Flooded Lands Are Unfit for Farming For Several Years

Flooded land in the Mississippi Valley will be valueless for a few years for agricultural purposes, S. P. McGarr, Hale county farmer, says. The flood waters deposit silt, that will not sustain vegetation. In many sections it kills trees that are growing.

Mr. McGarr was one of the early callers at the Herald office to make a subscription to the Herald and the American Red Cross.

"We think the dry weather hits us hard occasionally in this section," he said, "but we never suffer the hardship that these good people are undergoing now. Unless one has seen the effects of flood waters from the big rivers, it is hard to picture in the mind the damage done. They need aid now, but the big rub will come after rehabilitation of the flood area starts."—Plainview Herald.

Local Citizen Gives Story of Flooded South

The following is being told of the flooded districts of the South by one of our local business men just returned:

A salesman wading through the spring moisture in his territory noticed a lay lying in the mud in the road. He picked it up and finding a man's head beneath it, endeavored to help him out.

The mired one spoke: "Save the women and children; never mind me; I'm on a horse."

Dallas Boosters Here Saturday

One hundred and twenty-five Dallas business and professional men aboard a special train, will arrive in Muleshoe at 3:55 p. m. on Saturday, May 14, for a visit of 30 minutes, according to word received here today.

Growing importance of this section of the Southwest to the Commercial World is given by the leaders in the party as the major reason for this visit.

This Twenty-sixth Annual Good Will Tour, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, is bringing the Dallas party through Western Texas, Eastern New Mexico and Southwestern Oklahoma to the 86 towns along the route of the trip.

"Dallas comes to renew its pledge of friendship and to offer its co-operation in building of a greater Southwest," said W. T. Davis, general chairman.

"To the crowds who gather around our train when it stops we promise abundant entertainment, hearty hand shakes and showers of information about Dallas, the city that is your friend.

"The traditional hospitality of this section was no small factor in determining our itinerary. While the primary object is to bring Dallas men into closer touch with the trade territory, we are not averse to having a 'good time,' and no visitor to the section we are to cover can fail to have that 'good time.' Band concerts will be given and, where time permits, parades will be staged.

The train will leave Dallas at midnight Wednesday, May 11, and return at 11 o'clock on the night of Wednesday, May 18.

"Somebody Blundered" When They Buried Daniel Boone

Where is Daniel Boone buried? Kentuckians believe that the great pioneer sleeps beneath the blue grass of their state.

But Missourians will tell you a different story. They say that "somebody blundered" when the bodies of Boone and his wife were supposed to have been removed away back in 1845, and that Boone still lies in Missouri soil. Recent disclosures in regard to this indicate that the Missourians may be right.

So it looks as though there is a new one added to the roll of "mysteries of history." You'll be interested in the article "Where is Daniel Boone Buried?" written by Elmo Scott Watson, which appears in this issue of The Journal.

Irrigation In Valley Active and Pumps Are Put In Action

Dry weather is influencing farmers in the Muleshoe country to start up their irrigation plants. Many Muleshoe plants are in operation now, and others, which have not been in operation in years, are being fitted up for duty.

Not less than a week ago an old timer of the Plains stated his opinion that it would not be many years before this section of the country would be cut up into small irrigated areas. Today a successful stock farmer who lives north of Muleshoe, expressed his opinion that irrigated farming was the coming thing in the Muleshoe country.

Through a series of years enough has been learned about irrigation here to remove the speculative element from irrigated farming if one will only avail himself of the experience of those who have operated various kinds of irrigation plants.

Tom House returned from Dallas Tuesday, where he has been for medical treatment at the Carrol-Driver clinic. He had a new cast put on his limb, and it is very much improved.

Pays To Advertise, But Be Sure You Have the Goods

A lion met a tiger, As they drank beside a pool. Said the tiger, "Tell me why You're roaring like a fool?" "That's not foolish," said the lion, With a twinkle in his eyes. "They call me King of all the Beasts Because I advertise." A rabbit heard them talking And ran home like a streak He thought he'd try the lion's plan, But his roar was just a squeak. A fox came to investigate— Had luncheon in the woods. So when you advertise, my friend, Be sure you've got the goods. —Sel.

West Texas Chamber of Commerce Traffic Bulletin

The Railroad Commission of Texas heard last Monday argument in the petition of various interests for reopening and hearing in the Sand and Gravel case. As a result, the Commission has issued their Circular postponing the effective date of their order from May 1, 1927, to May 17, 1927. The railroads petitioned for rehearing and if it is not reopened, will very likely be taken into the courts.

Information has been received that Railroad Commission Docket No. 2565, which contemplates a proposed revision in the rates on Contractor's Outfits from Class A to Class D, has been further postponed for hearing by the Commission to June term beginning June 14, 1927.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has given permission to the Texas & Pacific Railway Co. to purchase the Abilene & Southern, application for which was made several months ago, as indicated in our bulletin of March 15.

Following decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in Docket 14940, the Railroad Commission of Texas has issued their report an order in the matter of equalizing rates to Gulf Ports on cotton, for water front delivery, in which they established the same provisions as did the Interstate Commission. Outline of the adjustment was made in our last bulletin.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has announced their decision in Docket 13535 and related cases, known as Consolidated Southwestern Cases, or "common point" case. Copy of the order has just been received which consists of several hundred pages and is being analyzed as rapidly as possible to determine just what its effect will be. This case has been before the Commission for more than three years and is one of the most important decisions which they have undertaken to make. Owing to the extent of the decision and the many angles involved, some time will be required to analyze it before any intelligent information can be promulgated to the membership, but this will be done as early as possible.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has declined to make any change in the hearing dates originally set in the grain investigation scheduled to begin in Dallas, Texas, on May 9th, which means that the proceedings will begin on that date at the Adolphus Hotel.

Under Docket No. 2589 the Railroad Commission of Texas will take up and consider at their regular term, beginning May 3, the matter of a revision in the storage-in-transit privileges on sugar in car loads to conform to their recent emergency order establishing an alternative basis of mileage rates as result of the order of the Interstate Commission in Docket 1471, previously mentioned in this Bulletin.

Were We Buried?

BOONE'S COFFIN, FRANKFORT, KY.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON. HERE is Daniel Boone, the great frontiersman, buried? Ask a Kentuckian that and he will probably answer, "Why, in our state capital, Frankfort, of course!" The Missourian that the Kentuckian has said, and his comment may possibly be the traditional, "Show me!"

Read any of the dozens of biographies of Daniel Boone and you'll probably find a statement something like this: "He was buried in Missouri but in 1845, at the urgent request of the Kentucky bodies of Boone and his wife were removed to Kentucky and reburied in Frankfort." But it's just possible that all of the histories are wrong and that Daniel Boone still sleeps beneath the soil of Missouri instead of the blue grass of Kentucky. Surprising as that statement may be, there seems to be some foundation of fact for the belief that "somebody blundered" in 1845 and that, as a result, the body of an unknown stranger, instead of the body of the famous pioneer, rests beside that of Rebecca Boone in the Kentucky capital.

All of which came about through the discovery recently in an old hair trunk in the attic of a farmhouse near Booneville, Mo., of several letters written to Capt. Nathan Boone, Daniel Boone's son, by the governor of Kentucky and other distinguished men in that state, asking his permission for the removal of the bodies of Daniel Boone and his wife to Frankfort for burial. The discovery of these letters started a representative of the Kansas City Star upon an investigation which has raised the question of where Daniel Boone is actually buried and has uncovered evidence which indicates that it is in Missouri and not in Kentucky.

As a necessary background for a consideration of this startling theory, it may be well to look into some of the familiar history of Daniel Boone. It will be remembered how the infant state of Kentucky, displaying an ingratiate not at all unusual in the history of America, failed to confirm Boone's title to lands within its borders. So the old pioneer took his family across the bottomland Spanish territory. The news of his coming had preceded him and the Spanish governor gave him a grant of the Spanish acres of his bottomland on the Penninge Creek and made him syndic (an office combining the duties of judge, jury, military commander and sheriff) for his district. Here he lived happily for several years, but when Missouri, as a part of the Louisiana purchase, came under the American flag, misfortune overtook Boone. The federal government refused to recognize the title to the acres granted him by the Spanish and again he found himself landless. He sent in memorials to both the Kentucky legislature and congress but it was not until six years had passed that congress took action to confirm his Spanish title. After the death of his wife, he made his home with his son, Nathan, in St. Charles county and there he died September 26, 1820, at the age of eighty-six.

When Rebecca Boone died in 1818 she was buried in a cemetery on a knoll upon the bank of Teague creek about a mile and a half north of the present town of Marshallville in Warren county, Mo. It had been Boone's repeated request that he be placed beside her when he died and by the side of her grave he had marked a place for his own. It is at this point in the narrative that the possibility that "somebody blundered" enters, according to descendants of Boone who live in Missouri and who have made a careful investigation of the circumstances connected with the burial and removal. One of these is Jesse P. Crump, vice president of the Kansas City Title and Trust company, and from his statements and from those of David Gardyne of Marshallville, Mo., who has spent years tracing up every item connected with the life of Boone as presented by the Kansas City Star writer, the evidence sums up as follows:

When the grave diggers had nearly completed the grave beside the one of Rebecca Boone, they uncovered a human skeleton. So the grave was re-filled and this unknown preoccupied was left in possession. They then attempted to make grave on the other side of the Rebecca Boone grave. But here the hill sloped sharply away, making it unsuitable for a grave. So they had to try again and a grave was dug either at the head or foot of Rebecca's grave (no one knows for certain which) so as to carry out his request to lie beside his wife. There Daniel Boone was buried and there, his descendants believe, he sleeps today.

The next chapter in the "somebody blundered" chain of events occurred a little later when headstones were placed at the Boone graves. The stones were dragged to the graves by yoke and oxen, driven by a man whose name is lost to history. When he arrived there he was not certain as to the placing of the stones and went to a farmhouse nearby. The woman who returned with him to the graves and after discussing the situation for a time, finally pointed to the two graves side by side and said "If these are the graves." Accordingly the headstone for Rebecca Boone was placed correctly but the one for Daniel Boone was placed at the head of the grave occupied by the unknown stranger.

The final "blunder" (if such it was) was made in 1845 when Kentucky, in an effort to pay its tardy honors to the man to whom it owed so much, started the movement to have the bodies of Boone and his wife returned to the Blue Grass state. As the result of the action, the Kentucky officials to Nathan Boone such as those recently discovered, the Boone family finally gave its consent to the removal. A delegation from Kentucky arrived to obtain the bodies. They opened the grave of Rebecca Boone and found the coffin in an excellent state of preservation but when they opened the grave beside her, which they believed to contain the body of the old pioneer, they found only a few pieces of the coffin and the larger bones of a human skeleton.

Apparently no one at the time was struck by the inconsistency of this fact: how could Rebecca's coffin be in such perfect state of preservation, while the other, supposed to contain the body of her husband, who was buried seven years after her, had so nearly perished? At any rate the contents of the two graves were placed in elaborate coffins and carried to Frankfort. The ceremony of reburial at the Kentucky capital as described in an article in Harper's Magazine in 1850 tells us that:

Having obtained the consent of the surviving relatives of the pioneer for the removal of the remains, a committee, charged with the execution of the will of the legislature, appointed the 13th of September, 1845, as the day when public funeral honors should be paid to the illustrious dead and their remains be deposited in the bosom of Kentucky. The events of that day will ever form an interesting page in the annals of the state. On that occasion historic men—men whose names will never be forgotten—gathered around the coffin of a more eminent historical character and bore it to the grave. The pallbearers were duly chosen from among the elders and the honored men of the commonwealth.

Thousands of people had gathered from all parts of the state to participate in the solemn funeral. A grand procession was formed, consisting of military companies, Masonic and other societies in regalia, and a great number of citizens on horseback and on foot, making the line more than a mile in length. The broad grave for the two coffins was dug in a lovely shaded hollow near the banks of the Kentucky river and around it the multitude gathered for the religious ceremonies were performed by Rev. Mr. Godell of the Baptist church and were followed by an oration by Hon. J. J. Crittenden, the able representative of Kentucky in the senate of the United States. When the closing prayer had been offered, and the benediction pronounced, the coffins were lowered into the grave and over them was piled a mound of earth—yet the only "mound" that marks the spot where the noble pioneers are buried.

What was true in 1850 was still true 20 years later—that this mound of earth was "yet the only monument that marks the spot where the noble pioneers are buried." For, strange as it may seem, these signal honors to its great pioneer, Kentucky again showed a strange indifference to him and it was not until 1880 that the present monument was erected in Frankfort.

Daniel Boone has been honored by memorials in many other places—in the monument which marks the site of Boonesborough, the "stratton" which he established in 1775; in the statue of him in Cherokee park in Louisville; in the monument which stands in Camp Harro, where Boone stood and looked into his land of promise, even though it was the "Dark and Bloody Ground," and which some day will be replaced by a heroic statue of the great pioneer; and in the Boone Trail highway which follows his path into the West. Last year he became one of the few men to whom a bust of him was unveiled in the Hall of Fame at New York university.

But to Kentuckians the monument in Frankfort (an unpretentious one, it is seen, considered the worth of his services to that commonwealth), is something of a state shrine. It will be starting news to Kentuckians if it is ever disclosed that Daniel Boone still lies buried in Missouri and not in Kentucky, how Fate must smile at the delicious irony of the situation—Kentuckians of today making a pilgrimage to this state shrine, unconscious of the fact that they are standing in reverence at the last resting place of an unknown stranger and not of their great hero whom the Kentuckians of yesterday denied the full measure of honor and the rewards which he so richly deserved!

In three months' time, after using eight or ten bottles, I was entirely relieved of all the distress which had troubled me. I really did not expect much of Tanlac, in view of how other remedies failed. But the results it gave surprised and delighted me."

"Now I have no trouble about my food, and I can digest anything, sleep naturally and have built my weight up to 120 lbs. I have no more of the old troubles."

"Purges" and "Physics" Bad for Old Folks

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

While Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the curse of advancing age, he did not believe that a "purg" or "physic" every little while was necessary. To him, it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, colonic and nasty oils. In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to "regulate" the bowels of old folks. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but each dose helps to strengthen the bowel muscles, shortly establishing a deflated man, so to his grave in the sulks, but he won't if he can write. You may be able to save a lot of money by not being able to buy the things you think you want.

The Health Fund

A health expert has just been talking about "overdrafts on the health fund" so convincingly that one inevitably examines one's habits of life from the doctor's standpoint. Late hours, overeating, lack of exercise, why, doctors' bills might mostly be entered in the family account as "recreation," "food" and "travel (either street car or auto)." But there's one thought for the man who never plays. The cost of a breakdown is really a business expense, had presumably deductible on the income-tax return—Baltimore Sun.

Vitglass in Greenhouse

To force an earlier start of his garden this year, W. Kerr Russell, M. E. T. S. of Edinburgh, planted seedlings under vitglass in his greenhouse. He reported that the vitglass plants germinated before the others and showed much taller and sturdier growth. Mr. Russell is part author of "Ultra-Violet Radiation and Actinotherapy." He suggests that greenhouses be equipped with vitglass and that the glass would be especially adaptable in the raising of early strawberries.

CHIC BLACK AND WHITE EFFECTS; CUTE GINGHAM ROMPER SUITS

Reverse the order of black-and-white and you have white-and-black. The mode is doing just that. With just enough black not to destroy its distinctness is the promise of summer apparel. The vogue extends to footweat, headwear and all the accessories which go to make up a perfect ensemble.

Adorable for summer frocks are the white-with-black geometrics printed in entrancing floral patterns. These are forecasted to enjoy a tremendous vogue. If a frock should perchance escape being made of a white-and-black transparency of some sort or other, it will be because the designer preferred to work out the combination by using black as a trimming on white. The accompanying illustration demonstrates the idea most beautifully.

A fascinating effect results when the neckline is embellished (see the figure to the left) with myriads of beaded black chiffon petals piled one upon another, so that when mildy steps the black expresses a very "poetry of motion." The manner in which the drapery of this dress is brought to the front in a bow tie is very enlightening as to a popular style as to fashion's trend these dotting rompers will make it a rule to always buy a solid color for trimming. Even the simplest rompers exploit the composition nowadays. The patterned gingham rompers in the picture cleverly takes into itself regular sleeves made of a solid color, with neckties to match. It is well to remember in selecting patterns for rompers and rompers that rags sleeves are the "last word." Note, too, the touch of smocking across the front neckline of this romper model. Few coats or frocks these days, escape the smocking vogue.

For May 15 PETER AT PENTECOST

LESSON TEXT—Acts 2. GOLDEN TEXT—"Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost"—Acts 2:38. PRIMARY TOPIC—Peter Preaches About Pentecost. JUNIOR TOPIC—The Gift of Power. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Peter at Pentecost. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Source of Spiritual Power.

1. The Day of Pentecost Fully Come (vv. 1-13).

1. Significance of the day (v. 1). Pentecost is from a Greek word meaning "fifty." It was the feast held fifty days after the wave sheaf offering (Lev. 23:16). The wave sheaf typifies the resurrection of Christ (I Cor. 15:20-23).

2. The gift of the Holy Spirit (vv. 2-4). On this day the Holy Spirit descended upon the disciples. From that time forth He would work on a new basis, having the crucified, risen and ascended Christ to present to the world.

3. Upon whom the Spirit came (v. 1; 4:13-15).

The twelve and others, both men and women to the number of one hundred and twenty, showing that the gift of the Holy Spirit was for all believers, not merely the apostles.

4. The marks of the Spirit (vv. 2-4). These marks were external and internal.

(1) External.

(a) The sound of a mighty wind (v. 2). This is suggestive of the mysterious, pervasive and powerful energy of the Spirit.

(b) The tongues of flame (v. 3). Each of the one hundred and twenty was crowned with such a tongue. Tongues show the practical purpose of the Spirit's gift—witnessing.

(c) Speaking in foreign tongues (v. 4). This was a temporary endowment for a special purpose.

(2) Internal.

This is seen in the transformation wrought in the disciples. Peter, who shortly before this, covered before a Jewish mob, now with boldness declares that they had murdered their King, therefore guilty before God.

(3) Some were filled with the Holy Spirit—transformed into men of power and influence.

(4) Peter's sermon (vv. 14-17). Peter's sermon is as a perfect gift of tongues. His analysis is perfect.

1. The introduction (vv. 14-21).

(1) Defense of the disciples against the charge of being drunk (v. 15). This he does by citing Jewish custom showing that they would not be drunk at such an early hour of the day.

(2) A scriptural explanation. He showed that this was a partial fulfillment of that which Joel predicted would come to pass (vv. 18-21; cf. Joel 2:28-32) before the messianic judgment, viz., an outpouring of the Holy Spirit and the salvation of all who call upon the name of the Lord.

(3) The proposition, or theme (v. 30). This was the messiahship of Jesus.

3. The argument (vv. 22-36). It was threefold.

(1) From Christ's works (v. 22). He was approved of God among the Jews by His miracles, wonders and signs which God did by Him in their midst with which they were familiar.

(2) From His resurrection (vv. 23-32). The Old Testament Scriptures had foretold the death and resurrection of Christ (Ps. 16:10-11). The disciples were living witnesses of Christ's resurrection for they had seen and talked with Him, and handled Him since the resurrection (v. 32).

(3) From His ascension to be on the right hand of God (v. 32). The proof that He had ascended on high was the wonderful miracle of the Holy Spirit in their midst; for He had said that upon His ascension into heaven He would send forth the Spirit.

4. The effect of the sermon (vv. 37-42).

Many people were convicted of their sins, some three thousand of whom repented and were baptized. The daily life of these believers was proof of the Spirit's gift.

(1) They continued steadfastly in the apostolic teaching (v. 42).

(2) They continued in fellowship with the apostles (v. 42).

omer a sponge which in spite of my struggles he thrust under my nostrils in such fashion that I must breathe or die. Through my wearied brain flashed the thought, "Why all this trouble to kill me when a simple thrust would have done the trick?" And then all at once the answer came to me: McAllister has a scar. My lungs seemed choking; I drew in a great breath of the pungent liquid on the sponge; then—blackness.

CHAPTER V

Two of a Trade.

Two weeks had passed since I had first boarded the schooner, and in that time, with favoring winds and under the waters of the North Atlantic into those of the Caribbean.

It took some time for the cut on my cheek to heal (leaving to the delight of the captain, a crooked scar), but when I had once regained my customary vigor, I found little enough to do for the captain kept me safe, and from the quick-fitted crew, and though nominally at liberty, I was, as a matter of fact, on almost the same footing as a prisoner.

It must be said, however, that no prisoner could have had a more delightful jailer. I realize, of course, that since he had contracted to secure me for life, this statement sounds incredible; but the fact remains that this man possessed for me the same strange fascination that he had for all with whom he came in contact. I dejected myself for admiring him, and yet, in spite of everything, I could not help it. In the first place, he was the only man on the ship who had been in the privacy of the cabin wood cloth which was not a sufficient cover for the fine particles if any pressure is made on it, so another light, finely woven piece of cotton should be used for an exterior cover before the silk or silk-linen is applied to the outside. The cover should then be quilted in the ordinary way, but the knots should be made quite close together.

The finished cover will be lighter than feathers, even though twice the thickness of an ordinary quilt. It is an ideal summer quilt for the carriage, and can be used for a pad on the grass if baby is taken to the park or to the woods.

Foiling the Fireside Sphinx.

FOR centuries the fanciers have endured and planned unsuccessfully to give pussy medicine without a struggle. It was never a one-man job. Even after three healthy individuals had successfully given pussy a pill or a dose of medicine, that is, they had conveyed it to her mouth and then closed her jaws upon it, to their dismay if she did not want it she would not swallow it, and at the first chance would spit it out.

But there is a natural law in the affairs of cats. A cat will always take off material that clings to her paws. The captain spoke no word, but kept gazing back apprehensively over his shoulder. What in the world, I wondered, had caused her to give up? Here was a man whom I had come to regard as absolutely calm and fearless, afraid of nothing, and now he was showing signs of being a schoolboy. I will own to the liveliest curiosity, but did not realize how soon it would be gratified, for on a sudden, without a moment's warning, there came such a roar as I had never heard before, and devoutly hope I shall never hear again; and in a second a huge column of flame and smoke went towering up into the sky, and the force of the explosion fairly splitting the brig in twain. It is impossible to give, in words, the faintest idea of the spectacle; the sparks and fire with a shower of debris which struck, indeed, all around our boat but fortunately without doing us serious harm. Within two minutes the entire ship had disappeared, only bits of wreckage and the bodies of the murdered crew were left to mark her last resting place.

After the action of the past fortnight, I did not take the captain long to gain the deck. There, sure enough, a couple of points off our weather bow, was a distant sail. We had been running with started sheets, and now, by a luffing sharp, we were able to lay our course directly for her. The Black Panther was a fast steamer, but I think we were all amazed to find how rapidly we overhauled our prey, until presently, as a we drew nearer, it became evident, from her strange evolutions, that she must have been abandoned for her sail lapped stately against her mast, and she yawed here and there, at the whim of tide and breeze.

In less than half an hour we were near enough to read the names upon her stern, and to discover that she was the brig Sea Gull of Charleston; but as we anticipated, we received no answer to our hail; whereupon the captain gave orders to lower a boat, told me to accompany him, and we were soon danieling the waves toward the derrick.

My lungs seemed choking. I drew in a Great Breath.

narrate countless tales of his various voyages and adventures. And from these tales I soon discovered that Burford was of great service to him, a right-hand man who, with his placid and genial ways, could gather information or set plans afoot; where a more dashing and conspicuous lieutenant might have failed.

Nor were the captain's powers of conversation limited to narrative; his philosophy of life was equally fascinating. I realize now that he must have tried deliberately to shock me by setting up the most impossible standards of proper conduct, but though he was wrong, and I knew he was wrong, yet his brain was so much more subtle than mine, and his learning so much greater that I was always out-gauged and put to shame. I heard him with loathing and reluctance, but I could not answer his arguments, and was fast getting into a sulky and defiant mood, so that it was with immense relief that I heard a bustling up deck, and then a cry "Sail ho!"

STORY FROM THE START

In the small New Jersey village of Stratfordham, the year 1749, Richard Lindsay, who tells the story, gives an exhibition of his marvellous behavior before some villagers and a stranger, with whom he afterwards dined at the tavern. The conversation turns on a note-book, which Lindsay, who is a "black panther," is thought to be in the vicinity. Next morning Lindsay, after two ducks, is sitting in a "sawd" when three strangers land on the beach near him. They bury a chest and then one of them, Burford, recognized by Lindsay as the man he talked with the day before, kills one of his companions. Lindsay's presence is discovered. The third man, Captain Barclay, of the Black Panther, the three go aboard. Lindsay meets there a young woman who bears a remarkable resemblance to Lindsay's sister. Lindsay is asked to take his place.

I was silent, unable to give a direct and immediate answer. To be stripped and lashed to the mast, and to have these drunken ruffians pelting me with glass that would break and shiver on my naked flesh—that indeed, as he had expressed it, would be dying like a dog. But living like a man—the was the rub. To pass myself off for another, to lie, either by speech or action, a hundred times a day, to gain a man's confidence and then basely to betray him—this was living like a man! And at length, in a great fit of resentment, I turned upon him.

"It's a fine choice to give me," I cried. "God knows I have no wish to die, but to be a traitor, a sneaking spy—how can I do that?" To my surprise (for I never got over being surprised by the varying moods of this man) instead of being angry, he gave me a hearty clap on the back. "Well spoken," he cried, "and believe me, lad, if Andrew McAllister were a decent man, if he were even half of a decent man, he'd never ask you to do what I propose. But you don't seem to understand. If I asked you to kill a man, a man, a cockroach, would you hesitate? And if I told you to set a trap for them, to catch them by stratagem, would that make any difference? Of course it would not. I've called Andrew McAllister a fox, but I apologize to the fox. I mean, he's rat and snake and cockroach all in one; he's lower than the filthiest vermin that walks on cravels. Get rid of Andrew McAllister and that d—d bald-headed Shively by any means—fair or foul—and the angels in Heaven will praise the day that you were born. To rid the world of two such blackguards is a noble deed."

As you may well imagine, I had listened eagerly to every word, and for I felt that my life hung in the balance. And as my new friend's words were only too willing to be persuaded, for I shrank not so much, I think, from death itself as from the ghastly manner in which it was to come. The captain, I am sure, read all this in my face, for now, as if in a sudden burst of friendship, he took a step forward, placed his hands on my shoulders and with the winning and awful manner of which he was a master, continued: "If McAllister had been true to me, I would be true to him. I am a fighting man; that is my trade. I show no mercy to my enemies, and I ask no quarter. I have once called a man my friend, I have never betrayed him. You speak of treachery, of having to be a traitor and a spy. What did McAllister do to me that night in the Antilles? No blackguard's treachery was ever seen since the world began. All my life ended there; everything since is only a dream. I must have my revenge; if I were not, my life would mean nothing to me; I would as soon leap over the rail this instant and feed some hungry shark. You see, my lad, even in these few hours you know each other. I've bared my heart to you for two reasons I ask you to do this for me. For your own sake; you are young, on the threshold of the world; you ought to want to get into the sun and the dark. And even more for my sake. Help me rid the earth of this cruel tyrant, who feeds and fattens on the miseries of his subjects. Give your word, and there's no more to be said. Your life is your own again, and you shall cruise to Jamaica with me as my guest. No word—that's all you have to speak."

Now if ever there was a cunning rascal, always ready to find the weak our hail; whereupon the captain gave orders to lower a boat, told me to accompany him, and we were soon danieling the waves toward the derrick.

There was blood everywhere; the decks were stained with it, the scuppers were pools of crimson. And this bright and glaring hue so caught my eye that it was a moment before I perceived that scattered from bow to stern, in all attitudes of sudden and violent death, were stretched the corpses of a score of people, not only men but among them a number of women and even the bodies of two little faxen-haired children.

The captain, accustomed to such scenes, beheld them quite unmoved; he leapt to the rail as if he had no desire for further inspection, I saw him do one of the dead men, draw a knife from the body and examine it with interest, then step to the side of the man whose body the object lay on, at the sight of which I closed my eyes. I had read the word torture in books, but had never dreamed to come face to face with it like this. But I was to be spared further anguish. The captain, indeed, had turned to me with a mocking smile as if about to summon me to join him, when something—doubtless the evidence of fire at which he had just been gazing—suddenly inspired him with a new idea. He turned to me further notice of me, he disappeared behind. And then it was my privilege to witness a most singular and unaccountable spectacle, for the instant he emerged again with the utmost celerity, and shouting loudly to the crew, who were lying on their oars a short distance from the brig, he ran, full speed, for the rail and dived, as nonchalantly as if it were an everyday occurrence, smoothly and cleanly into the sea. Filled with amazement as I was, I yet had sense enough to realize that if the experienced and wily captain was acting in this singular and forthwith, with the greatest alacrity, I followed suit.

This, as it proved, was one of the cleverest actions of my life, and if I could not perform it, I should not be writing these pages today, as you will shortly see. Even as it was, the captain, who was an excellent swimmer, reached the boat ahead of me, and began to give me a hand with his right hand swung himself over the rail. Instantly the men bent to their oars, at which I, in my turn, gave a lusty shout, and in a few moments we were under way. I had not been long with him, but I had forgotten my existence, had them back water; and the second that I felt the stern within my arms, I gave a death cry, and tumbled aboard with a mighty flop, like that of a giant codfish. Immediately the crew gave way again with all speed, and we left the derrick behind us at an astonishing pace.

The captain spoke no word, but kept gazing back apprehensively over his shoulder. What in the world, I wondered, had caused her to give up? Here was a man whom I had come to regard as absolutely calm and fearless, afraid of nothing, and now he was showing signs of being a schoolboy. I will own to the liveliest curiosity, but did not realize how soon it would be gratified, for on a sudden, without a moment's warning, there came such a roar as I had never heard before, and devoutly hope I shall never hear again; and in a second a huge column of flame and smoke went towering up into the sky, and the force of the explosion fairly splitting the brig in twain. It is impossible to give, in words, the faintest idea of the spectacle; the sparks and fire with a shower of debris which struck, indeed, all around our boat but fortunately without doing us serious harm. Within two minutes the entire ship had disappeared, only bits of wreckage and the bodies of the murdered crew were left to mark her last resting place.

And from these tales I soon discovered that Burford was of great service to him, a right-hand man who, with his placid and genial ways, could gather information or set plans afoot; where a more dashing and conspicuous lieutenant might have failed.

Nor were the captain's powers of conversation limited to narrative; his philosophy of life was equally fascinating. I realize now that he must have tried deliberately to shock me by setting up the most impossible standards of proper conduct, but though he was wrong, and I knew he was wrong, yet his brain was so much more subtle than mine, and his learning so much greater that I was always out-gauged and put to shame. I heard him with loathing and reluctance, but I could not answer his arguments, and was fast getting into a sulky and defiant mood, so that it was with immense relief that I heard a bustling up deck, and then a cry "Sail ho!"

After the action of the past fortnight, I did not take the captain long to gain the deck. There, sure enough, a couple of points off our weather bow, was a distant sail. We had been running with started sheets, and now, by a luffing sharp, we were able to lay our course directly for her. The Black Panther was a fast steamer, but I think we were all amazed to find how rapidly we overhauled our prey, until presently, as a we drew nearer, it became evident, from her strange evolutions, that she must have been abandoned for her sail lapped stately against her mast, and she yawed here and there, at the whim of tide and breeze.

In less than half an hour we were near enough to read the names upon her stern, and to discover that she was the brig Sea Gull of Charleston; but as we anticipated, we received no answer to our hail; whereupon the captain gave orders to lower a boat, told me to accompany him, and we were soon danieling the waves toward the derrick.

My lungs seemed choking. I drew in a Great Breath.

Making Use of the Cat Tail WAYS of finding many interesting cat tails, painting them with different shades of iridescent paints, combining them with painted leaves for winter decorations, but the "adult" cat tail is too large for this purpose, and the finer feathers sometimes burst out surprisingly, flooding the room with downy mass. Cat-tail down makes a wonderful stuffy filling for small decorative pillows, and one trip in the country will secure enough large cat tails for many dainty cushions.

The fluffiest of baby-crib covers can be made from cat-tail down. A strip of these cloth the size of the quilt to be made should be used to spread the down on evenly. The down will adhere to the cheese cloth, but cheese cloth should be a sufficient cover for the fine particles if any pressure is made on it, so another light, finely woven piece of cotton should be used for an exterior cover before the silk or silk-linen is applied to the outside. The cover should then be quilted in the ordinary way, but the knots should be made quite close together.

The finished cover will be lighter than feathers, even though twice the thickness of an ordinary quilt. It is an ideal summer quilt for the carriage, and can be used for a pad on the grass if baby is taken to the park or to the woods.

Foiling the Fireside Sphinx.

FOR centuries the fanciers have endured and planned unsuccessfully to give pussy medicine without a struggle. It was never a one-man job. Even after three healthy individuals had successfully given pussy a pill or a dose of medicine, that is, they had conveyed it to her mouth and then closed her jaws upon it, to their dismay if she did not want it she would not swallow it, and at the first chance would spit it out.

But there is a natural law in the affairs of cats. A cat will always take off material that clings to her paws. The captain spoke no word, but kept gazing back apprehensively over his shoulder. What in the world, I wondered, had caused her to give up? Here was a man whom I had come to regard as absolutely calm and fearless, afraid of nothing, and now he was showing signs of being a schoolboy. Time-Saving Way of Linting (Copyright 1937)

For perfect tinting of dirty underwear, dresses, etc. the easiest way—and by far the best way—is the use of real dye. It tints in cold water, you know; just dip the garment and it takes whatever tinge you wish to give it. A matter of minutes.

Real dyes get such smooth and even tones as shame the streaky, wishy-washy work of synthetic preparations. For the purpose! Diamond dye in original powder form is only fifteen cents at the drug store. Do your own linting. Then dip to tint—and you'll have an effect that's beautiful. And if you want the tint permanent, just use boiling water!

Diamond dyes do a perfect "professional" job of dyeing, too; the dyer gets his special shades and simple directions. For a book of endless suggestions, in full color, request a free copy of Color Craft of DIAMOND DYES, Dept. N32, Burlington, Vermont.

From all reports coming to our attention from down in the cotton district of Texas, we are inclined to believe that the farmers of the South Plains are going to be called on to produce the cotton crop of the State. It has rained so much the crops has not been planted, and late cotton down the state is not always profitable. If we get rain in Bailey county or on the South Plains during this month, or the first week in June, we can make a wonderful cotton crop. We believe, a good storage in this country will be one of the best money crops we can have this year.

Baileyboro Bugle Call

We can prove to you now folks, that spring is really here. The sand storms have been raging as if they had no respect for land or country. We are satisfied that there are a number of extra farms farther east. It is to be hoped they will be returned before we have any use for them.

Sudan school was to play Baileyboro school a game of baseball Friday, but the former failed to appear, so the outside or regular team, played with the school. The score was 11-13, in favor of the regular team. Our team went to Enochs Saturday, but could not play on account of Morton's being there.

G. L. Blackshear and Misses Irene Walker and Sybil Blackshear were shoppers in Sudan Saturday.

Royce Garth, Andry Jones and Misses Stella Nichols and Ruby Johnson were Muleshoe visitors Saturday.

Baileyboro has only four more weeks of school.

Rev. Booth held his regular appointment Saturday, Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night.

Rev. Roy Bayless, assisted by Rev. Booth, is holding a meeting at Friendship school house, in New Mexico. A number from here have been attending, and report a splendid meeting.

C. B. Wallis and wife, C. D. Durham, and wife, and Mrs. Blackshear, and Misses Alice Ragsdale, Sybil Blackshear, and Irene Walker went to Arch, New Mexico, Sunday, where a Mothers' Day program was scheduled to be held, but weather conditions prevented it, so the day was spent with Hiram Brannen and family.

Prayer meeting was held as usual Wednesday night. Come out to prayer meeting and assist in the good work.
