Big Crowd Here Monday For Trades Day and Rodeo

W. P. Miller, Pioneer, Buried At Eula Tues.

W. P. Miller, 79, prominent farmer of Eula, died at his home at 10 o'clock Sunday night, death resulting from a stroke of paralysis Saturday afternoon.

Funeral services were held at the Methodist church in Eula Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, the rites being conducted by the pastor, Rev. Kirk, assisted by Rev. Joe R. Mayes, pastor of the Baptist church, Baird. Interment was made in the family plot in Eula cemetery.

Pallbearers were six grandsons: Nunnally, Neville, Vance and Leslie Stephenson, Norris Kelton and Gordon Smith, all old friends were named as honorary pallbearers.

A large crowd, perhaps the largest ever assembled at Eula, attended the funeral. Many old friends, former residents and relatives from a distance came with the neighbors and friends of the Eula community to pay a last tribute of love and respect to Mr. Miller, who for more than a half century had made his home there and has been prominently identified with both civic and church work of his community. He was a good christian man. He was the last charter member of the Eula Methodist church and a former steward of the church.

Mr. Miller was a native of Mississippi, where he was born May 15, 1856. He moved to Louisiana in boyhood in that state he was married to Miss Nellie Hampton. The family came to Callahan county in 1884 and established a home one and a half miles north of Eula where the family have lived since. Mrs. Miller died in 1899 and Mr. Miller was married some years later to Miss Susie Cotton in Alabama.

The wife, seven children, 20 grandchildren, four great grandchildren survive. Children are, Mrs. R. P. Stephenson, Walter C. Miller, Mrs. F. L. Smith Eula; M. E. Miller, Levi, N. M.; Mrs. A. R. Kelton, Belle Plain; Ernest Miller Eula; Mrs. Will McCoy, Baird.

All of his family were present at the funeral. Mr. Miller's death came as a severe shock to his family and friends. He had been in his usual good health and actively engaged in management of his farm properties until stricken about 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon with paralysis.

T. & P. Will Give Special Summer Rate

The Texas and Pacific Railway, through Frank Jensen, its General Passenger Agent, has announced three Popular Rate Excursions to California for the coming summer. The first excursion will fall on June 15th and 16th, the next on July 20th and 21st, and the last on August 17th and 18th.

According to Mr. Jensen, the tickets for each excursion will bear limit of twenty-one days and permit stopovers at any intermediate point. These tickets will be honored in chair cars or coaches, also in Sleeping Cars upon payment of pullman fare for space occupied.

The Round-trip fare from Baird to Los Angeles and San Diego will be $37.50 and to San Francisco $50.00 with half-fare for children under twelve years of age.

Mr. Jensen said that similar excursions, operated during previous summers, have always proven very popular and in view of the fact that the California-Pacific International Exposition will be in full swing at San Diego, during the entire summer the demand for these excursions will, no doubt, be greater than ever.

All of the regular equipment of the "Sunshine Special" will be air-conditioned, including chair cars, coaches sleepers, diners and Observation-Lounge Club Car, and this will add much to the comfort of the trip, said Mr. Jensen.

AN APPRECIATION FOR SERVICES RENDERED

I want to say this for two reasons, first because of the real need that was supplied and second because of the fine spirit which prompted it.

Brother Alex Robinson solicited and got the money to get the new tags for my car. Now I certainly needed the use of my car, could not run it without the license and this therefore was truly a worth while service and I appreciate it more than I have words to express and the fine spirit which it was done makes it all the sweeter. I thank you Alex, and every one who helped to do this and may the Lord bless you abundantly and I am sure he will.

Hoover's Blast Fails to Click

Criticism of New Deal Proves Dud; Opposition Has No Real Leader

By EARL GODWIN
WASHINGTON—Herbert Hoover, ex-President, a few days ago put out what was intended to be a rallying cry for all good men to come to the aid of the Republican party and attack and defeat the New Deal. Yet it failed to crackle. There is no spark in Hoover; and the most conspicuous reaction to his lengthy discourse on the Roosevelt policies is the wish on the part of the Republican leaders here that he will keep quiet. He hurts his own cause.

Mr. Hoover has a definite idea that the New Deal is wrong; but he isn't able to express it so the ordinary man can understand what he is saying. He was a fine administrator when he was feeding the hungry in Belgium; and he made a good secretary of commerce, for he has a flair for certain kinds of organization; but he seems unable to deal successfully with the type of men and women it takes to elect parties, Presidents and congresses. I remember years ago, before he was nominated, talking to Jim Good, who was afterwards his campaign manager and still later, the secretary of war. Jim said to me: "If we can only keep Hoover away from the politicians we can nominate him." That meant that Hoover didn't have practical sense about dealing with practical men. This all comes out again in his latest attempt to rally the Republicans. I don't think he's got a rally in him.

Hoover attacks the New Deal on the ground that it is taking the country away from the constitution, (or vice versa); that it is regimenting the men and women of the country, and that it is retarding recovery. Hoover, who used to see prosperity just around the corner in the old days, still sees it coming and thinks that if the Republicans were in office, just as they used to be, that prosperity would come with a rush.

Hoover sulks because the federal government feeds the hungry. He never did believe the government should feed people; on one occasion he counseled the Red Cross against accepting $100,000,000 of federal money to be handed out to suffering people. He thinks states and private sources should carry the relief burden.

Well, suppose he should be elected tomorrow and inaugurated to office a month from now. Can you imagine the revolution that would occur if he cut off relief and stopped the public works? Of course, private industry should take up the burden of unemployment; and nothing would give Mr. Roosevelt more pleasure if the leaders of industry would come to him and say:

"You can cancel the relief program. We guarantee to give everyone a job!" But industry can't do it. Industrial leaders who are now throwing mud at the New Deal were glad enough to get under the tent with Roosevelt when he closed the banks and reopened them again with a definite program for thawing frozen assets, lending them government money and restoring confidence in the hearts of Americans. Industrial leaders ought to assume leadership; Roosevelt is encouraging them to do so; but so far he has not been able to get them to walk alone.

Hoover dominated the Republican party, and ran the campaign which left him defeated and placed the New Deal in charge. The Republican platform on which Mr. Hoover ran was 8,000 words in length and pledged the party's total resources in the way of leadership, capacity, resourcefulness and ability to pull the country out of the depression which started with Hoover. Don't forget that. The old rugged individualists were promising everybody two automobiles to every garage and a chicken in every pot. They ended up with two chickens in every garage—and that's about all.

But get this: The platform praised Hoover for his leadership in the creation of the National Credit corporation; for his part in creating the Reconstruction Finance corporation, the Railroad Credit corporation; for increasing the capital of the federal land banks; and for enlarging the discount facilities of the federal reserve system; the platform praised the federal farm loan board; and held further "that the control of the acreage of land under cultivation as an aid to efforts of the farmer to balance production" is vital. This is what the AAA is doing now.

The Republican party was proud of the way it had put the federal government into this sort of business; but when the New Deal came along and enlarged these offices and made them effective, Mr. Hoover complains about it. There is a large section of the Republican leadership here which feels Mr. Hoover has made a political mistake in criticizing Roosevelt policies which were praised when they were functioning under Hoover. It is plain that the government simply has to take the lead in these large matters; they can't be left to the chances of disorganized business leadership.

PART OF POLITICAL PLOT
I do not know whether or not the Hoover assault on the New Deal is a part of the concerted effort to smear Roosevelt and undermine the people's confidence in him; but it came about at a time which makes me believe it was part of a political plot.

My readers will be interested, I think, in knowing just what the Democrats are going to do about the attacks now rising against Roosevelt.

For the time being the Democratic national committee is not going to take any part in politics. Replies made by senators and congressmen in debate in the course of congressional affairs can be accepted as individual efforts; there will be no grand organized attack on the opposition; not just yet.

Roosevelt laid down a program when he took office; the most astounding, daring and forward looking program ever offered a country in time of distress. The country backed him up and everyone was glad of a man with initiative, bravery, foresight and honesty. At the end of two years the people elected another congress, most of whose members ran on platforms pledging support of Roosevelt. Yet the country at large feared congress and declared it was a wild and radical bunch that couldn't be controlled. Congress has been wild enough, but it will have accepted 80 per cent of the Roosevelt program; which is a high average. The senate turned down the World court, (and actually there was not much pressure put on the senate by the administration); congress will pass a bill to pay the bonus, Roosevelt will veto it; and there may be enough bonus strength in the senate to re-pass it over his veto. The house is sure to override the veto; everyone expects that. The rest of the program will be Roosevelt's. He is getting the five-billion-dollar public work bill to end the depression just about the way he wanted it; he will get his old age pension plan; he will probably get a bill taking the poison out of the power trust; he will re-establish the NRA. So it doesn't appear that congress has licked Roosevelt.

But the opposition is yelling and throwing stones; the better off the country gets the louder the opposition will yell. But so far it's only noise; the opposition has no leader to nominate to run against Roosevelt.

Meantime the administration's politicians will keep quiet under orders.

The Republicans are looking around for some one to nominate. There was talk of Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, who won re-election last November in a state that came back conspicuously to the Republican column; but he seems to have dropped out of sight; they are talking of Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana; they are talking of Col. Frank Knox, vigorous Chicago publisher and former Bull Moose; but he doesn't take it seriously. Then there is quite sure to be a third party movement to gather in the wild radicals of the sort that follow Huey Long and Doctor Townsend. About a year from now, the Republicans will have several strong contenders for the nomination; they will be shouting from the housetops; and they will believe that victory is in their grasp.

But, my friends, I beg of you, don't lose faith in Roosevelt. About the time that the Republican opposition gets so loud it will seem to have overrun the earth, the New Deal will begin to fight back; and believe me, when this man Roosevelt starts out really to fight, it is a beautiful sight. This administration has made tremendous strides; business is coming back; the spirit of the people is rising; we are getting our old pep; agriculture as a whole is better off.

CITY EDITORS MAKE NOISE
Most of the noise which is now being made to cry down the New Deal's agricultural program comes from the editors of city newspapers who are no more qualified to discuss the American farmer than the American farmer is qualified to run a city newspaper. Many of those who claim they speak for agriculture here under the shadow of the Capitol dome are middle-men, commission merchants, brokers, grain speculators who gamble in the products other men raise. But their power of propaganda is great; and they are able to confuse the average man or woman; and so it was a great pleasure for me to see a group of the editors of agricultural papers call on President Roosevelt a few days ago and leave with him a brief memorandum of what they believed is best for American agriculture.

Opposition politicians say the New Deal is trying to bring about a scarcity of products and exorbitant prices; but these farm paper editors told the President:

"We wish to make it clear that the forces seeking agricultural adjustment do not aim at scarcity and exorbitant prices for farm products, but only at normal production."
There seems to be no reason why agriculture should not arrive at a "balanced abundance." You wouldn't find a factory running day and night to pile up dangerously unprofitable surpluses. American industrial leaders refuse to run their factories when there is a surplus and no market; and yet they support political movements that would force farmers to raise a surplus of products for which there is no market. Whenever there is a decent farm market the city politicians begin to kick about the price of food. That's one of the sore points right now. Eastern industrialists will not raise wages; they object to the rising costs of living which are increasing the farm income.

Agricultural editors want the same prices which will give farmers the same purchasing power they had in 1900-1914 when the farm share of the national income was by no means excessive.

TREMENDOUS TRIFLES
By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

WILD STEER, ANCIENT CITY

IN 1911, an Irishman named Pat Lynch roped a wild steer in north-western Colorado. The animal, crazed by the lasso that was tied to the cowboy's saddle horn, dragged horse and rider over the rim of a great chasm. A sturdy pinon tree grew on the edge of the cliff and the rope caught around this long enough for Lynch to throw himself clear. His horse hung on one end of the lasso and the steer on the other. There they swung like lead toys on a stick. Then, as the rope broke under their combined weights, they plunged into the canon far below.

Lynch, miraculously enough, landed on a narrow ledge. There was no way for him to escape from the smooth walls that rose steep above him, and below was the chasm. There was no room to turn around, but he slowly worked his way along the shelf until at last, dropping a boulder, he realized from the sound that just beneath him there must be another ledge.

Slowly, he slid down and fell into soft sand. All about him were the ruins of ancient cliff houses that no white man had ever seen. The remains of a man-made trail led around a corner of the rock wall and Lynch climbed to safety.

He told his story, but at that time the cattlemen were not interested in the crumbling bits of an ancient civilization. In 1933, however, a small exploring party went into the region to trace the rumors of the years. The government has now reserved this area as the Yampa Canyon national monument and scientists declare that the cliff houses will yield important developments in the history of this continent.

After all, Pat Lynch might have missed his throw, and a slumbering canon might still be waiting for the white men to discover.

SPEEDOMETER

"STEP on it, boy!" And the needle on the speedometer climbs up—up—fifty—sixty—seventy—eighty miles an hour!

It wasn't thus back in 1846 when Brigham Young was leading his Mormon colony across the Great Plains to their "Promised Land" in Utah. Then the wagon trains crawled painfully along and eighty miles was a journey of several days instead of an hour.

Somewhere in Nebraska the Mormon leader pushed on to find the best route, leaving the slower-moving wagons behind to follow along the trail which he would mark out for them. One of these parties was in charge of a young fellow named William Clayton.

A long road and weary road it was for the westward-faring homeseekers. Their goal seemed so far distant and their progress so slow that they probably pestered young William Clayton a great deal with their questions of "How far have we come today? How much farther is it?"

So, being an ingenious young man, he devised a way to answer. He measured a mile on the trail that they traversed one day, then marked a wagon wheel at a certain point on its circumference. Keeping his eye on the marked spoke he counted its revolutions to the mile. Next he devised a ratchet that moved a cogwheel, which in turn moved another cogwheel that registered accurately the distance the caravan traveled daily. And that same principle is used in speedometers today.

SLOGANS

IF YOU want to be elected President, get a slogan! Make it short. And if you can include in it the lilt of alliteration—fine!

"Tippecanoe and Tyler, Too!" reminded the nation that Gen. William Henry Harrison had won an important Indian battle at the beginning of a war which was none too well-filled with land victories for the American arms. So the Indiana frontiersman went to the White House.

"Fifty-four Forty or Fight!" was crystallized the dissatisfaction of Americans over a proposed treaty with England, establishing a boundary line in the Oregon country. True, we later compromised on the forty-ninth parallel of latitude, far south of fifty-four forty, but the slogan had already sent James K. Polk to Washington.

Grant's "Let us have peace" has been called "the minimum in expressiveness" but it helped elect him President and during the next eight years that phrase had an ironical sound to the South, suffering under the Reconstruction regime. "He kept us out of war" helped re-elect Woodrow Wilson in 1916 but within one month after he was inaugurated we were in the war.

"The full dinner pail" appealed to enough Americans to make them elect William McKinley. Later they and their sons wanted to "get back to normalcy" with Warren G. Harding and soon thereafter they were willing to "Keep cool with Coolidge."

So . . . "See America First." Find out what phrases will tickle the fancy of its people. Then get a slogan and go to Washington as President!

Smart for School or Work in Office

PATTERN 2085

AA 2085

When a girl leaves the house before nine every morning, whether she's off to school or to work, she needs at least one well-tailored frock in her wardrobe, one that will take her smartly through long busy hours and bring her home at night looking as freshly dressed as when she started. The skirt boasts a panel in front which ends in two inverted pleats, and there is another inverted pleat at the back. The full back gathered to the yoke is the last word in chic.

It's a Season of Plaids and Checks

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

GOES madly on the rage for checks and plaids. Where fashions are at their smartest these animated patternings are flourishing with all their might, both for day and evening wear.

The new plaids and checks are as apt to be "all wool and a yard wide" (more likely fifty-four inches) as they are apt to be of washable synthetics, linens or cottons. In fact among the swankiest weaves going you will find linens done in garish, racy plaids which make up too swagger for words—ever so effective for sports wear.

Then, too, topcoats of gorgeous plaids are going places where they never went before, for women are wearing them during the daytime hours about town and for travel as well as sports. Some have fur collars and some haven't, but they are that good looking with or without you will be envying the fortunates who possess them. The girl seated to the right in the picture is wearing a model which is styled with latest details, such as the hand-cut fringe of self material which trims the wide scarf ends and the wide turnover collar. The predominating colors in the plaid for this coat are brown and beige with a streak of orange in its makeup. The same plaid is striking in tones of reds or greens.

Her companion is wearing a check suit and if you are wanting to get into something decidedly stylish for spring here's your cue and no mistake about it. This one is black and white but if you happen to be in some other color mood, there is a check to satisfy, such as green with gray, navy with white, brown with tiger yellow. Then, too, there are tweed checks galore out on the field of action. They are smart, to be sure, but we must say there is a regular landslide in the direction of the simple little checks as pictured.

It is ever so good style to wear a tweed wool check skirt with a jacket of plain or the reverse. It is smart, too, to top a plaid or check skirt with a colorful suede jacket.

Plaid taffetas for daytime frocks, either synthetic or pure silk are making a grand success of it this season. A shirtwaist dress of plaid taffeta is in the height of fashion. Likewise a one-piece taffeta frock topped with a redingote of wool in navy or black makes an ideal spring costume.

Myriads of simple little morning and informal afternoon frocks choose plaid for their media. The model on the standing figure plays up bias-to-straight effectively. Novel touches such as buttons in alternate colors and little pockets set in on the bias add zest to this mode.

The other dress is interesting, too, in that it is made of a star print—little stars instead of the dotted theme and you can get this material with white stars on navy or red and other combinations. A deep pointed collar of white pique and large white buttons tune into the scheme of things most cleverly.

NAVY AND YELLOW
By CHERIE NICHOLAS

It is good-looking, this girlish frock and hat to match, is it not? It is a film-folk fashion and you know it is smart and advance if it originates in Hollywood, as it has. Ruby Keeler wears it. Attention is especially called to it because of its navy and canary color scheme. Navy for the foundational color with either white, yellow or pink is the talk of town this season. The smart set are carrying out the idea by wearing accessories made of natural toned chamols skin. The dress pictured is of navy wool with accents of canary colored rough-textured "repe."

Turquoise Preferred

The turquoise has the preference among evening jewels, appearing effectively with white crepes and satins and especially with black velvet. Big turquoise buttons trim a black velvet dress cut away in front to show a faun-painted underskirt of black tulle.

"SKIMMER" NEWEST WHIM OF HATTERS

The "skimmer" is the newest whim of the hatters, with madness its chief distinguishing charm.

The skimmer is the 1935 version of the pancake sailor which has been with us, off and on, in recent months. Only now it is flatter and crazier and generally more exhilarating than ever.

You clap it on the side of your head at whatever angle best suits your current mood, batten it down with a band around the back or even a hatpin, and then go out and join in a sporting battle with the spring breezes.

There is one redeeming feature about the new skimmers. They have done away with the unsightly elastic bands that decorated last spring's version of this particular style of headgear, and have substituted bands of ribbon or felt or straw to match the hat.

New Silhouette Featured by Alex and Schiaparelli

There is much discussion and some difference of opinion expressed concerning the new draped lines which had their most prominent exponents in Alex and Schiaparelli dresses. These influences, variously related to the Hindu, the Persian and the Iranian, are best known in the sari-draped togas familiar in Near East photographs.

The draping is in a soft, statuesque line, swirled round the body in a continuous movement from ankles to head. Several arrivals consider it a significant new silhouette trend, promising more for later season development. Others are inclined to disregard draping, considering it too extreme.

Spring Accessories Matter of Importance to Fashion

Accessories are going to be matters of prime fashion importance this spring for there are "ginger and snap" in the way they are put together. Here is the way one chic Parisian accents a black and white check suit: Yellow straw hat with black band, yellow blouse and yellow chamols gloves, blue cloverflower in the buttonhole, black suede bag and gloves.

Lace With Tweeds

Bows of soft lace are being worn with tweed costumes.

Erroneous Belief That Bees Know Their Owners

"Bees never come to know their owner," says James L. Hambleton, agriculturist in the bureau of entomology, dispelling the belief that beekeepers do not get stung, because their bees know them. "Every person who works with bees will be stung occasionally. The layman who is stung most often is probably nervous and afraid of bees. Apiarists are well aware that their bees never get to know them. One who understands bees can work as safely in another apiary as in his own."

Bee specialists also point out that the worker bees, which do the stinging, do so only in defense of their hive, and even then only a few assume the responsibility of guards, leaving the others free to go about their work. If all bees rushed at once to the defense of the hive, and were successful in stinging their victim, there would be no workers left, because in stinging, a bee not only loses its sting but also loses its life. Away from the hive, bees are intent upon their work and can scarcely be induced to sting, unless they are caught and crushed.—Boston Transcript.

COTTON PROGRAM POLICY OUTLINED

Applications for allotments under the Bankhead Act are being received in the Cotton Belt, and the Secretary of Agriculture announced that a minimum allotment of the full amount of his base production would be made to each producer whose established base production was more than two bales. This is in accordance with the policy announced several weeks ago when the 1935 regulations under the Bankhead Act were approved. Under the existing regulations tenants operating a part of a farm do not have a separate base. No cotton farmer has any warrant to expect that his allotment will be in excess of 65 per cent of his base production, unless the farm which he is operating has an established base production of two bales or less. In that event, he will receive a minimum allotment equal to the amount of his average production but no more. The 12 cent loans on the 1934 cotton holdings will be extended beyond the maturity date of July 31 1935. As to a loan on the 1935 crop it is the purpose of the Administration to provide adequate credit facilities to cotton farmers to permit the orderly marketing of the new crop. It should be emphasized, however, that the Commodity Credit Corporation will make no loans on the 1935 cotton crop to any producer who is not cooperating in the cotton program under the Agricultural Adjustment Act nor will any loans be made on the 1935 crop to any producer for the amount of cotton in excess of his allotment under the Bankhead Act.

UN-EXERCISED COTTON OPTIONS CALLED

Cotton option contracts on which the exercise of option was extended by the Secretary of Agriculture from May 1, will be called at 12 1-2 cents a pound, less carrying charges of 40 cents a bale per month for such time as charges have accrued against cotton option contracts. Approximately 1,470 options covering 10,958 bales of cotton are affected by this decision. These options were issued to producers as part payment for participation in the 1935 emergency cotton adjustment program.

BANKHEAD TENANT BILL

"Senator Bankhead has introduced a bill under which the government would take over land in the South now in the hands of insurance companies or of the Federal Land Banks", says the New Republic (Mar. 20). "These tracts would be broken up into small farms and sold to the sharecroppers white or Negro, on the installment plan over a long period of years. Money would also be made available to provide the new owner with the necessary capital while he was getting on his feet. Diversified agriculture would be encouraged in every possible way with the expectation that the purchaser and his family would themselves consume much of what they produce. Senator Bankhead's bill certainly deserves, at the least, careful consideration." This measure is backed by the A. A. A.

Relief Farm Families Placed In Rural Rehabilitation Program

Austin, April 12—District rural rehabilitation supervisors from nine districts of the meet here last week to receive instructions from V. R. Smitham, had of the rural department, and J. E. Stanford, director of rural rehabilitation for the Texas Relief Commission, on the plan to include all relief farm families in the rural rehabilitation program.

Meanwhile, efforts already were under way in the counties to remove these families from the general relief rolls to the rural program. Case workers were tackling the huge task of obtaining waivers from landlords on their interest in the tenant's share of the crop. This waiver is required by rural department officials before the tenant may be taken into the rural program. Under this plan, all outright grants of relief will cease and aid to rural clients will be only on a loan basis. Relief officials will require a first lien on the tenant's share of the crop in order to assure repayment of credit advances.

Relief officials anticipated little difficulty in obtaining these waivers because in most instances the relief organization has already granted subsistence to the client throughout the winter and in some cases subsistence needs have been granted for an even longer period. The relief organization will not be responsible for relief tenants whose landlords refuse to sign waiver agreements.

"Landlords must not expect the Texas Relief Commission to finance their crops," declared Adam R. Johnson state relief director. "If some landlords are no longer able to provide their tenants with subsistence, we will grant subsistence to these tenants after we have obtained a waiver entitling us to a chance to be repaid for the advances we make."

"We will continue to expect landlords not in dire need to finance their clients and keep them off the relief rolls. The relief organization is not a dumping ground to be used as a means of reducing expenses and increasing farm income."

"We don't ask the landlord to waive his one-fourth share of a cotton crop but we expect him to permit us to take a first mortgage on the tenant's three-fourths in order that we may have a chance to come out even."

"If this waiver means that the landlord must wait another year to collect for advances he has previously made to the tenant he should remember that the relief organization has been granting subsistence to many of these clients in the form of direct relief for many months, and we don't expect ever to get a penny of that back."

"But now that they are in the rural program, we hope, with proper management, to make it possible for them to pay their own way. This is our hope to get away from the outright relief grant an wide need the hearty cooperation of every landlord in the state of Texas to bring it about," Mr. Johnson said.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. VELMA ODOM

On the morning of February 24th 1935, the spirit of Velma, wife of S E Odom of Clyde Texas and mother of Edith O Laughlin Miami, Texas took its flight to realms above. Velma was sick about seven months her suffering was great, but no human was ever braver, more patient, or complained less than she.

She was loved and appreciated not only by her family and relatives but by everyone who knew her. No one ever had a better neighbor or truer friend.

She was so affectionate, kind, and tenderhearted, when possible was one hundred per cent in her church and Sunday school. We will miss her oh so much. Her vacant chair will make us feel sad. Indeed it is a sad affliction we are enduring especially is it true of the husband and daughter who have never known such sorrow before.

Probably they have never thought that their darling wife and mother would be taken so soon, but she is only a flower plucked from an earthly garden to beautify those of Paradise.

Although it is so very hard to submit immediately to God's will yet, such an adversity will tend to draw the bereaved nearer Heaven and help them realize that one link is being reserved there to which others may be joined.

To the bereaved husband, daughter and relatives, we can only extend sympathy and point you to God who alone can comfort in time of such deep sorrow.

Nyc's Committee Offers Drastic War-Profit Bill—Austria Decides to Enlarge Its Army—Progress of European Peace Negotiations.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

SENATOR GERALD P. NYE'S munitions committee, which has spent seven months investigating the doings of the manufacturers of arms and armament, reported to the senate its measure designed to take the profits out of war and provide for the conscription of industry in the event of another armed conflict involving the United States. The bill is decidedly drastic, giving to the President in war time powers that are practically dictatorial, permitting him not only to fix prices but also to license all industry and control raw materials. It also has taxation features that will arouse considerable opposition. It would raise individual income taxes to 6 per cent in wartime, levy surtaxes up to 94 per cent on incomes in excess of $10,000, and seize profits of corporations in excess of 6 per cent return on invested capital.

The Nye bill gives the President very broad powers to fix prices of commodities, to license industry, to enjoin profiteering and to prevent the hoarding of goods. It provides for the drafting of industrial leaders, who would be permitted to remain with their companies, subject to military law and given rank and compensation not exceeding that of a brigadier general.

Meanwhile the house military affairs committee reported the McSwain bill, similar to the senate measure but without the tax features. This lack made the more radical members angry but when they tried to amend the bill they were routed, 258 to 71.

The Nye senate committee, after reporting its bill, continued its inquiry. It heard a rather sensational bit of evidence to the effect that Roger S. McGrath, an insurance company agent who was described as a friend of the President's son James, had sought successfully to obtain two naval building contracts for the Bath Iron Works up in Maine.

FOLLOWING the example set by Hitler, Austria has decided to disregard the limitations on its military strength set by the treaty of St. Germain and to increase its armed forces immediately. The official communique issued by Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg did not say how big the army would be or whether conscription would be restored. The annual spring parade of the army at the Ringstrasse in Vienna was revived, and the troops appeared in fine new uniforms.

It is believed Hungary and Bulgaria soon will ask permission to increase their armies and re-introduce conscription.

SOVIET Russia is ready to line up with Great Britain, France and Italy in promoting the general European security pact which is the basis of England's plan for peace. This was brought out by the visit to Moscow of Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, and his conferences with Dictator Josef Stalin and Maxim Litvinov, Soviet foreign commissar. According to the joint communique given the press, these statesmen "were of the opinion that in the present international situation it is more than ever necessary to pursue the endeavor to promote the building up of a system of collective security in Europe as contemplated in the Anglo-French communique of the third of February, and in conformity with the principles of the League of Nations."

It was made clear that Germany and Poland would be welcome to enter the arrangement, but that it would go ahead even without them.

Captain Eden then went on to Warsaw to talk things over with the Poles; and even as he was departing from Moscow the Soviet press launched another fierce attack on Germany. Michael Tukhachevsky, vice commissar for defense, in an article in the newspaper Pravda, declared Germany would have an army of 849,000 by the summer, exceeding the French army by 40 per cent and almost equaling the Soviet army in size.

He charged Hitler with "lulling France to sleep" with anti-Soviet war talk in the hope France would not realize her own peril.

Tukhachevsky's view that Germany contemplates attacking France was supported by an authorized article in the weekly Journal de Moscou which asserted the leaders of the reich realized "the exceptional risk to which Germany would subject herself by invasion of the tremendous territories of the U. S. S. R.—a country possessing powerful armaments and unlimited opportunities for improving and increasing these armaments."

"It is almost probable," the Journal said, "that under certain circumstances

Hitler will prefer other fields of aggression, and an intensified revision of the map of Europe will be started not in the east but in the west."

PREMIER MUSSOLINI is highly skeptical of the success of efforts to persuade Germany to enter into general peace plans for Europe. In his newspaper, Popolo d'Italia, appeared an editorial, probably written by Il duce himself, warning his fellow countrymen that no miraculous results may be expected from the conference of foreign ministers in Stresa. He asserted that the western European powers "must stabilize their line of common action against several eventualities which can be foreseen, and they must take definite responsibility."

It then charged that the French and British are impeding Mussolini's wish to take action against Hitler because of their preoccupation about their own internal policy.

Premier Flandin and Foreign Minister Laval of France were reported to have devised a vast, new, flexible plan to organize the peace of the continent within the framework of the League of Nations.

POLAND appears to have decided to play a lone hand in the European embroglio, though she remains friendly to Germany. It is reported that Captain Eden's visit to Warsaw was as disappointing as was that of Sir John Simon to Berlin. The Polish government is determined to sign no pact that would commit the nation to fight for Russia against Germany or for Germany against Russia and France, nor will it permit either German or Russian troops to be transported across Poland. The Polish statesmen say they will sign a series of bilateral pacts, and will go as far as any other nation in parallel disarmament. They assert that they have no alliance with Germany, though their mutual troubles have been settled for the next ten years, and that the alliance with France still holds good.

FROM Tokyo there came a statement indicating that Japan would give at least moral support to the European powers that are seeking agreements to counteract Hitler's move for the re-arming of Germany. It was given out by Eiji Amau, the frequently quoted spokesman for the foreign office. He said Japan will hold aloof from the European crisis and that there would be no far eastern Locarno pact, but that "we cannot think of any alliance with Germany." Tokyo, asserted Amau, is ready to discuss with Russia some degree of demilitarization of the eastern frontiers.

FOREIGN nations that discriminate against American imports have been warned by President Roosevelt that they must discontinue that practice under penalty of economic reprisals by the United States. In a letter to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau the President outlined his foreign trade policy and disclosed the fact that the administration is considering denouncing existing trade pacts with Germany, Italy, Portugal and Denmark because of discrimination. He proclaimed the new Belgian-American reciprocal trade agreement, and also decreed that, pending the conclusion of negotiations for new pacts now in progress, the reduced duties and other concessions granted Belgium will be extended to Canada, Spain, The Netherlands, Switzerland and Lichtenstein for six months.

DEBATE on the Copeland-Tugwell food, drug, cosmetic and advertising bill was lively in the senate, and the opposition was led by a Democrat, Josiah W. Bailey of North Carolina, who urged the retention of the present food and drug law with such amendments as changed conditions require.

"I understand the Department of Agriculture was created to foster agriculture and not to govern advertising," Senator Bailey said. "It is inconceivable to me that it should take charge of medicine, cosmetics, and advertising. There might be an argument that the department has made such great triumphs in agriculture that it is seeking new worlds to conquer. But I believe that if some one should make that boast, I should agree that it had exceeded Samson in the slaughter of pigs, but had fallen far short of doing as good work in the matter of cotton as has the boll weevil."

STANLEY REED, the new solicitor general, obtained from the Supreme court permission to dismiss the government's appeal in the Belcher lumber code case. Therefore there probably will be no decision as to the constitutionality of the national industrial recovery act by the chief tribunal before congress takes action on the bill to extend the recovery law.

War? Who Knows? Strange Hanging How Old Is Graft? What Are Life and Death?

Lloyd George says there will be no war "this time," but some in Europe do not agree. Mussolini wants France and England to join him in an agreement to suppress any outbreak affecting them.

Arthur Brisbane

France is said to have moved troops for defense to the German frontier, although it is hard to guess what those troops could do. If Germany declared war it would be with planes dropping explosives and poison gas on Paris. No nation at war will sit in trenches for four or five years, now that flying is real.

Britain, going a long way around, wisely, sends a suave statesman, Captain Eden, to Moscow to see Stalin of Russia. The talk, not published, may have been like this:

If England agrees to help you fight Japan, will you help against Germany, in case of need?

A British naval officer cut the throat of a shipmate. In England they hang you for that. When hanging time came, Mrs. Violet Vandervest, prosperous widow, opposed to the death penalty, hired two planes to fly back and forth above the gallows, trailing banners reading, "Stop the death sentence."

While airplanes flew overhead, trucks drove back and forth before the jail, with loud speakers bellowing "Abide With Me."

The man that "killed his comrade sleeping," or however he did it, did not "abide." He went through the trap.

The British believe in discouraging murder, and prompt punishment seems to do it.

Graft and dishonesty are old, as old as human need and cunning. A papyrus written 1,200 years before Christ tells of three men tried for robbing a royal tomb. Egyptian kings were descended from the gods; to rob their tombs was sacrilege, the punishment death.

A dishonest jeweler, putting base metal in a supposedly "pure gold" crown for King Hiero, was exposed by the great Archimedes, who thought out a method in his bath, and started the word "eureka" down through the ages.

Michael Angelo, building St. Peter's at Rome, complained to the pope of the materials furnished by contractors, reminding his holiness that he, Michael Angelo, would make no profit from St. Peter's except "benefit to my soul," and urged the pope to punish the grafters. There is even graft now in this modern, enlightened republic.

What is life? What is death? What are we?

An English gentleman "dies"; doctors pronounce him dead. He returns to life, says he has been in heaven, tells what he saw—a dull account, clothing the same as we wear here. How far, how fast, did his spirit travel while he was "dead"?

What does the soul do while the body is supposedly dead? Does it go away and come back, or just wait around inside the body? What is death? Some say it is only a "belief," and there is no such thing.

In New York's American Museum of Natural History is shown a drawing of the largest land mammal that ever lived, named Baluchiterium. This huge animal, which vanished from earth 25,000,000 years ago, stood 17 feet 9 inches high at the shoulder, was as big as two big elephants, weighed 20,000 pounds or more. It was not as big as a dinosaur, but the dinosaur laid eggs and was no mammal. A food problem might be solved if the "biggest mammal" could be brought back and raised by cattlemen. It ate 500 pounds of food a day; that must be considered. In America it might be necessary to drown the mammal Baluchiterium, with her unborn babies.

Sir John Simon, returning from an unsatisfactory talk with Hitler, reports "certain divergencies" of opinion. That is going pretty far for a British statesman. There is a bigger fly than that in the ointment: Sir John learns from Hitler that Germany "already has a larger air force than that of Great Britain." Britain thought Germany had only half as many planes. A wise statesman gets his fighting airplanes ready before he starts to fight.

In France three persons "sterilized" at their own request by "a mysterious Austrian doctor" because they did not want to have children have been arrested.

France, striving for more population, believes that "sterilization" can be overdone.

The mysterious Austrian performed 15 operations on men and women before disappearing.

Lays Out Work for Congress

Washington.—President Roosevelt has submitted to congress a list of the legislation he deems necessary to have passed before the present session adjourns. He has divided it into two categories—"must" and desirable. If congress enacts only the list of "must" legislation and passes over the other group of bills which the President considers desirable, it is made to appear that the membership of the house and senate is due to suffer some of the torrid temperature and the uncomfortable humidity of a Washington summer. The President said he must have legislation extending the National Recovery administration, providing social security, eliminating public utility holding companies, increasing the loaning power of the Home Owners Loan corporation, extension of the so-called nuisance taxes which expire by limitation of law on June 30, and revision of the banking laws.

In addition, the President made known that he would like to have enacted legislation to take the profits out of war, whatever that may mean. He previously had sent a message asking enactment of a law providing for expansion of the American merchant marine through the use of ship subsidies, and he also desires to have enacted legislation setting up machinery for the settlement of labor disputes. This legislation is in the congressional hopper in the form of a bill by Senator Wagner, of New York.

The President would like to have amendments to the agricultural adjustment act in order to eliminate some of the weaknesses which the AAA people admit exist. The air mail contract situation is another matter with which Mr. Roosevelt has been concerned.

Seasoned observers recognize that this list of "must" legislation, not to mention the desired legislation, is sufficient to keep congress grinding away far into the summer. They recognize likewise that if the desired legislation later becomes of such concern that the President wants to place it on the preferred list as well, the membership of congress must be prepared to forego summer trips of any kind.

Pets of Their Own

Since a good many members of congress have grown tired of being called rubber stamps for the administration, they naturally have turned attention to legislation which they think will be helpful to their own bailiwicks, to themselves personally or from a party standpoint. Thus there have been promoted numerous pieces of legislation for which some individuals, at least, entertain greater fervor than they do for measures that were drafted by President Roosevelt's official family and transmitted to congress as administration legislation. It is the general observation that an individual, representative, or senator frequently will go much further in fighting for legislation that is his own brain child than for legislation placed before him on a silver platter such as administration proposals have been. Consequently, individual or group measures are constantly cluttering up house and senate legislative calendars. This is a factor meaning delay for administration bills.

It is to be remembered, as has been reported in these columns, that Mr. Roosevelt is unable to ward off criticism of some of his proposals. Indeed, there have been Democratic criticisms and Democratic opposition to a greater or lesser degree to all of the legislation he has proposed since congress convened last January. All of which is by way of saying that congress faces weeks of committee work and floor debate despite the fact that the house Democratic leaders still retain rather solid control of a sufficient majority in the lower house of congress to drive through any pet measures for the administration. In the senate the situation is decidedly different.

Included in the legislation being fostered by individual members is the bill that would permit cabinet officers to appear on the floors of congress for questioning and explanation, such as occurs under the British and French parliamentary systems. The administration does not want this bill. It will have to exert some pressure to avoid passage. The reason is that the Roosevelt administration is no longer one in which the cabinet is dominant. Cabinet officers are only part of the scheme, and if congress wanted to inquire about the handling of relief money, which it probably will desire, it must talk with Administrator Hopkins. Mr. Hopkins is not in the cabinet. The same is true of NRA and to some extent to the AAA, although Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture theoretically is a superior officer to Administrator Davis. The administrator is definitely opposed to the passage of bonus legislation for the former soldiers, sailors and marines and it looks like a Presidential veto will be necessary there. The same is true of inflationary proposals of which there are many. The situation is one, therefore, in which Mr. Roosevelt must be constantly on his guard to prevent action which he does not want as well as being fortified at all times with pressure to put through the legislation he has described as necessary. Thus it is seen he is confronted with many complications which did not disturb him in the first two sessions of New Deal congresses and these complications mean a longer life for the current session.

Some "Must" Legislation

Let us examine the status of the legislation which the President said must be passed. The outlook is something like this: The extension of the National Recovery administration is still far off. Senate hearings are just ended and the house is still further behind. No action can be expected in either body for several weeks. The present law expires June 16.

Recently Mr. Roosevelt sent to congress a very bitter message denouncing public utility holding companies and demanding legislation eliminating them from our economic structure. The house committee considering this legislation is just winding up its hearings and the senate committee which will have jurisdiction has taken no action at all. It must be said that a hard fight is in prospect if and when this legislation reaches the stage of debate because investors in these companies are not going to have their equities destroyed while they sit idly by. These investors are doing more now than just making faces at congress and the volume of letters which members are receiving in opposition to the holding companies legislation transcends anything that ever has happened in the memory of this correspondent.

The banking legislation which Mr. Roosevelt has proposed, or which was proposed for him by Governor Eccles, the New Deal and radical governor of the federal reserve board is faced with opposition equally as bitter and as well organized as that confronting the holding companies bill. Perhaps it can be said that opposition to the banking legislation is even stronger because in that fight the President will be opposed by Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, who must be regarded as the most virulent of all the Democrats in the senate. The house banking committee has about done its job with hearings on this bill but the senate committee where the full force of the Glass opposition will be felt has not even set a date for committee consideration.

The social security bill about which Mr. Roosevelt has done much talking, because it is distinctly a reform measure, has finally been redrafted in the house while senate leadership is unable to get together on any policy respecting it. Some senators want to split up this bill and pass the section providing for old age pensions, allowing the other parts of the bill to die a slow death.

The legislation to increase by $1,750,000,000 the loaning power of the Home Owners Loan corporation probably will get through the senate without much more ado. The house passed the bill because it could not do otherwise with individual members realizing that there was a chance that some of this money would go into their particular districts. Included in this bill is a line that promises a good many hundred jobs for politicians and it is natural that the party in power is not going to overlook this possibility.

There remains on the "must" list, then, only the proposal to extend the nuisance taxes which expire at the end of June. It is probable that the bulk of these levies will be accepted by congress as necessary.

About the Future

One cannot fail, in tramping around Washington these days, to note the frequent expressions concerning the outlook for the New Deal and for President Roosevelt's personal political future. In fact, some hardboiled observers lately have been heard to say that Mr. Roosevelt is suffering from too much ballyhoo. He was put up on a pedestal that made of him in the eyes of many persons something of a superman. He himself is regarded as having contributed to this condition by his many campaign promises, some of which he has found absolutely impractical as remedies in leading the country out of the morasses and on to a more satisfactory economic plain. In truth, the President's own political colleagues have continued to depict him as an individual capable of things which no human can accomplish and this combination of circumstances is declared by many keen minded persons as likely to bring, if indeed it has not already brought, a definitely bad political reaction from the President's standpoint.

It is still fresh in the minds of men and women throughout the country how President Hoover was over-advertised as a superior person in an administrative way. Mr. Hoover suffered from too much ballyhoo to an extent greater than any other man who has served as President with the possible exception of Woodrow Wilson. When the depression came and the current turned against Mr. Hoover he was utterly powerless. With a recalcitrant congress on his hands and a dissatisfied people, Mr. Hoover met the fate that must have been expected.

Says WILL ROGERS

BEVERLY HILLS.—Well all I know is just what I was reading in the newspapers, or what I see hither and yon. I was a setting around home a week or so ago, and it all at once dawned on me that Mrs Rogers and Mary were coming in from a Mediterranean Cruise of the beautiful boat the "Rex" so I hops me a sky rattler and away I hies myself to N.Y. to meet em. They beat me to the hotel by an hour, and they have a lot of news to tell me of their trip. They been gone just one month but they have covered a lot of land and water. Gibraltar, ports along the Riviera of France, ports in Italy, then across over to the Holy Land, Jerusalem, Palestine, Mount of Olives, Ninevah, Bethlehem, and well, maby you have read the book.

They said that Jerusalem was pretty dirty, and that they worked the Great Shrine of Our Saviour as pretty much of a racket. That it took a lot away from the impressiveness of the place. But anyhow it was great, even if a lot of it was evidently faked. I circled the town in a plane one time, but I never was there. In fact I didnt think you could land there, but Mama and Mary says they flew out of there to go Cairo. They must have found an awful big flat rock to take off from.

They say Mr Rockefeller has done a lot of fine work there, that he has built a great museum, and a Y.M.C.A. and a lot of things, and that there is a fine hotel there. But the Y.M.C.A. didnt turn out so good on account of it having some sort of religious tinge to it, and that there was constantly an argument over it. Can you imagine Our Saviour dying for all of us, yet we have to argue over just whether he didnt die for us personally, and not for you. Sometimes you wonder if his lessons of sacrifice and devotion was pretty near lost on a lot of us.

Well just think of being on such hallowed ground. I felt a thrill just flying over and circling it. Then she said they went to the Dead Sea, Galilee, and River Jordan. Then imagine flying across into Egypt, where in Biblical Times they were months and years marching out of. That was my trip too by air, but I was coming all the way from China on the plane I was on.

I only stayed one night in Cairo, and then flew to Athens, Greece, but they were there longer, and Mrs Rogers flew up the Nile to Old King Tut's Tomb. She said that was the greatest trip she had, that the Nile and its very fertile valley, and its surrounding desert was a great sight. Said they told her the King of Egypt owned a great many of the fine farms along the Nile. You remember away back in biblical times it tells of what they raised along the fertile valley of the Nile. She said there wasnt much in the Tombs now, that most of the stuff had been removed, and was down in Cairo in the museum. But on account of it being their Xmas, (it was then in March) the museum wasnt open. People shouldnt be allowed to have Xmas at time like that.

She claimed the planes over there are not so hot, in fact the one from Jerusalem to Cairo two days later than her trip went down and killed three. You know some day folks will realize that we have the greatest aviation systems in the world.

Well to get back to their travel talk, they were to go from Egypt to Greece, but Greece was having their annual fry, so they landed at an island of Italy and they are on the boat that picked up Venizelos, the old Premier and revolutionary leader of Greece who was fleeing to Italy. She said they had him and about 150 of his officers on board. No one was allowed to see em. Then of course she and Mary had a lot of gabbing about Rome, Naples, and Genoa. She says that Mussolini is going to make Genoa the finest port in the World, that he is making all a new harbor, and new buildings that you will see as you come in. She said all the Italians are very proud of their great boats, and all that has been done to make their country what it is. Its very clean and all looks great.

Its kinder as I heard a very learned American man one time say, "Dictatorship is the greatest form of Government there is, provided you have a good Dictator". Well ours is doing better than a lot of folks think. They accept everything he does for em, but they dont think he does enough. I got to get back over there some day and see whats it all about.

Animals' Weapons

The giraffe attacks his enemy, when necessary, by clubbing him soundly with his head, which, one might imagine, would hurt the giraffe nearly as much as his enemy. The elephant stamps and crushes his enemies to death with his mighty forefeet. The llama bites and spits and kicks in a primitive sort of fashion.

Lesson for April 14

CHRIST THE SAVIOUR

LESSON TEXT—John 3:14-17; Romans 5:6-10; Philippians 2:5-11. GOLDEN TEXT—For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

It is not feasible to consider all the texts proposed by the lesson committee, but it is desirable to select the three suggested to be printed and to introduce several others.

I. The Saviour Predicted

In connection with the fall of man and consequent pronouncement of judgment upon the woman, the man and the serpent, and the announcement of the undying enmity which was to exist between the seed of the woman and the seed of the serpent, ultimate victory was predicted of the woman's seed.

II. The Saviour Born

That which had been predicted was historically fulfilled in the birth of Jesus Christ in Bethlehem. When Jesus was brought to the temple as a child the Holy Ghost revealed to Simeon that Jesus was the Messiah.

III. The Saviour Described

1. A seeker of the lost (Luke 15:3-7). This seeking of the lost is illustrated by the man leaving the ninety and nine sheep and going after the one which was lost.

2. He died for the lost (John 3:14-17). God gave Jesus Christ to die to make an atonement for the sins of the world.

3. He knows his own (John 10:14). The good Shepherd has a definite knowledge of the lost ones. He therefore seeks them out and gives his life for them.

4. He keeps his own (John 10:27-29). Believers are Christ's sheep, and because they are his sheep, they hear his voice and follow him.

IV. Some Blessings Received Through the Saviour

1. Justification (Rom. 5:1-11). The one who receives Jesus Christ is by the living God declared righteous. His guilt is removed and he is given the same standing as Jesus Christ himself.

2. Freedom from the power of sin (Rom. 6:1-7). It is not enough to be freed from the guilt of sin, there must be a dynamic which will enable the believer to live a life of victory over sin.

3. He is free from the law as a means of sanctification (Rom. 7:1-6). Christ's death nailed the law to the tree. The one who has been vitally united to Jesus Christ by faith died with Christ.

4. Victory over the flesh through the indwelling Holy Spirit (Rom. 8:2-6). The introduction of the law of the spirit of the life in Christ Jesus enables the believer to free himself from the dominion of the flesh.

5. Christ is the supreme example to the believer (Phil. 2:5-11). Because the Saviour became incorporated with the race through the incarnation he is able to impart life to those with whom he is identified.

CHAPTER XIII

"Here are you and I, Tony. Here!" Eve stooped to the ground and touched it; the dry fiber of a lichenlike grass was between her fingers.

"This was green and fresh, Tony, perhaps ten million years ago; perhaps a hundred million. Then the dark and cold came; the very air froze and preserved it. Do you suppose our cattle could eat it?"

"Why not?" said Tony. "What else was here, Tony? How can we wait for the day?"

"We aren't waiting." "No; we're not." For they were walking, hand in hand like children, over the bare, rough ground.

"The ribbon of it ran to the right and left—not clear and straight, for it had been washed over and blown over; but it was, beyond any doubt, a road! Made by what hands, and for what feet? Whence and whither did it run?"

A hundred million years ago! The clock of eternity ticked with the click of their heels on this hard ribbon of road, as they turned, hand in hand, and followed it toward the aurora.

"Where were they," said Tony, almost as if the souls of those a hundred million years dead might hear, "when they were whirled away from their sun? What stage had they reached? Is this one of their Roman roads on which one of their Varros was marching his men to meet a Hannibal at Bronson Beta's Cannae?"

As she arose quietly, so as to disturb none of the others, Tony caught her hand with a new tenderness. They set off toward their road together.

Suddenly Tony saw something that took the breath from his lungs. It was a tiny thing—on the ground. A mere splotch of color. He hurried toward it, not believing his eyes.

He lay prone to examine it as Eve stooped beside him in excitement like his own. He did not know mosses—the vegetation resembled any other moss, on Earth. He recollected the hope that spores, which could exist in temperatures close to absolute zero for long periods, had preserved on Bronson Beta the power to germinate.

Mosses came—on Earth—from spores; and here, reawakened by the sun, was a remnant of life that had existed eons ago, light-years away.

Tony jumped up and ran about on the terrain; a few feet away, Eve stooped again. Other plants were burgeoning. Mosses, ferns, fungi, vegetation of species he could not classify, but some surely represented growths larger than mere mosses.

He heaped Eve's hands and his own, and together they ran back to the three who were staring, as they earlier had gazed, at the green sky.

"Then Duquesne saw what Eve and Tony held. 'Sacre non de Dieu!' He leaped to his feet, Hendron and James were beside him.

With one accord, they rushed toward the Space Ship. 'Get Higgins!' Hendron shouted. 'He'll go mad! Think of it! A whole new world to classify!'

Before they reached the sides of the ship, the lock opened. The gangplank dropped to earth. Von Beltz appeared in the aperture, and Hendron shouted to him the news.

People poured from the Ark; they stepped upon the new soil. They waved their arms. They stared at the hills, the sky, the sea. They breathed deep of the air. They handled the mosses, and ran about finding more of their own. They shouted, sang. They laughed and danced.

The first day on the new earth had begun. [THE END.]

Smallest Living Thing Filmed Two types of diatoms, one-celled animals or plants, the smallest living things in the world, are magnified hundreds of times before it is possible to photograph them.

"A monument!" said Tony, and he burned a match. The little yellow flame-lighted characters engraved into metal—characters like none either of them had ever seen before, but which proclaimed themselves symbols of meaning.

Swiftly Tony searched the two faces of the metal; but nothing that could possibly be a portrait adorned it. There were decorations of strange beauty and symmetry. Amazing that no one, in all the generations and in all the nations of the world, had drawn a decoration like this! It was not like the Chinese or Mayan or Egyptian, Greek or Roman, or French or German; but different from each and all.

Tony caught his breath sharply as he traced it with his fingers. "They had an artist, Eve," he said. "With five hundred million years of evolution behind him."

"Yes. How beautifully this thing is engraved! Will we ever read it? . . . Come on. Come on!"

But the monument, if it was that, stood alone; and consideration of others, if not prudence, dictated that they return.

But they did not re-enter the ship. Duquesne was determined to spend the first night on the ground; and Hendron and James agreed with him. James had dragged out blankets from the Ark, and the five lay down on the ground of the new planet. And some of them slept.

Tony opened his eyes. The sun was rising into a sky not blue but jade green.

He rested his body on his elbow. Below him, the sea also was green. It had been gray on the steamy yesterday. But an emerald ocean was more familiar than an emerald sky.

He watched the white water roll on the summits of swells until it was dispersed by the brown cliff. He looked back at the Ark. It stood mysteriously on the landscape—a perpendicular cylinder, shining and marvelous, enormously foreign to the bare, brilliant landscape. Behind it the chocolate-colored mountains stretched into opalescent nowhere—the mountain into which the road ran, the road beside which stood the stele adorned by a decoration like nothing else that had been seen in the world.

Tony regarded his companions. Hendron slept on a curled arm. His flashing eyes were closed. His hair, now almost white, was disheveled on his white forehead. Beside him Duquesne slept, his arms folded on his ample abdomen, and an expression of deep study on his swarthy face.

Eliot James sprawled on a ledge which the sun now was warming, his countenance relaxed, his lips parted, his straggling red beard metal-bright in the morning rays.

Eve slept, or she had slept, near to Tony; and now she roused. She was lovely in the yellow light, and looked far fresher than the men.

Their clothes were stained and worn; and none of them had shaved, so that they looked more like philosophical vagrants than like three of the greatest men produced in the Twentieth century on the earth.

Tony watched Eve as she gazed at them, anxiously maternal. To be a mother in actuality, to become a mother of men, was to be her role on this reawakened world.

As she arose quietly, so as to disturb none of the others, Tony caught her hand with a new tenderness. They set off toward their road together.

Suddenly Tony saw something that took the breath from his lungs. It was a tiny thing—on the ground. A mere splotch of color. He hurried toward it, not believing his eyes.

POULTRY FACTS

OFFICIALLY TESTED CHICKS, EGGS BEST

Poultrymen Are Warned to Watch for Pullorum.

By Dr. Henry Van Roekel, Veterinary Department, Massachusetts State College, WNU Service.

In order to insure the health of the poultry flock, poultrymen are urged to buy hatching eggs and baby chicks this spring only from poultrymen whose birds have been officially tested and found to be free from pullorum disease.

Pullorum disease, also known to poultrymen as "B. W. D.," is probably the most serious disease attacking baby chicks and causes the loss of thousands of chicks every year.

Warnings is also sounded against buying chicks from hatcheries which hatch eggs from infected or untested flocks. Chicks from disease-free flocks can easily pick up pullorum infection in the hatchery if any infected chicks are present.

Claims as to freedom from disease may not be reliable, and for his own protection the poultryman should get a list of pullorum-clean flocks and buy his supply of chicks or eggs from one of them.

The poultrymen in the state whose flocks have been found 100 per cent free from pullorum disease, have gone to considerable expense and trouble to eliminate the disease from their flocks.

These flocks may provide stock or hatching eggs for replacing diseased flocks.

Claims as to freedom from disease may not be reliable, and for his own protection the poultryman should get a list of pullorum-clean flocks and buy his supply of chicks or eggs from one of them.

"Open Front" Plan Good for Airing Hen Houses

The best method of poultry house ventilation is the one that will secure good ventilation without cold drafts upon the fowls, particularly at night, says a correspondent in the Rural New Yorker.

There are many plans for accomplishing this, few of which can be considered ideal. The "open front" plan is undoubtedly the most commonly used, and this consists in having all walls of the poultry building airtight, with the exception of the front one, and the "front" is usually that facing the south or the southeast.

If cross openings are afforded, it will be difficult to prevent cross drafts, whereas if but one side of the building has outside openings, winds cannot blow through. The idea is illustrated by an attempt to blow into a bottle.

It is true that a long building with opened front windows may suffer some drafts by permitting air to enter at one end and sweep through to the other. This may be prevented by the use of partitions extending from the rear wall nearly to the front of the room.

A common mistake made by those using an open front is to close it up in unusually cold weather, thus stopping the interchange of air and bringing about dampness of the interior.

Exercise Unnecessary

Exercise, it has been found, is not necessary for laying hens, says the Missouri Farmer. Since eggs are made from surplus, it is logical to believe the less energy expended in exercise the more surplus there will be for the manufacture of eggs.

In visiting the hoppers, the watering tank, nests, flying up on roosts and in ranging over the laying house hens in confinement get enough exercise for their daily egg-production needs. This is not true, however, where hatchability of eggs is concerned.

Hens whose eggs are to be hatched should be given exercise, particularly some six or eight weeks prior to hatching time. Lack of exercise in breeders makes for weak germs and weak chicks.

In the Chicken Yard

Pound for pound a pullet needs four times more oxygen than a cow.

Birds which start to lay when very young are likely to produce smaller eggs throughout life than those which start production later.

Young drakes attain weights of about four pounds in from seven to eight weeks. Hen ducks are housed in laying quarters at about six months of age.

It is estimated that close to a billion chicks are hatched each year in incubators. Only happy, contented hens lay eggs and, in addition to making them comfortable, adequate roosting space will prevent accident by hens being crowded off and injured.

Customs and Costumes

Take Root in England

"The celebration in London of the centenary of the Old Bailey, the famous criminal court depicted by so many writers and the scene of many of Charles Dickens' delineations, recalls some of the oddities of lawyers' dress in England and the conservatism of the customs," Victor B. Bennett, of the American Express company relates.

"The reason why barristers wear black gowns is that members of the profession went into mourning for Queen Anne. Though Queen Anne is dead, the profession in England keeps on mourning. The English are conservative in the matter of dress.

The Knights of the Garter continue to wear short capes and hoods, the same as in medieval days. The clocks on ladies' hose were originally put on to hide the gusset seams when the stockings were of cloth, and have continued as part of hosiery attire ever since."

Night or day, when you first begin to feel sluggish and need something to straighten out your bowels (to relieve constipation)—take a dose of reliable Thedford's Black-Draught.

"We take Black-Draught for biliousness, constipation and any bad feeling that comes from these conditions," writes Mrs. Luvena Owens, of Springer, Okla. "Black-Draught cleans the system and makes me feel much better after taking it."

IN MEMORY OF CHARLES MANTON WARREN

On the evening of April 2, 1935 God called home our dear Brother-in-law Manton Warren.

Oh, how we miss him. We have asked the question so many times, why, why, was he called to go. Every thing possible was done; The kind nurses and doctor were so good. Tender hands administered to his every want, but still we couldn't keep him. We should not grieve, for he doesn't suffer now. He was so good to us all. We never ask a favor in anyway but what Manton helped us out. He was so good to our little ones. They too miss him so much.

We can never look out when we hear some one coming and say its Manton for he is gone on to await our coming, where there is no sorrow or heart aches.

Our circle has been broken, we all had such good times together, But God's will must be done.

A precious one from us has gone
A voice we loved is stilled.

A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

POWER ZONE

V-8 POWER

With the introduction of the V-8 engine, Ford brought a new standard of performance to the low-priced field.

COMFORT ZONE

Comfort Zone Riding

Gives the ease, smoothness and comfort of a "front seat ride" even to back seat passengers—an important engineering advance.

ECONOMY ZONE

FORD ECONOMY

The 1935 Ford V-8 gives you the most economical car to operate Ford has ever built.

Why take less?

FORD has always aimed to make the automobile-buying dollar go as far as possible.

This year, the 1935 Ford V-8 gives you traditional Ford low prices, traditional Ford operating economy—and, in addition, riding comfort, body roominess, new beauty and new safety features that will satisfy the requirements of almost everyone.

Consider some of the major improvements in the Ford V-8 for 1935. Take Comfort: From this standpoint alone, what a completely rounded car this is! Comfort Zone Riding that gives "front seat comfort" even to rear seat passengers. Deep cushioned, high-backed, wider seats. Big, air-balloon tires. Easier steering and a newly-designed clutch that responds to the touch of your foot.

Consider safety: There's safety glass all around—on all models—at no additional cost. A new, welded all-steel body. New, more powerful brakes, with an unusually high ratio of braking surface to car weight. And a lower center of gravity that gives increased safety and stability on curves!

Why be satisfied to receive less than this for your money? Examine this new 1935 Ford V-8. Ride in it. You'll realize that it is truly a new automobile value.

WITH BAIRD BAPTIST

A nice Sunday, an increase in Sunday school and two good joiners Sunday night.

We are going to have Children's Day on Easter Sunday and that is the Third Sunday. We are to have a nice program and all are invited to attend and enjoy it with us.

Our meeting starts on the Third Sunday and we are going to have a weeks prayer meeting preceding every night next week. We will meet at the church and pray for the Lord to give us a great meeting. We invite every one to come to these meetings and join us in this prayer. Bro. J. D. Brannan will help us in the meeting and by the cooperation of the people we expect a great meeting.

The Workers Meeting which was to have met with the Atwell church next Tuesday has been postponed a week, and will meet with the Atwell church Tuesday after the Third Sunday. A good program has been arranged which will appear in The Star next week. This change was made because of a district meeting at Cisco next Tuesday and Wednesday.

I will preach at Midway next Sunday afternoon. Let everybody out that way be on hand and let's have a good old worshipful time.

We had a good B T U meeting at Clyde last Sunday. I suppose some one will give a report of that meeting. Our Unions here at Baird are doing good work, the Juniors organized last Sunday night, so we have three good Unions going now. Let us all get in
