Mr. Snyder with a drove of 3,000 head of cattle came through Belle Plain early yesterday morning on his way north. Mr. Snyder was informed by Messrs. J.D. Merchant and J.P. Flores that our citizens would not permit cattle being driven through the county in large herds to leave the "Beef Trail" and come through the range of our citizens, when there is a public road for that purpose. Messrs. Merchant and Flores acted under the advice of Judge Hutchinson in requesting Snyder to keep on the trail, which he readily complied with, and he was furnished a guide to conduct him back to the road. Let this be a warning to drovers in future to keep on or near the public thoroughfare with their large herds.

Mr. Thos. F. Lester of Comanche and Miss Margaret Dodd of Deep Creek, were united by the holy bonds of wedlock on last Sunday by Rev. O.M.L. Parker.

The section house over near Uncle Louis Marshall's is fast approaching completion. Twenty-seven thousand head of cattle passed up the trail to the night of the fifth. The number will run up to fully double that amount by the end of the week. Those who ought to know, say that fully 200,000 head will pass up this trail this season and that the drive through here will be over by the middle of June.

It is also said that of all the cattle which are to drive there will not be exceeding ten per cent.

THE KINGDOM OF ORDINARY TIME

Marie Howe's conversational and intimate poems address the daily and the divine.

By Averill Curdy

Poetry Media Services

The Kingdom of Ordinary Time, by Marie Howe. W. W. Norton. $23.95

The "kingdom of ordinary time," as it is mapped in Marie Howe's third book of poems, is comprised of what might be considered several provinces. First, and most obviously, there is the spiritual, where ordinary time signifies the absence of the miraculous and the divine, when "One loaf = one loaf. One fish = one fish," as Howe writes in "Prologue," and "the so-called Kings were dead." The uses of attention, which was compared to prayer by Simone Weil, to dignify the quotidian, even the squalid, has long been a project of American poetry. But the kingdom of ordinary time can also be understood personally, even politically, as a point in which certain illusions, whether personal or historical, must be left behind and the individual (or nation) abandon its notions of itself as somehow extraordinary, pure, its ideals uncompromised. Howe, in a poem titled "What We Would Give Up," asks a group of college students in Florida, "What would we be willing to give up to equalize the wealth in the world?" and tries to answer for herself a few stanzas later:

... Would I give up the telephone? Would I give up hot water?

... Would I give up makeup? Would I give up dyeing my hair?

... That was a hard one. If I stopped dyeing my hair every one,

... would know that my golden hair is actually gray, and my

... long

... American youth would be over—and then what?

As can be heard in the discursive tone and seen in the long prose lines above, one of the things that many of Howe's poems seem willing to give up is any traditional idea of the lyric that includes concision, or that subjects the poem's materials to pressure, particularly that of silence. The tone of the poems in the first and third sections of the book reminds me of Frank O'Hara, resolutely anti-poetic in their chattiness and apparently artless transparency of statement, while quintessentially urban in their inclusiveness. Like O'Hara, like Whitman, Howe welcomes the highs and lows of modern city life into her poems. One word for this is democratic; another is distractible, as Howe acknowledges in "Prayer," one of my favorites in the collection:

Every day I want to speak with you. And every day

something more important calls for my attention—the drugstore, the beauty products, the luggage

I need to buy for the trip.

Even now I can hardly sit here

among the falling piles of paper and clothing, the garbage trucks outside already screeching and banging.

The mystics say you are as close as my own breath.

Why do I flee from you?

My days and nights pour through me like complaints and become a story I forgot to tell.

Help me. Even as I write these words I am planning to rise from the chair as soon as I finish this sentence.

The risk of Howe's method, of course, is that some poems can feel like mere transcriptions—yadayadayada. But the rewards are intimacy and the kind of tonal variety one feels when talking to the greatest of friends, whose conversation can embrace the election, the prose of Elizabeth Bowen, a short history of photography, and a summer afternoon's quest for the perfect sandal.

The tone and strategies of the poems change and deepen in the book's middle section, a short sequence called Poems from the Life of Mary. The Mary poems are contemporary unrhymed sonnets, which make use of the form's compression, movement, and shape on the page. And the sonnet as a kind of theatre seems the appropriate vehicle for poems in which Mary speaks from the center—as the center—of the Christian drama. Her body in several ways represents a window between ordinary time and sacred time: first she's a girl, a seeker in the world; then she's the mother of Christ. Her womb is divinely full, then it's mortally empty.

Howe's first name, Marie, is a cognate of Mary, and it's not difficult to see how the figure of Mary reaches towards Howe's experience of motherhood as well as her experience as a daughter, writing of her own mother's death. It is the variousness of Howe's book—conversational, worldly, human, vulnerable—that enables her to write about the more difficult issues of faith or injustice which also concern her. The very distractions that often get in the way can force room for the sudden swerves and calms of attention to more urgent matters, as the final poem of the book, "Mary (Reprise)," suggests. The last image readers are left with is that of Mary as she is often painted in Annunciations: an angel appears, distracting her from her reading, a finger keeping her place in her book, but also, "keeping the place of who she was when she looked up."

The poems of 2007 NEA Grant recipient Averill Curdy have been published widely, including in Pushcart Prizes 2007. This article first appeared in Poetry magazine. ## Falcons Field

Such sadness leapt from pensive eye
As listened I this tale revealed
How fallen comrades came to die
And mangled lay on Falcons Field.

From tempting Fate they epic pressed
As fools and dreamers slip and crawl
Sapping strength with a will obsessed
They fight to rise and rise they fall.

The land grew quiet past many days
Choking all to see how unsealed
The dying lay in dread array
O'er gentle slopes of Falcons Field.

We feel the shock of comrades killed
Unknowing why such madness planned
But here they lie on Falcons Field
Where many died yet no man ran.

To stay they must and stay they did
Though Hell broke out at every hand
And scattered all lost souls amid
The purple hills of this fair land.

Perceiving eyes search out and know
How fiery hot that pain so real
Which bosoms both the friend and foe
And plants its rows o'er Falcons Field.

That place above so richly sought
Cause all such mortal men to vie
Their valor rich through battles fought
Their bloody banners raised on high.

Such rising comes through pain and tears
And true it is for every man
But once we own such lofty Fears
We ne'er shall fall so low again.

This viewing deep inside each one
Brings dread emotions stoic ban
And plants thy Feet 'long side someone
And freely gives what none demand.

Falcons Field has taught us this
Though ghoulish customs plan defied
And search for lofty joy and bliss
Only comes from deep deep inside.

Honesty

Honesty is
A mirror; reflecting the cuts and bruises
Of man made words.

Honesty has
Integrity; the hope and conscience of
A person's will to fear.

Honesty is
A leach; sucking the life out of
You until there is no power to defeat it

Honesty has
Life; for without it we would know
Not the intense friendships we have.

Honesty is
Daring; daring you to test it and
Become the next to fall against a fatal wrath.

Honest has Patience. the will to wait and explore the endless possibilities.

American Life In Poetry

Column 214

BY TED KOOSER, U.S. POET LAUREATE, 2004-2006
Sometimes I wonder at my wife's forbearance. She's heard me tell the same stories dozens of times, and she still politely laughs when she should. Here's a poem by Susan Browne, of California, that treats an oft-told story with great tenderness.

On Our Eleventh Anniversary

You're telling that story again about your childhood, when you were five years old and rode your blue bicycle from Copenhagen to Espergaerde, and it was night and snowing by the time you arrived, and your grandparents were so relieved to see you, because all day no one knew where you were,

you had vanished. We sit at our patio table under a faded green umbrella, drinking wine in California's blue autumn, red stars of roses along the fence, trellising over the roof of our ramshackle garage. Too soon the wine glasses will be empty, our stories told, the house covered with pine needles the wind has shaken from the trees. Other people will live here.

We will vanish like children who traveled far in the dark, stars of snow in their hair, riding to enchanted Espergaerde.

American Life in Poetry is made possible by The Poetry Foundation (www.poetryfoundation.org), publisher of Poetry magazine. Calathiform: The next time you have coffee and drink it from a cup, you will be drinking from a vessel that has this shape. Tell your family what you are doing.

Haulm: This word denotes the plants of things that can be considered a stalk of a plant. Some say it applies to things like beans or potatoes.

Logogogue: This is the person who dictates law about words, but you know here we just suggest what the common notions are about words.

Wally Stanford Harris

MIDLAND- Wally Stanford Harris was born August 10, 1947 in Georgetown, Texas, moving shortly thereafter to Baird, Texas.

He died April 22, 2009 at his home in Midland.

While growing up, Wally was very involved in baseball, football, basketball and track. After graduating from Baird High School in 1965 Wally attended Southwestern Oklahoma State University in Weatherford, OK. While there he met and married his wife, Sue.

He graduated from the School of Pharmacy there in 1970 and moved to Big Spring, TX, and worked there two years. In 1972, they moved to Clovis where they lived until November 1973. In 1973, they moved to Hobbs, NM where he purchased Hobbs Drug the following summer. He remained there until January 2007 when they moved to Midland, TX.

Wally accepted Christ as his Savior many years ago and was a member of Taylor Memorial Baptist Church.

Wally's favorite past times were traveling with Sue to many places, especially the Riverwalk in San Antonio, seeing and playing with his children and grandchildren and certainly playing golf with his many friends. Many stories can be told about these games.

Survivors are his wife of 41 years, Sue; son and daughter-in-law, Jason and Brenda Harris of The Woodlands, TX; daughter and son-in-law, Gina and Steve Johnson of Frisco; daughter, Traci Harris of Odessa; grandchildren, Corey Harris, Kristen and Tyler Johnson, Justin and Erica Harris; and his wonderful mother, Cubelle Harris of Baird; numerous aunts, uncles, cousins and two sisters-in-law.

Preceded him in death were his father, Joe Harris; grandparents, J.T. and Florence Loper; Uncle Jerry Loper; Aunt Nell Freeman; father-in-law and mother-in-law, Kenneth and Gerry Robertson.

Services were held on Monday, April 27, 2009 at 10 a.m. at Taylor Memorial Baptist Church in Hobbs, N.M. with Dr. Dean Mathis officiating. Services were held under the direction of Chapel of Hope Funeral Home of Hobbs, N.M.

Robert Ernest Lee

HOUSTON- Robert Ernest Lee died April 15, 2009 in Houston, Texas.

Funeral service was held at the Woodlawn Funeral Home in Houston on Saturday, April 18, 2009. Burial was Saturday, April 25, 2009 in Ross Cemetery in Baird, Texas. Rev. Sandra Keith officiated. Local arrangements under the direction of Parker Funeral Home in Baird.

He was born January 17, 1915 in Roswell, New Mexico.

He was preceded in death by his brother, Fred Lee in 1985; by his wife of 56 years, Kitty White Lee in 1999.

Robert and Fred were raised in Roswell by their maternal grandmother and aunt following the death of their parents, Fred and Alta Lee, in the flu epidemic of 1919. Robert graduated from the University of Texas with a degree in civil engineering and went on to work for the Lower Colorado River Authority building dams that resulted in the Highland Lakes.

Before the beginning of World War II, Robert traveled to Hawaii where he supervised construction of military facilities. He was there on December 7, 1941 when carrier-based Japanese aircraft attacked Pearl Harbor and described to his family seeing anti-aircraft artillery shells falling in the streets. Robert, along with many other civilian employees of the United States Army, was commissioned into the United States Army following the attack on Pearl Harbor in hope of preventing any mistreatment should the Japanese invade. This commission was subsequently changed to the United States Navy Corp of Engineers. Robert remained on active duty with the United States Navy until May of 1946.

He married Kitty White of Baird, Texas, during the war and served as the chief engineer for the Naval Hospital in Astoria, Oregon during its construction and commissioning. After the war, Robert received commendations from Secretary of War Forrestal, and President Truman.

Following the war Robert and Kitty moved to Houston, residing there for 60 plus years. Robert worked as a civil engineer for many years, contributing to the growth and development of Houston as part of the construction industry. He eventually incorporated his own business, the RELCO Construction Company.

Survivors are 3 nieces, Sara Lee Doffing, Elizabeth Lee Ford, and Sally White McGregor; 2 grand-nieces; 3 grand-nephews; 3 great-grand-nephews.

His memory will be greatly cherished in the loving hearts of his family.

Memorials may be made to the American Heart Association or the charity of your choice.

M.D. Anderson's Polo On The Prairie Slated For May 2

Polo players from across the nation will come together on the Texas prairie May 2 for the fundraising championship polo match Polo on the Prairie. More than 1,000 guests are expected to make the trek to the Musselman Brothers' Lazy 3 Ranch in Albany, Texas, for the annual event that has raised more than $3 million for research and patient care programs at The University of Texas M. D. Anderson Cancer Center.

Melinda and Henry Musselman, along with Melinda's mother, Mary Anne McCloud, have organized the polo competition for 23 years. Henry Musselman and McCloud serve on M. D. Anderson's volunteer advisory board, and Musselman and son Luke play polo at the event each year. They note the fact that the daylong event is more than just a fundraiser - it has become a family reunion of sorts for many.

"Polo on the Prairie has become a tradition, not only for my family, but for amateur and world-ranked professional players who come here each year," says Melinda Musselman. "It's not easy to travel across the country with horses and trailers. The dedication these players exhibit is tremendous, and we owe them a debt of gratitude for their commitment to this event and to the cancer patients for whom they compete."

Survivors are four sons, Alan, David, and Erwin Clark all of Cross Plains, Kevin Clark of Franklin; two daughters, Fannie Clark of Cross Plains and Rita Clark of Graham; two sisters, Marie Brown of Abilene and Billie Ruth Clark of Canyon; 15 grandchildren; 12 great-grandchildren; numerous nieces and nephews and friends.

The event is much more than just a polo match. After the mid-afternoon championship game, guests enjoy a barbecue feast that has been slowly cooking all day. Joe Allen's Pit Bar-B-Que of Abilene brings more than 3,000 pounds of brisket, 400 sausage links and 150 pounds of beans, as well as potatoes and corn for the feast. Homemade peach cobbler and cold iced tea complete the meal.

This year Texas-born Jack Ingram will provide the evening's entertainment under the football field-sized tent. Ingram's newest record, "This is It," earned him a Top 5 Album for sales. He received a fan-voted CMT Award, beating such nominees as Sheryl Crow, Jimmy
