COOLIDGE BREAKS DATES TO SEE HORNED TOAD

WASHINGTON, May 3.—The celebrated horned toad of Texas, which slept for 30 years in the cornerstone of the Eastland County courthouse, was taken to the White House Thursday and exhibited to President Coolidge by Will Woods, owner of the reptile, who is here en route to New York.

To get a view of the toad, President Coolidge broke several other engagements for when Senator Mayfield first sought the privilege of presenting Woods he was told the president would be unable to meet anyone Thursday. It was when told of the circumstances and that Woods had the toad with him that the President agreed to the audience.

Eastern locomotives take water on the fly, from tanks set between the tracks. An air driven scoop plunges down as the train roars over the tank. Such track tanks were first installed in this country by the Pennsylvania Railroad. In the course of a year they save, for industry and for travelers, an enormous amount of time.

LUBBOCK, Texas.—A fine specimen of the lower jaw of a Stegomastodon was recently brought to Texas Technological College. The jaw is about three feet long when pieced together and has two teeth and the short tusk finely preserved. It was found in northwestern Dickens County in the bed of a small creek and is probably late Pliocene in age.

It was collected by F. F. Henry, D. W. Hughes, D. F. Christian and M. E. Franklin, of that locality, who, after realizing the value of their find, brought it to the college for identification. They have kindly given it to the museum of the department of geology where it is to be placed on display.—Jayton Chronicle.

MOZART TAUGHT MUSIC AT 25c A LESSON

PARIS, May 5.—Mozart's fee for piano lessons in 1781 was 25c, and although he considered this a meager compensation, he gave his pupils to understand that he made this rate as a special favor to them.

So he told his father in a letter from Dresden, just published for the first time.

He preferred, he said, three well-paid lessons to six at a reduced price. At the time he had only one pupil, he admits, Countess Runbeck, but her lessons provided all the funds he needed from that source.

Uncle Jimmy Jones, of Afton, spent Saturday in Spur.

GARNETT MYSTIFIES SPUR CITIZENS

Prof. A. P. Garnett, of Spur, working in connection with the Spur Theatre furnished considerable excitement for the Spur people Monday of this week.

Prof. Garnett, who is appearing at the Spur Theatre four nights this week, placed one of the local boys under hypnotic control at 9:00 a. m. Monday, leaving his asleep in a show window of the Spur Drug Store until about 8:30 p. m., when he was awakened at the Spur Theatre.

Prof. Garnett also demonstrated his ability by driving a team and wagon up and down the main street at a run while blindfolded. He also found several articles secreted about town by business men of the town.

In fact, Prof. Garnett thoroughly mystified the people of Spur, and various arguments are to be heard on the streets. Some contending that there is some trick which they cannot understand.

One thing can be said, Prof. Garnett successfully performed every feat which he attempted.

JUNIOR HIGH TO BE ADDED

On Saturday, June 2nd, the voters of Spur School District will vote on the issuance of School Bonds to the amount of $45,000 for the purpose of building a new grammar school building and remodeling the present grammar school into a Junior High School building.

The question that enters in to the mind of the tax payer and voters at this time is "Do We Need A New School Building?"

In an interview with Mr. Cluck, Superintendent of Schools, he answers this question by a statement of conditions in the Spur schools at the present time.

The present Grammar School building is needed to establish a Junior High and relieve the congestion in the High School building. The present High School was built to accommodate 100 pupils. This year there were 290 pupils there to receive instruction.

Mr. Cluck states that the grammar schools of Texas have more failures than any other state due to the fact that they do not usually have Junior High schools and promotions are made by grades instead of by subjects. With a Junior High School much more efficient work can be done in the matter of promotions.

The present grammar school is deplorably crowded. The basement, the most unsanitary and unhealthful place where children can be placed, Copyright, 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc. Dolores Costello in "OLD SAN FRANCISCO" is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS The broad acres of Don Hernandez Vasquez and his beautiful granddaughter Dolores are coveted by Buckwell, San Francisco boss. His lawyer, Brandon, fails to induce Vasquez to sell. Brandon's nephew, Terry, falls in love with Dolores. Buckwell plans to void Vasquez land grant. Terry warns Vasquez and offers aid. Vasquez won't listen and tells him Dolores must marry young Spaniard. Heartbroken, Terry leaves without seeing Dolores and tries to forget her by a wild night along Barbary Coast. Dolores is hurt by Terry's action, but swallows pride and seeks his aid in saving ranch. She finds him on drunken party and returns home disillusioned. Buckwell witnessed her visit and is intrigued.

CHAPTER IX—Continued And so on the next afternoon it was two objects, the thought of a grafting profit—through attainment of the property, by purchase or otherwise—and a keen desire to meet Dolores, the lovely and spirited belle of the hacienda; that brought him, immaculately dressed as usual, to the gates of the old Vasquez estate. As he santered towards the ruins of the old mission his eyes lighted with satisfaction as they beheld the rolling hills and broad acres on either side. This valuable property would soon be his; other speculators wanted it but he would be the lucky one. Over the chapel door, moss covered and half obliterated, his roving eye caught the Vasquez crest and motto, "A Vasquez avenges a Vasquez," and his lips curled contemptuously at this symbol of useless sentiment and emotion.

Turning to go toward the house, he stopped abruptly. In the distance he noticed Dolores and her grandfather coming toward the mission. Vasquez wore a shawl and leaned heavily on his cane as Dolores helped him along. Buckwell's wily brain was seized with an idea. Hastily crunching beneath the heel of his boot the cigar he had been puffing so contently, he slipped into the mission and waited for them to approach.

Falling on his knees he assumed an attitude of devout worship.

The old man walked slowly. The grief and trouble of the last two days had aged him considerably. The sight of his broad acres seemed to torture him by their association with the past. He shook his head sadly as he walked.

Dolores was silent and grave, too. The disillusionment and horrible memories of the previous night lay heavily on her mind. She sighed in remembrance and thanked heaven that her grandfather had no inkling of where she had been.

As Buckwell sensed them passing the mission door he hastily advanced to the altar and falling to his knees assumed an attitude of devout worship. Keenly alert to each round of their footsteps he was fully aware that he had been discovered. Silently he waited with bowed head as they drew near and stopped just behind him. Then rising, apparently from prayer, as if in ignorance of their presence, he started as he saw them watching him earnestly.

"I trust you will pardon this intrusion," he said apologetically, bowing low, "but I could not resist a prayer in this ancient sanctuary. It seems so like a breath from the sacred past."

Vasquez nodded warmly at this appreciation of his beloved mission.

Smiling first at him and then at Dolores, Buckwell continued, "I hope, with your permission, I may come again and often," he paused, waiting for the effect of his words.

The old man's smile faded and was replaced with a look of deep sadness. He glanced furtively about before replying, "I am afraid this may be your last visit—grafting politicians from the city threaten to seize our estate—and these old walls will be crushed under the merciless wheels of progress."

Buckwell stared from one to the other in amazement. His indignation was superb.

"Do you mean to say that they threaten to demolish this glorious monument to the very traditions that made our country what it is?" He paused and looked at Dolores as if to get her confirmation to her Grandfather's statement.

She nodded in agreement, her eyes shining in response to his words. "They threaten to declare invalid the old Spanish grant under which our ancestors held this land for more than one hundred years," she supplied with indignation.

Buckwell looked at her earnestly and sympathetically, then placing his hand gently on Vasquez's arm he said, "I, myself, am not without some influence in the city. If I can find out who is behind this outrage, I promise—for the sake of what this old mission represents—that I will save your estate."

The stranger's manner and words gave them new courage and Dolores ventured to say, "You seem to have come in answer to a wish—I threw a rose into the wishing well this morning and wished that someone true and fine would be sent to help us."

"No desire of yours should ever go ungratified," he complimented with just the right amount of mature and distant dignity. "I trust I may have the privilege of serving you often."

Dolores looked at her Grandfather and her eyes signalled "Isn't he nice!" He answered "Yes, my child, he is kind."

How cruel it was that they should have been so deluded and their faith so played with by the very man who was causing all the heartache and worry!

"We would appreciate anything you can do—I am at a loss as to what our next step should be," volunteered Vasquez, pitifully.

"In order to understand the situation," said Buckwell, assuming a more businesslike air, "I would like to examine your grant—merely to see if it was properly filed after the American Occupation."

"Certainly, Senor," acquiesced Vasquez, eager to do all in his power to assist, "come into the house and we can go into the matter thoroughly." With a sweeping gesture he indicated the way, but the strain of worry and excitement had drained his strength. Tettering uncertainly, he almost fell.

"Oh, Grandfather!" cried Dolores, steadying him with her arm around his waist.

"I am all right," he gasped, but one hand clutched at his heart and Dolores knew he was just being brave.

"Let's sit down," she suggested cheerfully. "No, No!" the old man insisted. "I want to get this matter settled as soon as possible," and he continued along the path with dragging feet.

Dolores exchanged a worried look with Buckwell behind her Grandfather's back and they moved cautiously along on either side, ready to catch him if he needed assistance.

When they finally reached the living room Vasquez sank wearily into a great arm chair and closed his eyes. "Dolores," he called, unaware that she was kneeling by his side until she covered his nervous hands with hers. "Ah, yes, my child, bring the strong box in—you know where it is."

"Yes, Grandfather, dear," and she rose quickly to do his bidding. In a moment she returned to the room carrying a handsomely carved box of Spanish design. Pausing before old Vasquez for instructions she found that he was asleep.

"I hate to waken him," she whispered across the intervening space to Buckwell, "he is so exhausted."

"Yet it may be disastrous to lose more time," supplied Buckwell craftily, in sotto voice.

"Couldn't you look at the papers without Grandfather?" asked Dolores, innocently. "I know how to open the box."

"Why—yes, I suppose I could," admitted Buckwell with apparent reluctance. But he had reached Dolores's side at the table before she opened the box and, as if he had devoted enough time to being polite he reached in and took out the grant papers.

"Aren't they perfectly legal?" inquired Dolores, waiting anxiously for his opinion, as he hastily scanned each sheet.

Buckwell laughed, softly to keep from winking Vasquez. "I am not expert enough in such matters to tell, but I shall be very happy to have my lawyer go over them for you."

"It does not seem right to put you to so much trouble," Dolores had a bit of talking with her eyes as well as her lips, and Buckwell found it diverting to watch her. It was a new role for him to play protector to a lovely damsel in distress and he enjoyed it to the utmost.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK
By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

George Fort Milton, editor of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) News, says:

That today's competition for the dollar in the pocket of the average man makes advertising an indispensable element of successful business. It is not alone the competition of Jones Haberdashery against Brown's Men's Shop, and of Chevrolet versus Ford. It is the fight of the Men's clothes against the automobile dealers, and the battle of both of them against furniture dealers and sparkplug makers and sellers of celluloid joy for each dollar that is earned.

Business today is in the most gigantic competition it has ever known. The various trades are studying the consumer with intensity and in detail. They are seeking to discover his needs, to satisfy his wants and to arouse his desires. Each industry is after a larger share of his consumer's dollar. Advertising is vital to a successful quest.

Modern business has launched many argosies in search of the golden fleece of public patronage and profit; and advertising is the oar the steersman has to use. Without judicious and intelligent advertising, the broad stream of modern business would shrivel to panic thinness. Attractive, consistent, honest advertising is an indispensable adjunct of successful presentation of meritorious articles, services and industries today.

The dusk of the South is tender
As the touch of a soft, soft hand;
The sweetest of service to render
It comes between splendor and splendor,
And gathers the cares of the land.

Above it the soft sky blushes
And pales like an April rose;
Within it the south wind hushes
And the jessamine's heart out-gushes,
And earth like an emerald glows.

The dusk of the South comes fleetly,
And fleetly it takes its flight;
But it comes like a song so sweetly,
And gathers our cares completely
For God to keep through the night.

Charles C. Pierce, Dallas, president of the Alumni and Ex-students Association is in general charge of the meeting assisted by Miss Cleva Gunter, of Plainview. Pierce reports that much interest is being manifest by students over the state. Miss Gunter has the arrangements for the banquet and program well in hand and is receiving reservations for plates at the banquet.

The reunion last year was declared to be the best ever held at Wayland.

Students came back to the campus in greater numbers and expressed enthusiasm for the support of the school. Charles Pierce and his workers are out to make the 1928 reunion one that will go down in the history of the school.

HOW CHICKENS INCREASED THE FAMIL INCOME

On March 10, 1925, at the age of 15 years, I bought from my cousins (who keeps one of the best strains of Rhode Island Red chickens) 39 one-day-old chicks at 10 cents each. My mother let me give them to one of her setting hens. I fed them lightly on cornbread crumbs and clabbered milk for about three weeks then began increasing the feed and giving them more range and feeding them on clean earth or flour every day. I swept out the sleeping place daily and scalded it out twice a week.

I raised 36 chicks in 3 months. At this age they weighed from 2 1-2 to 3 pounds each. I sold them at 40 cents per pound.

Mother considered my investment quite a help and growing chickens for the market very, very profitable after we figured that the investment of $3.90 had grown to $38.40 in three months.

I enjoyed caring for these chicks very much and really I believe they enjoyed my association with them. The one cockerel that I kept in remembrance of my flock still hops up on the back steps mornings that he thinks we oversleep to remind us that the weeds are growing in the garden or that it is time I brought his warm crumbs. SECRET OF BEING "REGULAR GIRL" SOLVED

CHICAGO, Ill.—Chicago's play girls use nature's cosmetics to retain their girlish complexions and are getting along well in their efforts.

In fact, the Chicago Council of Social Agencies, which is directing the girls' health trail, says the outdoor girl is growing more beautiful each day.

The carrot tint you see on these girls' cheeks is not applied in the apartment boudoir, but is acquired at nature's cosmetic dressing table, where the air and sun combine to give a healthful glow unknown to the deft hand of the beauty parlor specialist.

And figures—they are style plus. All of which may be obtained by any girl who takes regular exercises outdoors at least one-half hour each day, eats three regular meals a day and shuns the liquor parties that she may get the regular restful sleep, the council leaders say.

The road to beauty, they advise, is along the pathway of health, which brings a sparkling eye, real charm that radiates vitality and a figure that abounds with grace. This is the council's idea of a "regular girl".

A city-wide movement has been started to induce more girls to join the health trail movement and to further the plans of community "play-day" will be held next month.

The secret of becoming a "regular girl", is set forth in the following simple remedy of the council:

"Regular exercise outdoors at least one-half hour a day, regular meals three times a day, including a real breakfast and an adequate lunch, and regular sleep. A regular girl has no worry or upset stomach, smiles take the place of frowns and little nervous wrinkles will fade away."

A daily health record is being kept of all girls in Chicago who have joined the health trail. More than 1500 examination blanks for health records have been given out to hygienists. In addition to those who have taken these examinations, many have gone to health centers established by the council.

cise in the outdoors and take your complexion cream from the top of the daily quart of milk," is the only advice the girls are asked to accept.

FEED AND TEST

Can the test of a cow's milk be increased by any feed given her?

If a cow receives sufficient nutrients to maintain her body weight, the percentage of fat in her milk can not be materially altered for any long period of time by greater or less liberality of feeding or by supplying any particular kind of feed. Cows starved or greatly underfed may produce milk somewhat lower in fat percentage than normal. Some feeds such as coconut meal or cottonseed meal, for example, apparently often cause a slight increase in the fat percentage of the milk but this will be more or less temporary.

In his book entitled, "Dairy Cattle and Milk Production," Professor Eckles says, "It would seem reasonable to assume that the richness of the milk would be influenced by the feed received by the animal. This question has received much attention by experiment stations in this country and in Europe, and the evidence is conclusive that the fat percentage of the milk can not be changed permanently by any method of feeding. Certain experiments have shown that sudden changes in the ration—for example greatly increasing the protein or oil content of the ration—may result in a small fat increase for a few days with some individuals; with others no effect is produced, and in any case the results are only temporary. No ration or method of feeding has been found by means of which a Shorthorn or Holstein can be made to give milk as rich as that of a Jersey or Guernsey.

"Wing made an interesting study of the relation of liberal and scant feeding to milk production and fat percentage, covering four years and including 21 cows. A record of the milk production and the fat was kept for a lation period on a farm where the feeding conditions were very poor. At the end of the period ten of the cows were brought to the University Farm and fed liberally for two years; they were then returned to the farm and a record secured for the fourth year. The seven cows that were continued the four years showed the following results:

	Lbs.	Fat
	milk yield	percentage
On Farm, scant ration	3,340	4.40
University Farm, good ration	6,383	4.65
On Farm, scant ration	4,492	4.45

"The good feed and care resulted in nearly double the amount of milk produced under the poor feeding conditions on the farm. The result of the good treatment was carried over to some extent the following year when the herd was returned to the original farm conditions. The richness of the milk, however, was not increased to any appreciable extent by the better feed."

THERE ARE NO LITTLE THINGS
By Bruce Barton

A business friend told me this story:

"At the hotel where I spent my vacation there was a young chap who complained of insomnia" he said. "He looked so well that the rest of us thought his trouble must be largely imaginary. We ridiculed him mildly. "He and I happened to ride back to New York on the same train. He made some attempt at conversation, but I was preoccupied and paid little attention. Two days later I picked up the newspaper and saw his name in the headlines. He had committed suicide."

My friend paused and his voice became very earnest.

"I can't help feeling that if I had taken the trouble to be just a little more gracious to that chap, I might have helped him over the hill," he said, "It makes you gasp a bit, doesn't it, when you stop to think how unconsciously we influence the lives of other people, just by little things."

Years ago in Springfield, Mass., a simple mechanic stepped up to a drunken man, tapped him on the shoulder and spoke a few words. I do not know the name of the mechanic, but the drunken man became an orator of international reputation and left a great impress on his generation. His name was John B. Gough; the change in his life started from that moment.

Theodore Cuyler, in relating the incident, remarked: "When I heard the thunders of applause that greeted Gough's oratory, I said: "That is but the echo of the tapping of that mechanic's friendly hand upon the drunkard's shoulder."

A poor unlettered boy named John Burns dropped a penny on the newsstand and picked up a cheap paper-bound copy of Voltaire's "Life of Charles the Twelfth."

Years later he testified that the book had given his life a wholly new impulse. At this time when he made that confession he was a member of Parliament and a power in English public life.

There is a homely old hymn which assures that "Kind words can never die".

The hymn is not so much sung in these days; it has become rather the habit to sneer at such old-fashioned tunes, and the philosophy which they represent. But sometimes when I consider what tremendous consequences come from little things—a chance word, or a tap on the shoulder, or a penny dropped on the newsstand—I am tempted to think that nothing dies—and that there are no little things.

"LOVE QUADRANGLE" SEEN IN BANCROFT-BRENT FILM

The "love triangle" is the basis for a great many screen dramas, but it fell to the lot of Josef Von Sternberg to develop a "love quadrangle" as a bombshell of human emotions.

The quadrangle is a dramatic principle worked out in Ben Hecht's sensational crime story "Underworld" which reaches the Lyric next Friday, as a Paramount picture.

One woman and three men are concerned.—Evelyn Brent, George Bancroft, Clive Brook and Fred Kohler. Bancroft is a gang leader and Evelyn Brent his sweetheart, Fred Kohler, a rival gangster, has a mad desire for her. She, however, is drawn to Clive Brook.

The quadrangle proves even more destructive than the usual triangle. Kohler attempts to win Miss Brent by physical force and is shot down by Bancroft. Bancroft is arrested for the murder and this proves a solution for the love of the leading woman and Brook.

The action and reaction of the strange struggle in four hearts works out in a tempestuous manner and is declared to be one of the most powerful dramatic arrangements in years.

Mrs. C. C. Haile and Fred C. Haile spent Friday in Throckmorton.

Dependability, Satisfaction and Honest Value

USED CARS

Detroit, Mich., May 8.—An entirely new slant on the used car, elevating it to its rightful place in the industry was taken here by R. H. Grant, vice-president in charge of sales of the Chevrolet Motor Company, in an interview just prior to sailing for a month's trip to Europe.

As evidence of the growing importance of the used car, Mr. Grant pointed out that during the first quarter of 1928, when the Chevrolet organization was moving 250,000 new cars, it also was delivering at retail more than 200,000 used cars.

This was made possible by a changing attitude toward the used car on the part of both the automobile dealer and the public, Mr. Grant said.

"Where the automobile dealer formerly paid little attention to the used car," Mr. Grant declared, "the proportion of used car to new car sales has mounted so high that used cars are now an important part of his business. Today, practically all the direct dealers in the Chevrolet organization have Ducoing equipment with which the refinish used cars in a manner similar to the factory. Cars are gone over from head light to tail lamp by skilled mechanics trained in approved factory methods. The reconditioned cars bear an 'O. K. Tag' showing that every vital part has been checked. They are then displayed attractively, and lenient time payments are made available to the purchaser.

"The public owes directly to the used car the wide range of prices at which transportation may be purchased, and the wide variety of models from which selection may be made. If there were no such thing as a trade-in price, the owner of an automobile, instead of turning it in on a new model, would drive it himself until its usefulness was spent, just as he now uses his furniture or his farm or garden implements. There would consequently be no used car mart for the man who wants to buy a car at less than new car cost. Millions of present motorists who were attracted by used car prices would not now own automobiles if there had been no used car market. "Every good automobile today is built with many years of service in it. The original purchaser generally turns it in on a new model after he has driven it a few years. There remains in the car many miles of dependable service which is available to the man who needs transportation on the basis of a low first cost.

"Of some 25,000,000 passenger cars now registered in the United States, it is estimated that approximately 60 per cent are in the hands of their second or third owners. In other words fifteen million motorists are now riding in cars that were purchased on resale.

"Eliminate the used car from the market, and a good share of those fifteen million people would be denied the privilege of owning a car. And most of the remaining ten million motorists would be driving cars that do not measure up to their ideas of style simply because they would not be able to get a trade-in allowance, and would refuse to scrap their cars with unused value remaining in them. "The result would have been a great many less new car sales within the past 20 years, and most of the twenty-five million present motorists would have either no car at all or a car that fell short of their present taste for style, durability and performance.

"Our dealers know that the used car buyer of today is the new car buyer of tomorrow. They are anxious to satisfy him because it means future business. By reason of the unprecedented demand for the Bigger and Better Chevrolet, our dealers have a better variety of used cars than ever before—cars that are better serviced, better finished and that represent better values.

"There is every indication that our used car turnover this year will establish a new high record even though both our new and used car sales are bigger than ever before during this season of the year".

"POETRY OF MOTION" LIVES AGAIN

Old Timers among true lovers of horseflesh will remember "Poetry of Motion" with a thrill of unalloyed pleasure. It was nearly two-score years ago that this great Champion among five-gaited saddle horses stirred the hearts of applauding thousands of fashionable people as she pirouetted on proud parade, prancing around the tanbark rings of the greatest horse shows in the land.

And now, in this newer Automotive Age, owners of the modern steel steed are breaking out into poetry about their four-wheeled mounts. Ordinarily, springtime poetry is inspired by the tender passion for the fair sex. Indeed, if one's recollection does not serve him poorly, the vice of versifying is quite general in this season when the younger generation is apt to be mooney, absent-minded and even, shall we say, "a bit balmy"—like unto the welcome weather.

But here is a real springtime tribute to a motor car, perhaps the finest bit of poetry ever penned on the subject, just received by Walter P. Chrysler from Mryon J. King of Pittsburgh.

"I have been driving one of your '27 Sedans," writes Mr. King, "It has seemed to me from the very first time that I took the wheel in my hand that Chrysler cars possess a distinct personality, a personality that changes with the character of the driver, with the season of the year, with the hour of the day.

"Hour after hour I have sat behind the two little shining wings while they have cleaved the air like a falcon, or soared majestically as an eagle. I have watched them alert and gleaming with the first light of early morning and staunch and brave through the drench of rain and mud in the darkest night.

"The little verse below may express better than this note my regard and appreciation for the Chrysler Motor car:

"Silver Wings"
"Two gleaming wings on a silver crown,
A blur of blue on the broad highway;
A whispering song for the crest of the hill
And a velvet pause where the valley's lay.

"Two proud little wings on a haughty crest,
Romance at the edge of the golden dawn;

A heart that speaks to the pulse of youth
With its eager murmur—"On and on!"

"Oh! staunch little wings on your brave wee cap,
Ah! fleeting shadow that skims the road—
With your dauntless pinions soaring far,
Chrysler, you're more than a motor car."

PICK UP PEACH DROPS

Usually a good portion of the young peaches that set drop off before they are as big as the end of a finger. If these are examined nearly all of them will be found to have little worms in them, these being the cause in many cases of the dropping. It is highly important, therefore, that these small peaches be picked up every week, or more often. Don't think of this as some theoretical point that is of no practical value, because such is not the case. If they are destroyed the number of worms for the second generation to attack the fruit after it half grown or more will be very greatly reduced. Those who prefer may destroy the worms of these small peaches by burying two feet deep under the soil and covering with lime but the burning method is probably the best.—Progressive Farmer.

What Is A Station-to-Station Call?

IN telephone parlance, a station is a telephone. A station-to-station long distance call is one where a connection is established between your telephone and a desired telephone in a distant town, and not between you and some particular person in the distant town. Every local call you place is really a station-to-station call—you talk to whoever answers the called telephone.

To use this service, if you know the distant telephone number, give it to the long distance operator; if you do not know the number, give the operator the name and address of the party whose telephone you wish to reach, and let her know that you are willing to talk to anyone who answers at the called telephone.

Station-to-station calls cost about 20 per cent. less than those where you ask to talk to a particular person.

Some of the grades have as many as 57 pupils in them, when none are supposed to have more than 40.

Every voter of Spur, should, before the election, investigate carefully the true condition of the schools.

The poorest economy we can practice is economy in our schools that forces children to spend nine months of the year in surroundings that impair their health and impair their efficiency.
