Aiming for pro, Kip Nemir hits the mark

By Mary Kaigler

In his first year after turning pro, expert archer Kip Nemir of Haskell says he expects to take about three years to be in really serious contention. But in just a couple of national shoots he has finished in the top twenty, qualifying himself to go to the world competition in Knoxville, Tennessee, July 30. From there he will fly up to Climbler, New York, to shoot in the National Bowhunters Association world competition along with archers from all over the globe.

Nemir began his involvement with archery only four and a half years ago when he got his first bow at a pawn shop. Not thinking he'd ever learn to like it, he soon learned to "just love it." Two months later he owned the best bow you can get. Soon, he was shooting as a master archer.

With twenty or thirty 3-D animal targets set up in the back end of Nemir's Medical, Inc. and Antique Store, he works on his skill every day. Having the time and the habit of practicing as many as three to five hours each day, and having considerable natural ability for it, has found its mark for him.

Recently, he won the State Championship at a shoot in Dallas, Ft. Worth. A member of the Abilene Bowhunters Association, one of the strongest groups in the state, he competes in the American Bowhunters Association, the International Bowhunters Organization and the NABH Cabela's. The Sportman's Quest Cabela's Circuit Competition in Abilene earlier this year was the second largest that organization has had. It is scheduled to be held in Abilene again next April.

Since turning pro, Nemir has competed in Abilene, Tulsa, Oklahoma, Augusta, Georgia, Dixon, Illinois, and last week he competed in Warren, Pennsylvania. This next year he plans to about double his participation.

Spurning the idea of being sponsored, he says he values his freedom to compete or not compete. Saying that sponsors may sometimes cause undue stress by expecting one to be at all the shoots, he added, "It takes the fun out of it. I like to fish, and if I hear the fish are biting real good, I may go fishing."

Nemir enjoys seeing the different parts of the country. One morning last week at the shoot in a beautiful wooded area of Pennsylvania, something seemed to be wrong with the 3-D animal targets set up for the competition. During the night, some real bears had got in

Electric cooperatives merge

Effective July 1, the B-K Cooperative, Inc., of Seymour was officially merged with Tri-County Electric Cooperative, Inc.

At B-K's last Board of Directors meeting, June 26, Craig Knight, Executive Vice President and General Manager of Tri-County was present for a presentation made by Don Gregg, General Manager of B-K, to each officer and director for their dedicated years of service to the cooperative.

Current directors and their years of service are: Eddie Adkins, board president, 28 years; Marvin Zeissel vice president, 22 years; Greg Hertel secretary-treasurer, 5 years; Edward Smith, director, 22 years; James Albus, director, 12 years; Louis Baty, director, 8 years; Larry Burnett, director, 2 years; and Bobby Burnett, Cooperative attorney, 2 years.

A cost of service study indicates that the merger will significantly reduce the rate increase that would otherwise be necessary for the B-K system. Not adversely affecting the health or safety of any of the cooperative's customers or employees, the merger is in the public interest.

B-K Electric Cooperative, Inc. will retain its name and become a District of Tri-County Electric Cooperative, Inc. All employees will be retained.

Craig Knight said of the merger, "We are proud to be joining with B-K. They have a very good group of employees who are conscientious and hard working. They have the same philosophy as we have with good management. Their Board of Directors took the initiative to make a decision that was unselfish and in the best interest of their members."

B-K's telephone number is (940) 888-3441. Long distance customers may call (800) 945-3077.

Nemir

continued from Page 1 called in to scare and run the bears out of that part of the forest, so the competition could begin.

Currently Nemir competes with a Precision Shooting Equipment bow, and hopes to get on the staff of a pro team, now that they are being put together again. After a couple of professional tournaments, he saw that he could play their game. "Getting into the pro level is a whole different ball game," he said. "They (the pros) are in it for fun, but when you're talking about six or eight thousand dollars a shot, there's a little more pressure involved. Some of them do it for a living, so they are intent on winning."

Aside from competition in the sport, his main interest in it is getting a group started in Haskell. With fourteen or fifteen bowhunters already in Haskell County, and more in surrounding areas, he hopes to organize them for monthly shoots here. Several parcels of land have been offered for it. Admittedly, it will involve a lot of detailed organizational work, but Nemir sees it as a plus for Haskell in bringing in as many as 100 people to the shoots. "They may not all spend the night, but they will have to eat and buy gas before they leave town to go home," he said.

"Archery is a good sport, a good family sport," he said. "It's something they can get outside for with even for a few minutes. I'd like to see more young people get involved with it."

Although he has never given formal lessons in the sport, Nemir says he is always glad to take time to talk with those who buy a bow and come by for his help. And that may well be one of the qualifications for being called a real pro in anything. Kip Nemir seems to be on target with it.

Adan Sanchez

ADAN SANCHEZ

Irene Oliver-Lewis remembers Albuquerque's Adan Sanchez as an actor, director and playwright whose life was brimming with energy.

"He brought a great energy to his acting and to the questioning of what plays should be done, what is the voice of what we should be producing as minority artists," said Oliver-Lewis, who acted with Sanchez in La Compania de Teatro de Albuquerque productions in the 1980s.

"He brought a lot of freshness and challenged a lot of people," added Oliver-Lewis, who now lives in Las Cruces.

Sanchez died Wed., June 24 at Presbyterian Hospital. His age was not made public.

Sanchez's wife, Sylvia, said that was "his little secret. He once told me that he was like a shooting star, that he was going to live life fast and bright and to the fullest. That's what he did."

Sanchez was active in New Mexico theater for many years. Besides his work with La Compania, he also was in productions with the New Mexico Repertory Theater and helped to organize Lost Tribe Productions in Albuquerque about seven years ago.

Sanchez is perhaps best known for his one-man performance in the play "Sacred Journey." Sanchez premiered it in Albuquerque, and after making script changes, took it on the road. He performed it on tours of the United States and Europe.

In 1996 he wrote and directed the children's Christmas play "Magica." Sanchez also appeared in the play

"Black Elk Speaks" in New Mexico, at the Mark Taper Theater in Los Angeles and at the Eugene O'Neill Theater in New York.

Sanchez had a role in episodes of the PBS children's show "Wishbone," and in the San Francisco Mime Troupe production "13 Days/13 Dias," the story of the Zapatista uprising in Chiapas, Mexico, which was staged at the South Broadway Cultural Center.

At the time of his death, he was directing a staged reading of a play in Spanish at the South Broadway Cultural Center. It was to have been presented Tuesday.

"Adan was such a dedicated individual. He had stacks of work piled up he was planning to do," said Albuquerque actor Angie Torres, who worked with him.

"He gave more than he received." Sanchez was a graduate of Haskell High School.

Besides his widow, Sanchez is survived by his parents, Jesse and Lola Sanchez, brothers Michael Ray and Jesse James and sisters Gloria and Lynn.

Allen Clayton

Greater Independent Baptist Church. Survivors include his wife, I. V. Clayton of Haskell; three sons, Wayne Clayton and Danny Clayton, both of Dallas, and Edward Clayton of Lewisville; one brother, Herbert Clayton of Waco; thirteen grandchildren and numerous great grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be John E. Billington, Loyd Bennett, L. C. Johnson, Jr., Johnny Johnson, Curtis Kilgore and Chris Kilgore.

Legal Matters

By Attorney General Dan Morales

Many consumers use caller ID to screen their telephone calls. This technology, available since the 1980s, displays the caller's phone number before the person called even picks up the phone.

Enhancements added in the 1990s also show the name and address of the caller. Other technological advances allow customers to block out unwanted calls or track down harassing callers.

As Attorney General, I applaud new communications services that can help protect the security and privacy of telephone customers. But these new services can also hinder the efforts of law enforcement to investigate crime.

Caller ID, scrambled data and cellular telephones all pose a threat to legal electronic stakeouts. It is important that we pursue measures that will preserve the effectiveness of legal wiretaps while still allowing citizens to protect their privacy through caller ID.

Why does it matter?
A 1994 FBI survey showed 183 instances in which new communications technology defeated court-ordered telephone interceptions needed to investigate criminal activity.

Why does it matter? Because court-ordered electronic surveillance is such an important tool for law enforcement. Prosecutors report a high ratio of convictions with evidence gathered by electronic surveillance. Twenty percent of the persons arrested in 1996 based on electronic surveillance activity were convicted.

Law enforcement has been able to prevent serious and life-threatening criminal acts through electronic surveillance. Terrorists in New York plotted to bomb the United Nations, Lincoln and Holland tunnels and the Federal Plaza.

The FBI, using electronic surveillance, disrupted the plot as the explosives were being mixed. The electronic evidence also convicted the conspirators and put them behind bars.

Wire taps in Texas
In Texas telephone intercepts have helped law enforcement find and arrest a Mexican drug lord who allegedly moved millions of dollars in drug money into Texas through banks and currency exchange houses. Wiretap and other electronic evidence gathered in this state has also led to the seizure of cocaine shipments and the arrests of drug traffickers in several U. S.

cities, including Houston and Midland.

Telephone and telecommunications systems have changed forever. Lug nuts and copper wires have given way to computer software switches. Executing court-ordered surveillance to gather evidence is a lot more complicated than it used to be.

In 1994, Congress passed the Communications Assistance for Law Enforcement Act to put law enforcement on a level playing field with criminals. The Act requires telephone carriers to modify equipment, facilities and services to support lawful electronic surveillance.

The government is authorized to pay phone companies up to $500 million to develop new computer codes and switches.

At an impasse
U. S. Attorney General Janet Reno recently advised Congress of an impasse between government and telephone companies over funding that will delay installation of technology to enable the FBI and other law enforcement agencies to wiretap into new digital phone lines.

The U. S. Justice Department plans to file a petition with the Federal Communications Commission stating the proposed industry technical solution is deficient and asking this regulatory agency to require phone companies to meet law enforcement needs. However, even if the FCC fully supports this request, Attorney General Reno estimates that there will be a two-year lag before police agencies' electronic investigatory capabilities are restored.

This situation presents a crisis for law enforcement that I am monitoring very closely. The new telephone technologies are a convenience for all of us. The development of new communications services is important. However, in many cases, there simply is no substitute for electronic surveillance for gathering evidence, preventing crimes, solving crimes and bringing the violent to justice. As criminals take advantage of emerging communications technology, law enforcement needs the tools to keep pace.

Green Thumb

By Gladys O'Neal

July has been with June also, a terribly hot month. Our flowers have really had a hard time.

It is now time to cut hollyhocks off at the ground level, fertilize and water.

If you have verbenas, keep them clipped.

Now, that many annuals have finished blooming, clear the beds, fertilize and spade and let them mellow for fall planting.

Cut your perennials back; some will bloom again.

I have cut all of my irises back close to the ground and cleaned around each plant so insects will not nest in the fallen leaves. I will fertilize and water them well.

This is a good time to start cuttings. Use a slip about 4 inches long. Remove all the leaves except at the tops. Plant in sand and keep moist.

I have a beautiful twelve year old Wisteria vine and it has never bloomed. I have some pointers if you are interested as I about the vine blooming. First, it may not be getting enough sun. The vine blooms best in full sun. Second, the plant may be an unnamed seedling, rather than a grafted selection. Third, we may be overfertilizing it. Never fertilize a Wisteria.

Throughout the summer, prune the tips out of all new shoots when they reach a foot long. In winter shorten these shoots again so that approximately six buds remain on each one. Cut away any suckers from below the graft union, as they will produce inferior flowers.

I know I have taken a lot of space for these tips, but maybe our vine will bloom.

Early July is a good time to set out some new tomatoes for fall harvest. Provide some protection from the sun by partially shading the young transplants for the first few weeks.

It is a real challenge to get the young tomato plants through the first month, but the possibility of home-grown tomatoes in Oct. and Nov. makes it worth the effort.

Light pruning in mid-Aug. will help your roses. Prune with a lighter touch than you did in Feb. or March.

Remove about one third of the bush, but let the natural form of the bush still be apparent when pruning is completed. Start with dead or weak wood. Old roses will put on a great fall display, if lightly pruned, fertilized and watered in late summer.

Chrysanthemums, autumn asters and Mexican marigolds should be pruned back until about Sept. 1 and that will prevent the need of staking as flowers bud and form.

Now for a few tips. Cut your grass every 6 to 7 days after 7 p.m. which is best for you and everyone.

Before you sow any grass seed, soak the seed 48 hours in the refrigerator in this tonic: 1/4 cup of baby shampoo and 1 T. of Epsom salt. Dissolve in a gallon of weak tea water.

Save your old nylon stockings. They work great as strong tethers for staking tender young trees without chafing the bark.

If your trees are yellowing, it may mean an iron deficiency. Put a rusty nail in the soil close to the tree.

I've enjoyed telling you these things. Happy gardening to all of you.

Back pain can be prevented

Exercise and body positioning are the keys to preventing back pain, according to Dr. Martin Grabois, chairman of the department of physical medicine and rehabilitation at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

"Strained back muscles can result from improperly lifting a heavy object or sitting in an awkward position for long periods of time," he said.

Grabois suggests doing sit-ups, leg lifts, and a sit-and-reach exercise. This involves sitting with the legs spread apart, extending the hands toward the feet as far as possible and slowly returning to an upright position.

These exercises, done three to four times a week, will target the muscles that support the back and help prevent back injuries.

Fight obesity with increase in activities

by Lou Gilly
Haskell Co. Extension Agent
We just keep getting fatter. Ten years ago, 25 percent of Americans were overweight. Today that figure is 34 percent. More alarming are the figures that 48 and 49 percent of black and Hispanic women are obese.

Texas A&M health and kinesiology professor Dr. Jack Wilmore believes it's due in large part to changes in diet and lifestyle. He says even the slightest change in activity level can add up. For example, it has been calculated that just switching from manual typewriters to electric typewriters saves secretaries cuts energy expenditure by about 200 to 300 calories a day.

In a speech delivered at the Texas Human Nutrition Conference at A&M, Wilmore also noted that many schools no longer require P.E. and some kids don't get exercise outside of school either; they're either inside watching TV, playing video games or working on a computer. And in inner cities, it may not be safe for children to go outside.

Wilmore says we're going to have to be creative in finding ways to keep out children active. He says it helps if you look at it as play time instead of exercise.

Generic drug rule hits consumers' pocketbooks

By Bernard L. Weinstein

Headlines in daily newspapers and television newscasts proclaim higher medical costs for consumers, as we cope with managed care, bureaucratic red tape and lack of insurance for millions of Texans. Even more bad news for our pocketbooks may be in store.

The big drug companies have come calling on the Texas Board of Pharmacy and this doesn't bode well for those of us using prescription medicines. Whether taking a blood thinner as prescribed by a cardiologist, a hormone as prescribed by a gynecologist, or a number of other important prescription medicines, your costs may soon go up.

In addition, medicines provided to Medicare and Medicaid recipients may also become more expensive, a bill that all of us as taxpayers will be forced to cover.

Why are these costs going up? Quite simply: greed. The big drug companies have held the exclusive right to produce certain drugs, allowing them monopoly profits on necessary medicines that we depend on for continued good health. When patents expire on these drugs, generic equivalents are developed and put through a rigorous testing process prior to approval by the FDA. Generic competition usually results in lower prices to consumers.

But the big national drug companies are more interested in preserving their monopoly domination of the prescription market than in saving money for consumers. That's why they're seeking action by the Texas Board of Pharmacy that would make it difficult to substitute FDA-approved generic equivalents for many of the medicines relied upon by Texans every day.

A proposal before the Board would require pharmacists to make repeated calls to prescribing physicians when patients request certain generically equivalent drugs, even if the original prescription allows for generic substitution. The big drug companies believe that if they make it difficult for consumers to obtain generics, we'll opt to buy the more expensive name brand drugs.

If adopted, the rule will have financial impacts on pharmacists, physicians, consumers and the State. Take a look at one drug, warfarin sodium, which is a commonly prescribed blood thinner for patients at risk for heart attack. Warfarin sodium was originally patented a half century ago and was introduced under the brand name Coumadin. The patent expired in 1962 and a generic equivalent was approved by the FDA three years ago. Coumadin is prescribed to about 2.5 million heart patients; and grosses about $500 million for its manufacturer each year.

According to USA Today, a dollar's worth of the drug costs them less than 10 cents to make, yet the price to heart patients for this brand name drug has quadrupled in the past ten years. This is just one of many drugs that will be affected by the proposed rule and, not surprisingly, Coumadin's manufacturer is leading the charge to restrict generic substitution.

If enacted, the new rule will cost Texas patients, small-town pharmacists and taxpayers from $10 to $20 million in additional medical costs each year. It will particularly be burdensome for the 4.5 million Texas residents without health insurance who must pay for prescription drugs out-of-pocket.

Let's rely upon the FDA and not the Pharmacy Board, to test and approve medicine that is safe, effective and generically equivalent to the branded product. By doing so, the only difference consumers will notice is a lower cost for prescription drugs.

Dr. Weinstein is director of the Center for Economic Development and Research and a professor of applied economics at the University of North Texas.

Texas lawmakers learned at a public hearing last week that state agencies have been awarding contracts to out-of-state woman-and minority-owned businesses.

Some lawmakers—members of a committee examining state affirmative action programs in education, employment and contracting—expressed surprise.

"We decided if we were going to have a program, Texas companies would be the beneficiaries," said Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco.

Sibley and others had tried to soften anti-affirmative action decisions by federal courts and the state attorney general.

A year ago, they directed state agencies to limit contracting programs that assist women-and-minority-owned businesses to Texas companies.

Authority to contract was enabled through a budget rider for the "historically under-utilized business program" attached to the 1998-99 budget bill.

The practice of attaching riders to budget bills is a controversial way to pass legislation that may not be able to muster enough votes in the House and Senate.

SBOE Member Scolds Moses

A stinging letter from one of the 15 members of the State Board of Education accused Education Commissioner Mike Moses of dodging issues and skipping an important meeting scheduled for this week.

The Associated Press obtained a copy of a June 18 letter written by socially conservative board member David Bradley of Beaumont and addressed to Moses.

"For the upcoming meeting," wrote Bradley, "I guess you've decided just to skip town altogether."

Moses was to be in Portland, Ore., for the Education Commission of the States' national conference on the same date as the SBOE meeting.

In his letter, Bradley also blasted Moses over the recent rewrite of the state's school curriculum, a school-to-work initiative, investments in the Texas Permanent University Fund and the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills, a test all students must pass to graduate.

In a written reply to Bradley, Moses said, "I do regret your harsh and demeaning tone. It is obvious you wish to portray me as a villain in what clearly needs to be a working partnership. For my part, I will continue to respect your role as an elected official."

Board Chairman Jack Christie of Houston and four other board members contacted the Associated Press to defend Moses and support his decision to attend the national conference.

But Robert Offutt of San Antonio, one of a five-member conservative bloc on the board, said Bradley's statements, "while emotionally charged, are basically accurate."

Drivers take notice: if you're caught cruising along in the left-hand lane, you can be fined $200.

A 1997 Texas law—similar to a Georgia law—makes it a misdemeanor to drive in the left-hand lane on any major thoroughfare in Texas for longer than it takes to pass a slower car and return to the right, the Austin American-Statesman reported last week.

"Left lane for passing only" signs are popping up around the state, as the new law is being phased in.

"It's not going to be like the fastest cars get to ride in (the left lane)," said John Hurt, spokesman for the Texas Department of Transportation. "Nobody's going to get to ride in it."

Anti-Tobacco Billboard Goes Up

Hundreds of billboards across Texas have been removed to meet a July 3 deadline set in Texas' settlement with cigarette makers.

To mark the reduction of tobacco marketing aimed at children, the Texas Department of Health unveiled in Austin the first anti-tobacco billboard in its "Tobacco Is a Dead End" campaign to reduce tobacco use by youth.

The billboard, donated by Outdoor Network, has the state Capitol as a backdrop. It is in the neighborhood of Travis High School students who helped shape the message of TDH's anti-tobacco campaign.

Other Capital Highlights

The Federal Election Commission has fined the campaign of Republican Steve Stockman $40,000 for violating disclosure laws in his 1994 congressional race. The FEC said Stockman and his campaign failed to report contributions and expenditures. In the election, Stockman defeated longtime Democratic U. S. Rep. Jack Brooks of Beaumont.

The Texas Sunset Advisory Commission last week approved proposals to better manage prison industries and lower the state's recidivism rate. The 10-member commission, which reviews state agencies, forwarded its proposals for consideration in the 1999 state Legislature.

Three-fourths of Texans answering the latest Texas Poll said it is important for public schools to provide bilingual education. In the June 1-11 telephone survey, 24 percent of the respondents said only English should be taught in Texas classrooms.

From The Inside Out

By Mary Kaigler

Haskell's own 'six flags over Rice Springs' at the fountain in the park, and the dozens of others lining the streets were a stirring, beautiful sight on the Fourth of July; a symbol of our national unity and freedoms.

Certain objects in all of our individual lives become symbols to us of important ideas, thoughts or memories. The power of symbols is strong. We treasure what they represent to us.

One symbol most Americans have always held dear in common is our flag. Children learn its meaning and all that it embodies early on in their life.

While living in Lubbock in the late '40s, passing by the Veterans Administration building each day, we always pointed out the flag to our baby daughter. "There's Old Glory, waving in the breeze," we'd tell her. Our two-year-old soon began to learn the phrase. "There's Old Breeze", she'd invariably say. The name stuck, and became one of our family phrases. We still speak of Old Breeze when we see the flag or put ours out on special days. For us the name itself is a symbol of a sweet memory of a little child first learning about her American heritage.

An editorial in the July issue of Smithsonian Magazine speaks of the special importance and power objects can take on, even for children. It tells the story of how one caring little girl has recently stirred the Smithsonian Institute in Washington to undertake an extensive restoration and preservation project to save the flag that flew over Ft. McHenry in 1814 when Baltimore was under attack by the British.

Disturbed by the knowledge (passed on to her by her teacher) that the Star Spangled Banner in the National Museum of American History is in danger of fading and deteriorating, the 10-year-old girl wrote a letter to the Smithsonian, saying "The flag is very special to me and it's been in America so long I don't want it to fade. Please try to save it for me and for America."

According to the Smithsonian, on September 13, 1814, Francis Scott Key, a prominent lawyer from Washington, D. C., was on a flag of truce ship during a brutal bombardment that lasted through the night. Extremely anxious for our fledgling nation, he feared the worst, until "by the dawn's early light", he saw that "our flag was still there." Overcome with emotion, he took a letter from his pocket and composed some verses that were later published and set to the music of a familiar English melody. In 1931, "The Star Spangled Banner" officially became the national anthem.

That flag, made by Mary Pickersgill of Baltimore and her thirteen-year-old daughter, Caroline, is made of wool bunting with cotton stars. Weighing about 130 pounds, it measures 30 feet by 34 feet. It was donated to the Smithsonian in 1912 by the grandson of the commander of Ft. McHenry. With this flag as the subject, the Smithsonian has recently embarked on one of the most ambitious conservation projects in its history.

Reading of this reminds me of the Fourth of July celebration in Haskell many years ago when another young person spoke up for the dignity and honor of the American flag.

On that day, Mrs. C. M. (Lela) Kaigler set up an ice cream cone stand at the motorcycle races, patriotically draping it with an American flag she had on hand. During the afternoon, a conscientious young Boy Scout, Bates Thornton, came by and very seriously told her that the flag was soiled and would have to be destroyed so as not to have dishonor cast on it by being displayed in such a condition.

Always being one to encourage a young person and champion a good cause, she said, "Yes, sir! You need to do that, Bates." Making quite a dramatic show of helping him do his duty to his flag and his country, she stripped it off and presented it to him for the proper disposal. Delighted and amused at his dedication, she later said she didn't know if he buried it or burned it, but she sold the rest of her cones from a bare stand.

Bates Thornton, of course, went on to become, in World War II, the youngest Colonel ever (to that point) in the Service. Later he was the leader of the famed business "Whiz Kids" who saved Ford Motor Company from going under. Then, among other things, he headed Litton Industries.

Mrs. Kaigler enjoyed retelling the story of how this thinking young Haskell boy spoke out about honoring the flag, the symbol of our freedom to pursue whatever we may dream of becoming.

Old Breeze. Long may it wave for our children.

Young children express intelligence in seven areas

by Lou Gilly
Haskell Co. Extension Agent
Early childhood professionals have always looked at the whole picture when considering children's intelligence. Psychologist Howard Gardner's Multiple Intelligence Theory reinforces the fact that there are many different ways for children to be smart. Instead of asking, "How smart is this child?" a better question may be, "How is this child smart?"

During the early years, children learn how to get along with others and meet their own needs. These factors, along with many others, contribute to children's intelligence—something far too complex to be measured by a standardized test, or even by how quickly children learn to speak or walk.

According to Multiple Intelligence Theory, each of us possesses seven "intelligences," or ways to be smart. Some of us are more adept at using our hands; others are good at making rhymes, or singing songs. Each type of intelligence gives us something to offer to the world. What makes us unique is the way each intelligence expresses itself in our lives.

By recognizing multiple intelligences, we can help children enhance their individual strengths. But don't be too quick to label a preschooler as a future accountant, artist, or athlete without giving her a chance to explore the world, work on her skills and develop her own abilities.

Understanding multiple intelligences means more than focusing on individual characteristics. Imagine a grown person who could do nothing but write poetry, or solve algebra problems. To do everyday things like drive a car or follow a recipe, a person needs to be smart in more ways than one.

Each of us is smart in all seven ways. Here's how to recognize these multiple intelligences:

Word smart—Journalists, lawyers and storytellers often demonstrate what Gardner refers to as linguistic intelligence. These people are best at using the written or spoken word to communicate.

Logic smart—People with a great deal of logical-mathematical intelligence are good at reasoning and thinking in terms of cause and effect. Scientists, accountants and computer programmers generally have this ability.

Picture smart—Otherwise known as spatial intelligence, this involves thinking in pictures or images. Such individuals may be able to follow directions best, or be able to visualize and draw accurately.

Music smart—Musical intelligence is the ability to keep time with music, sing in tune and discern the difference between different selections. These people can best perceive and appreciate melodies.

Body smart—Individuals with bodily-kinesthetic intelligence are best able to control their own movements. This involves not only outdoor sports, but tasks like sewing and carpentry.

Person smart—Such persons have the ability to respond to, understand and work with other people. This interpersonal intelligence is the gift of being able to see from others' perspectives.

Self smart—These people tend to be contemplative and can easily access their own feelings. Those with intrapersonal intelligence may be introspective and enjoy meditating.

By exploring all of their intelligences, children become well-rounded individuals who are successful in many aspects of life. Parents and early childhood professionals must recognize these different strengths in children as they emerge. Some children may respond more to words, other to music—the point is for adults to let children express themselves. If children have the opportunity to learn in the areas they prefer and to improve in those areas that are not as strong, they will grow to become intelligent in more ways than one!

GRAND PRIZE WINNER—Carla Marquis of Rule, relaxes on the hunter green patio furniture she won at the First American Bank of Texas SSB Customer Appreciation Day, Fri., July 3. Other winners of various First American Bank Premiums were: Octavio Diaz, Troy Culpepper, Anna Mae Davis, Virginia Land, Sue Provines, Jimmie Darden, Buck Speer, Paul Brown, Pat Sammons, Daniel Guadalcazar, Anna Lee Tribbey McKennan, Lisa Shaw, Elton Klose, Frieda Piland, and Hazel Thomas.

Grapefruit aid in cancer-fighting

Scientists in South Texas are starting to make a much closer look at citrus. But they're not looking for fruit flies. They're trying to determine just how beneficial Rio Grande Valley grapefruit can be in preventing cancer.

Researchers believe the compounds in the sweet, dark red Rio Star grapefruit can help prevent hormone-related cancers such as prostate, breast and cervical cancer. Scientist Bhima Patel with the Texas A&M Kingsville Citrus Center in Weslaco says that deep red color may signal greater health benefits. Patel says the Rio Star is high in lycopene partly because the weather in South Texas is so good.

The sunlight triggers higher lycopene synthesis.

Officials at the Brazilian Cancer Institute think Texas A&M citrus researchers may be on to something. The institute has sent one of its top medical experts, Gerson Peltz, to work with them. The goal is two-fold: first, to determine exactly how may cancer-fighting chemicals there are in Texas grapefruit. Second, to increase the amount of those naturally-occurring compounds. Researchers say that may be as simple as altering cultural practices such as fertilization, irrigation and the rootstocks growers use.

Peltz says ultimately this research could lead to more healthful citrus worldwide and a savings of billions of dollars in medical costs.

Social Security expects no trouble

The Social Security Administration (SSA) has taken the lead among government agencies in meeting computer problems expected when the year 2000 rolls in, according to Ken Hargis, Social Security manager in Abilene. More than 90 percent of its 33 million lines of computer software is ready and the rest will be tested by the end of 1998.

"The 44 million people depending on Social Security for a monthly benefit payment can rest assured that benefits will continue to be paid on time and in the right amount," stated Hargis. "It will be business as usual."

The computer problem arises because computers do not automatically recognize year 2000 dates. They have to be re-programmed, a tedious process that requires changes to each line of software. "We are really fortunate because we've been aware of the year 2000 problem and planning for it since 1989," says Hargis. "We were fixing the problem before most other organizations ever heard of it."

Social Security also chairs an Interagency Committee addressing the year 2000 problem government-wide. Systems gurus meet regularly with their counterparts and about 50 other agencies to share solutions to common problems, to share best practices and lessons learned and to leverage the resources of the government on common problems.

In addition, SSA is working closely with other agencies involved in the check delivery process, including the Department of the Treasury, the Federal Reserve System and the post office.

"SSA will have thoroughly tested the ability of its partners to prepare and deliver year 2000 payments before the end of 1998," Hargis said. "This will give us plenty of time to clear up any remaining problems before the year 2000 rolls in."

This Week's Devotional Message: GOD MIXED THE SUMMER PALETTE WITH REFRESHING COLORS

When the multi-hued blossoms, no longer in sight,
Are replaced by the deepest of green,
With the blue of the water a further delight
As the overhead sun warms the scene,
It's a time for vacation and finishing chores,
While some others were never begun,
And for swimming and fishing and living outdoors
With our own kind of fun in the sun;
Plus a lesson in beauty our faith will portray
For remembering all of our lives,
From the joy of creation the Lord will display
When the season of summer arrives.

Food for thought

by Charles H. Spurgeon
"We are under obligation, not to the flesh, to live according to the flesh—for if you are living according to the flesh, you must die."

Romans 8: 12,13
When I was in the Navy, we called the captain of our ship "the Old Man." Our Old Man was tough and crusty and nobody liked him. He used to go out drinking with all his chiefs while belittling and harassing his junior officers and making life miserable for the rest of us. He was not a good example of a naval officer. So when our Old Man got transferred to another ship, we all rejoiced. It was a great day for our ship.

Then we got a new skipper—a new Old Man. The old Old Man no longer any authority over us; he was gone—completely out of the picture. But I was trained under that Old Man. So how do you think I related to the new Old Man? At first I responded to him just like I had been conditioned to respond to the old skipper. I tiptoed around him expecting him to bite my head off. That's how I had lived for two years around my first skipper.

But as I got to know the new skipper, I realized that he wasn't a crusty old tyrant like my old Old Man. He wasn't out to harass his crew: he was a good guy, really concerned about us. But I had been programmed for two years to react a certain way when I saw a captain's braids. I didn't need to react that way any longer, but it took several months to recondition myself to the new skipper.

You also once served under a cruel, self-serving skipper: your old sinful self with its sinful nature. The admiral of that fleet is Satan himself, the prince of darkness. But by God's grace you have been transferred into Christ's kingdom (Colossians 1:13). You now have a new skipper: your new self which is infused with the divine nature of Jesus Christ, your new admiral. As a child of God, a saint, you are no longer under the authority of your old Old Man. He is dead, buried, gone forever.

Social Security to use Direct Deposit

You may have heard that starting January 2, 1999, most federal payments including your Social Security or Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefit will be directly deposited to your bank or other financial institution.

If you're already receiving your benefit by check, you'll still be able to do so. But you should know that direct deposit offers many advantages, such as:

- You eliminate the risk of lost or stolen checks.
- You get your benefit quickly and on time, even if you are out of town, sick or unable to get to your bank, credit union or savings and loan.
- Both you and your money are safe.

If you think direct deposit is right for you and you have a checking or savings account, contact your bank, credit union or savings and loan and sign up for direct deposit.

You don't have a checking or savings account? Consider opening one and signing up for direct deposit. There are a variety of accounts available, some with little or no fees. Look for one that meets your needs.

If you've decided to wait a little longer, later this year, the Treasury Department will have more information about a new low-cost account that may be right for you.

If for some reason you don't want direct deposit, you can continue to receive your money by check. Whatever decision you make, your Social Security of SSI benefit will continue to be made on time and without interruption.

Chief Tonka plans trip

Haskell Indian Mascot, Chief Tonka, also known as Amber Futch, has been chosen to represent the Indians at the pre-game performance at the Citrus Bowl game in Orlando, Florida, on New Year's Day.

Amber was selected in June as the Universal Cheerleader Association's All-Star Mascot at the UCA Camp at Texas Tech University, in recognition of outstanding achievement.

The daughter of Terry and Kathy Futch, Amber is a junior student at Haskell High School. Although she has been a twirler for five years, this is her first year to be Chief Tonka.

Chosen by students and judges as the school mascot after try-outs in April, Amber said she had to learn to maneuver the heavy suit. Her trainer at the camp at Tech was Tech mascot, Raider Red, who she said really helped her learn how to express attitude by using over-emphasized gestures. Before she goes to the game in Florida she is thinking of getting a 'cool vest' with coolant packets that can be frozen ahead and strapped around the waist under the bulky, loose fake 'deerskin' costume.

On this, her first airplane trip, she will be accompanied by her parents and older brother, Jeremy, a student at Angelo State. "This trip is going to be my family's Christmas," she said. She expects her greatest thrill to be just being there and performing before such a big crowd. One of the girls with whom she became friends at the Tech Camp will also be there representing the Sweetwater Mustangs.

Funds needed for Amber Futch's trip to Florida total $3,500.00, and although she is personally doing all she can to raise that amount, she can use some assistance on this. Wanting to encourage our local young people who earn the opportunity to represent our community in other places, the Haskell Free Press is volunteering to be a central collection point for donations to the "Send Chief Tonka to the Citrus Bowl" project. Gifts to this may be brought by the Free Press office at 401 S. First, or sent to P.O. Box 555, Haskell.

Cotton industry establishes chair to insure future needs are met

To stay ahead of changes in the cotton industry in Texas and across the nation, the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Texas A&M University is establishing a University Chair in Cotton Engineering, Ginning and Mechanization in the university's agricultural engineering department.

Leaders from all segments of the cotton industry have formed the Cotton Industry Support Group and initiated a five-year campaign to raise $500,000.00 to endow the chair. Meeting that goal, the group will qualify for another $500,000.00 from the Texas A&M Foundation under the President's Matching Gift Chair Program.

The first $100,000.00 donation for the project was made in April by the Texas Cotton Ginners' Association (TCGA).

Jimmy Poppolo, TCGA president and general manager of Farmer's Cooperative in El Campo said cotton is the state's leading crop, and advancement in mechanization, engineering and ginning are crucial to its continuing success. "At recent Beltwide Cotton Conferences we have noted how many industry leaders had agricultural engineering backgrounds, and the many innovations and advancements that have come from those departments to help the industry meet new challenges," he said.

However, Poppolo noted, such educational programs are being downsized in many universities, or, as at Texas Tech University a few years ago, dropped altogether. "With cotton such a big cash crop in Texas, we felt it was important to have an endowed chair for the state."

"This chair will ensure continued efforts in maintaining excellence in these programs that address the current and future needs of the cotton industry," said Kelly Green, president of the Cotton Industry Support Group and a graduate of the A&M department.

Specific programs envisioned include continuation of leading research, teaching and extension programs, including producing, harvesting, ginning, processing, storing and manufacturing of cotton and cotton products; expanding efforts in technology transfer and continuing professional development to the cotton industry, and graduate programs in the department.

"We're looking at this as a source for good, young technical people with intelligence and capabilities in engineering, management and in regulatory roles," Green said.

Contributions to the endowment fund should be made payable to the Texas A&M Foundation, and designated for the University Chair in Cotton Engineering, Ginning and Mechanization.

BIG CHIEF TONKA—Haskell Indian Mascot, Amber Futch, thinks about her half time performance as Chief Tonka at the next New Year's Day Citrus Bowl game in Orlando, Florida.

Hay Hotline to help farmers

by Greg Kaase
Haskell Co. Extension Agent
The Texas Department of Agriculture has set up a Hay Hotline to help connect farmers and ranchers who need hay with those producers who have hay for sale.

The Hay Hotline number is 1-377-429-1998 (1-UPS-HAY-1998). The hotline is staffed from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and is a free call.

"The Hay Hotline is an opportunity for farmers and ranchers to locate forage during this difficult time," Agriculture

Commissioner Rick Perry said. "The hot, dry weather continues to take its toll on range and pastureland across Texas and producers in scattered areas need additional forage supplies for their livestock."

Many ranges and pastures are not providing adequate grazing and producers are rapidly depleting carryover hay stocks. In addition, many pastures and hay fields have not had sufficient regrowth following the first hay cutting. In some parts of the state, producers were not able to get a first cutting.

"We want to make sure that our livestock producers have access to adequate forage supplies this summer and into the fall and winter months," Perry said. "The Hay Hotline is a precautionary measure since there is no federal Emergency Feed Program this year."

Producers with hay can call the toll-free number and be put on a list of suppliers. Farmers and ranchers who need hay can call and request a list of hay suppliers. An up-to-date list will be mailed to them the day they call. In addition, TDA will put the list of suppliers on its website (www.agr.state.tx.us).

Water is best thirst quencher

by Lou Gilly
Haskell Co. Extension Agent
The sun is beating down. Your throat is parched. Do you reach for water, a cola, or one of those highly promoted sports drinks?

Extension nutritionist Dr. Dymple Cooksey emphasizes water. She says it is cheaper and it quenches your thirst more effectively than juices or soft drinks. Sugar can inhibit the rate of absorption, so water or sugar-free drink will replenish better. Avoid caffeinated beverages because they cause you to urinate more and lose fluid.

Cooksey even recommends water over sports drinks that claim to restore your electrolytes. The trend toward bottle water may help make people more aware of water's importance, but she warns about the expense. The next time you head for the soda machine, think twice and look for the water fountain instead. For a twist, add a bit of lemon or lime.

Is something keeping you up at night?

Getting a restful night's sleep can become challenging later in life. Health problems, prescription medications and sleep disorders are just a few of the barriers to enjoying an uninterrupted night in the sack.

Dr. James Frost, a professor in the Department of Neurology at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, said, "Many people with arthritis, for example, have no difficulty initially falling asleep. But turning over in bed might waken them during the night and prevent them from falling back to sleep." Another common obstacle is medication. Many drugs prescribed for mature adults, including tranquilizers and anti-depressants, can interfere with sleep.

"The best advice is to maintain normal sleep patterns," Frost said. "Going to bed and waking up at the same time each day helps people sleep better."

He also recommends checking with your doctor to see if medications can be taken at specific times during the day to lessen their impact on sleep.

Sagerton News

By Dorothy M. Clark

Rodeo time is over, family reunions have been held and the "working" people will have to wait until Labor Day for another holiday. That will give local people enough time to recuperate for the next influx of visitors!

A big event in the life of my mother, Emma Raphael, last week was her participation in the Texas Cowboy Reunion Parade in Stamford. She was one of several residents of Teakwood Manor who rode in their decorated van. When asked if she liked the parade, she vehemently announced that she didn't get to see it. She really enjoyed seeing all the people along the route and is excited about telling all the grandchildren that she was in the parade in Stamford in 1998!

Guests in the home of Alvin and Ev Ulmer during the July 4th weekend included Winston and Mary Ulmer of Seguin, Paige, Mark and Kirby Stockard of Katy and Mark, Dawn, Sean and Josh Ulmer of Clearlake.

Mary Neinast had her children and grandchildren visiting with her during the holiday. They were: Kenneth, Betsy and Laura Kate Neinast of Emory and Roy, Judy, Doug and Dustin McEwen of Ralls.

Chelsea Tonnon of Denison and her friend, Trisha Murphy of Springdale, Arkansas, spent several days visiting with Chelsea's grandmother, Frances Clark. Joining them during the weekend were Kay and Brian Tonnon. Brian and Chelsea will be enjoying visiting with their grandmother longer.

Guests in the home of Joe and Dorothy Clark during the holiday weekend included Don and Patsy Bivins of Valley View; Emmalee Bivins of Haskell; Bunnie and Decie Worthington of Sanger and Joe Roberts of Greenwood. They all attended the TCR Rodeo in Stamford where Decie had entered the bull riding event. He scored 76 which gave him a tie for first place in the competition.

Farmers gathered Wednesday morning at the gin for their regular weekly breakfast. Karen Lehrmann with the Boll Weevil Eradication Program gave her progress report to the following people in attendance: Jack Jones, Allen Letz, Cliff Gholson, Gene Teichelman, Alvin Ulmer, Charles Diers, Melvin Baitz, Fred Baitz, Leon Stegemoeller, Bill Hertel and Joe Clark.

Vacation Bible School was held last week at Faith Lutheran Church each night at 6:00. The theme for the school this year was Jesus is the Light of the World. Brenda Turner was the superintendent, assisted by 10 adults and helpers. Approximately 20 children attended each night.

The home of Tommy and Kathy Manske was the gathering place over the weekend for their sons and their friends. Michael of Lubbock, Brian and Phillip from here hosted their friends, Joni Penman and Jenna Lee Byrd of Rochester; Bobbie Jones of Lubbock and others from Waxahachie, Stephenville, Comanche and Graham. This was the fourth year for the July 4th reunion at the Manske home.

Three area students attend annual citizenship seminar

Attending the Texas Farm Bureau's 35th annual Citizenship Seminar in San Angelo June 15-19 were Brian Lehrmann, Mary Belle Turner and John Mark Hodgkin.

Sponsored by the Haskell County Farm Bureau, they were among approximately 350 high school junior and senior students from over 150 counties across the state.

The purpose of the seminar is to provide the students with a better understanding of their American heritage and the capitalistic free enterprise system, according to Tim Weise of Haskell, county FB president.

The students were welcomed to the seminar by Dr. James Hindman, president of Angelo State University. "Farm Bureau--Your Host" was presented by Bob Stallman, president of Texas Farm Bureau.

Chuck Senter (TFB Field Representative), Brenda Schumann (1997 Miss TFB), and Lucas Price, the 1997 TFB Speech contest winner, presented a program on

"Farm Bureau Youth Activities."

For the first time, the students participated in a new program, Congressional Insights, which allowed them to simulate a Congressional office and election.

Other speakers at this year's seminar and their subjects were as follows: David Vernon, Lubbock Christian University, "Free Enterprise"; Ronald Trowbridge, Hillsdale College, "The Constitution"; Kurt Swanda, Fort Worth, "American" and Clebe McClary, a motivational speaker, "Press on Regardless."

COMBINED MEETING—Members of the Haskell Rotary, Lions and Kiwanis Clubs met at the Community Room Thurs. for a lunch visit with U. S. Representative Charles Stenholm, who was in the area.
