Let-Legislature Enforce Collection Delinquent Taxes

While the legislature of Texas is groping about for new sources of revenue, in order to meet the ever-increasing expenses of state government, why not turn its attention to the collection of the delinquent taxes?

The tax redemption department at Austin has spent considerable time recently in making a careful analysis of the probable per centage of such outstanding accounts that are collectable if the legislature would enact laws whereby collection could be enforced. After allowing a conservative estimate for "dead" accounts, it appears that the State is due between twenty-five and thirty-five million dollars—a tidy sum, which would go a good way in building and maintaining new schools and highways and eleemosynary institutions, of which Texas is in urgent need.

Certainly it is not fair that those who pay their taxes promptly should be saddled with more and more taxes while so great an amount is owing the State and a considerable number of taxpayers are adding thereto each year. There should be means provided by which this money could be recovered by the State.

The tax survey, which it is hoped, will relieve the oppressive tax burden borne by West Texas and the Panhandle, and put valuations on an equitable basis throughout the State, as well as discover no inconsiderable amount of property that is now escaping taxation entirely, might profitably direct a part of its energies to a solution of the delinquent tax matter.

One of the peculiarities of delinquent tax lists, as published in Texas newspapers, is the preponderance of property whose ownership is "unknown." It looks as though there must be something wrong with a system of records that permits property to change hands without any knowledge of the transaction penetrating to the tax collector's office. After a few years, all traces of ownership is lost in cases where the taxes are not paid.

Let the legislature enforce the collection of delinquent taxes all over the state, and possibly it will not need to pile still more levies on our citizens.—Southwest Plainsman.

Farewell Party For Mr. and Mrs. White

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor White were honored Wednesday evening, May 18, with a party, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Griffiths, given by B. Y. P. U. members and Mr. White's Sunday school class.

A number of interesting games were played, after which delicious refreshments were served.

We are certainly sorry to lose Mr. and Mrs. White. They will be greatly missed. We wish for them many friends wherever they may locate.

Legion of Amarillo Seeks Roy Harris

The whereabouts of Thomas Roy Harris is being sought by his wife, Mrs. Harris, 1309 Fillmore st., Amarillo, Texas.

Harris left his home about two weeks ago, for reasons unknown. It is alleged that he had served with the American forces in France and was gassed. Description of Harris is as follows: 5 feet, 9 inches; about 140-150 pounds, dark-brown hair, partially bald, brown eyes, scar above right eye, tattoo, large eagle upper right shoulder; blue bird on right forearm, ring tattooed on finger of right hand. Initials, T. R. H. in wreath left arm. Wore a light shirt, light pants, tan Oxford shoes and khaki coveralls, with light cap. Harris is very talkative, intelligent and boastful of himself.

Any one knowing of his whereabouts, please have local officers apprehend and confine him, and notify the Adjutant, Hanson Post No. 54, American Legion, Amarillo, Texas.

The editor was the lucky one drawing the cedar chest given away by the Gardner Dry Goods Company last Saturday. It is a beautiful, useful and ornamental piece of furniture, and we are glad to state that we are proud of it, indeed. But as our supply of woollens, silks, etc., to store in said chest is (ahem) mighty "scarcy," it will be used mostly as an ornament.

Sanitary Work In Flood Relief

Nearly 200 sanitary engineers, doctors and nurses are at work in the Mississippi Valley flood area under the Red Cross Banner, vaccinating and inoculating refugees with anti-typhoid serum and safeguarding their health by protecting their drinking water supply and enforcing sanitary measures.

This form of protective work is wholly a modern phase of disaster relief. In the days when medical science was less developed, doctors and nurses were used to care for the sick rather than prevent these unfortunate, hurriedly thrown into improvised camps, from being stricken with communicable diseases. Had it not been for the discovery of preventive treatment by vaccines and serums, the camps along the Mississippi at this unhealthy season would be swept by fevers and other contagions. As mosquito control is impossible, and the malaria-bearing anopheles breed in stagnant water, all refugees receive their daily doses of quinine.

Follow-up work in sanitation and disease prevention will be necessary when the people return to their water-soaked lands to plant their summer crops.

Uncle Sam's Ships of Desert Once "Sailed" the Plains

"When did Uncle Sam's fleet of ships of the desert 'sail' the plains of the great West—in Texas, Arizona, New Mexico, California and Montana?"

"To solve what transportation problem was Uncle Sam's famous camel corps experiment tried, and what was the result of it?"

The next time you get in one of these "Ask me Another" contests, try the above questions on your friends and see if they can answer them. You can if you will read the article, "The Camels Are Coming," by Elmo Scott Watson, which appears in this issue of The Journal. It will tell you that "The Camels Are Coming" to Canada to work on the farms of Saskatchewan, and they may be used for that purpose in some of the states of this country. This fact has revived an incident of almost forgotten American history—the story of the "Camel Corps of the United States Army." Be sure to read it.

A Big Land Deal Made Wednesday

The following gentlemen were in Muleshoe this week, closing up a big land deal in the southwestern part of the county:—

John S. Spangle of Dallas, S. T. Harrison of Memphis, J. T. Pingle of Kansas, and W. C. Hughes of St. Joseph, Mo. They were subdividing this immense tract. The land will be placed on the market to farmers on long-time payments, and will offer exceptional opportunities to renters in the eastern part of the state, and other places to own a home of their own. This is another step being made in the development and progress of this county.

Watch Bailey County grow!

Preachers Make Raid On Chicken Roosts

Wednesday of last week the editor found two ministers—Methodist ministers—in his chicken house! There they were with sacks and boxes! We caught them with the goods!

They asked us not to publish their names if the story appeared in The Journal, but we are no respecter of persons when we find them in our chicken house with sacks and boxes. These ministers were J. D. Farmer of Morton, formerly of this city, and C. H. Ledger, who hails from Sudan. And these men went so far as to even have a driver for their car! He is the son of Bro. Farmer, Woodson Farmer.

To make a long story short, this is really the way the above incident happened: J. D. Farmer some time ago had contracted for a bunch of Barred Rock pullets from the editor, and were here to fill the contract. It was filled, and the ministers were well pleased with their visit to our chicken roosts. But they were not pleased to see the large brass locks hanging on the outside of the houses. (They left town without paying a fine or visiting the county jail.)

Come to see us again, preachers! The latch-string on the door of our residence always hangs on the outside, and the gate to the chicken yard is padlocked.

Joshua Blocker was in the city on business Tuesday.

Some Consolation About a Man

The next time rich Aunt Emma gets particularly snooty, or old Judge Grabs, the banker, gets uppity, or the cook gets hard boiled, or your husband gets snippy, or your wife gets haughty, or you, yourself, get full of the feeling that the little old universe simply couldn't bump along without you, stop a minute and reflect earnestly on this:

According to scientific research, the average man 5 feet, 10 inches tall and weighing 150 pounds, is worth, chemically, about 98 cents. And this is how his market value is divided, and what he is physically made of: Enough fat to make 7 bars of soap. (A bit underestimated for some folks, I know.)

Enough iron to make a nail of medium size. (Brass is not mentioned, but it's often there, all the same.)

Enough sugar to fill a shaker. (This, too, is much underestimated for some folks I could think of.)

Enough lime to whitewash a chicken coop. (No grit is mentioned, but it's there.)

Enough phosphorus to make 2,200 match tips. (But some have had to be brighter than that to accomplish one match.)

Enough potassium to explode a toy cannon. (But surely there are more fireworks than that in some I have seen.)

Together with a little sulphur (which you can whiff just before the twister hits.)

So after all, we don't seem to be worth worrying about greatly, do we?—Exchange.

Welton Winn Will Publish Farm Paper

Welton Winn of Lubbock was in the city Monday, guest of his son, Dan Winn. About June 1st, Mr. Winn will begin publication of a farm paper at Lubbock. The new publication will be published strictly in the interest of the farmers and agriculturalists of the Panhandle country. Mr. Winn is well-experienced in this work, being former farm editor of the Lubbock Avalanche, and for several years was connected with the State Department of Agriculture, traveling in the capacity of Institute Lecturer, discussing farming, stock raising and kindred subjects. In addition to his editorial knowledge, he is also a practical farmer of long experience in the West. Associated with him will be men fully competent to handle their part of the work. With such men at the helm, the new publication will be launched with a promising outlook. The Journal and the newspaper fraternity wish Mr. Winn and his associates much success with the venture.

Help the Flood-Stricken Neighbors

We have been requested to make an appeal to the people of Bailey county, who have not contributed to the relief of the Mississippi flood sufferers, to leave contributions at Gardner Dry Goods Company, with Mrs. Joe March. This call is important, and we should help the suffering and destitute people all we can.

Elmer Hopkins came in the first of the week from Odessa, where he has been doing hauling in the oil fields.

Trades Day Was Well Attended

The regular Saturday Trades Day was well attended on last Saturday. Owing to the big sale going on at Gardner Dry Goods Company, the crowds came in early and stayed late.

J. W. Miller was lucky. He received the $10 coupon book. And so were Taylor White, Rufus Gilbreath and E. J. Gully, who received $5 coupon books each.

This regular Saturday Trades Day is one of the greatest stunts ever put on in a town. It gives the farmers double value for their money, and brings them together for a pleasant meeting each week. Come on in, every one of you, Saturday, and have your part of the fun and get your coupon book!

Every time you make a purchase in Muleshoe from a merchant, if he do not give the tickets, ask for them. The merchants should be careful about giving out the Trades Day tickets. With every purchase you are entitled to a ticket. Be sure to get all that is coming to you.

Kitchen Shower For Popular Young Ladies

The Methodist W. M. S. met Wednesday, May 25th, in the home of Mrs. J. F. Wallace.

This being their social day, the ladies gave a "Kitchen Shower" to Mrs. Ivan Mardis and Miss Novella Elrod. There were percolators, pots, pans and rolling pins, and many other useful things given to the girls, also brief notes of good advice on how to live on 43 cents per week.

There were interesting contests and games, and everyone entered into the spirit of them beautifully. Delicious refreshments of sandwiches and tea were served.

The W. M. S. will meet in the home of Mrs. E. R. Hart (to continue the study of "Training for Service," by Herbert Moninger), Wednesday, June 1, at 4 p. m. —Reporter.

American Legion Dance

The American Legion announces a dance at their home on the night of Friday, the 27th, with the Plainview Red Hot Rompers furnishing the music. This is a new orchestra here, but one that has a wonderful reputation in the Panhandle. advt.

A. Schwede, one of our progressive farmers, was in the city Tuesday looking after business, and while in town called at the Journal office and renewed his subscription. He said his corn and cotton is looking fine, but that a good rain would not be objected to at this time. He thinks the farmer who has a cotton patch this year will be in luck, and so do we.

H. C. Boyle and wife of Kansas City, Mo., was here the week end, guests in the home of his brother, E. B. Boyle, editor. He is a young attorney, and was in this part of the state seeking a location. He will likely locate somewhere in West Texas.

FOR SALE—Two full-blood Shropshire rams; washings. Heavy shears. One Rambury yarding ram. (Might trade for ewes.)—O. C. Essary, Baileyboro, Texas. (15-2t)

"The Camels are Coming!"

ABOARD FOR AMERICA! LASHED TO THE DECK

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

"THE camels are coming!" No, it isn't the old circus call, nor a paraphrase on words of the old poem about the Siege of Lucknow, nor an announcement of a new prohibition enforcement drive.

The camels, the servants of man since prehistoric times, are coming to Canada, are to work on the lands of certain farmers in Saskatchewan who believe that these ships of the desert may be superior to horses and mules as draft animals. And if the experiment across the international boundary line is successful, it is not at all unlikely that they may be tried in North Dakota, Montana and other states where climate and soil conditions are similar to those in the Dominion.

Over in Russia camels have been used for some time as farm animals and have proved their worth on the plow and the reaper. Several of these camels are already in service in Canada, and the Saskatchewan farmers have ordered 400 more from northern Russia. They are the Bactrian camels, which are different from the Arabian camel in being smaller and sturdier, having longer wool and tougher feet, and they are remarkable for their ability to stand extremes of heat and cold. These camels thrive on the plateau of Tibet where the thermometer shoots up to 140 degrees in summer, only to fall far below zero in the winter.

The Canadian farmers who are going to make the experiment are doing so because they believe that the camels will live longer than horses, can walk faster, carry heavier loads and can work longer and under more adverse weather conditions. Bactrian camels are capable of carrying loads of 1,000 to 1,500 pounds and can walk in deep snow in which horses would founder helplessly. The pace of the camel is steady and uniform. How tireless they are is shown by the fact that the lighter type of desert camel has often traversed 100 miles a day. It is believed also that it will cost less to feed the camels than horses because these lump-backed animals will eat almost anything that can find—tough shrubbery and thorny plants.

At any rate, the experiment will be watched with interest by farmers in this country even though it probably will never be adopted on a large scale. It is interesting also, to recall that the United States government once made a somewhat similar experiment, although for a different purpose. During the Mexican war, Jefferson Davis, later president of the Confederacy but then a colonel in Gen. Zachary Taylor's army, was struck by the fact that camels would be much better than horses or mules for transport service in the deserts of the great Southwest. So when he became secretary of war under President Franklin Pierce he determined to make the experiment and after some effort succeeded in 1853 in getting an appropriation of $300,000 from congress for that purpose.

Accordingly he detailed Maj. Henry C. Wayne to the task of going aboard and purchasing the camels, and the Navy department, ordered Lieut. David Porter, commanding the ship Supply, to take Wayne on his mission, aid him in getting the camels and return them to Ft. United States, Wayne and Porter rounded the Levant with the "general cussidness of them ornery brutes," the mule skinner came to love their sass and sass. So the reports that some of the camels had "become unmanageable and escaped into the desert" became frequent, albeit the camels were frequently aided in their "escape" by the men themselves.

Then the approach of the Civil war caused the attention of the War department to be turned to affairs of greater importance and the "camel corps" suffered from neglect. In 1901 the War department had 25 camels at various posts in California without being put to any use. In 1902 Lieutenant Beale wrote Secretary Stanton of their idle condition and proposed to use them for further exploration in the Southwest. But his proposal was rejected, as was the plan he offered for using them in carrying mail between Fort Mojave, N. M., and New San Pedro, Calif. Eventually the herd was sold to Samuel McLaughlin. Some of them were sold to circuses, others to other parties, and soon they were scattered far and wide.

In the meantime the herd at Camp Verde in Texas had passed into the hands of the Confederate government which paid little attention to them, and some of them were allowed to wander away into the desert. The remainder, 44 in number, again came into the hands of the United States government at the close of the Civil war, but they were sold at public auction, for by this time Uncle Sam had definitely given up his camel experiment.

The camels had wandered away into the desert at various times during the existence of the "camel corps" and an interesting history. They lived half-wild, half-free and were seen from time to time in various parts of Texas, Arizona and New Mexico. The Apache Indians, who were first terrified at the sight of these strange beasts, soon overcame their fear and developed a fondness for camel steak. Many of the animals fell prey to Indian hunters. Others made such a nuisance of themselves by scaring and stampeding the horses and mules of the overland stage lines and freight outfits that war was declared upon them, and white hunters killed many of them. However, as late as the eighties there still were camels in the Southwest and the tradition of "wild camels," reported from time to time by prospectors and cattle men, was a favorite one in that section of the country for many years. The invention of the survivors of Uncle Sam's "camel corps" was in 1903 when a newspaper in San Antonio carried a story about a camel in a midway show bearing the "U. S. A." brand as well as the counterbrand of a Zachary Taylor.

Similar experiments with camels were tried at one time or another in other states besides those of the Southwest. In 1896 they were used for a time for the freight between the gold camps of that state and in the same year a man named L. S. Musgrave appeared in Denver with two camels. He had an ambitious scheme for a system of camel transport from Omaha to San Francisco via Denver and Salt Lake City, but got little encouragement in the Colorado town. So he departed for Omaha, but there he found that everyone was more interested in the plans for the transcontinental railroad which, three years later, linked the two oceans and his camel scheme was dropped.

Despite the apparent success of the experiment, however, an element of discord arose that was due to the country's rice crop. The pestilence of the camels and the men who had charge of them, the American mule skinner. LAVISH LACE ON THE BRIDE; CHIC GOING-AWAY COSTUME

WEDDING bells! What visions of transcendent loveliness are they destined to ring in, with the coming of summer, for bridal processions with each succeeding season seem to be taking on an ever increasing picturesqueness.

If lace were not to contribute a major share of beauty to the bride's costume, it would be surprising indeed, for this is pre-eminently a lace season.

smart short-jacket tailored suit, or a three-piece ensemble of beige crepe, faille silk or fine worsted, or a stunning long coat posed over a simple light crepe frock.

LOVELY BRIDAL COSTUME

captured the fancy of the mode, that not only is the bride swathed in lace, but the apparel of the guests presents a galaxy of frocks and wraps styled of lace.

For the bride, be her gown of satin, georgette, crepe or simple velvet, lace elaboration marks its styling.

For the bride's honeymoon trip such a suit as here pictured is of assured appeal. It is tailored of finest navy twill, being braided most exquisitely at the front center edge.

If not a suit, then perhaps the bride may decide upon a three-piece ensemble. The latest is the beige jumper or one-piece frock of crepe or faille or tucking, accompanied by a full-length coat of velvet in perfectly matched coloring.

Mother Shipton's Prophecy Coming True

Some of the older people may remember having seen this prophecy in the latter 80's. It went the rounds of the press in those days and caused no little confusion and consternation. We do not know where the said prophecy originated, nor whether or not it was published, as stated, in 1488 and 1641. We presume all will enjoy reading it.

The following, which is known as "Mother Shipton's Prophecy," was first published in 1641. It will be noticed that all the events predicted in it except those mentioned in the last two lines, already have come to pass. Many of our readers may have read it before, but we reprint it as a matter of general interest:

Carrriages without horses shall go,
And accidents fill the world with woe;
Around the world thoughts shall fly,
In the twink of an eye,
Water shall yet more wonders do,
Now stranger yet shall be true,
The world upside down shall be,
And gold be found at foot of tree;
Through hills man shall ride,
And no horse or ass be at his side;
Under water man shall walk,
Shall ride, shall sleep, shall talk;
In the air men shall be seen,
In white and black and green;
Iron in the water shall float
As easy as a wooden boat;
Gold shall be found, and found,
In a land that's now unknown;
Fire and water shall wonders do,
England shall at last admit a Jew;
The world to an end shall come.

100,000 Lives, Five Years Auto Toll

Washington, May 17 (A. P.)—More than 100,000 persons, a third of them school children, have been killed, and more than 3,000,000 sent to hospitals by highway accidents in the last five years, according to a survey made public at the meeting here of the American Road Builders Association.

In excess of $2,000,000,000 worth of property was damaged and destroyed, which estimates that one car every 42 seconds, with the accident menace steadily increasing.

Fatigue has caused more accidents than any other factor, it was declared, the report stating that careless and inattentive driving of automobiles in most cases is the result of fatigue. More accidents occur between 3:30 and 5:30 p. m., it was added, than any other two hours of the day.

Santa Fe Economy
Increases Capacity—Decreases Costs

Operating results on the Santa Fe for the year 1926 show, on the whole, substantial improvement over the year 1920 following Government control.

Revenue tons per train mile increased in 1926 to 709.70 tons from 569.21 in 1920.

Average daily movement per freight car increased to 37.01 miles from 31.56 miles.

Average revenue per ton mile of freight decreased to 1.203 cents from 1.316 cents.

Two Items of Economy in Operation Deserve Particular Attention:

FIRST is reduction of "less and damage" freight.

In the year 1920 this totaled $2,817,596; in 1926, $1,350,429. If the rate of loss and damage in 1926 had been the same as in 1920 the total would have been $2,293,362, or 2.44 times as much as was the case. Loss and damage meetings devoted to careful study and instruction, the re-organization of an entire of employees handling freight, and better packing, marking and general co-operation by shippers have accomplished this saving.

SECOND is conservation of fuel.

In 1920 locomotive fuel cost the Santa Fe $28,372,475; in 1926 the cost was $22,604,116.

In 1926 the Santa Fe used 185 lbs. of fuel to move 1000 gross tons, excluding the locomotive, one mile in road service, and in 1926 it used 133 lbs., a saving of 52 lbs., or 28.1%.

In 1920 it used 16.4 lbs. to move a passenger car one mile, and in 1926 it used 13.6 lbs., the saving being 2.8 lbs., or 17.0%.

The total fuel saving for the year 1926 is equivalent to 1,756,180 tons, costing $7,744,754 at 1926 prices.

This conservation of fuel has been accomplished by a carefully worked out policy of

1. Lengthening locomotive runs, so less fuel is used in firing up and less time lost in cooling locomotives.
2. Reducing train delays.
3. Larger locomotives, bigger trains, and heavier carloads in which shippers have rendered very valuable aid.
4. Using the best fuel saving devices.
5. More careful packing and handling of locomotives and trains by the men.

We Ask Your Continued Assistance in Meeting These Transportation Problems.

And we promise you our best efforts to render steadily improved service, although the Fuel, Crew and Train Limit laws in some states limit greatly our possibilities for further economy.

STORY FROM THE START

In the small New Jersey village of Stratham, in the year 1743, Richard Lindsay, who tells the story, gives a full description of his mackinawship before some villagers and a stranger, with whom they afterward dined at the tavern.

Almost at once, however, I discovered that for at least a portion of my Journey I could not depend on a well-trodden road; if there was a path, it avoided me, and presently, coming out by a thick belt of trees, there seemed nothing for me to do but to plunge boldly in.

Without much ceremony, the bearers of this sinister burden half three, half laid it down upon the ground, where it remained motionless, without sound and apparently without life.

Now, in spite of all that I had seen of death and violence, I had by no means become reconciled to them, and whoever or whatever this helpless creature might be, I made up my mind that if I could help it I was not going to stand by and see it die.

There followed silence, during which I saw one of the figures stoop over the dark mass on the ground. Then, to my relief, I heard the second voice again: "No fear, he couldn't start those lashing in a month. And as for anybody flogging him and turning him loose, why you know yourself no one is coming to this Godforsaken spot. There isn't a chance in a million."

Let the old boy lie, he, Quashy, he's rotting his head; he doesn't want to go to the hot place just yet; do you boy?

The reference to the gag, and the failure of the recumbent figure to speak, made part of the mystery clear. This third man, evidently a negro, was bound and gagged, and evidently, also, his eyes must have deceived me as to his wounds, or they could not have talked with such unconcern of leaving him and coming back later to release him. Apparently, also, the first and more bloodthirsty of the pair was now willing to yield to his companion's reasoning, for as if the matter were finally settled he suddenly exclaimed: "But I say, what a box on the old colonel. And he thinks all the time that he's fooling the major. Why, it's as good as a play."

The other, and clearly the more good-natured of the two, burst into a roar of laughter. Then the pair became serious again. "Well," said the first voice, "we want get back to the Port and tell the major. Goodby, Quashy; about an hour after sunrise you'll see us again, and with our pockets full of gold."

I heard their footsteps retreating through the bushes, and then, after an interval, the sound of loaves, gradually growing fainter in the distance. I felt a hiding place and made his place. Reaching his helplessness and under threat of a lingering death, Lindsay agrees to assume young McAllister's name, and take his place in Andrew's household.

I did not at once reply. Indeed, I was so busy gazing at this strange creature that I only half comprehended his question. In stature about the size of a boy of fifteen, he was clearly no longer young, for when he removed his racing cap to straighten its visor, I could see that his black wool was shot and sprinkled with gray.

Without much ceremony, the bearers of this sinister burden half three, half laid it down upon the ground, where it remained motionless, without sound and apparently without life.

Fete Days Dependent on Church Sun Dial

In 1743 a meridian column was set up in the Church of St. Sulpice, Paris, for determining the date on which Easter and other church fets would fall. The column bears a long vertical mark extending down its center, this mark is prolonged on the floor. Together these two lines determine a vertical plane in space, which if sufficient produced would include the earth's axis and through which the sun would pass at noon as the earth rotated.

In order to make this event visible a small slit was cut through the roof of the church in the same meridian plane. Through it the sunlight penetrated, sliding downward toward the base below, and swept across it at noon. As Easter approached, the sun's altitude in the heavens increased and the spot of sunlight finally crossed the line at the marked point.

Specific Gravity. The weight of any volume of substance compared with the weight of the same volume of pure water gives the specific gravity of that substance. Alcohol has a specific gravity of only .79, whereas lead has a specific gravity of 11.35 and mercury 13.60. Cedar wood has a specific gravity of only .61.

had nag, but I got way with him; I ascertained him and he ascertained me. Major Mostyn got away mare Flyaway very fast. Two week ago big sweepstakes; Colonel very wise; he no put me up on Satan—put 'nother boy. Satan so mad he 'r' up and throw boy and break his d—leg; then run away himself and bump into Joke and Flyaway win. Major Mostyn Joke colonel; say, 'Why you no get a horse? Not a raging black devil?' Colonel pretend get mad; say to major, 'Satan best horse but he no like vulgar sweep; race you again two weeks, two hundred guineas, play or pay?'

I heard their footsteps retreating through the bushes, and then, after an interval, the sound of loaves, gradually growing fainter in the distance. I felt a hiding place and made his place. Reaching his helplessness and under threat of a lingering death, Lindsay agrees to assume young McAllister's name, and take his place in Andrew's household.

"Tell him," Quashy said, "now I show you." He shook his head. "No fear for Quashy," he answered confidently, "I go around by way of beach; nobody see me. I stay in woods near track till daylight, then come fast." He paused for a moment, then added, "You do me big favor tonight. You do one more for colonel?"

I felt no great hesitation, for this was a world where, in spite of ostentatious, it is hard to remain neutral; and already I felt that I was on the side of Quashy and his master, for while the colonel's plan of sending his messengers was none too praiseworthy, still the course of action of Mostyn and his friends in kidnaping was in the background. So I answered him: "You do me big favor tonight. You do one more for colonel?"

Wife's Faith in Columbus

It is true that there is a woman's name in the history of Columbus's achievement, there seems to be justification in calling Dona Felipa, the wife of Christopher Columbus, that influence in the life of the man who was later to discover the Western world. When Columbus talked to her about his exploration enthusiasm, she was sympathetic and his ambitious nature to have found grateful nurture at her breast.

There is a tale of how Dona Isabella, Columbus's mother-in-law, was the first to see the value of maps and logs—possibly kept relics of her husband's. It may be that something found in this box prompted in Columbus the idea of sending his messengers to have found grateful nurture at her breast.

house, all lights. Buckra call him Palace Delight. You find colonel apt, drinking, maybe both. He big man, red face, big belly; all time eat, pretty soon die. You tell him you see, what you do; you say 'Quashy all right; keep mouth shut; bet money like devil.' You do it?"

"Yes," I answered, "I'll do it. But the colonel never saw me before. He may not believe me."

Quashy grinned. "He believes you," he answered. "He know that he sound like major." Then, tearing a bit of ribbon from his cap, he added, "If no believe, show this." Tell him Quashy see. Show about you way."

Thus, a few moments later, I found myself walking along a very tolerable road toward the notorious Port of the Devil. It was lonely enough, and I kept a sharp lookout, but saw no one, and, indeed, few dwellings of any kind, until I reached the outskirts of the town. Here there were houses in plenty, but all of them paled before the magnificence of the Palace of Delight, a pretentious, three-story building, glittering with lights, and from which the sound of music issued invitingly.

At the entrance to the main hall on the lower floor, I stood for a moment, surveying with interest the scene before me. The color, the lights, the noise, the laughter, all bewildered, and at the same time intoxicated and electrified me. The growing number of the crowd was gathered about a table across the room; at smaller tables, men and women were drinking.

I crossed the room, and peering through the crowd, caught a glimpse of a green table, marked with squares and numbers, and behind it an impassive mulatto, presiding over a boxlike structure, surrounded by a wooden wheel, while he chanted mechanically: "Make your bets, gentlemen; make your bets." I did not know then that this was the famous game of roulette, but the sight of the table covered with gold pieces, and the eager faces of the gamblers, thrilled and excited me.

Somewhat surprised, I answered "Nineteen." And with a quick gesture he moved the pile of gold into one of the spaces on the board. A moment later the mulatto announced that bets were closed, and wheel and ball started upon their journey.

He shook his head. "No fear for Quashy," he answered confidently, "I go around by way of beach; nobody see me. I stay in woods near track till daylight, then come fast." He paused for a moment, then added, "You do me big favor tonight. You do one more for colonel?"

Danger in a Fog

One result of the substitution steam power for sails is that fog becomes a much greater danger in navigation than it was a few generations ago, says Nature Magazine. Foggy weather there is generally a wind. Hence sailing craft are usually slow down when they enter fog, and when sails were used collisions were very rare.

A Practical Twine Holder

FOR wrapping the children's tin and other packages an ever-ready ball of string in a holder is a great convenience than ordinarily realize though few housewives go to the pence of purchasing a twine holder. The funnel is left hanging on this way with the ball of twine held in it serves the double purpose of fun and holder.

For work around the home garden under the car, and around the most the funnel makes a good electric light reflector, after running the w through the spout. The wide p prevents the bulb from breakage; also throws the light in place spread.

Pictures may be hung without a ladder if the hook is placed in the top of a funnel, and a long pole inser in the wide end to raise the hook in the molding. After the hook is in the wire can be easily slipped over hook by the pole alone.

A funnel makes a good protect for a fumigating candle in disfecting a closetful of clothing which might catch on fire if the open flava were left to burn. Place it over dish, and only the fumes rise, leag the flame safely covered.

An Inner Tube for Packing

Old inner tubes strong enough hold air, yet not substantial enough to withstand great pressure necessary for riding make excellent packing aids for moving time. Glass ware, bric-a-brac, pottery, etc., come through safely, even with rough handling of shipping if an inner tube is wound around and the other spaces in the filled with newspapers.

The inner tube, if suffering with blowout, can be cut at this point; the remaining good part tied fir in cases of fever these long tubes be filled with ice to be placed by body of the patient to cool him, with hot water or warm him. On automobile tour the damaged inner tube can be cut so that the good remaining part can be tied and used into a good hot water bag, filled with hot water from the radiator. In case of scorch, shock from accident, neuritic pain, this is a valuable aid.

Raising chickens, turkeys, ducks, etc., is the latest wrinkle around Lazbuddy. Go to it, folks. Raise everything possible at home. "Live at home and board at the same place."

We hear that we may not have a store at Lazbuddy much longer, though we do not know if the report is true, and certainly hope it is not. We think it would be better to start a cash business instead of going out of business.

Johnnie Steinbock has a bad case of tonsillitis.

A number of the young folks attended the dance Friday night and they all had a fine time.

Bill and Ross Mick, Sam Layman, wife and two sons, and Wm. Steinbock, wife and son, and Herbert Dyck and Ed. Steinbock were visitors at the John Steinbock home Monday.

Mrs. John Steinbock and children were Sunday night supper guests at the Willie Steinbock home, in honor of Mothers' Day. It was more like the Sandman's Day, when we allude to the weather.

Jodie Sluping and family have moved one mile south of the J. E. Vaughn farm.

Gladys Griffin, Clifford Pyritz and Herbert Dyck were guests of Ed. Steinbock Thursday.
