FIRE PREVENTION DAY WILL BE OCTOBER 9

Whereas, my attention has been called to the fact that in the past years the Governors of the different states of the Union have designated October 9th, which is the anniversary of the great Chicago fire, as "Fire Prevention Day;" and

Whereas, the proper observance of this day has resulted in a large decrease of the great economic waste resulting from the destruction of property by fire; and

Whereas, the available statistics of the country show that perhaps eighty per cent of the fires of the country are preventable, and could be avoided by giving proper inspection of property and attention to the various and sundry kinds of combustible waste material allowed to accumulate on the premises of property owners; and

Whereas, it is expedient that united action be taken on the part of the entire citizenship of this state to prevent all unnecessary loss of property of every kind by fire.

Now, therefore, I, Will H. Mayes, Acting Governor of Texas, do hereby proclaim Thursday the 9th day of October, 1913 as "Fire Prevention Day," and especially request that all owners of property within this state on that day give personal attention to the inspection of heating appliances, placing them in a safe and proper condition for winter use; that all chimneys, flues and heating apparatus be carefully examined;

That all public and private institutions, schools, hotels, asylums, factories and theatres be carefully looked over on that day, and when necessary, any changes made that will further protect the safety of the occupants;

That the mayors of all cities, towns and villages within the state issue and publish their proclamations, calling attention to the necessity for a systematized effort in the prevention of fire waste;

That the various boards of education throughout the state and the teachers of all public and private schools impress on the school children under their care the importance of using every precaution to avoid fires, and that those having the responsibility and care of children especially in public schools, on this day inaugurate fire drills and such instruction as may impress upon those under their care the ordinary fire hazards and the simple methods of fire prevention and rescue work; and that these drills be made a permanent feature of school work, and practiced at frequent intervals throughout the year;

That all commercial and civic organizations lend their hearty moral support to this important form of conservation of our resources.

In Testimony Whereof I have hereunto signed my name and caused the Seal of State to be affixed hereon at my office in the City of Austin, Texas, this 24th day of September, A. D. 1913.

Will H. Mayes,
Acting Governor of Texas.

By the Governor:

D. A. Gregg, Acting Secretary of State. (SEAL.)

RALLY DAY.

At the First Christian church next Sunday, B. F. Stallings, minister; H. L. Tidwell, Bible school superintendent. We are planning for a great day and expect to have the largest Bible school in the history of the church, and we will have a special program prepared for the occasion. YOU are invited to be with us and enjoy this service; be there at 9:45 for the beginning and stay to the close of the preaching service following the Sunday school exercises. If you miss this you will regret it, so come and bring somebody with you.

Remember the hour, Bible school at 9:45, preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Let us make this a great day for service in the Lord's house. "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord." Every member of the school to be a helper.

LITERARY CLUB

The Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle held the initial meeting with Mrs. F. F. Parrish on Wednesday afternoon. After a vacation of the summer months, this Club enters into the year's work with much interest.

Lively recitals of vacation incidents were given at roll call, after which was the leading feature of the program, the annual message, read by Mrs. Hattie Miller, the incoming President. In it were outlined the year's work, including "Rambles and Studies in Greece" and "The Meaning of Evolution," and timely suggestions along civic lines. The paper was of such merit that the Club voted to have it appear in our city papers, and will be found in another column of this issue.

Mrs. Gallaher made a pleasing talk on "progress," emphasizing the necessity of close study, broad views and mental growth.

Mrs. Fred Arnold was given a hearty welcome into the membership. The year-book committee were complimented upon the success of the programs arranged for the ensuing year.

NOTICE TO HUNTERS.

We, the undersigned farmers and stockmen of Rocky Mound community, realizing the damage done to our crops and grass by the grasshoppers and boll weevil, and appreciating the help rendered in the destruction of these insects by the birds; pledge ourselves not to kill the quail, and at the same time we warn the sporting public not to hunt on our premises.

At intervals of not less than twelve months ten per cent of the qualified property tax paying voters of a county may petition the commissioners' court of such county to provide for the establishing or enlarging of a county hospital, in which event it shall be the duty of said commissioners' court within the time designated in such petition to submit to the property tax paying voters of the county either at a special or at a regular election, the proposition of issuing bonds in cash aggregate amount as may be designated in said petition for the establishing or enlarging of such hospital and whenever any such proposition shall receive a majority of the votes of the qualified property tax payers voting at such election, said commissioners' court shall establish and maintain such hospital and shall have the following powers:

FIFTY YEARS AGO.

The following letter was received by Mr. Herron from an old war comrade of his, whom he has not seen or heard from since a few days after the battle of Chickamauga in 1863. Mr. Herron was 15 years and eight months old at the time this discharge, (as mentioned), was signed, he having served up to this time, 16 months.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 2, 1913.
Mr. Frank Herron,
Graham, Texas.

Dear Friend and Comrade:

Do you remember Lieutenant Alonzo Lindsey of Capt. B. F. Matthews' Company, the first company made up in Lawrence County, Tenn. for the defense of the South? The same company in which your brother, Charles was brevet 2nd Lieutenant, and your brother James was a member, and later was made Quarter-master of the 3rd Tennessee Regiment, Infantry Volunteers by the solicitation of Capt. Matthews and the writer, and do you remember that I was in command of the company one or two days while encamped at Tippah Ford, Miss. and that at same time Dr. Wright, forget his initials, was provisional surgeon of the regiment, and that I am the man who signed your discharge for being too young and not able to stand the strain of camp life and its duties, in other words, for disability?

Do you remember all the above? Well you may not be cognizant of the fact that I married Etha J. Hagan, daughter of John A. Hagan, owner of Crown Cotton Mills, west of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., and my wife, in correspondence with Mrs. John B. Kennedy, nee Alice McClain, daughter of Dr. Ephraim McClain of Lawrenceburg, Tennessee, ascertained that you were living at or near Graham, Texas. And inasmuch as the history of the 3rd Tennessee Regiment, Infantry Volunteers, written by Col. Geo. C. Porter, is to be published in Saturday's Banner I tried to get your name and Rob't Alford's name included in the list of known survivors, but was too late, as the part including the names had already gone to press, they couldn't include any more names, for which I feel great regret, but write to tell that I paid for a copy of the paper to be mailed to your address, and I desire that after you have received and read it, to write to me what you think of it, and write me all about yourself, and family, if you have a family, and how all these years since the close of the war has been passed. You understand that it was only since noon that I received a telephone message from my wife, that she had today received the letter from Mrs. Alice Kennedy, about your living at Graham, Texas. If I had known this fact two days ago, I could have gotten your name included in the list of survivors of the famous old 3rd Tennessee Regiment Infantry Volunteers, and when I informed Col. Porter that your name had just been received, I mean that I ascertained that you were alive and lived at Graham, Texas, he was as much worried as I am, that we were too late to get your name and Rob't Alford's name (he being the last living member of Capt. Matthews' company in Lawrence County, Tennessee,) inserted among the survivors of the regiment, but I am very late tonight and must close.

Frank you must know that

The action taken by a number of the farmers of the Rocky Mound community in pledging themselves not to kill the quail on their premises nor allow any one else to do so is a step in the right direction and very commendable. There is no helper in the world that can be of such unselfish service as the birds in destroying insects that prey upon the crops. And the hunters will respect the desires of these good farmers; if they do not do so willingly then the law can step in and bring to bear sufficient pressure to persuade them to keep off.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE TO CHAUTAUQUA SOCIETY.

As I look into your faces this afternoon, so full of interest and anticipation in this, the beginning of our new year, then think back over the past year's work, and how much we gleaned from it, I find myself contrasting our privileges and opportunities with those of our grandmothers. Even fifty years ago women past thirty were considered too old to begin any line of special culture, and beside that their hands and hearts were too full, taking care of the physical needs of husband and children to permit of any outside interests. One of the tragedies of life is the awakening of these good women to find the children gone to homes of their own, husbands grown away from them, broadened by business associations, and they beached high and dry. Such, then, was woman's sphere.

Today nobody any longer pretends that a woman's sphere of activity is limited to the four walls of her home. It begins there, but it widens outward in circles of ever-increasing diameter. Father and the children have joined in the effort to keep the home-maker from finding herself shelved in life's prime. No doubt many of us are members of the club because husband or children have urged it. Little side interests make life a far more beautiful and interesting thing. Our exchange of ideas and experiences is helpful. We glean from each book we study, much that is interesting and useful.

Our recital of current events keeps us in touch with the world's progress. What could be more interesting than our 19-13-14 course of study? In the words of our Chautauquan "for months the attention of the world has been centered on the classic lands of the Mediterranean basin, where civilizations have ebbed and flowed for centuries.

The recent wars and rumors of war in the Balkan states make our "Rambles and Studies in Greece" a well chosen subject. "The meaning of Evolution" sounds just mysterious enough to prompt one to delve a little deeper into the old, yet ever new question.

The South American and Panama Canal subjects will prove deeply interesting to us all, most especially to those who hope to attend the celebration in 1915.

Thinking the full Chautauqua course of four books would be a bit heavy for those whose study time is limited we have chosen only two books, and those of us who feel disappointed may console ourselves with the beautiful theory, that "In the next world we'll have time to do all the worth while things we wanted to do in this."

In addition to our regular study course it is the pleasure of our club to interest all Grahamites in improving and beautifying our little city; realizing that nothing that concerns the welfare of our town is foreign to the welfare of our homes; that home will reach its highest ideal for the care and culture of children when the woman who makes it realizes and assumes her civic responsibilities.

We feel greatly encouraged over the ready response of Mrs. Graham to our plea for a rest room for the accommodation of our out-of-town women and children, and when our year-book committee in its report recommended the beautifying of the Court House grounds, as our civic work for this year, the Club unanimously adopted the report.

In conclusion I want to make a personal appeal to each member for help and co-operation in making this a good year—a successful year.

I'm sure you must realize just how hard it will be for me to follow a woman of Mrs. Gallaher's culture and experience, yet it is my earnest desire to give you the very best service in my power and I can only do so with your help and co-operation.

Mrs. Miller.

FAIR TRADE LEAGUE.

Reform, like charity, should begin at home. Efforts to improve conditions in any business are most effective and least harmful when directed by those engaged in that particular business. It often happens, of course, that those engaged in a certain business which sadly needs reforming are unwilling to join a "housecleaning" movement, and after a time the public, acting through the government takes a hand and compels reforms which should have been made voluntarily. As a rule, governmental interference with business practices is to be deplored, but when abuses become intolerable and those responsible refuse to act, it becomes inevitable.

We believe that the overwhelming majority of American business men, in all lines, are honest and desire to deal fairly with each other and with the public. In every line, however, are dishonest and unfair men, whose competition has a tendency to foist upon the trade methods and practices which are distasteful to the majority. Either the good men must assert themselves and establish and maintain proper standards, or the entire trade will suffer public condemnation and possibly governmental regulation. Some such idea as this must have prompted the organization of the American Fair Trade League by a number of business men of national reputation. The constitution of the league declares its objects to be:

1. To aid in the establishment and continuance of fair competitive commercial conditions.
2. To promote honesty in manufacturing, in advertising and in merchandising, in the mutual interest of the consumer, the middleman and the manufacturer.
3. To educate public opinion regarding evils in merchandising methods which operate to the injury of society.

4. To study the waste in merchandise distribution and its relation to the cost of living.
5. To act as a clearing house of information concerning trade practices and systems, and legislation relating thereto.
6. To aid in the enactment and enforcement of laws that will:

- (a) Prohibit and penalize unfair competition.
- (b) Prohibit and penalize dishonest advertising.
- (c) Seek to prevent the elimination of the small individual dealer as a factor in modern retailing.

This is certainly an ambitious programme and the Fair Trade League has assumed a tremendous undertaking. Its central idea is a frank recognition that fair dealing is not only profitable but is essential to permanency of any business. A notable feature is a demand for the "continuance of fair competitive conditions" and for a law to "prohibit and penalize unfair competition."

It is well settled that the government may rightfully act to prevent the destruction of competition, but the proposal that it should go further and penalize unfair competition is comparatively new. It is significant, however, that several of the states have gone so far as to forbid a greater variation in freight rates, and the lower house of congress inserted a provision in the tariff bill imposing double duties on articles sent to the United States and sold at prices lower than is charged in the country of production. These two efforts to come perilously near to price regulation, which would be a dangerous departure from the settled policy of the government.

If the Fair Trade League will grow in membership and influence until it can effect the reforms outlined for it in the programme presented, it will relieve the government of a huge task and confer an inestimable blessing upon the business men of the United States.—Ft. Worth Record.

HOLDS THE WATER.

Col. Exall, in 'Bulletin No. 14' of his 'Agricultural Correspondence Series' (which, parenthetically, is the best class of farming literature now emanating from any source), recites some facts that show how great a tonnage of water can be stored in the soil with a little effort. He states that it has been determined by actual test that in an acre of land deep-plowed in the fall there were 140 more tons of water than in an adjoining acre not so treated. In some cases the excess of water content in fall-plowed land was 264 tons. The results of other experiments are recited to show that it is easily possible, in the driest years, to store in the soil all the water that our staple crops will need to mature them. But to derive the benefit of this store, it requires that the escape of this stored-up moisture shall be prevented by frequent shallow cultivations, particularly during the hot months when the sun drinks deep. After describing the methods of storing water in the soils, Col. Exall concludes with this statement, which we doubt if any one will care to contradict: "With such preparation before the rains come, such soil should and will absorb enough water to insure a crop next summer whether the rains are scarce or not."—Dallas News.

News from our County Correspondents

Mount Pleasant.

Well, Jupiter Pluvius seems to have lost control of his rain making machinery and people are saying it is awfully wet weather for the time of year and cotton is damaged to some extent, but as the price of the fleecy stuff is steadily advancing we say "let'er slosh." Now we use the term "Jupiter Pluvius" just to be "fashionable" or "up-to-date" if you please, because coming down to the facts we believe with all our heart that God doeth all things (good things) and does them well. Of course His way of doing things does not always suit the little animals we call "human beings," neither do we receive a temporal blessing in everything He brings to pass.

After all, this-old earth is truly a good summer and winter resort—I mean of course, for well-to-do persons. As to the common herd, they will either have to get off the earth or elect some Moses to lead them out of this wilderness of Rent and Interest on high priced land notes, into the promised land of "homes for the homeless."

No, I haven't pledged myself to vote for Terrell, but the II plank of his platform looks good to me, and I ask all land tenants and all people who are trying to pay interest on high priced land notes to read it, and look for and demand something more definite along this line.

I seem to hear some one say, Plow Boy, Terrell is an anti and you know you are a pro—yes, I know, but Terrell has a way of controlling prohibitionists, you see, even our pro servants at Austin; and I for one think it high time that we quit being the tail to the political kite of pro and anti politicians.

Land rent and interest on high priced land notes is hurting the common folk and file of humanity even worse than the saloon, and if we would rescue and perpetuate this "land of the free and home of the brave" we must have some sensible land legislation.

Oh well, I did think I would like to be governor, but I have decided that I would rather be County Commissioner of precinct No. 1, Young County.

A cloud of sadness now hovers over this and Miller Bend communities on account of the death of Miss Carrie McCalister of Miller Bend. Jean.

Dear Mr. Reporter, Correspondents and readers: As we have not been heard from for a few weeks will try to send in a few items.

Old Young county has certainly gone wet the past few days. The wet weather has delayed cotton picking and has destroyed some cotton but the good season will make up for the loss I think.

There is quite a good deal of cotton to pick in our community yet.

Our gin will gin somewhere close to 600 bales this season, and with the high prices, both on lint and seed our people will be in very good shape, despite the short crop.

C. A. Simmons went to Olney Monday to get his false teeth. My! but he sure does need them. He looks like "Little Willie" of Socialist fame since he had his teeth all taken out.

Wm. Stanford is having a set of new teeth made. Look out widows and old maids, business will soon pick up with some of you.

Noah Cantwell has made him a new wagon bed. We don't know whether he is fixing to finish gather his cotton or run away and let the other fellow do the worrying.

Well as it has been raining so that I haven't gone anywhere to learn any news guess I had better bring this to a close.

Snow Flake.

Loving.

Well the sunshine has come again and we sure feel good after being cooped up in the house for several days. No one can say that we lack a good season now and the farmers who contemplate sowing wheat or oats can now go to work.

Mr. Aut. Bills has bought out George Smith, south of Loving, and will move onto his farm in the near future.

The writer visited Zack Wyatt the other day and found him to be the happiest and most independent farmer in the county. Zack has two beef cows up fattening on corn chops from corn of his own raising, and ground on his own mill; he has 6 large hogs in the same pen with his beef, fed mostly by the droppings. Near by we saw a large patch of pumpkin yams, and a pea patch, sorghum patch and mill where he makes his own syrup and many other things to make life real. Zack lives in a house that he built of his own native timber, for no other purpose, he says, "than to beat the lumber trust." Like Rufus Sanders, sits on his own hearthstone, chews his own tobacco and spits where he durn pleases.

We learn that the coal mine company at Loving is laying off the Marshall farm in lots near the coal mine and will build houses there for the miners.

Will Lawrence will close out his business here in a few days and will go to Abilene, where he will attend Simmons' college a year.

We want to thank Mr. G. C. Boyle for the good things he said about The Reporter, and its Correspondents in last week's paper, also Silver Bell, who opened her heart and poured out in abundance the many good words in The Reporter's and Correspondents' praise. We always like to see anyone who has roses to scatter. Scatter them in our pathway while living, and not wait till after we are buried to scatter them over our grave. Thank you, Silver Bell.

Miss Lula Sanders, who was reported sick last week is able to be up.

Mr. Lewis and Will Maples made a prospecting trip to the city of Wichita Falls last week but returned satisfied with this country.

As I have been absent about two weeks I will bring a little more news from this part of the world.

Miss Annie Mary Slater will pick cotton this week for Mr. John Workman.

Misses Dora and Ida McBee and Mr. W. K. McBee were business callers in the city Monday.

Mr. Noel Sims of Loving was in our community Sunday afternoon but seemed somewhat lonely as Miss Dowdy has gone and comes to Red Top no more.

Come on, Noel, perhaps you can find another pretty girl that would like to ride with you.

E. T. Slater has been breaking some of his young stock in the last few weeks.

Well as my items are growing long I will go for this time and maybe I will see you readers and Correspondents on Big Monday.

Spinster Maid.

I surely was sorry to have to say good by to Happy Girl. One of our good writers is gone, but I'm sure we all wish her well in her new home.

Mrs. G. W. McCommas visited her daughter Mrs. Clark Knight in Graham for several days last week.

Graham, Texas.

Salem.

We have to admit that our effort to boycott The Reporter last week proved a failure, for lo! it appeared on time and with more news and better than ever, but the effort put us one week behind which makes some of our items sound like ancient history.

Sunday was a beautiful day here, after two weeks of clouds and many showers of rain.

Wheat sowing is the order of the day and as the earth is well soaked it is a fine time for the sowing of small grain. Wheat in the ground only five days is now up to a fine stand.

Very little cotton picked last week, mud too deep, in fact there is not much left in the fields to pick. The cotton grower is out of luck, for as time goes on the big old bales in Dixie grows still smaller and smaller. This leaves the man with a one to three bale crop and a large family to provide for in hard shape. However, if reports are true, the Kansas farmer is in as bad shape as the cotton man, for we notice that on account of the great drouth up there the farmers cut off their whiskers and use them for baled hay. Now when an old time Kansas populist is driven by hard times to part with his whiskers the extreme limit has been reached.

W. I. Gilmore and J. L. McLaren shipped a car of cattle this week.

There is some sickness here now and the doctors have been called in several times. Mr. J. H. Carter is very sick, also Mrs. Maggie Gilmore. We hope to hear of their complete recovery soon.

Mrs. Pearl Kisinger and children visited her mother, Mrs. S. H. Tipton last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Quitman Nelson of Flat Rock are here to help care for their mother, Mrs. Maggie Gilmore.

D. Hovery has out eight bales of cotton. Where cotton is only half hatched out it is being pulled instead of picked and as Silver Bell is having a hard time picking cotton with a claw hammer we will say that last year a Mrs. Robison, living near Bomer-ton in Baylor county raised and sold $300.00 worth of turkeys and had no picking to do. Why not invest in a few turkeys and an incubator and throw the old hammer away?

We are glad that Mountain Home has joined the band.

We notice the Snap Shot man says it is now against the law to sow rye. We told Marion Henderson about it, but he said it didn't make any difference to him, that he had already sown ten acres.

Misses Edna Jarnagin and Maggie Moran of Henry Chapel visited Mrs. Sallie Criswell last Saturday night.

Hansford Hatfield is visiting home folks now. Salemite.

Mr. Tom Rux of True was in Orth Saturday looking for bicycle tires that he had ordered.

The 42 game was well attended Saturday. I understand that some are trying to stop so much 42 at Orth; that is, if the ladies will help they will cut it out.

Well I am late again with my letter. I will try to be on time from this on.

Ridley Jeffery and wife were in Orth one day last week.

T. J. Routon took a trip to Elizaville last week where he went to look at some land and some horse property. He is thinking of trading his store at Orth for the property but it didn't suit so I guess the trade is off.

Some have a fine stand of wheat; others are waiting for it to get dry enough to sow.

Notice to Tax Payers

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Garrett and family visited Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Craig Sunday.

Plow Boy I think you surely are having a time with your bridge; if you need any help tell your neighbors. Blondie.

Flint Creek.

Hello Mr. Editor and Correspondents. Oh its nothing but old Flint Creek coming to the front again.

I thought I would try and tell you people what is happening at Flint Creek, for I am sure everyone would like to know. You people don't think there is anyone in this community that can write, but you see there is.

HOW CORN.

...ing article from the Ranch will prove in- ... to those who will com- ... for corn prizes in the County Fair to be held here in the near future.

It is highly desirable that the members of boys' corn clubs learn the characteristics of a good ear of corn if they are to win prizes or to select seed with possibilities of a heavy yield. This information can be obtained only by studying a typical ear of corn. When once familiar with the type other specimen ears may be compared to the typical ear of the variety and all undesirable ears discarded.

The primary object in corn judging is to compare ears of corn by a uniform sample in order that the best ears may be selected for seed. By good seed corn we mean that which yields the most corn of the best quality, either for home use or for market; that which is the most profitable for the grower. For this purpose we seek for such qualities as soundness and maturity; such points as indicate a good yield, as size, uniformity, shape of ears, shape of kernels, well-filled butts and tips, and per cent of corn to cob; the qualities which insure a good stand as vitality and per cent show the characteristics of the variety or strain, as trueness in color, type, etc. The value of the grain for feeding and market, as comparative per cent of starch, oil and protein.

The following points are pertinent. Many of them are taken from a bulletin on corn judging written by the present writer while professor of agricultural education at the University of Arkansas.

Ten ears usually constitute an exhibit of corn. This number of ears makes it possible to get an idea of the general uniformity of the race and offers a convenient number for the necessary calculations in scoring. The ears should be handled carefully. By carelessly dropping an ear part of the kernels may be shelled off or otherwise mutilated. This will interfere with determining the per cent of corn to the cob and leave doubt as to the soundness and vitality of the kernels. The sample ears should be carefully dried, each ear securely wrapped before sending to the exhibit.

The samples selected should have a fresh bright color as an indication of vitality and soundness and the absence of rotten or faulty kernels. A white kernel on a yellow variety or a yellow kernel on a white variety is an indication of a cross between these varieties which is undesirable if we are breeding for purity or strain. White corn should have white cobs except in few cases with special varieties.

The ear ripens the silk at the butt first, the middle of the ear next and at the tip last, hence it often happens that the silk at the butt becomes receptive for pollen before the pollen of that variety is ready for fertilization in which case the butt will not fill out or will receive pollen from another variety and be mixed. It also happens frequently that the silks at the tip do not become receptive till the pollen of the variety is gone, consequently the tip often does not fill or is fertilized with pollen from another variety.

If the mixture is between yellow and white corn it can easily be detected from the crown of the kernel. Each ear of the exhibit must be in good condition for market, that is, it must be sound, fully matured, bright and attractive in color, and free from injury, disease and insect depredations. Immature ears can be easily detected by loose, shriveled kernels. In this case unfavorable seasons or other causes have caused the ear to dry out, leaving the kernels "chaffy."

The tips of the ears should be filled and better if closed, that is the end of the cob covered. The rows should be continuous to the tip, with as little diminution in size and irregularity in shape as possible. In the South where the corn bud worm is so common, less attention is given to the tips however, a real good ear of corn should have a well-filled tip. It is a matter of experience with farmers that unfavorable seasons show more poorly filled tips and that strains with comparatively short ears are apt to fill better than those which produce long ears. It must be borne in mind that a yield of corn to the acre is the chief aim, hence if ears with exposed tips produce more corn they are desirable.

The kernels should extend over the butt in regular rows and close around the shank so that when the shank is removed in husking a depression is left. Swelled butts or butts with irregular rows or distorted kernels are faults and should be scored accordingly by the judge. Since the kernels are formed first on the butts, good butts are usually more frequent than good tips.

The shape of the kernel depends very largely upon the variety. In general, it may be said that in all ears of the exhibit kernels should be uniform. Remove two kernels one-third the distance from butt to tip from each ear and place them on a table with tips fronting towards you. You may then compare the kernels of each ear as to uniformity. The best shape is wedge-shaped kernels. This permits the largest possible per cent of corn to the cob.

The space between the kernels or furrows should not be over one-thirty-second part of an inch at any part of the row. The space is usually greatest in broad shallow kernel type of corn. It is generally accompanied with a comparatively small number of rows to the ear, hence a small proportion of grain to the cob, which is objectionable.

The space between the kernels at the tip where the kernels are attached to the cob should be carefully noted. To examine for this, shell off a space four rows in width and about four inches long when the test for per cent of grain to the cob is to be made. Examine the ends of the rows down next to the cob. Space at the tip indicates poorly shaped kernels, low in vitality and lacking in the important elements of composition.

Weight of grain may be determined by shelling and weighing five ears of the exhibit. Weigh the cobs and subtract the weight from weight of ears and result will be the weight of the grain. The proportion of grain to the cob depends to a large extent on the maturity of the ears. If the ears are thoroughly dried out the percentage will be greater than in moist ears.

The per cent of corn to the cob varies between 86 per cent and 90 per cent, according to the variety and condition of the grain. The proportion given for a few of the standard varieties is as follows:

Reid's Yellow Dent, 88 per ct.; Golden Eagle, 90 per ct.; Riley's Favorite, 90 per ct.; Learning, 88 per ct.; Boon County White, 86 per ct.; Silvermine, 90 per ct.

Using Facilities at Hand.

One great difference between the successful man and the unsuccessful is that the successful man knows how to use the facilities he has. And come what may the successful man will use such as he has to succeed in his undertaking.

Most every farm has advantages for certain crops and certain animals. Be it ever so poor and its natural advantages ever so unattractive the skillful manager will find features for which the farm is adapted and will adapt its environment to some division of successful agriculture.

The trite phrase that "there is more in the man than there is in the land" has more truth in it than would at first appear. It is the manager after all that is responsible for the success of the operations and unless he can organize and correlate the farm and equipment for profitable production the richest farm is a failure so far as profit is concerned.

There are farms in the Southwest that are not properly organized; the cropping system on many farms is not adapted to the system in operation; the relation of crops to animals is not satisfactory on other farms. That is to say the manager is not using the facilities at hand to make the farm pay a profit.

Much time and money have been wasted trying to adjust the farm to the ideal of the manager, or the plan on a neighboring farm where conditions are different and where perhaps the manager of that farm has more capital and more training as an organizer. It is always advisable to consider every suggestion and look for ideals, but let us not forget to evolve the plan from our own farm out of our own conditions.

The first thought in reorganization should be, what natural advantages has this farm? Then what can be most successfully produced that can be disposed of at a profit? These answers will start us to using the facilities at hand.—Farm & Ranch.

Does it Pay to Raise Cotton by Irrigation?

Just why more cotton is not planted and cultivated on land that can be irrigated is a puzzling problem to the Times. It has been demonstrated every year since the irrigation ditch was put in that as much as a bale per acre of cotton can be produced on the land that is irrigated when properly cultivated, while cotton planted on the same kind of land without being irrigated could not be made to produce more than half as much.

C. A. Combs, one of the cotton farmers in the irrigation district, who has a tract of land rented that is located about one-half mile below Lake Wichita, planted to cotton last year fifty acres, and picked and marketed forty-nine bales of cotton of an average weight of 500 pounds. This year Mr. Wright has in 70 acres. So far he has picked and marketed six bales of cotton, and is confident that he will get at least sixty bales from the 70 acres. He says he has on his place some cotton that will make at least two bales of cotton per acre.

The Times has no particular object in urging that more cotton be planted on irrigable land except for the good of the country. As The Times understands it, this irrigable land can be rented on the same terms as dry lands, excepting that an annual water rental of $2 per acre is charged up to the tenant, and that seems reasonable enough.—Wichita Falls Times.
