The County Political Pot Starts to Boil

In the political announcement column of this paper you will find the names of Mesdames W. C. Bucy and Irene A. Edmonds. Mrs. Bucy is announcing for re-election and second term to the office of Tax Assessor. Mrs. Edmonds asks for re-election and second term to the Treasurers office. We have known the above ladies for the past year and have watched their work; and, now do not see why they should not be allowed to go back into office. They have made us faithful and efficient public servants and we think should be given the office for another term. If you see fit to assist them in this matter, they will appreciate your vote and influence.

Loreta May Davis at Rest

She has gone, God bless her, to a home not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, there to dwell among the white winged angels, to forever bask in the sunshine of God's own presence and to sing praises to him aronng the great white throne, where there will be no more death, sickness or sorrow.

But hers will be "Pesce Sweet Peace" the gift of God's love. In this instance earth's loss is heaven's gain: How much richer and sweeter heaven seems to us since she has gone there to dwell. And it seems to me I can see her playing in the streets of the New Jerusalem, with all the other angel children. And if we could lift the veil we could see the God given mission to her, for I know he had a mission for her that no one else could fill. How perfect, pure and tender the little flower he gave us, just; to blossom on this sin cursed earth for a few days, to show us perfection in childhood, and to lift us up higher although she was with us but a few days, we all learned to love her and in taking her, God has stretched from earth to heaven another tie, that binds us so closer to the other world. And it is not enough to say, we will miss her, but let us feel that God knows best; and as he reached down to earth and took the little flower to Glory to bloom for him through eternity, let us say, with our hands in his, thy will be done.

And how sweet the thought that when our work on earth is finished and God says "come" our darling angel Loreta Mae, will be the guardian angel to watch over our bedside, and when the last breath comes, she will usher us thru the great gates of pearl into the New Jerusalem. And we will walk along the beautiful banks of the river of life and sit under the tree of life in the cool shadows and talk with loved ones gone on before. We are in a land of good-byes, but thanks be to God, he has a home waiting for his children. We find in the fourteenth chapter of St. John these comforting words; Let not yoibr heart be troubled, ye believe in God, believe ye also in me In my Fathers house are maby mansions if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go to prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto my self, that where I am there ye may be also. And while this morning the dark clouds of adversity seem to hover over us shutting the shunshine out of our lives, how comforting to turn to this precious chapter and make it our own. "In my Fathers house are many mansions" that means so much to us. It suggests so many sweet things, one of which is a family unita unbroken. When we all get there it will mean that we are never to say good-bye again so in this hour of grief, dear loved ones, let us look up with a steadfast faith, anchored in an all-powerful God who is able to keep us to the end. Early Wednesday morning March 3rd little Loreta Mae heard her Heavenly Father say: "leave all and follow me." She obeyed the command and her spirit took its flight to a heavenly home. Her little body will be gently laid to rest in the Sudan cemetery.

A devoted friend,
Mrs. Ethridge Payne.

SUFFERED MANY YEARS WITH FEMALE TROUBLE PE-RU-NA LIKE A GIFT FROM HEAVEN

Mrs. Katie Scheffel, R. F. D. No. 5, Lowell, Ohio

"I have been suffering for years with female trouble. Was operated on five years ago. It relieved me some but I did not regain my strength. Two years later was taken sick and bedfast several months. I treated a long while without much relief. I was discouraged, my mind affected, so nervous I could neither eat or sleep and unable to do anything.

We tried several doctors but one after another gave up my case as hopeless. Finally a good friend advised me to try Pe-ru-na. I did. It relieved me almost immediately. Your medical department said I was suffering from chronic catarrh of the system. I began taking your medicine in March, 1914, and continued until August. I took ten bottles of Pe-ru-na and three bottles of Man-a-lin and felt like a new person. Your medicine seemed like a gift from Heaven. It was like coming from darkness into light.

We have used your medicine since for coughs, colds and grip with good results. We will always keep it on hand. I weigh twenty-five pounds more than I ever did, eat and sleep well and can do a good day's work. Everybody says I look fine. Even the doctors are surprised. I cannot thank you enough and will always recommend Pe-ru-na to sufferers from catarrh."

MRS. KATIE SCHEFFEL, R. F. D. No. 5, Lowell, O.

Mrs. Scheffel is only one of many thousand women in the world, who owe their present health to Pe-ru-na. The record of this medicine is a proud one as Pe-ru-na has held the confidence of both sexes for fifty years or more.

If your trouble is due to a catarrhal inflammation in any organ or part of the body, do like Mrs. Scheffel. Try Pe-ru-na. Insist upon having the original and reliable remedy for catarrhal conditions. You won't be sorry.

CHOOSING A PUPPY

"I Don't Know Which to Choose."

AS OLD MAN NEGLEY turned into Vine street for his daily round of grass cutting and gardening, he was hailed excitedly by little Mark Rendle.

"It's my birthday!" cried Mark. "And daddy's given me a wonderful collie pup for a surprise present."

"Good!" applauded Old Man Negley. "A puppy is the grandest present that can be given to any real boy. Where is he? Let's have a look at him."

"He isn't here, yet," said Mark. "That's what I've been waiting to see you about. Daddy bought him at the Blankacre collie kennels out at Blanksburg last week. There are six collie puppies out there only a little more than three months old. He says I can take my pick of them and he wants to know if you'll come out to Blanksburg with me to help choose the best one. The car's all ready and waiting to take us there. Won't you please come, Mr. Negley? Daddy says you can charge him for the time it takes. Please do! He says you know more about dogs than anyone else here and he wants me to be sure to get the best."

Half an hour later, the Rendle chauffeur was stopping in the driveway in front of the Blankacre collie kennels and a kennelman came forward to escort Mark and Old Man Negley to the runs. Mark was tumbling out of the car, in crazy eagerness, almost before it came to a halt.

In a wire-fenced yard with a raised kennel house behind it, six furry collie pups were frisking like a windowful of Teddy bears. Old Man Negley's keen eye swept them as they came cantering to the fence to greet the visitors. "H'm!" he said in an undertone to his crony, the kennelman, as Mark rushed on ahead to inspect the pups. "H'm! I see you've put all the 'family pet' pups in one yard and weeded out the quality ones."

"Why not?" countered the kennelman, in the same tone. "D'you expect the boss to sell off the 'flyers' as pets, when he can make five times as much by keeping 'em or by selling 'em at top prices to other breeders?"

"This bunch of youngsters are as good for pets as if they were all champion timber. The public don't know the difference. They'd sooner have a thick-headed and round-eyed collie with a curly coat—so long as he has a big white collar and a big white blaze down his face—than to have the best-headed, plain-faced champion since the days of grand old Sunnybank Goldsmith and Seedley Stirling.

"The public remembers the colored picture books they looked at when they were kids. And the collies in those books all had thick heads and big round eyes and great wide white collars and kinky coats and great wide streaks of white down their noses. So that's the kind of collie they want. And that's the kind of collie the boss is selling 'em."

"At that," agreed Old Man Negley, "they're every bit as good pets and chums and guards as the champion-type collie. It's only when the owner of one of them takes his dear pet to a dog show thinking he'll get all the prizes—it's only then he'll know the difference. And even then he'll likely think the judge is a fool to give all the prizes to clean-headed collies with almond eyes and uncurled coats and oftenest without big wide streaks of white down their faces.

"For housedogs and pets, this bunch here is as good as any topnotcher; and just as clever and pretty, too. Now come on while I help the boy pick out his dog."

Mark had heard no word of this dialogue. With shining eyes he had been standing in front of the wire, looking down at the six eager little collie faces upturned to his and at the dozen pattering white forepaws and the six wildly wagging tails.

"I—I don't know which one to choose!" stammered Mark, ecstatically. "They're all so wonderful!"

"All puppies are 'wonderful,' at that age," said Old Man Negley. "That's why it's so easy to sell any sort of mutt when he's a puppy and so much harder to sell any sort of mutt when he begins to shape up. But don't choose any of them just yet. You wouldn't buy a horse, would you, after only seeing him stand still in the stall? "Never choose a puppy till you've had him out of his yard and watched him playing around, and had a chance to study him and examine him. I can help you a little bit, though, as a starter.

"Don't choose that pup farthest to the left. I've been watching him. He's sulky; and besides, he's shy. Shy by nature; not just indifferent. There's a lot of difference. And he snarls in a cranky way when the others try to play with him. He has a mean eye, too. There's not much material for a chum in that one.

"I advise you not to pick out the one next to him, either. He has lop ears, like a rabbit. A prick-eared collie puppy can have his ears trained to the right tulip shape after he is seven months old by weighting them with chewing gum or candle-grease, just inside the tip. Three show collies out of five are prick-eared by nature.

"But there's no hope for ears that flop down flat on the sides of the head. The fault will grow worse all the time. It spoils his 'collie expression' and gives him the look of a hound. The puppy has a badly overshot jaw, too. Count him out.

"That leaves four. Any of them four ought to make a fine chum and a handsome family dog. Now suppose you let the kennel man turn the four loose on the grounds, while you play around with them a while."

A minute afterward, three of the four puppies came storming out of their yard miniature furry whirlwinds. The fourth followed at a slovenly walk, showing none of their glad excitement in the romp. Instead of joining them in their gallop, he lay down, presently, as if for a nap.

Old Man Negley picked him up and put him back in the yard, closing the wire gate behind him.

"You don't want that one," said he. "Either he is born lazy or else he is sickly. If he's sickly, you certainly don't want him. If he's as lazy and listless as that while he's a baby, then he'll turn into a fat and lazy grown dog; and no sort of a comrade for a lively boy."

He broke off to watch the remaining three puppies. Then going over to one of them he picked it up gently and returned it to the yard.

"That poor little fellow had his leg trodden on or lain on by his mother, when he was a baby," said he. "The bone or the sinew got twisted out of shape. Did you see how he jerked his leg sideways when he ran? And the leg splayed out to one side when he stood still. It's a defect that'd get worse as he grew older.

"Now then, we've left two to choose from. Which shall it be? I know which. But suppose you watch carefully and see if you can tell. They're both pups, but one is worth ten of the other to you. Which one, and why?" (Copyright by the McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Oldtime Purse

From the wearing of the pouch at the side, in the Fifteenth and Sixteenth centuries, we trace the origin of the poke, or pocket, where, according to Shakespeare, it was customary to carry one's dial. Henry VIII of England carried a purse of red satin embroidered in gold, and under Catherine de Medici perfumed leather purses became the rage and cost at the time as much as $30 apiece.

FARM STOCK

SILAGE VALUABLE AS CATTLE FEED

Farmers usually regard silage as a dairy necessity, but few of them realize how valuable it is when properly combined with other feeds in fattening steers.

Indiana experiment station gave some interesting facts about silage in this connection as part of their International show exhibit. They compared the economy and efficiency of a standard ration with and without silage.

The feed required to fatten a carload of 20 two-year-old steers amounted to 4.5 tons of cottonseed meal, 43 tons of silage, 752 bushels of corn, and five tons of clover hay.

The land required to grow this feed was 15 acres of corn grain, 5.4 acres of silage corn, and two and a half acres of clover hay. This was a total acreage of 22.9 acres. Without silage, it took 28 acres of farm-grown feed, made up of 19 acres of corn grain and nine acres of clover.

Feed to make each pound of gain amounted to 5.6 pounds corn, 1.3 pounds clover hay, 1.3 pounds of cottonseed meal, and 11.5 pounds of silage. The profit was reckoned along with hogs following the steers. For the car lot using silage the profit was $393, and for the car lot fed no silage the profit was $299.

Cottonseed meal increases the finish and selling value of steers, while the silage used in the ration cheapens the cost of production. Less land is required to produce feed for a car lot of steers when silage is fed.

Early Diagnosis of Hog Cholera Very Important

Early diagnosis is one of the most important steps in the control of hog cholera, which has developed on many farms in Minnesota this year. Responsibility of a proper diagnosis and the method of procedure to follow, lie with the veterinarian, who should be called as soon as the pigs appear to be sick.

Emphasizing the importance of a correct diagnosis, Dr. H. C. H. Kernkamp of the division of veterinary medicine, University of Minnesota, says that if hog cholera serum were to be used on swine suffering from some disease other than cholera results would be discouraging.

"In outbreaks of cholera anti-cholera serum cannot be used too soon," he says. "Serum is not a cure, but it may be given in large doses to swine in the early stages of the disorder. Even if only a few hogs are saved, the serum will pay for itself."

Cattle Need Protein to Make Profitable Gains

A certain amount of protein is absolutely essential in cattle-feeding operations. Where alfalfa or clover hay is the sole roughage it is not necessary to use any protein feed, but where alfalfa or clover is fed in connection with other roughages, the addition of one pound of cottonseed meal per head per day will reduce the cost of gains materially.

If no alfalfa or other leguminous hay is fed, two pounds of cottonseed meal per head per day will produce gains considerably cheaper than in the cases where none is fed, according to Dr. C. W. McCampbell, head of animal husbandry work at the Kansas State Agricultural college.

Proper Feed Will Make Vigorous Litter of Pigs

The greater the number of pigs raised per sow the less the cost per pig. The unborn pig is built quite largely of protein, hence the necessity of feeding plenty of protein to the sow from breeding to farrowing time in order that she may produce a large, strong, thrifty, vigorous litter, say live stock authorities at the Kansas State Agricultural college. The brood sow should have either one-half pound of tankage, one pound of linseed oil meal, one pound of soy beans or one gallon of skim milk or buttermilk per day to furnish the needed protein, they advise.

Live Stock Hints

Young animals make the best use of feed.

The most effective method of riding cattle of lice is by dipping.

Do not feed moldy hay to horses if you wish to avoid serious ailments.

A beef cow carries more fat under her hide than a dairy cow, and fat is a most excellent nonconductor of heat.

Two severe taxes on pig growth are worms and lice. Cleanliness aids mightily in combating both.

Hog cholera ordinarily causes large losses to farmers during the fall and winter months. Vaccination is a sure preventive but must be done before the hogs get sick.

Too many pigs should not be put together. Even though none may be hurt, a large number bunch up and become so warm that colds result from going out into the winter weather.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

"Purges" and "Physics" Bad for Old Folks

While Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the curse of advancing age, he did not believe that a "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

To him, it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to "regulate" the bowels of old folks. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but each dose helps to strengthen the bowel muscles, shortly establishing natural "regularity." It never gripes, sickens, or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

If past fifty, buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

LIFE

Man comes into this world without his consent and leaves it against his will. During his stay on earth his time is spent in one continuous and misunderstanding. In his infancy he is an angel; in his boyhood he is a devil; in his manhood he is everything from a lizard up. In his family duties he is a damn fool; if he raises a family he is a chump; if he doesn't raise a family "Teddy" Roosevelt swears at; if he raises a check he is a thief and then the law raises hell with him; if he is a poor man he is a bad manager and has no sense; if he is rich he is dishonest but considered smart; if he is in politics he is a grafter and a crook; if he is out of politics you can't place him—he is an undesirable citizen. If he goes out to church he is a hypocrite; if he stays away from church he is a sinner; if he donates to foreign missions he does it for show; if he doesn't he is stingy and a tightwad. When he first comes into this world everybody wants to kiss him—before he goes out everybody wants to kick him. If he dies young there was a great future in front of him. If he lives to a ripe age he is in the way—only to save funeral expenses. Life is a funny proposition after all.

Thorobred Trees-- Ther's a Difference

Not every tree that grows will fruit in the Panhandle-Plains country. Tests carried out over a period of more than 20 years at Hereford, show that less than one half of 300 varieties planted in our test orchards are successful.

Out of these 300 varieties we have a collection of trees that can not be equaled for the Plains.

No where else can you find as complete an assortment of proven varieties--no one else has made the test.

The trees we select will grow and fruit for you. We guarantee satisfaction or refund your money without a question.

Costs More to Build—Is Worth More—Yet Sells for Less

If any other manufacturer endeavored to produce a car similar to the Ford according to the high standards of the Ford Motor Company, it would be impossible to offer it at anything like the present low Ford prices.

If the Ford Motor Company would substitute ordinary design for the basic Ford features, Ford cars could be produced and sold for less than the present Ford prices. Yet by so doing, Ford simplicity, durability and reliability would fall below the standard insisted upon by the Ford Motor Company.

Just think! 13,000,000 model T Ford cars have been produced since 1908—almost as many automobiles as were built by all other manufacturers combined. In 1925, almost 2,000,000 Ford cars and trucks were built and sold—and plans for 1926 call for the production of even more than 2,000,000.

It was the superiority of Ford design in 1908 that established Ford leadership. It is this same Ford design, improved but basically unchanged, that is continuing to make the Ford car the outstanding leader among all automobiles.

Orchids, so prized by the flower connoisseur, and in almost all sections of the United States comparatively expensive, are a little short of costly pests in some parts of Porto Rico. In this island there are two species that have proved destructive to the citrus groves, growing like weeds and entangling their enormous roots over the branches of the citrus trees with a strangulation effect.

By the term "sportsmanship" we do not mean being a sport. A person maybe interested in all forms of sports and yet lack the true sportsmanlike attitude.

No school which permits foul play or allows their representatives to do the wrong thing enters the contest in a sportsmanlike attitude. The boys and girls of the school are the representatives of the school. So let us be good sportsmen for our school will be judged by us.

Are You a Nervous, Irritable Woman?

San Antonio, Texas.—"I used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for feminine trouble, and it helped me very much; I suffered at times so I would have to go to bed. I would have headaches and a dragging sensation and was very nervous and irritable, but after taking the 'Prescription' I gained in weight and felt better in every way. I certainly am glad to tell others what this medicine has done for me."—Mrs. J. D. Scott, 223 Keller.

American Wives Will Hardly Believe This

Mlle. Kikou Yamata, the young Japanese novelist who made a sensational debut in French letters recently with her "Masako," encountered Mme. de Noailles the other day in a Paris drawing room. The French woman asked about love in Japan.

Mlle. Yamata told the ardent poetess that the Japanese woman, who is far less emancipated than European women, considers herself her husband's servant and obedience and humility as the most essential virtues.

"But supposing you were married to a Japanese," said Mme. de Noailles, "and discovered that he was planning to spend the night in bad company. What would you do?"

"I would examine his pocketbook," said Mlle. Yamata sweetly, "to be sure that he did not venture forth without plenty of money."—From the Cri de Paris. (Translated for the Kansas City Star.)

Vegetable and Fruit Shipments.

Vegetable and fruit shipments in car lots from the Winter Garden of Texas during January and February reached 800 cars a week. This did not include the local or less than car shipments. Large as these figures appear they are small compared with the possibilities of that part of the state under more general irrigation. Onions will soon be moving from that section by the dozens of car loads and then the alfalfa and other crops will be coming in. The vegetable and fruit shipping points in Texas are gradually moving north and in a short while Central, East and North Texas will be marketing their products in the northern cities. Texas is just beginning to understand its resourcefulness and to take its proper place in feeding the rest of the world.

Cotton Acreage Will be Large.

This writer would like to be able to see success in every good movement. The effort being made by business interests to bring about a reduction in the acreage of cotton is certainly most laudable, but it can not be done under the impetus of the "more cotton on fewer acres" movement. While a number of farmers will reduce acreage and cultivate intensively in an earnest effort to comply with the letter and the spirit of the movement, the effect upon the mass of farmers will be increased acreage at least for this year. Even some who will go in for larger production per acre will cultivate a few acres according to the precedents for greater production and many acres according to the old system. Having lived close to Texas farmers for forty years and having seen other efforts to secure reduction of cotton acreage fall, the writer feels safe in saying the present effort will not differ from the others. The Texas farmer is greedy for greater cotton acreage.

Good Results Will Follow.

While the statement just made appears pessimistic, good will come from the cotton reduction movement in that the effort is accompanied by a movement to get the farmers to grow such things as will enable them to live at home from home-grown products. The greatest short-coming of Texas farming is the disposition to practice one-crop farming and to buy everything needed on the farm although most of the needs may be grown at home. It is astonishing to what extent the average farmer buys farm products for his own use instead of growing them on his own farm. When the farmer cuts down his store bills to a minimum without reducing his standard of living and has other things than cotton to sell, his cotton surplus is not going to worry him a great deal. The solution of farm problems is in living as far as possible on home-grown products and securing a stable market for farm products.

Stealing by Wholesale.

The Austin thief who recently stole an acre of spinach, several cords of wood, fifteen chickens, and removed and took away eight windows from a house, must have been an industrious fellow, who should have spent his energies in better directions. The ordinary thief steals rather than work, but this chap combined theft with the hardest kind of labor, even if the work was not continued longer than one night. We need not be surprised next if we hear of some one stealing the use of a few acres of land and cultivating a crop by moonlight.

Moonshining by the Capitol Dome Light.

Perhaps most Texans know that the Capitol dome at Austin is beautifully lighted by electricity and that the rays of electric light extend far out into the cedar brakes of the surrounding country. Prohibition enforcement officers have discovered that enterprising moonshiners are no longer limiting their efforts to moonlight nights, but are using the lights from the Capitol dome to illuminate their cedar brake stills, thus making the state give a little help in carrying on the business whether the moon shines or not. This is an age of enterprise in which the moonshiner seems to be doing his full part.

Signs of Spring.

If you were reared in the country it is a pretty safe bet that you are at least thinking about planting a garden, and if your wife was country-reared it is a safer bet that you are renewing acquaintance with the hoe and the rake even though you live in the city. Most people who lived close to the soil in youth have a hankering for it every spring that at least spends itself in fitful efforts at gardening. Usually the spell does not survive the hot days of summer, but it is real while it lasts.

Automobiles Increase Safety.

We read the list of automobile accidents and conclude that the cars are a constant menace to life. There is ten times as much street and highway travel now as there was ten years ago. If we had as many horse-drawn vehicles as we have automobiles, instead of the large number of teams that automobile accidents, and the dangers would be greatly increased. Increased traffic always brings increased numbers of accidents. Still our roads and streets may be made safer than they are.

NELLIE REVELL Says:

IN A hospital every little noise has a meaning all its own. There is so little to see and so much to hear that one quickly learns to read and interpret the numerous sounds of the day and night.

In an early story of H. G. Wells a man reaches a country in Africa in which all the inhabitants are blind. At first he is impressed with his tremendous advantage over the natives, but before long he discovers that he is the one who is handicapped. So keenly developed are the senses of hearing and touch of these people that the newcomer is forced to blind himself lest he be outclassed in the struggle for life. The story was recalled to me by the realization of what a sensitive "receiving station" my ears had become during my long sojourn in a hospital room.

Of all the day's noises the dominating ones are the bells. From early morn until late at night bells mark and punctuate the passing hours. They begin at five o'clock in the morning with the delicate tinkle of the bell carried by the nun who precedes the priest and his spiritual aid. Then follows the chapel bell, summoning the patients who are able to attend services.

A special ring heralds each doctor's entry into the hospital; another bell, in the hall, signals that he is ready to make the rounds with a senior nurse. A welcome bell is the one which indicates that broth has left the diet kitchen, and a genuine thriller is the one proclaiming that meal trays are ready for distribution.

One of the most exciting sounds to a shut-in is the peal of the telephone bell. It carries with it a suspense that it never has in the office or home. I could hear it every time it rang while I was in the human repair shop, and often I waited what seemed an age for the nurse to come down the hall with the message and stop at my door—or go to another.

In the gamut of hospital bells, however, the most sinister and most impressive is the ambulance bell. It is the black sheep of the bells. Many times I was awakened from deep sleep by that somber gong and listened with sorrow and fear to its clangor, shattering the calm of slumberous streets, as the ambulance tears away on its unknown mission.

The imagination tried to follow and fill in the picture. What awaited the interns at the end of the journey? A tenement house fire? A child run over? A murderous brawl? Or perhaps some weary soul who had found the fight too hard and tried to cut the threads of fate. Then I would lie awake, waiting for the ambulance to return—for the first faint, brazen clatter that increased with steady crescendo until the machine roared past the corner and stopped at the hospital entrance. It was easy to tell when there was a passenger, for then the ring was unusually loud so that the staff in the accident ward could be ready for instant action.

No bell in the hospital can arouse such sheer terror as the firebell. One night some electric wires got crossed and the fire gong sounded. I lay helpless, waiting for the nurse to come in—an eternity of breathless apprehension it seemed. When the signal for fire drill is sounded the nurses are required to take their stations at the hall telephones and there await instructions. Though it is only a few minutes before they come to tell the patients it is only a drill, in that short space of time the imagination can startle one with mental pictures of what a fire in a hospital would mean.

But of them all the most exasperating, the most nerve-racking is—the bell that isn't answered.

Every walk in life has its own code of superstitions. The sailors are superstitious about certain things, the waiters have theirs, actors have many, and the newspaper people are not without some. While nearly everybody regards thirteen with apprehension, the actor includes twenty-three in his list of things to beware of. But what thirteen, twenty-three, breaking a mirror and whistling in a dressing room all combined are to the actor, that much and more is "thirty" to a newspaper man (or woman).

It means, "That's all. Good night. No more." We write "thirty" at the end of our story to let the copy editor know there isn't any more. And when a member of the fourth estate leaves this land of doubtful assignments we say he got his "thirty."

So imagine the chill that chased up my spine when I woke up in the hospital about five years ago, having been brought in on a stretcher in an ambulance, and asked the number of my room.

"It's all right," the doctor said. "I know you show folks don't like thirteen or twenty-three. So I picked out a nice even number for you. You're in room thirty."

Harry Hirschfield says he went into a soda-water emporium and said, "Give me an ice-cream soda without flavoring."
"What do you mean, without flavoring?"
"Why, you might make it a soda without chocolate flavoring."

The clerk went away and after a bit returned with the verdict: "Sorry, but we haven't got chocolate. You'll have to take it without vanilla."

RIBBON BEDECKS SPRING HATS; PAJAMAS REPLACE TEA GOWNS

WAS there ever a season when ribbon did not play an interesting part in the program of millinery design? Nor is this spring an exception to the rule. In fact, creative genius is making a record for itself in its cunning and complex handling of ribbon. It almost seems as if the modernistic way of conjuring ribbons into cocardes and conventional foldings, platings and what not is as scientifically carried out as a two-plus-two-equals-four problem in arithmetic. The picketed band of ribbon which encircles the crown of the hat at the right of this picture is typical of the a theme of fascinating interest. The styling of pajamas is a matter of individual taste. Those who favor the strictly tailored modes number about fifty-fifty with those who see in these within-the-home garments an opportunity of indulging in the highly ornate and elaborate. In either instance color and beautiful material play an important part in the creation of pajama modes. Tailored elegance is expressed in the pajama and boudoir coat in the picture. Opal gray crepe satin with borderings of Nile green, rose and orchid tell a charming color scheme. The ingenious and methodical ribbon manipulation which marks the trend of the mode. This charming version of an all-ribbon hat, for even the crown and brim are covered, is in lovely naive shading, for mother-of-pearl colorings are part of this season's glory. In connection with ribbon fashions just now the most important words are beiting and velvet. Milliners are using these two types more than any other. As important as the kind and quality of the new ribbons is their coloring, as expressed by one all-important word, namely pastel. If the toque or turban be all of beiting ribbon, which is fashion's whim at the moment, it will take on a springlike freshness of some lovely pastel rose, green, blue, maize or gray, very likely. Likewise the velvet ribbons which enhance the new bangkoks, felts and hair hats are in exquisite pastel tones or tints. Not only are tailored ribbon effects important, for fanciful ribbon trims play a becoming part in the millinery graceful negligee jacket of match fabric is lined with orchid. Among new Paris ideas in pajamas for the at-home ten is a model of black satin. Over this is worn a coat of the fabric made with flowing sleeves and a yoke, the entire enlivened with elaborately colorful embroidery. Sleeveless models are in the list of accepted pajama fashions. A very lovely garment for the boudoir is made of rose crepe bordered with wide larkspur blue. A single huge rose with leaves is embroidered on the front of the straight slipover blouse. The last word among pajama modes is the cape model. There are the usual pajamas and blouse for this theme as well. The model at the left top of the collection here pictured shows an ingenious ribbon trim as does also the hat in the center. Both these ribbons have metallic weaves for their foundation. The taffeta shape below to the left shows a clever introduction of plaited ribbon which semi-outlines velvet tabs. Ribbon binding details the hat shown last. To consider pajamas as merely sleeping garments is to limit the role assigned them on the stage of fashion. To be sure, there are those of printed crepes and voiles, also sateen and similar tub-fabrics designed for that purpose and many there are who prefer them to any other nightgown. The modern woman, however, is replacing the trailing tea-gown with a handsome pajama ensemble. Thus have pajamas become

The Valley of Voices

By GEORGE MARSH

"MY VALLEY!"

SYNOPSIS.—With David, half-breed guide, Brent Steele, of the American Museum of Natural History, is traveling in northern Canada. By a stream he hears Denise, daughter of Col. Hilaire St. Onge, factor at Walling River, play the violin superbly. He introduces himself and accepts an invitation to make the post his home during his stay. He finds the factor worried and mystified. The "log chateau" is a real home. From St. Onge he learns of the mysterious creature of evil, the "Windigo," and the disappearance of a canoe and its crew, with the season's take of furs. Then at night the "Windigo" gives a weird performance. Even Steele is mystified. David, Steele's Indian, and Michel, St. Onge's headman, leave for the scene of the canoe's disappearance in an attempt to solve the mystery.

CHAPTER III

As the days passed at Walling River, and the dread voice failed to break upon the crisp September nights with a recurrence of its horror, the people timidly took up the old order of their days. The rabbit snares in the forest were again visited and reset by the women, who traveled in pairs for mutual encouragement, and one day Tete-Boule was prevailed upon by the factor to go out with another Indian after moose, for the fort needed fresh meat. As he left, the Ojibway gravely shook the hands of the fearful women and children gathered on the shore, bidding them look upon him for the last time, for by night he and his comrade would be mangled flesh in the maw of the Windigo.

"Did you hear that fool?" Steele asked St. Onge, standing near him on the beach.

"This thing has ruined him as a hunter," replied the factor, "he will never recover from it."

"I think I'll run upstream to the riffles this morning and catch some dore for supper," said the younger man as they returned to the trade-house.

Later, a second canoe quietly left the post, but when the boat reached the riffles, a mile above, the occupant did not stop to fish but continued upstream following the shore. And when the flash from the paddles of the craft above ceased, and the spot on the river which was the canoe, moved to the shore, the boat following, also turned in, and was lifted and hidden in the alders. Then the premonition of Tete-Boule attained a partial fulfillment, for on the shores of the Walling started a man hunt; but the incentive in the hunter was not a craving for human flesh, but a mild curiosity.

Before sunset the safe return to the post of Tete-Boule and his partner was heralded with joy, although they had failed in their hunt. But it was well after dark before the second canoe slid silently in to the stony beach.

"You had no luck this afternoon, monsieur, you caught nothing?" laughed St. Onge as Steele appeared for supper.

"As a matter of fact, Colonel, I went hunting, but the game was too tame for sport."

St. Onge's black brows lifted.

"You are cryptic, monsieur."

"Well, to confess," laughed Steele, "I was interested to see how much hunting your men would really do—and I found out."

"You followed Tete-Boule's canoe?"

"Yes, I watched them for a few hours, but as they showed no sign of taking to the bush, I traveled over to those ponds Michel told me about. Tomorrow, if you have a man who will help me pack the meat, I'll get a moose."

"And Tete-Boule never left the river?"

"Not while I watched him."

The factor shrugged significantly.

"He's 'bush shy' now and will not hunt. But what is there to do?"

"Have you thought that he might be shamming to avoid work? Is he lazy?"

"No, he always was a good packer and hunter. It's the Windigo."

In the week past, Steele had seen all too little of the girl whose personality had so vividly aroused his interest, whose moods, defying analysis, only added to her charm. Convinced that beyond a dread of the ugly alternatives which the future might present to her choice, beyond any possible fear of the manifestations of the supernatural which the post had witnessed, there lurked a tangible cause for anxiety, his active mind had been ceaseless in its groping for a clue to its nature. Two days following the night of terror, he had spent searching the big ridge for sign of wolverine, lynx or wolf, had produced nothing in explanation of the mysterious cries, but while his eyes swept the dry floor of the forest to right and left, his thoughts had dealt with the reiterated query: "Whom did she fear at the rapids? What was she about to tell me when St. Onge interrupted? She had said, 'But you do not know the danger! and there are so many—' Many what? Clearly there was something more than the Windigo in this warning. But what could it be?"

So Steele returned from his profitless search of the ridge to wait for the return of David and Michel, when a definite plan of campaign could be framed.

On a morning when the warm September sun, lifting the low-lying river mists, rolled them back on ridges, here and there already frosted with the yellow and gold of a flock-painted birch or poplar, Denise St. Onge appeared at breakfast in wildcoat and heavy boots. Steele stared in surprise at the change in face and manner of his hostess. The ghost of worry had left her eyes, which shone with high spirits. Her mood of silence had given way to a gayety foreign to his knowledge of her.

"This beautiful morning, monsieur, Charlotte and I go to wave an au revoir to the summer which passes."

"Charlotte is to be envied," he replied, charmed with the note of cheerfulness.

Her eyes lighted with amusement.

"It is possible that it might be arranged that we take with us a body-guard," she said archly. "Of course, it is not for ladies to demand the presence of cavaliers—"

"Take me, oh fair lady, as thy knight!" he begged.

"Laggard though you are, you may escort us to my watch tower, where Charlotte and I go to play the spring north, and to wave a bon voyage to the last of the geese."

"It is charming of you, mademoiselle, to allow me to go," he said, delighted at having the girl to himself in her gay mood.

Accompanied by the stolid Charlotte, carrying a birch bark basket containing the lunch, and whose swart face

"We are to have gay music today, mademoiselle. You remember, you promised we should be merry."

"Yes, today the violin shall sing of joy; it is too beautiful here to be sad. Even though the first grey geese of the year pass south, I shall send them no message."

"And this message—is it a secret?"

"A secret, monsieur? What secrets can a woman cherish in these forests?" Her reply had been spontaneous, innocent of subterfuge; then, in his lifted eyebrows and humorous curl of lip, she caught the reflection of the double implication of her question and her face flushed to the temples.

"Have you ever longed to journey south with the passing geese?" he quickly asked, gallantly covering her embarrassment. "As you play them down the skies, do you not wish to join them?"

"Why, Monsieur Steele, you have stolen my dreams," she cried, radiant with surprise. "Always, as they pass I stand here calling to them to lend me wings to follow—follow into the south. I try to lure them back with my violin—but no, they pass. So I send them down the wind to a mad quick-step—my bon voyage, my farewell—until spring pipes then north."

She had risen. And her eyes, shining with emotion, her face, vivid with the color of her thoughts, strangely stirred the man who listened. The lines of her straight body, from shoulders to trim feet, held his eyes.

Watching her, Steele asked himself what this strange girl, tense as the strings of her violin, with her moods of aloofness and silence, followed by swift changes to whimsical gaiety and lightness of spirit, was coming to mean to him. As her eyes again met his he wondered what memories he should carry down to Nepigon in October.

"And the message you send with the geese?" he asked. "There is homesickness in it for your France—your Touraine?"

"Ah," she sighed. "Is it not natural, monsieur? I do long for the roses and the poppy fields—the warm sun on the white roads and the laughter of the people. There is no laughter at Walling River—now." She raised her hands in eloquent gesture. "The winter here is so long—so cold. The eternal wind in the spruce—does it not speak to you, too? To me there are always the voices—voices of hunger and pain—and death."

"Yes, summer or winter," he said "the voices are everywhere, in the white-waters, the spruce, the hills. And often, in the breeze, the forest becomes one great orchestra."

"You have heard it, too?" she cried. "The sweep of the violins, the moaning of the cellos?"

"I always hear them in the summer, from a river; with the drum beat of rapids as accompaniment."

"Ah, there is much of the poet in you, monsieur." And for an instant there was a light in the girl's eyes which set wild thoughts stirring in his brain. "But our winter is beautiful, also, in moods," she went on. "The quiet days with the sun on the snow—I love then to walk in the forest. And the winding snowshoe trails; do they not call you to follow?"

"Evidently Steele has fallen in love with the beautiful French girl. And her feelings?"

Flat Feet and Rheumatism

Many persons think they have rheumatism of the legs or back when they have flat feet or broken arches, according to Dr. Solomon Strouse in Hygeia Magazine.

A young man fell as he was escorting his lady down the aisle of a theater. Much embarrassed and fearing himself a victim of serious rheumatism he stayed in bed nursing his illness. When he finally called on a physician, his flat feet were discovered and his illness disappeared in a few days of properly adjusted shoes.

"But now?" he repeated, wondering if he were, at last, to know—to be made a sharer in her secret.

But she eluded him. "Charlotte and I often came here to dream and play away the day—that is, I did," she laughed. "Poor Charlotte at times was bored, oh, so bored! Was it not so, Charlotte?"

"En, eh! Yes!" mumbled the Ojibway woman, who sat on a rock apart from the two, her restless eyes sweeping the scrub below them.

"Charlotte is not bored now; she's scared to death," suggested Steele with a laugh.

"Has she not reason, monsieur?" protested Denise. "But we have not been here, she and I, since midsummer. And I miss it so."

"You fear to come here now—believe in this thing?" He welcomed the opportunity to put the question directly.

The dark eyes frankly met his. "Is there not good reason, monsieur, for fear in a woman? After the fur canoe—and that night?"

Natural as had been her reply, Steele intuitively sensed that she was dissembling—to avoid his inevitable questioning was willing to have him believe that she, too, was a victim of the general superstition. But she had betrayed herself the morning her father cut short her half-uttered warning. Well, the day was young and he feared to press her then for an explanation of what she patently desired to avoid. So with a nodded assent to her question, he changed the subject.

"We are to have gay music today, mademoiselle. You remember, you promised we should be merry."

"Yes, today the violin shall sing of joy; it is too beautiful here to be sad. Even though the first grey geese of the year pass south, I shall send them no message."

"And this message—is it a secret?"

"A secret, monsieur? What secrets can a woman cherish in these forests?" Her reply had been spontaneous, innocent of subterfuge; then, in his lifted eyebrows and humorous curl of lip, she caught the reflection of the double implication of her question and her face flushed to the temples.

"Have you ever longed to journey south with the passing geese?" he quickly asked, gallantly covering her embarrassment. "As you play them down the skies, do you not wish to join them?"

APPETIZING DISHES FOR SERVING RICE

Recipes Are Given for Several Good Combinations.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Baked Steak Stuffed With Rice.

1 1/2 or 2 pounds of round or flank steak, 2 tablespoonsful stock or gravy
1 onion, chopped fine, 1 cupful cooked rice
1 tablespoonful fat, 1 tablespoonful parsley
2 tablespoonsful Worcestershire sauce, 1 tablespoonful flour

Have the steak cut thin, and pound it well. If flank steak is used it is well to score it on both sides with many diagonal cuts. Spread on the steak a stuffing made in the following way: Brown the finely chopped onion in the fat, stir in the flour, the Worcestershire sauce, and the stock, and cook this mixture until it is thick; then stir in the rice and parsley, and add salt if necessary. After this stuffing has been spread on the steak, roll it and tie it, or fasten with skewers, and bake slowly for 1 1/2 hours. A few strips of bacon or other fat may be laid across the top, and as the fat cooks out from them, it may be used for basting. Serve the roll hot, slicing it across the roll.

Oysters Scalloped With Rice.

3 cupfuls cooked rice, 1 cupful milk
1 pint fresh oysters, 2 tablespoonsful flour
1 cupful chopped celery, 1/2 teaspoonful of salt
2 tablespoonsful of butter, drippings or other fat

Place alternate layers of rice, oysters and celery in a baking dish and pour over them a smooth white sauce made by melting the fat and stirring in the milk, the flour, the salt and the pepper. Bake for 20 minutes.

Baked Rice With Cheese.

4 cupfuls cooked rice, 1 1/2 cupfuls tomato juice
1/2 cupful grated cheese, 2 teaspoonfuls salt
1/2 cupful chopped pepper, pimiento

Mix the ingredients well together and pour into a baking dish. Cover the top of the dish with the pulp left from straining the tomatoes. Bake for 30 minutes in a moderate oven and serve hot.

Baked Rice and Giblets.

1 cupful of cooked rice, 2 cupfuls gravy
2 cupfuls cooked giblets, 1 teaspoonful salt
rice, Pepper

Chop the giblets fine, mix them with the other ingredients, pour the mixture into a greased baking dish, and bake it for 20 minutes. A little finely chopped celery or green pepper may be added if desired.

Stewed Kidneys and Rice.

2 veal or 5 lamb kidneys, butter or other fat
1 teaspoonful salt, 2 cupfuls cooked rice
1/2 teaspoonful pepper, 1 cupful water
1 onion, chopped, 1 tablespoonful flour

Trim, split and cook the kidneys for 10 minutes in boiling water. Cut them into small pieces, add the salt, the pepper, and the chopped onion, and saute them in the fat until brown. Place the browned kidneys and onion in a baking dish with the cooked rice. Make a brown gravy by adding the flour and the water to the fat in which the onions and kidneys were browned, and pour it over the rice and kidneys. Set this dish in a hot oven until the mixture is heated through.

How to Freshen Brined Peppers for Stuffing

Experiments by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture in the utilization of green peppers brined for six months have shown that there are several satisfactory ways of using these vegetables after they have been freshened. They are put into three times as much water as their own volume of cold water, heated to simmering, from 170 degrees F. to 185 degrees F., and held at this temperature for 35 minutes. This water is then drained off, an equal quantity of fresh cold water is added, and the simmering repeated. After being drained a second time the peppers are again put into the same quantity of water, heated to simmering point, and left to cool for three hours. This repeated heating leaves the peppers very tender and mild in flavor, but satisfactory for stuffing with chopped meat and vegetables, rice and cheese, or any of the mixtures used as filling for fresh peppers.

Vitamins Are New

Vitamins are among the comparatively recent discoveries of science. Little is known about them or the part they play in the diet save that there are several kinds that are necessary for normal health and growth and that when they are left out of the diet for a long time so-called "deficiency diseases" develop. At least three kinds of vitamins are now recognized, which, until more satisfactory names are agreed upon, may be known as A, B and C. All three of these vitamins may be present in milk.

Curd of Boiled Milk

The curd of boiled milk is finer and more easily acted on by the digestive organs than that of either raw or pasteurized milk, though it is commonly said to be more constipating. The fat globules also are somewhat altered, and cooked milk fat may be slightly less easily emulsified than the raw. The food value of the sugar in milk is not changed by ordinary cooking.

Simple Rack for Spools Found Very Convenient

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Spools of thread and silk in a work basket have a trying way of getting their ends snarled, with consequent waste of time for the sewer, and also much thread and silk. Mrs. W. W. Blough, a Missouri farm woman, devised this simple and convenient rack which hangs near her sewing machine. Anyone could make a similar rack.

Carrots and Apples May Be Baked in Same Dish

Apples have many uses in dishes accessory to meat. It has always been a tradition to serve apple sauce with pork, or to put an apple inside a roast goose, or in the mouth of a baked young pig. Apple fritters or fried apples appear more often with the meat course than as a dessert, and many people are familiar with the southern combination consisting of sweet potatoes and apples baked in layers. An addition to these ways of serving apples with the main course, consists of preparing them with carrots in the proportions given below. This recipe is one of a number of combinations of vegetables tested by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, in experiments to determine new or better ways of cooking every-day vegetables to conserve their valuable mineral constituents and vitamins.

Carrots Baked With Apples.

4 small apples, 1/2 teaspoonful salt
3 young carrots, 1 tablespoonful sugar
1/2 cupful boiling water, 1 tablespoonful butter

Pare and core the apples. Scrape and cut the carrots in half. Place all the ingredients in a baking dish and cook for 20 minutes with the cover on. Then remove the cover and cook for 15 minutes more, or until the carrots are tender and enough water has evaporated to make a rich juice.

Candlewax Stains Easy to Remove From Cloth

If colored candlewax stains on clothing are treated promptly they can be removed without great difficulty, says the United States Department of Agriculture. These waxes consist of paraffin in which an organic dye is dissolved. Remove the paraffin as completely as possible by scraping it away, then place a clean blotter on each side of the fabric over the stain and pass a warm iron over the spot. The grease is melted and is absorbed by the blotting paper. Then dissolve the coloring matter remaining in the fiber by sponging it with denatured alcohol. If a slight grease spot still remains, remove it by sponging with one of the cleaning agents, such as chloroform, carbon tetrachloride, ether, gasoline or naphtha, and benzol. The first two are the safest to use as they are not inflammable. Take the greatest care in using any of the inflammable solvents. It is best to use them in a shady place out-of-doors; if in the house, by an open window and away from all flames.

GOOD HEALTH NECESSARY

Many Busy Women Owe Their Health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fifty years ago there were few occupations for women. Some taught school, some did housework, some found work to do at home and a few took up nursing.

Today there are very few occupations not open to women. Today they work in factories with hundreds of other women and girls. There are also women architects, lawyers, dentists, executives, and legislators. But all too often a woman wins her economic independence at the cost of her health.

Mrs. Elizabeth Chamberlain who works in the Unionall factory making overalls writes that she got "wonderful results" from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mrs. Chamberlain lives at 600 Monmouth St., Trenton, N. J. She recommends the Vegetable Compound to her friends in the factory and will gladly answer any letters she gets from women asking about it.

If Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped other women, why shouldn't it help you?

Catarrh, Even in Mild Form, Often Leads to Distressing Complications.

Here is a Simple, Safe, Inexpensive and Pleasant Method That Will Rid the Head, Nose and Throat of Catarrh.

There is no disease more offensive or disagreeable, or no disease that will lead to as much serious trouble as catarrh, often producing chronic headaches and deafness, affecting the eyes and voice, and frequently weakening the lungs.
