IT TASTES THE SAME

It seems that Governor Huey P. Long of Louisiana and the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution are creating quite a furor as to which is proper method of eating potlikker and corn pone. There is no need of any one tearing their hair over which is the proper way of eating this very sustaining food. What is troubling us fellows in West Texas most just now is the method of acquisition. If that were solved, most of us have sufficient appetite to "dunk" at noon to please Governor Huey, and all of us have sufficient time to spend in crumbling to satisfy the Potlikker Department of the Constitution. In either event, the taste would be the same to hungry West Texans.

BANQUET ENTERTAINMENT

At a banquet given Friday evening the Home Economics girls and the Agriculture boys were charming hosts and hostesses to their mothers and fathers.

Mr. Neilson was a delightful master of ceremonies. Speeches were made by Mr. Dickson, R. W. Dickson, Jr., Mrs. R. R. Wooten, Mrs. W. M. Hazel, Mrs. T. H. Blackwell, Miss Haralson, Mr. Middleton and Robert Cross, president of the agriculture class. The parents were entertained with a few popular songs by the ukelele girls and a musical number by Lois Law, Ray Dickson and Margaret Koon.

After these entertaining numbers the 166 present were served the most enjoyable menu of Capon and dressing, slaw with creamed potatoes and pie and coffee.

As a farewell to each other, everyone sang "Just Three Little Words". The Home Ec girls and Aggie boys appreciate very much the response given by the parents. Miss Haralson and Mr. Middleton are loved and appreciated by every member of their respective classes.

HOME ECONOMICS CLUB MEETS

The Home Ec. Club met Thursday afternoon, Feb. 26, and are planning to have an ideal club.

As Beulah Copeland has left the club, Mary Wooten was elected as reporter.

The club has had many new members since it was organized, and it is still gaining. We hope to have a splendid club and one that girls will never forget.

Friday, March 6, four o'clock the club is putting on a program at the High School building. All parents and friends who are interested in this type of work are invited to attend.

HOME ECONOMICS

Every boy and girl is interested in manners, therefore we, the Home Ec girls, are putting some questions in the paper each week on Manners. If you will read them we feel sure that you will be benefited by them. The answers to each question will be printed the week after the question is asked.

If you have a question that you wish to be answered, tell one of the members of the H. E. Club, then watch for it in the Rowel.

DO YOU KNOW

1. How to introduce one person to another?
2. Which speaks first, the boy or girl?
3. How should a boy escort a girl down the street?
4. Who should lead the way to a seat in Church or in a show, the boy or girl?
5. Who makes the first move to shake hands when introduced?
6. Who should be seated first in a restaurant, a man or woman?
7. Who should first suggest leaving a party, the boy or girl?
8. Why a girl does not make a date with a boy?

INTERESTING CHAPEL TALK

The Senior high school was favored with a very interesting talk by Rev. M. H. Applewhite last Tuesday afternoon. His subject was "What is the Matter with the Young People of Spur?"

His message in brief was that there was nothing more the matter with the young people today than there was with the youth of yesterday. Rev. Applewhite expressed the opinion that the only great difference in the coming generation and the present one is that youth today has a greater curiosity and must know the where and why-for before he will act, yet he is at all times open for conviction.

Everyone enjoyed the address and are eager at all times to have the pastors and business men of our city to come up and be with us when ever it is possible.

JUNIOR BASKETBALL GIRLS LOSE TO GIRARD

The Kat saw Buster and Lynn Thursday night; yes, I admit walking is good for the health.

KILLED AT THE FORD

Jack was a beautiful young lad who lived in the North in a little village called Decatur. He had a lovely playmate whose name was Betty. These two grew up together. When he was eighteen years of age a war broke out and Jack wanted to go, but wanted to go as some of his friends wanted to fight for his country as well and were going.

One night about two weeks after Jack had gone to war Betty had a dream about him. She dreamed she saw him riding toward the picket forge humming a song, as the mist was falling, a shot rang out of the woods and killed him. He fell from his horse and his friends who were riding by his side rushed him back to the camp, where he was laid and by a light they saw two white roses on his cheeks. One above his heart blood red by this token they knew him dead.

The next morning Betty was awakened by the door bell. In a few minutes the maid opened the door in the room. She gave Betty a telegram coming from Jack's camp and stating of his death, the shock was so great she could not bear it and suddenly fell dead.

THE STORY THAT WAS REVEALED TO ME BY THE BOARD OF EDUCATION IN THE OFFICE

Now, my child if you will sit down here by me. I will tell you my sad tale: "I was first a very small seed about the size of your small finger nail. I was taken by a man who was called John and put in a bucket, there I began to get soft and my skin finally burst. When I got large enough to stick my head through the dirt, I was taken and put into the ground, everyday I was almost drowned with water.

For years and years I grew by leaps and bounds, for which now I am very sorry, until I was larger than any tree near me. One day just as the sun was going out of sight a great cloud arose in the West and a strong wind started blowing. During the night it almost blew me over; my feet were almost broken off my body. The next day John came along with something in his hand and began to cut me, oh! how painful that was. After I was cut down I was loaded on a long vehicle and carried to a place where I was made in many long pieces of "stuff" but I was thicker and wider than any of them.

Later I was put on the train and travelled many miles, then I finally stopped at a little place that was called Spur and then my exciting life began: A man came into the yard, better known to you as a lumber yard, and said, "I want the thickest piece of plank you have," and I was taken away from the rest of my friends.

I was brought to this very spot and I never saw so many people. I have been so badly abused that I don't know what I would look like if I wasn't so badly cut up. I was hurt three times yesterday by being used on some of these tough boys. I was used just the first period. I have gotten better acquainted with the man who came after me while was yet in the yard, he is known better to you as Mr. Neilson. He never uses me unless he has tried to be good to someone and they do something terribly mean that he has to punish them."

After the poor board had finished its story and paused a few minutes, it said, "I hope you have enjoyed my story even though I do not enjoy telling it, now as I am through tell me your story." My story is a very brief one—

Mr. Neilson came in with a young "Fish" and in a few minutes we hear the poor board being abused again. Bang! Bam! Whiz!

Mr. Hall: What has more speed than a racing car?
 Honorhea: A parked coupe.

Miss McNeill: When I took a position in this school I was influenced by the beauty—that was before I saw the pupils.

He: Give us a kiss.
 She: (No answer).
 He: Come on, give us a kiss.
 She: What do you want me to do—promise not to bite?

Now I lay me down to snore
 Insured for fifty grand or more;

If I should die before I wake
 My wife would get her first good break!

Jack and Jill went up the hill
 To get some modern licker;
 Jack took two and he was through
 And Jill died even quicker.

First He: See that girl? Her face is her fortune.
 Second He: Yeah, and it runs into a nice figure.

QUILTING BEE

As a means of having her friends meet together in a social way, Mrs. J. W. Carlisle invited quite a number to meet with her in her lovely farm home in an old time "Quilting Bee" on Wednesday, Feb. 19. At ten o'clock a number of ladies arrived and at the click of needle and thimble, merry chatter of friend with friend could be heard around two quilts. By noon others had arrived to join in the fun and at twelve thirty the hostess, assisted by Mrs. F. F. Vernon invited the party to the kitchen where a table was loaded with deliciously prepared home grown foods. Each lady selected the food to her liking and retired to tables in the living room where talk subsided for a while. The hostess then called for jokes and again merriment prevailed.

BOTH SIDES OF LIFE

There is a man whom to you've seen,
He married him a wife;
He rented and and bought a team
And started out in life.

The time passed swift and smooth ly by,
Perhaps a year or more;
He then looks up with troubled eye
Hard times are at his door.

Wife says he does not manage --
right,
Or he would food provide;
She quarrels at him from morn
till night,
Not one failing tries to hide.

He thinks his wife does nothing
right,
He is hard to suit;
So he gets mad enough to fight
His little wife so cute.

The bedrooms are all tumbled up,
The kitchen is no better,
The parlor is a perfect mess
Of papers and old letters

She thinks her yard would better look
If he would do his part,
She pouts around and will not cook
Till it is almost dark.

Then he to match her stubborn will,
Which he does not like so good,
Hustles off into the field
And will not cut wood.

Thus worse and worse their troubles grow
From morning until night;
It is a fact, you all well know,
They neither one do right. (Bad)

(The Other Side)

When fortune fails and luck is bad
Instead of wife a-sneering;
She ought to try to make him glad
By gentle words of cheering.

And then the man should gentle be
To her, his loving wife;
It would make her heart so light
and free
Amid the cares of life.

And when at night the days work
o'er
The man would happy be
To have her meet him at the door
With smiles for him to see.

And put her arms around his neck,
And speak a word of cheer,
And place a kiss upon his cheek
And call him, "Hubby Dear."

Instead of snaps and snarls and sneers,
They ought to be forgiving;
And then to one and all appear
That life would be worth living.

Then when the toils of life are
o'er,
And hey from cares are free;
They meet on canaan's happy shore
And dwell eternally.

Forward Looking Citizens Recognize These Facts

Forward-looking citizens, well-informed as to modern industrial trends, are staunch advocates of the dependable public service company distributing the advantages of inexpensive electric service over a wide area by way of a vast network of interconnected transmission lines. They know that in no other way can they hope for the permanent growth and development of their city.

For the past decade the industrial trend has been toward decentralization. Large factories have found that the progressive small city offers cheaper land, less expensive operating and living costs, excellent shipping facilities and a more healthful and inspiring atmosphere. —But, these industries must be assured of dependable electric service, for interruptions and delays would more than offset the advantages of re-location.

In this respect the modern small city receiving service from the transmission line system enjoys a considerable advantage over towns still retaining the old-fashioned and uneconomic isolated plant. 120 prosperous cities and towns in West Texas, the "Land of Opportunity", dependably served by the West Texas Utilities Company, look into the future secure in the knowledge that industrial opportunities will not pass them by because of inadequate and in-elastic power facilities.
