BUSINESS CONDITIONS ARE FAR ABOVE AVERAGE RECENT REPORT SHOWS

100 Cars of Grains, 113 Cars of Cattle Shipped From Here In October.

Business conditions for Muleshoe and trade territory are much better than in past years as shown by a check of shipments of products out of this place. Although farm products have not moved to the markets as rapidly as expected, still there were 100 cars of maize, kaffir, sudan, and other grains shipped in October, which is the beginning of the fall season.

There were 113 cars of cattle, or about 4500 head, shipped from Muleshoe in the past month. Shipments coming in were heavier in October than for any previous month, and included lumber and building material of all kinds, tractors, farming implements, automobiles, etc. Improving of new farms are being made every week and a day sees new prospectors and settlers flocking in.

Sudan Man Hurt In Automobile Accident

Marion Walker, formerly of Muleshoe, was injured last Sunday night when his car was run over by another. Mr. Walker received a cut over one eye and was injured internally. Two boys who were driving the other car were said to have been drinking, thereby causing the accident.

Modern Burglar Alarm For Bank

One of the latest types of burglar alarms is to be installed at the Blackwater Valley State Bank here within the next two weeks. The work will be done by the O. B. McClintock Company, and when completed a demonstration of the new device will be given for the public. The alarm system is under control and can be adjusted so delicately that the sound of a voice in ordinary conversation will start the mechanism working. It is understood that only a very few of these machines are in use in this section of the State, there being one in Lubbock and one in Clevis, but they are quite numerous in banks of the larger cities. The installation of this alarm will reduce the insurance premium by 65 per cent and carries the label of the Underwriters Laboratories of Chicago.

The frequency of robberies in the "litter towns" has necessitated the installation of modern alarm systems.

DANCING GRID STAR

William A. Glassgow, football star of the University of Iowa who leads the Hawkeyes in what may be their last season in the Big Ten conference. Glassgow, one of the best ground gainers in the conference, earns his way through school by managing a dance hall in Iowa City.

MRS. NINA ELROD ENTERTAINS WITH HALLOWEEN PARTY

Mrs. Nina F. Elrod entertained the young folk's Sunday school class at her home on Halloween evening. Many spooks lurked in the shadows and furnished great fun in guessing who they were. A number of typical Halloween games were taken part in and also fortune telling which afforded much amusement.

Delightful spiced grape juice and spice cake was served to a large number. Those present were: Lillie Joslin, Lela Glasscock, Iris Hardin, Jewell Hancy, Reva Mae Williams, Inez Farrell, Irene Carles, Beth Mardis, Sadie Browder, Murtis Burkhead, Radie Boone, Aneta Waller, Hazle DeBord Norma Elrod, Nina Elrod, Wayne Wallis, Bill Hunsen, Walter Foust, D. L. Kendrick, Carl Pharies, Jimmie Cox, J. B. Gordon, Buford Butts, Mills Barfield, Coy Burkhead, Ralph DeBord, Fred Boone, Floyd Browder, Good Hardin, Bill Elrod, Roy Elrod Jr., Bill Garrett and Jerry Joslin.

Methodists To Pampa

Rev. W. B. Hicks, Pastor of the Methodist church here will leave Tuesday of next week for the conference at Pampa.

Bishop John M. Moore of Dallas will preside at the Northwestern conference of the Methodist Episcopal church South, which will convene in its twentieth session at the Methodist Church, November 13. Appointments of preachers for the ensuing year will be made.

The Rev. W. M. Murrell, presiding elder of the Clarendon district and the Rev. T. W. Brabham, pastor of the Methodist Church in Pampa, are clerical hosts to the body which will bring approximately 500 delegates and visitors.

The approaching session marks the close of a quadrennium and consequently the election of delegates to the next quadrennial general conference at Dallas, Texas, May 1930, is a matter of paramount importance. The Northwest Texas conference is entitled to ten seats in the general conference, five clerical and five delegates, who will have a voice and a vote in the enactment of legislation and election of bishops and officers of the church in the next sitting of Methodism's supreme organization.

Assignment of preachers for the ensuing church year claims the attention to Methodists of this section. Under Methodist law a preacher may be returned annually to the same place for a number of years with the exception of a presiding elder whose tenure of office is limited to four years.

SINGING AT YL

The Journal has been asked to announce that there will be a singing at YL next Sunday, November 10. New song books have been received and everyone is invited to attend and take part.

ARMISTICE DAY

As I Saw It. A Few Fond Memories Of the World War and Scenes Incident to the Close

(By an Ex-Service Man)

Each ex-service man has his own recollections of the days of 1917 and '18. Some are good, some are bad, while some are worse than bad. However, war is war and the fruits thereof are not always sweet. True, there are many days that were happy, in a way but it was necessary that some of these be mixed with the bad, otherwise the soldier would not have lasted long.

It is the usual thing at this time of the year for people to ask the ex-service man a series of questions, about as follows: "Were you glad when the Armistice was signed?" "Were you fighting at the time?" "Had plenty to eat, of course, we were only allowed so much sugar, and were eating cornbread instead of biscuits so that the boys in France might have plenty?"

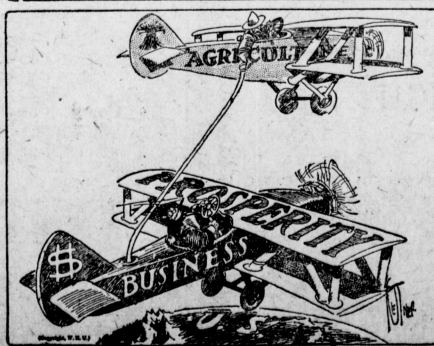

The answer to the last may be found somewhere in this list of recollections, which the Editor of The Journal has consented to publish:

"It doesn't seem so long ago, as I remember it now, that we started on our long trip to join the A. E. F. For several weeks we had expected to move, and everyone was anxious for the orders to travel. Preparations had already been made. And one morning we awoke to find that the great day had arrived. Long lines of Pullman cars were standing on the tracks near the camp and one regiment was already loading. It doesn't take long to move a division for everything works like a machine. Every hour through the day a troop train pulled out of the camp until the entire organization of something like 27,000 men were on the road.

Very few stops were made. Straight to New York--Camp Mills--new equipment--

MULESHOE HIGH SCHOOL DEFEATS SUDAN; DIMMIT PLAYS HIGH TOMORROW

CHURCH OF CHRIST ANNOUNCES SERIES OF MEETINGS

The Church of Christ congregation, now meeting at the Plainview school house north and west of Muleshoe, wishes to announce that we will begin a series of meetings the second Sunday in November (the 10th). Sunday morning and night services will be held at Plainview but on week nights services will be held at the High School Auditorium at Lazbuddie.

Brother Will M. Thompson from Roff, Okla., will conduct the services. Brother Thompson is a very able and accomplished man, now Chaplain of the House of Representatives of Oklahoma, and a man who can bring the Word of God in all its simplicity and truth.

Everyone is urged to attend these meetings and bring someone with them.

State to Aid Disabled

A little folder entitled "A Chance for Disabled Citizens," has been furnished The Journal by County Judge J. E. Adams. The folder is issued by the Division of Vocational Education of the State Department of Education of Texas, and explains the purposes, methods and means of disabled citizens obtaining an education under the provisions of the newly created Vocational Educational Department.

Application blanks for reporting any disabled man or woman in Bailey County may be obtained from the county judge or by calling at the Journal office.

The folder, in detail, sets forth the following information:

I. Its Purpose

It is the purpose of Vocational Rehabilitation to render physically handicapped persons fit to engage in occupations which will make them self-supporting, thereby creating happiness and contentment among those individuals and families affected, reducing the number of those seeking charity, lowering county and state expenses for public charges, and checking social agitation and distress through proper social and economic methods.

II. Methods of Work.

Vocational Rehabilitation consists of three phases--advisement, training, and placement. The disabled person is counseled in the selection of a desirable vocation; then given training for the occupation selected and agreed upon in a suitable manner that the trainee may later use the information gained to follow his chosen vocation; and upon the completion of his training every effort is made to place the rehabilitant in satisfactory employment. The placement in employment is followed up with careful, systematic regard for the ultimate success of the rehabilitation program.

III. Who Are Eligible

To be eligible for rehabilitation one must:

1. Have a physical defect or infirmity, whether constitutional or acquired by accident, injury or disease.
2. Be totally or partially incapacitated for remunerative occupation.
3. Reasonably be expected to be fit to engage in a remunerative occupation after completing a rehabilitation course.

4. Be sixteen years of age or over. There is no upper age limit so long as rehabilitation is feasible.

5. Have been a bona fide resident of the state of Texas at the time the disability was incurred, or have lived in the state at least one year prior to time of making application for aid. The disabled person may be male or female, and of any race.

IV. Not Eligible

1. Aged or helpless persons requiring permanent custodial care.
2. Epileptic or feeble-minded persons or any person who in the judgement of the state board of Vocational Education may not be susceptible of rehabilitation.

This work is for civilians and has no connection with the work being done by the Veterans' bureau for disabled ex-service men.

V. How You May Help

You can materially aid his great movement by reporting any disabled man or woman in your community. Action will be taken promptly upon receipt of your information.

Yellow Jackets Overcome Odds To Nose Out Sudan 33-0.

The Yellow Jackets Friday evening defeated Sudan 33-0. Bets were decidedly on the side of Sudan before the game, for only the week before she had played Amberst to a draw, and the Yellow Jackets had only recently suffered a defeat at the hands of Amberst.

But the popular opinion changed in the first few downs of the game. Muleshoe received. The first down showed that the Yellow Jackets were going to hold their own for the evening. The longer the game lasted the more decidedly did Muleshoe show that she was the superior team.

The players were not accompanied by the Pep Squad, but among themselves there was probably the best spirit of the season manifested. This accounts in a great measure for the success of the game. The whole team was at its high-point.

Damon Danner refused to be stopped by the Sudan line. Repeatedly he went through the line for substantial gains and soon he became a menace to the opposition.

Ralph DeBord again demonstrated his prowess as a snagger of passes. Seldou does a ball go past his hands, and he showed himself to be a good broken field runner.

Fred Moore and Curtis Danner showed that they were real football men. The lateral pass from Moore to Danner was responsible for a lot of the gains of the evening.

The line hit hard. Few were the times that the offense came through, and very few were the times that a gain was made.

The yellow jackets are anxious for Dimmit to come over Friday? They intend to avenge the defeat of a few weeks past--Reporter.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER XII.—With Doogan, Locasto is returning from a prospecting trip. His brutality has driven Doogan almost insane and while Locasto sleeps his companion stuns and binds him, takes all the provisions, and leaves him to die. Locasto frees himself, takes the trail and almost reaches his last gasp, reaches the cabin of "Salvation Jim." Aho and friends are visiting Jim. They revive Locasto but his left hand has to be amputated.

"Bernie, tell me, is it true? Is my mother dead?"

"Yes, it's true, dear. You must try to bear it bravely."

I could feel her holding over me, could feel her hand bending mine, could feel her hair brush my cheek, yet I forgot even her just then. I thought only of mother, of her devotion and of how little I had done to deserve it. So this was the end: a narrow grave, a rending grief and the haunting specter of reproach.

My sobs were choking me, and Bernie was holding my hand very tightly. Yet in a little I grew calmer.

"Bernie," I said, "I've only got you now, only you, little girl. So you must love me, you mustn't leave me."

"I'll never leave you—if you want me to stay."

"God bless you, dear. I can't tell you the comfort you are to me. I'll try to be quiet now."

I will always remember those days as I grew slowly well again. Bernie left me much alone, alone with my thoughts. Often when all was quiet I knew she was sitting there beyond the curtain, sitting thinking, just as I was thinking. Quiet was the keynote of our life, quiet and sunshine. That little cabin might have been a hundred miles from the gold-born city, it was so quiet. How sweet she looked in her spotless home attire, her neat waist, her white apron with bib and sleeves, her general air of a little housewife. And never was there so devoted a nurse.

It was sweet prolonging my convalescence, yet the time came when I could no longer let her wait upon me. What was going to happen to us? Was ever a stranger situation? She slept in the little kitchen, and between us there was but that curtain. The faintest draught stirred it. There I lay through the long night in that quiet cabin. I heard her breathing. Sometimes even I heard her murmur in her sleep. I knew she was there, within a few yards of me. I thought of her always. I loved her beyond all else on earth. I was gaining daily in health and strength, yet not for the wealth of the world would I have passed that little curtain. She was as safe there as if she were guarded with swords. And she knew it.

"I'll play the game fair," I said to myself. I must be very careful. Our position was full of danger. So I forced myself to be cold to her, and she looked both surprised and pained at the change in me. Her heart was innocent, and she could not understand my sudden coldness. The girl was winsome beyond words, and I knew I had but to say it and she would come to me. Yet I checked myself. I retreated behind a barrier of reserve. "Play the game," I said; "play the game."

So as I grew better and stronger she seemed to lose her cheerfulness. Always she had that anxious, wistful look. Once came a sound from the kitchen like stifled sobbing, and in the night I heard her cry. Then the time came when I was well enough to get up, to go away.

I dressed, looking like the cadaverous ghost I felt myself to be. She was there in the kitchen, sitting quietly, waiting.

"Bernie," I called.

She came, with a smile lighting up her face.

"I'm going."

The smile vanished, and left her with that high proud look, yet behind it was a lurking fear.

"Are you ready?" I went on.

"Ready?"

"Yes, you're going, too."

"Where?"

I took her suddenly in my arms.

"Why, you dear little angel, to get married, of course. Come on, Bernie, we'll find the nearest person. We won't lose any more precious time."

Then a great rush of tears came into her eyes. But still she hung back. She shook her head.

"Why, Bernie, what's the matter? Won't you come? Don't you love me?"

"Yes, I love you. It's because I love you I won't come."

"Won't you marry me?"

"No, no, I can't. You know what I said before. I haven't changed any. I'm still the same—dishonored girl. Everybody knows. No, I could never marry you, never take your name, never bind you to me. You must go away, or—stay."

"Stay?"

"Yes. You've been living alone with me for a month. I picked you up that night in the dance hall. I had you brought here. I nursed you. Do you think people don't give us credit for the worst? I am supposed to be your mistress. Everybody knows; nobody cares. There are so many living that way here."

"What shall I do?"

"Just stay. Oh, why can't we go on as we've been doing? What does the ceremony matter? We love each other. Isn't that the real marriage? It's more; it's an ideal. We'll both be free to go if we wish. There will be no bonds but those of love. Oh, stay, stay."

Her arms were round my neck. The gray eyes were full of pleading. The sweet lips had the odd, pathetic droop. I yielded to the empery of love.

"Well," I said, "we will go on awhile, on one condition—that by-and-by you marry me."

"Yes, I will, I will; I promise. If you don't tire of me; if you are sure beyond all doubt you will never regret it, then I will marry you with the greatest joy in the world."

So it came about that I stayed.

The year following, in which Bernie and I kept house, was not altogether a happy one. Somehow we had both just missed something. The thought of her terrible experience haunted her. I knew, and I, too, suffered.

I tried to make her forget, yet I could not succeed; and even in my most happy moments there was always a shadow of Locasto; there was always a fear, the fear of his return.

My partners and I were up to our necks in business these days. Our Gold Hill property had turned out well. Jim was busy installing his hydraulic plant on Ophir creek, and altogether we had enough to think about. I had set my heart on making a hundred thousand dollars, and as things were looking it seemed as if two more years would bring me to that mark.

"Then," said I to Bernie, "we'll go and travel all over the world, and do it in style."

"Will we, dear?" she answered tenderly. "But I don't want money much now, and I don't know that I care so much about travel either. What I would like would be to go to your home, settle down and live quietly."

She was greatly interested in my description of Geostegia. Particularly was she interested in my accounts of Garry, and rather scoffed at my enthusiastic description of him.

"Oh, that wonderful brother of yours! One would think he was a small god, to hear you talk. I declare I'm half afraid of him. Do you think he would like me?"

"He would love you, little girl; anyone would."

"Don't be foolish," she chided me. And then she drew my head down and kissed me.

"Oh, I'm so happy," she said with a sigh.

"Are you, dearest?" I caressed the soft floss of her hair.

"Aye, she was happy, and I will always bless the memory of those days, and thank God I was the means of bringing a little gladness into her marred life. She was happy, and yet we were living in what society would call sin. Conventionally we were not man and wife, and yet were man and wife more devoted, more self-respecting. Never were man and wife endowed with purer ideals, with a more exalted conception of the sanctity of love."

Two men were crawling over the winter-locked plain. One, the leader, was of great bulk and of a vast strength; while the other was small and wiry, of the breed that clings like a louse to life while better men perish.

The small man was breaking trail. Down almost to his knees in the soft snow, he sank at every step; yet ever he dragged a foot painfully upward, and made another forward plunge.

"Come on there, you darned little shrimp; get a move on you," growled the big man from within the frost-fringed hood of his parka.

The little man started as if galvanized into sudden life. His eyes thickly wadded with frost, glared out with the fear of a hunted beast.

"Curse him, curse him," he whimpered; but once more he lifted those leaden snowshoes and staggered on.

The big man lashed fiercely at the dogs, and as they screamed at his blows he laughed cruelly.

"Mush on there, you curs, or I'll cut you in two," he stomped, and the heavy whip fell on the yelling pack. They were pulling for all they were worth, their heads down, their shoulders squared. Their breath came panting, their tongues gleamed redly, their white teeth shone.

Wearily and worn were men and dogs as they struggled onward in the growing gloom, but because of the feeling in his heart the little man no longer was conscious of bodily pain. It was black murder that raged there.

At last they reached the forest fringe, and after a few harsh directions the big man had the little one making camp. The little man worked with a strange willingness. As he gathered the firewood and filled the Yukon stove, he hummed a merry air. He produced sourdough bread (which he fried in bacon fat), and some dried moose-meat.

To men of the trail this was a treat. They ate ravenously, but they did not speak.

The silence was broken by a whining and a scratching outside. It was the five dogs crying for their supper, crying for the frozen fish they had earned so well. They wondered why it was not forthcoming.

"Dog feed all gone?"

"Yep," said the small man.

"Hi—! I'll silence these brutes anyway."

He went to the door and laid onto them so that they slunk away into the shadows. But they did not bury themselves in the snow and sleep. They continued to prow round the tent, hunger-mad and desperate. Then rolling himself in a robe, the big man lay down and slept.

The little man did not sleep. He sat still turning over the matter and had come to him. Outside in the atrocious cold the whining malamutes crept nearer and nearer. In the agonies of hunger, they cried for fish, and there was none for them, only kicks and curses. They howled their woes to the weary men.

The little man crawled into his sleeping bag, but he did not close his eyes. He was watching.

About dawn he rose. An evil dawn it was, sallow, sinister and askew.

The little man selected the heavy-handled whip for the job. Carefully he felt its butt, then he struck. It was a shrewd blow and a neatly delivered, for the little man had been in the business before. It fell on the big man's head, and he crumpled up. Then the little man took some rawhide thongs and trussed up his victim.

He gathered up the rest of the provisions, made a pack of the food and lashed it on his back. Then, after a final look of gloating light, he went off and left the big man to his fate. At last the Worm had turned.

The dogs were closing in. Nearer and nearer they drew. They wondered why their master did not wake; they wondered why the little tent was no skill; why no plume of smoke rose from the slim stovepipe. All was oddly quiet and lifeless. Closer and closer they crept to the silent tent.

GOOD PROFITS IN POULTRY FOR SCURRY COUNTY MAN

SNYDER—Mr. F. I. Townsend, now a poultry man but just an average farmer in Scurry County, has proved, during the past twelve months, that poultry is a profitable sideline if the necessary information is acquired as to the care of the hens and if one applies himself assiduously to the business. An accurate record was kept by Mr. Townsend which shows that from October 1928 to October, 1929, two hundred and sixty leghorn hens produced $281.47 worth of eggs, and $188.70, was spent for feed, leaving a profit of $92.77 for the year.

The man opened his eyes. Within a foot of his face were the fangs of a mauler. His slight movement had drawn back with a snarl, and retreated to the door. Locasto could see the other dogs crouching and eyeing him fixedly. What could be the matter? What had gotten into the brute? Where was the Worm? Where were the provisions? Why was the tent flap open and the stove stone-cold? These with a dawning comprehension that he had been deserted, Locasto uttered a curse and tried to rise.

At first he thought he was stiff with cold, but a downward glance showed him his condition. He was helpless. He grew sick at the pit of his stomach and glare could not harm them. They were drawing in on him. Their gleaming teeth snapped in his face. Violently he shuddered. He must try to free himself, so that he could fight.

Geimely the Worm had done his work, but he had hardly reckoned on the strength of this man. With a vast throe of fear he tried to free himself. Tenser, tenser grew the things; they strained, they bit into his flesh, but they would not break. Yet as he relaxed it seemed to him they were less tight. He made another giant effort. Once again he felt the things strain and strain; then, when he ceased, he imagined they were still looser.

The dogs seemed to have lost all fear. They smelled the blood on his head, and a slaver ran from their jaws. Again he cursed them, but this time they did not move. They seemed to realize he could not harm them. Again he tried to get free. Now he fancied he could move his arm a little. He must hurry, for every instant the maulinates were growing bolder. Another strain and a wrench. His head was able to squeeze his right arm from under the rawhide. Quickly he wrenched out his other arm. He was just in time, for the dogs were upon him.

He struggled to his knees and shielded his head with his arms. Wildly he swung at the nearest dog. Pull on the face he struck it, and it shot back as if hit by a bullet. But the others were on him. Two of them were making for his face. As he lay on his back he gripped each by the throat. In his grip of steel they struggled to free themselves in vain. With his huge hands he was choking them, choking them to death, using them as a shield against the other three. Then slowly he worked himself into a sitting position. He buried one of the dogs in the tent door. He swung bludgeoning blows at the others. They fed yelping and howling.

Then he rose and freed himself from the remaining things. He was torn and cut and bleeding, but he had triumphed.

"Oh, the devil!" he growled, grinding his teeth. "He's taken everything, the scum! left me to starve. Ha! one thing he's forgotten—the matches. At least I can keep warm."

He picked up the canister of matches and rait the stove.

"I'll kill him for this," he muttered. "Night and day I'll follow him. I'll camp on his trail till I find him. Then—I'll torture him; I'll strip him and leave him naked in the snow."

He slipped into his snowshoes, gave a last look around to see that no food had been left, and with a final growl of fury he started in pursuit.

He had a thought of capturing the dogs and hitching them up; but, thoroughly terrified, they had retreated into the woods. To overtake this man, to glut his lust for revenge, he must depend on his own endurance, and strength.

So, with head bowed and shoulders sloping forward, Jack Locasto darted on the track of the Worm.

He came to where the fugitive had made a camp. There were the ashes of a fire.

"Curse him; he's got some matches after all," he said with bitter chagrin. Eagerly he searched all around in the snow to see if he could not find even a crumb of food. There was nothing.

He pushed on. Night fell and he was forced to make camp.

Oh, he was hungry! "If I only had a tin to boil water in," he muttered; "there's lots of reindeer moss, and I could stew some of my muckluks. Ah! I'll try and roast a bit of them."

He cut a strip from the Indian boots he was wearing, and held it over the fire. The hair singed away and the corners crisped and charred. He put it in his mouth. It was pleasantly warm, but even his strong teeth refused to meet in it. However, he tore it into smaller pieces, and boiled them.

At last the dawn came, that evil, sneaking, corpse-like dawn, and Locasto flung himself once more on the trail. He was not feeling so fit now. Hunger and loss of blood had weakened him so that his stride incessantly shortened, and his step had lost its spring. However, he plodded on doggedly, an incarnation of vengeance and hate.

Beyond a doubt he was growing weaker. Once or twice he stumbled, and the last time he lay a few moments before rising. He wanted to rest badly. Then night came and he built another giant fire.

Again he boiled down some roasted muckluck. He had to make tremendous efforts to keep from sleeping. Several times he drowned forward, and almost fell into the fire. At dawn the sky was leaden and the cold less despic. Stretching intermittently ahead was that lonely snowshoe trail. Locasto was puzzled.

"Where in creation is the little devil going to, anyway?" he said, knitting his brows. "I figured he'd make direct for Dawson, but he's either changed his mind or got a wrong steer. By Heavens, that's it—the little varmint's lost his way."

Locasto had an Indian's unerring sense of location.

"I guess I can't afford to follow him any more," he reflected. "I've gone too far already. I'm all pestered out. I'll have to let him go in the meantime. It's save yourself, Jack Locasto, while there's yet time. Me for Dawson."

"There was a strange stillness in the air, not the natural stillness of the Wild, but an unhealthy one, as of a suspension of something, of a suspension of bated breath. It was customarily full of terror. Every second the horizon grew blacker, more boddy, and Locasto stared at it, with a sudden quakes at his heart.

"B'harad!" he gasped. "I guess I'm done for. But I'll fight to the death."

"I Guess I'm Done For, but I'll Fight to the Finish. I'll Die Game."

"I'll die game." He lowered his head and butted desperately into the heart of the storm. He was faint from lack of food, but despair had given him a new strength, and he plunged through drift and flurry with the (To be Continued)

H. Sterling Declares Intention to Run For Sheriff in Approaching Campaign

As the political pot begins to boil, and it seems that it has begun to steam up just a little bit early all over the State, I wish to call the attention of the voters to a card of thanks which was published in The Muleshoe Journal on the date of August 3rd, 1923. This card was published immediately after the July Primaries, and is as follows:

"I take this opportunity to thank my many friends for the work and support they gave me in my campaign for Sheriff and Tax Collector of Bailey County. It is needless to say that such work on their part was appreciated by me. I hold no malice against those who did not see fit to support me, and in this connection I wish to say that I expect to make the race two years from now, and those who are not personally acquainted with me and who might have heard last-minute rumors, will have the next two years to investigate and watch the kind of life I am trying to live."

H. STERLING.

I wish to say to the people of Bailey County that this statement still holds good and that I will be in the race for Sheriff and Tax Collector in 1930 as announced by me on August 3rd, 1923. You still have plenty of time to investigate my record as a citizen and this is merely to remind the public of the statement I made in 1923.

H. STERLING.

Hoboken, and the smell of the docks—here Red Cross workers passed out the last feed which we would receive at home for some time. It was the last that many ever ate at home. On board the transports, Bunks assigned each man. Orders given by hard-boiled officers. The little tug boats swarmed around the big ship. She moves! People on the docks wave good-bye and good luck. Down the channel—and on to the open sea. Outside the port other ships, loaded with soldiers, are waiting. It is mid-afternoon now. The day is perfect. The convoy forms and we move on to the East with ever-increasing speed. Little sub chasers ahead a number of planes circle and dive. A huge sausage balloon, the sun glittering on her silver sides, may be seen high in the air on shore. Destroyers take up their positions on either side and to the rear of the convoy. These are the little greyhounds of the sea so greatly feared by the submarines. Presently a dark cloud is seen on the horizon. It is a battle cruiser. Graciously she swings into the lead of the convoy. Signals are flashed from her decks which are answered by the flagship. All is being made 'shipshape' as the sailors say. The big ship out in front and the smaller ships following reminds one of an old den with her brood of chicks.

Fair weather holds for two days, but many are seasick. This is the source of much fun for the sailors. I am thankful that it did not affect me. I did not eat the first two meals, although I was hungry. The third day out the sea is choppy and continues so for several days. The boys who are sea sick are better now—most of them. Nothing serious happens on the voyage, but we are glad to see land.

Brest, France, is where we land. Most of us had never been so far from home. We are too busy seeing sights to be homesick. Our ship is too large to dock so we are taken ashore on small boats. As soon as we land, the companies are formed and we march away. It is something like five miles to where we camp. The road is rather narrow and jammed with traffic—and up hills—the boys will remember. We get to the camp as it is called, little squares fenced off and ankle deep in mud. We had no large tents for our regiment so some pitched pup-tents. It was our first time to sleep in muddy France, but many worse nights were to come.

Only three days here. Then the little French boxcars—"cracker boxes" we called them. We are jammed in like sardines. The men are tired and quarrelsome. I am in charge of the car and the rations. Pretty soon a fight starts—then two. Everything is a. k. with me until they get on my rations, then I find myself mixed in the scrap. Two days of this kind of travel, then we unload at a little town far up in the interior.

I have been returned from the hospital after a spell of sickness in which the government almost has to pay insurance on me. The old outfit is gone but they always have a place for the casuals, as the men are called when coming from the hospital. There is a whole battalion of us and we are thrown into a training area where we get final instructions before going to the front. Two days of this. It rains every day—and all night. The weather is getting cold. We are getting a taste of real soldiering. A regiment has come in from the front—or what is left of it. Forty per cent of their men are gone. We take their places. Some one else will take ours on the next trip, maybe, but why worry? Two days after going to the regiment which has returned from the front, we load into trucks and travel all day and far into the night. We are hungry, wet and cold. We unload at a place by the side of the road where two or three houses have stood, but now are ruins. There is a large field close by and back a way is a rolling kitchen. We are given some hot coffee and salmon. Some of us notice that it is thundering continually, and remark that it must be going to come a storm. One of the members of the original outfit, who had been on the front several times, states emphatically that it is going to storm, but it will not rain water. It is the big guns we have been hearing.

It would take many pages to tell the whole story of this trip the American boys made to France—and a better writer. After all, it's Armistice Day, so one who has been there. Our regiment had been sent back for rest. Many of the men were being used in the training area to give new troops final instructions before going to the front. Armistice Day came to us at Economy, Belgium. Everybody danced. Everybody sang. There was a bountiful wine crop that year and much of it was disposed of that night—and for a dozen nights thereafter. As I write this I can see again those nights in the billets of France. Little bunches of soldiers around on packs or bunks, a tall candle stuck on top of a faithful helmet, and the talk is of home and how many meals we are going to crowd in when we get home. Remember the nights when we stole turnips which we ate to fill out a meal? The carrot soup with a small piece of bread. One spoonful of sugar a day, and finally every two or three days. Everyone thought he was going home first, but this time we were not idle. Drill was our turn came exactly seven months after the armistice was signed. During carried on, roads repaired and camps built.

Then there were the big arguments about "who won the war?" and "when do we eat?". To my knowledge those questions have not been settled to everybody's satisfaction yet, but we argued them hour after hour in those days, especially in the evenings.

Joint federal and state funds are available for defraying instructional expenses. These expenses include tuition, which may include books, laboratory fees, and any necessary individual equipment not furnished by the institution or shop giving training.

Not a Charity
In no sense of the word is Vocational Rehabilitation a charity. It is as definite a part of the plan of public education as are our grammar schools, colleges and universities. For the highest development, state and nation have recognized the necessity of offering special training to incapacitated workers in order that they may fulfill their duties of citizenship, just as they have observed the need of educating every child so that he may fulfill his obligation as a citizen. For further information, write J. J. Brown, Supervisor of Vocational Rehabilitation, Capitol Station, Austin, Texas.

Lazbuddie News

Quite a few are absent from school because of the harvest, although most of the High School students are attending regularly.

The basket ball teams are getting some much needed practice each day and are showing much improvement. The boys recently defeated the outside team 16-14.

General science laboratory equipment has been ordered for the school to meet the requirements of the State Department and we expect to have a well equipped laboratory soon.

About $500.00 worth of library books have been ordered for the school to supplement what we already have. We want the children here to have advantage of a first-class library, equal to that of any school of this size.

The singing school which has been going on for the past ten nights closed last Friday night. We think the pupils were helped very much.

The perfect spellers for the 2nd grade last week were Okel Bradshaw, Clyde Merriott, Anna Crabtree, Loyde Crane, Ralph Winner, Joe Wilson, and Lavern Prytz.

The third grade perfect spellers are: Ruby Jarman and Rayburn Haskins.

The fourth grade perfect spellers are: Bonnie Bradshaw, Alma Steinbock, Theron Vaughn, Anna Jarmon Lucille Crane, Helen Jennings, Joe Bess Jennings, May Hodge, Gene Childers, Edith Barber, and Verna Jennings.

Fifth grade perfect spellers: Maggie Peacock, Nerine Jennings, Melvin Williams, John McKinney, and Christine Gammon.

Sixth grade perfect spellers: Eva June Briscoe, Florene Barber, Frances Steinback, Vergie Hodge, Pauline Talen, Bety Bellar and Oleta Colbath.

The seventh grade perfect spellers are: Bonnie Griffith, Geraldine Haskins, and Louise Colbath.

Fourth grade good writers: Helen Jennings, Jack Julian, Betty Bledsoe, Theron Vaughn, Anna Jarmon, Lucille Crane, Alma Steinback, Joe Bates and Lavern Prytz.

Muleshoe Building

A partial list of new building and farm improvements for Muleshoe and territory this week are as follows:
E. R. Hart Lumber Company—Ray Griffiths, residence; C. L. Holeman, complete set of farm improvements; Frank Decker, residence.

Panhandle Lumber Company—J. H. McCarty, residence; J. J. Cox, residence and general improvement; Roy Quisenberry, general improvements; H. M. Gable, residence and general improvements; J. W. H. Mitchell, granary; W. S. Lee, residence.

Jennings, Earle V. Crane and Gene Childers.
Fifth grade good writers: Nerine Jennings, Melvin Trieder, Richard Carter, Walter Dyke, Pauline Jarmon and Resford Winner.

The young girls' missionary society had a Halloween party. They measured the boys' waists and had them pay a penny for each inch they were around the waist. They all reported a good time.

Brother Loyde L. Jones filled his appointment Sunday. A small crowd was here on account of cold weather.

John Gammon and Laurence Eaves who have been attending school at Lubbock visited friends and relatives here this week.

Mr. Frank Post and Mrs. Hervey from Marlow, Okla., visited their friends in this community.

A modern teacherage has just been completed and Supt. Haskins and family have just moved into it. The house is modern in every way, being equipped with lights, water and bath.

Rev. Jones and his wife spent Sunday at the home of Supt. and Mrs. E. R. Haskins.

The singing school which just closed and was taught by C. O. McCreight was not much of a success from the standpoint of attendance, due to the very busy time of the harvest.

Spring Lake School

Several of the pupils are absent now on account of the harvest. We hope they will soon be back with us again.

The high school students and teachers are rehearsing a play, "Headstrong John," to be given November 22. The proceeds are to be used to pay on the entire Plains country.

A new school bus has been ordered to take the place of the old one that Clyde Goodwin is now driving. This will make a total of seven large busses for us and one of the best fleets in the entire Plains country.

The new delco water pump has been installed and is now furnishing an abundance of water. The plant will not be here for several days yet.

The high school is sponsoring a carnival for Saturday night, November 16. Don't forget the date and come and help raise some money to help defray needed expenses.

The pupils in Miss Shaffer's room rendered the chapel program this morning and it was enjoyed by everyone.

Next week Mrs. McClamahan's pupils will have charge of the program. The parents of the Community are invited to attend these programs.

The football game between Olton and Spring Lake last Friday was an interesting contest. The Olton Mustangs made 7 points the first quarter but failed to score after that. The Wolverines made a touchdown but did not make the extra point. The game ended 6-7 in favor of the Mustangs. Abe Martin made the touchdown for the Wolverines but was backed by every member of his team. It was a good game and both teams are to be commended for their splendid work and sportsmanship. It will be remembered that the Mustangs beat the Wolverines in the season 35-0; thus you may judge the improvement the Wolverines have made.

The Trades Day at Earth last Saturday was a howling success. There were nearly five hundred people who registered during the day for the prizes offered by the Earth business men. These men plan to make Trades Day a monthly affair.—Reporter.

GOOD YEAR

THE GREATEST NAME IN RUBBER

Tread and carcass : these are the two main parts of a tire. There is greater traction in the Goodyear All - Weather Tread. There is greater vitality in the Goodyear Supertwist carcass. Evidence? Any Goodyear Dealer will Demonstrate. Proof? "More people ride on Goodyear Tires than any other kind!"

PREFERRED TWO TO ONE

EVERY year, through independent sources of information, we interview thousands of users of tires.

Every year the reports which flood back to us clearly show an outstanding preference for Goodyear tires.

The latest inquiry of this kind, conducted nation-wide, reveals a preference for Goodyears over any other tire exceeding two to one!

It verifies the impressive fact that one tire-buyer out of every three in America would rather have Goodyear Tires than any other kind!

This is a tremendous tribute to the superior quality and serviceability of Goodyear Tires. It is founded on the fact that there are definite reasons why Goodyear Tires are superior in both tread and carcass—the two main parts of a tire.

These reasons can be demonstrated and proved:

1 Press your hand down on the Goodyear All-Weather Tread. Feel the grip of the deep-cut sharp-edged blocks, placed in the center of the tread where they belong. That shows why the Goodyear Tread imprints its safe and slipless pattern on the road, and why it has superior traction.

2 Ask any Goodyear Dealer to show you on his cord-testing machine the greater stretch—up to 60 per cent—in Goodyear Supertwist Cord over standard cord.

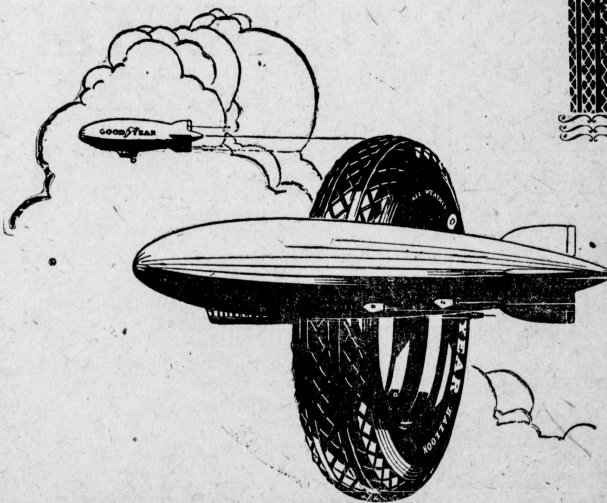

This extra stretch gives the Goodyear Supertwist Carcass its unmatched vitality, enabling it to withstand road-shocks and continuous flexing without premature failure. Can you afford to deny yourself the advantages in Goodyear Tires, especially in view of the fact that Goodyears cost no more?

The proof of their excellence, as of their unchallenged leadership, is that Mr. Sam Layman is building an additional two rooms on his house. Earl and Oliver returned Friday evening for a visit with homelike. Mr. and Mrs. Bragg attended the football game at Canyon City Saturday. Mrs. Vance Hennington and Carl spent the week visiting relatives in Lasbuddie community. Rev. James filled his appointments at this place Sunday afternoon. At the close of service a church conference was held and preparations for the work were made and discussed for the ensuing year.

The Lydeck Roofing Company of Lubbock came up Thursday and finished up the roofing on the new school house. This finished the enclosure of the building.

The rainy weather throughout the week has delayed the harvest work considerably, there still being quite a large acreage to combine.

The Halloween party given by Class No. 2 of the Bigsquare Sunday school at the home of Muri Stiles was well attended. There was a large number present and a good time was reported by all.

TEXAS LEADS NATION IN 1929 CROP VALUE

Texas in 1929 will again produce crops and livestock from its 465,646 farms having a value in excess of one billion dollars easily topping all states, figures made public by the department of agriculture today disclosed.

Iowa again will rank second among the states, Illinois third and California perhaps fourth. Cotton from all sections of the state, citrus from the Rio Grande Valley, wheat from the Panhandle principally and seventy-eight other principal crops, poultry and dairy products combined to give Texas its great lead.

Great as was the value of the products of the farm in Texas during the year, the value of its manufacturing plants was greater. The value of the products of the 4,053 manufacturing plants in Texas in 1927, the last year which complete figures are available, was $1,206,579,962. That this amount will be exceeded by Texas factories this year is certain.

A comparison of the figures by the department of agriculture and the department of commerce while showing that products of Texas factories have a value greater than the products of Texas farms, nevertheless more than four times the number of persons are supported by farms than by factories. The average number of factory wage earners employed the year around in Texas is 120,000 while if each Texas farm employed only one person the year around, 465,646 persons would be employed.

Complete figures on the value of Texas farm products will not be available for several months. It is expected to be approximately the last year's value, which was $1,071,288,000.

Mail Order Command

1. You shall sell your farm products for cash, where you can, but not to us, for we can buy nothing from you.

2. You shall believe us, and buy all you can from us, for we want your best, because we do not know you personally.

3. You shall send your money to us in advance so that we can buy the goods from the factory with your money; you may have to wait a few weeks, but that is our business method.

4. You shall get help from your nearest city or village to build good roads, so that you may easily haul goods from the depot, but do not ask help from us—we don't help to build good roads.

5. You shall buy church bells and altar utensils from us, and send the money in advance—that is our rule.

6. You shall get all the help you can for your church from the business men in your nearest village or city, for, although we have more profits from you than they, it is against our rules to give to churches.

7. You shall convert your neighbors also to your faith in us, so that they will buy from us, we have room for more money.

8. You shall look at the pretty pictures in our catalogue as often as you can, so as to strengthen your desire for things you do not need, but which you may order with other goods to save freight. Send us all your ready cash, left to buy necessities from your home dealer.

9. You shall believe us rather than your home business men, for we want your trade. We get to be millionaires on your support. Don't be bluffed.

10. You shall call on the business people of your own vicinity for help and credit, if you meet with hard luck, trouble or sickness. It's your money we want; we don't know you unless your orders are accompanied by cash.—Center, North Dakota, Republican.

Motorists who would enjoy carefree winter driving are switching to Phillips 66. Their cars start "right now"—warm up fast—pick up quickly. These motorists get, too, an instant flow of able-bodied power and mileage that's gratifying—all at no extra cost. CONTROLLED VOLATILITY

WHEN THE THERMOMETER GOES DOWN THE VOLATILITY GOES UP. Gasoline must vaporize before it can be fired in the cylinders of your motor. Volatility refers to the ability of gasoline to vaporize. With volatility controlled, Phillips 66 vaporizes as quickly in cold as in warm weather.
