamed of such a thing; why didn't you tell us! Why didn't you send us word, why—" "I didn't know it myself," she said. "Just all of a sudden I knew I was coming, and here I am. You're looking darling, mother. I'll bet Katie has spoiled you without me here to hold you down—"

And she jumped up to kiss Katie, thinking she had forgotten her, and out to the kitchen to greet Mary, but not needing to go so far, for Mary was just outside the door, peeping joyously in upon her. She came back after a moment, said she was ravenously hungry, but she did not eat. She laughed at her mother, at her father, and presently they left the table, and Jerry sat in Prudence's lap—a ridiculous lap-full for slender Prudence—and laughed at her again. And Prudence showed the few silvering threads in her hair, and declared they would all turn brown again now that Jerry was home.

And then Jerry went over and sat sedately in a chair to let her mother rest, and Prudence tagged across at her heels, and sat on the arm of her chair, and told her over and over again how surprised she was, how she had not the slightest suspicion of her coming, how it was the last thing in the world she had dreamed of.

"But see here," remonstrated Jerrold, "you told me all the time she would come back. You said—"

Prudence gave him a furious look. "I did not," she declared quite passionately. "Oh, for a visit, of course—but to bring all her things and stay forever, I never dreamed of such a thing. I can't tell you how surprised I am!"

"But, Prudence, you said—" Prudence glowered him into silence. "Now, Jerrold, I know what I said! I knew she would come for a visit, but this is really coming home, and I couldn't remotely fancy such a lovely thing!"

They went upstairs, the three of them, to Jerry's lovely room, and Prudence and Jerrold stood about, getting in the way, while Jerry unpacked the bags, the boxes and the trunk. Everything was exhibited, exclaimed over, admired.

And while she unpacked she told them of New York, of Graves McDowell, and the lessons in Art, of Rhoda, and her passionate devotion to her work. She told them of lovely Almee, and the trashy column of society scandal she wrote for a daily paper. When Prudence asked about the girls in the house with her, Theresa, and Mimi, Jerry's lip quivered, her eyes shadowed, as she said:

"I'll tell you about them after a little. I'm coming to that."

She told them of her conquests in the city, her gay flirtations, her proposals. She showed them the little marble fair the Russian sculptor, Korzky, had done for her. She exhibited the autographed novels and books of poetry, warmly inscribed to her by authors and poets of a dozen nationalities. She displayed a hundred little testimonies of her triumph in the city, a triumph social, if not artistic.

"It isn't the laborers who are slave-driven," she declared warmly. "They don't need unions to protect them. It is a genius union we need, something to keep geniuses from working themselves to death. There was a violinist in our building—mother, I tell you truly, that man began to work before I was up, and was at it every night when I went to bed. There was a composer at Rhoda's—once I was staying all night—at two o'clock in the morning we heard, oh, very softly, a little tripping melody on the keys. Rhoda said it happened often—ran through his mind during the night, until he got up and worked it out of his system—using the soft pedal not to disturb the others. There was a young writer across the alley from us—whenever I went out, or came in, I could hear that dull thud of her typewriter, twelve o'clock, one o'clock, two o'clock. A union for genius, that's the need of the century!"

At half past two in the morning Prudence and Jerrold were still sitting enraptured, spellbound, on the wide day bed against the wall, listening as Jerry talked. And when at last the trunk was emptied, she turned slowly to the great crate she had brought with her all the way, so carefully, so tenderly, and released the safety fastenings on the end. Then she drew it out slowly, the shadows deepening in her eyes—Theresa's gallant "Ocean Rider" with eyes like Jerry's own. Jerry's parents stared at it, exclaiming, marveling at its beauty.

"It looks like you," Prudence whispered.

"The eyes—they are mine. As they were when I went to New York, when she first saw me—Theresa—Jerry choked over the words. "Let me tell you."

She hastily switched out the bright lights, leaving only the one soft Roman candle burning on her dressing table, for Jerry did not wish to pain them with the emotion her vivid face could not fail to reveal. And she came across to them, piled cushions on the top of one of the three steps which led up to the raised day bed, and snuggled in between them.

"Do you want me to go out?" Jerrold offered generously, feeling that this was to be the climax of Jerry's confidence.

Jerry smiled at him, drew both his knees impulsively within the clasp of her arm. "Oh, no, father, of course not."

And then she told them of the house on Reilly's alley, of Mimi, with the golden hair and the silken gowns, of terrible, tragic Theresa in her attic room upstairs.

"I felt just like a mother toward that girl," she declared brokenly. She told of Theresa's rare talent, of her strange intensity, her impatient, impulsive kindness.

"Mother, she killed herself." Jerrold let his cigarette go out, lit another feverishly, let it go out again. Prudence held Jerry in a close arm, weeping with her softly. And Jerry talked sadly on and on, told them of Mimi's pitiful, frivolous life, her wasted motherhood. Sometimes as she talked, she lay in Prudence's lap, crying bitterly, only to sit up again with passionate earnestness to go on with the tragic tale.

"The worst of it—or maybe the best of it," she amended doubtfully, as she tried to shake away her tears, "is that I know she is glad of it. I can just imagine that gay, defiant laugh of hers, as if she had fooled us all—slipped neatly out of a mess and left us looking at—cobwebs on our fingers. I can just imagine—in heaven—she would be laughing to think of the joke she had played on us. It's what Theresa would!"

Jerrold would have gone away then, taking Prudence with him, feeling that overwrought and highly strained young daughters would do best in bed. Prudence, with that tender insight of hers that was never known to fail, knew better. Jerry was unbending her heart, finding relief, had come to them, as she always came, when the things she undertook to do had proved too hard for her. And so they stayed on and on, and talked more of Theresa, and presently Jerry was talking of other things—of the mad frenzy that goaded all artists to desperation, of their intemperate folly, their unbounded love.

And then she was telling them of Greta Val, the little chambermaid, and how Graves McDowell was fairly living in her talent, feasting his own starved heart on the fuel he fed to hers. She told them of her little part in the drama, of how she had piled her wealth together, brushes and easel and boards, and with a profuse hand had tossed them on the unfortunate little tramp of the alleys.

"And what do you think she did? She stood up, and glared at me, and slapped me in the face—right there!" Jerry could laugh at it now, could laugh, and did, particularly at Jerrold's amazement, at Prudence's maternal displeasure.

"What are you going to do now?" Jerrold asked at last.

Jerry clouted again. She did not know. "What do other girls do?" she asked him. "Girls who are not geniuses by birth—and lucky they are, if you ask me—but girls who would go mad doing nothing!—What do they do?"

Jerrold cleverly evaded the issue by reaching for a cigarette, a prettily perfumed, gold-tipped thing that Jerry had brought in a handsome box, a parting gift from a young admirer, thus shifting the question to Prudence.

Prudence was very sober. "I don't know," she said. "What do you think?"

They talked of girls, of some who became teachers, some who went into the public libraries and museums, some into business.

"That's all right if you have to earn a living," objected Jerry. "But doesn't it seem silly to work hard at something you don't care a thing about, just to earn a little money you do not need? Of course, if one has a real fondness for a thing—but I haven't! I think it would be perfectly trashy of me to go downtown and pound a typewriter eight hours a day for twenty dollars a week—when I don't adore pounding typewriters—and can get the money by asking father."

"And besides," said Prudence, "it would be keeping some girl out of a position who does need the money."

"It's a great responsibility, having a daughter," Jerrold said, standing up, suddenly shocked to know it was after four o'clock. "I'm afraid we went into this thing too lightly, Prudence."

They all laughed over that, and Jerry kissed both parents a warm good night, and closed the door behind them.

In their own room, Jerrold turned to his wife to air a grievance that had lurked within his memory throughout all the happy evening.

"See here, Prudence, you did, too, expect Jerry to come home to stay. You said all the time she would come back."

Prudence caught his broad shoulders in her two slender hands, and shook him sternly. As a measure of discipline it was absurd, for Jerrold was tall and strong, and Prudence both slender and slight in strength. But as expressive of her pent-up emotions and representative of her scorn for his understanding, it was triumphant.

"Oh, Jerrold, will you never learn?" she wailed. "Don't you know that you must always be surprised at a woman?"

"But you said—" "Always be surprised at a woman! It pleases her, it flatters her, it makes her feel how very unusual she is to do the unexpected thing. Be surprised, Jerrold, always be surprised! Women love it!"

"Then you did expect her home?" "Of course I did," Prudence said this with a complacent pride in her astuteness.

"But you said—" "Oh, bother what I said. You be a little careful after this, and don't go about telling everything you hear." "Shades of the Parsonage and John Wesley defend us," he ejaculated devoutly.

"Oh, well, if it comes to that," said Prudence, "I learned a great many things in the Parsonage that John Wesley never heard of!"

Well, Jerry is home again, where she belongs. And now what's she going to do?

HOW TO HAVE A CLEAR HEAD
Here Is What You Have So Long Been Seeking.

Do you get up in the morning with a stopped-up nose? Are your breathing passages clogged with a cold? Does your head feel choked up and dull? Have you that mean, low-spirited feeling which comes from lack of proper oxygen? If so, here is a pleasant, harmless cigarette that will clear out the head, nose and throat.

These cigarettes are the formula of Dr. J. W. Blosser, and are composed of medicinal herbs, flowers and berries.

Dr. Blosser's Cigarettes contain no tobacco, no cubebs, nothing habit forming, and are entirely harmless. They are used by women and children as well as men. These are not to be confused with the "cubebs" or other similar cigarettes.

It is so simple to inhale this pleasant and soothing smoke. Much more convenient than using sprays, washes, douches, etc.

If you suffer from catarrh, asthma, catarrhal deafness, or if subject to frequent colds, you should try Dr. Blosser's Remedy which may be had at any drug store; or if you desire proof of its beneficial and pleasant effect, send ten cents (coin or stamps) to The Blosser Co., 74 G. Sophomore Newsnotes

A group of young people enjoyed a party given by Beth Mardis, Oct. 31. The ghosts, black cats and pumpkins were all set to give them the scare of their life. Many games were played and almost everyone had his fortune told by an excellent fortune teller. There were about thirty guests present. Each one reported a fine time.

Our Soph football boys surely do show what they are made of when they get in a game.

We ghosts, spooks and witches attended a Hallowe'en party at Mrs. Roy Elrod's home.

As we entered we met many other honored ghosts including Mr. Skeleton Ghost. From here we went into a ghostly hall, we became acquainted with each other and were entertained by Mrs. Witch. We were very anxious to have our fortunes told and as luck would have it, an old Witch passed by that day and had left a hat full of fortunes with a our hostess.

These were drawn by us and each one read his own fortune. After all fortunes were read various other games were played until time came for the Mrs. Witch to serve her Hallowe'en hash, consisting of hot chocolate and marsh mellow fruit salad and pumpkin pie. We then all adjourned until next Hallowe'en.

John Deere Tractor

The Simple Tractor That Develops More Power with Less Weight

Power increased—weight decreased—the John Deere develops 15-H. P. at the drawbar and 27-H. P. on the belt—and it weighs only 4,000 pounds—hundreds of pounds lighter than other tractors of the same rating. It neither packs the soil nor mires down in fields that can be worked.

Remaining parts extra strong—the strength necessary to give highly profitable service has not been sacrificed in the John Deere. All parts are extra strong. The bearings, crank shaft, gears, frame, drive chains—in fact every part of this tractor is built to stand the heavy duty farm work—up-keep costs are mighty low.

Hundreds of parts simpler. Take of hundreds of parts from the ordinary tractor, many of which create friction and require power—only then can you appreciate the simplicity of the John Deere. You don't need a mechanic to keep this tractor in good running order.

All-around farm power plant—no tractor ever built is better fitted for drawbar and belt work. Its power permits operating machines of economical size. It is short, low, narrow and turns in close quarters. Its compact design fits it particularly for work in small fields and orchards.

DON'T FAIL TO SEE this remarkable farm power plant. We will gladly demonstrate its performance.
