At least 11 die in Chicago train crash

CHICAGO (AP) - At least 11 persons were killed and about 200 injured Friday night when a rush-hour elevated train slammed into the rear of another one reportedly stopped on the tracks, sending cars and passengers spilling into a downtown

Rescued workers battled for hours with hacksaws and torches to cut the dead and injured out of the crumpled Chicago Transit Authority cars, two lying in the street and a two others standing on end against the superstructure of the elevated tracks.

The crash occurred about 5:30 p.m. at a sharp turn in the elevated tracks at Lake Street and Wabash Avenue on the northeast corner of Chicago's Loop in the heart of the city's business district.

"People fell out of the train and the train fell on top of them," said Agnes McCormick, an eyewitness sitting in a nearby restaurant.

"It was horrible, just horrible," said a passenger, Erica Williams, 33. 'We were making a turn. The next thing I knew, I was falling forward. I heard a terrible noise and that was

Witnesses said there was a booming sound and flash like lightning striking as the Dan Ryan-Lake Street train, bound for the western suburb of Oak Park, slammed into the Ravenswood

As the cars plunged through the air, passengers were hurled from their seats, some spilling out windows and other becoming tangled in the wreckage.

"Everybody was flying, seats, everything ... " said a passenger, Marie Anselmo, 56, of River Forest.

Police immediately put out a call for all doctors living on the Near North Side to go to hospitals in the area to treat the injured and asked for emergency blood donors. Dr. Bernard J. Feldman, emergency services director at Northwestern Memorial Hospital, said medical workers there compared the scene in the emergency room to their experiences in Vietnam. Five dead passengers were reported at Northwestern's Wesley Pavilion. About a dozen of those injured were reported in critical condition. CTA spokesman Don Yabush said the cause of the crash was not known. He said he did not know when Loop service could be restored.

The commuter train accident was the first serious one since a Jan. 9, 1976, collision in which 333 persons were injured.

Another CTA spokesman said that about 20 minutes before the crash there appeared to be a switching pro-blem on the northwest end of the Loop. An Evanston Express train which normally travels on the Inner Loop track was using the Outer Loop track, possibly because of switching trouble, said spokesman Bill Baxa. It was on the Outer Loop track that the accident occurred, he said.

Yabush said it was not determined yet whether the first six-car train, headed west through the Loop bound for the city's Northwest Side, was stopped when the second eight-car train ployed into it. Yabush said that under normal operation, sensors in the tracks convey signals from one train to the motor of another on the same track, automatically regulating speed of the following train.

The automatic cab signaling normally supercedes the motorman's influence, he said. But Yabush said it is mechanically possible to bypass the Buchanan argued that conservatives and Republicans should free themselves from the "big business image" of the GOP by attacking big business when it bought favor through lobbyists, engaged in corrupt practices or promoted trade with the Soviet Union. He also suggested that the best way to deal with the Nixon Administration scandals was to forget them and go on

Buchanan recalled an incident where an adviser to President Franklin D. Senate okays changes

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The Senate approved the first major reorganization of its committee system in 30 years Friday. The vote was 89 to 1.

The plan, not radical to start with, was shaved back both in the Rules

Buffalo braces for new blast of winter's fury

By The Associated Press

The long-shivering East Coast got a brief respite from the cold Friday, but forecasters warned of new weather problems ahead, including another possible blizzard in hard-hit Buffalo,

The warning came as natural gas, diverted from the West under President Carter's emergency energy bill, was moving toward fuel-starved areas in the East and Midwest which were trying to recover from last weekend's snows and cold.

Columbia Gas Transmission Corp. announced at Charleston, W.Va., that heavy demand on its natural gas reserves had reduced its ability to deliver gas to the 80 retail utilities it serves in seven eastern states and the District of Columbia.

'This action means that should extremely cold weather occur during the next two months, retail gas companies served by the tran-smission company will be forced to implement emergency curtailment activity at a higher temperature than in the past," the company said. The weather bureau said early Friday that temperatures in the eastern United States were at nearnormal levels. But the forecasters also said a new surge of unseasonably cold weather threatened to move into the area by Saturday.

Then, Friday afternoon, the National Weather Service issued a special report, predicting blizzard conditions throughout most of western New York, beginning Saturday and continuing into Sunday.

E. Stevenson (D-III.), chairman of the special study committee that produced the measure, said the final result will substantially alter both structure and procedures, helping streamline operations and end jurisdictional overlap.

The only vote against the plan was cast by Quentin N. Burdick (D-N.D.), who was in line to become chairman of the post office committee, which the plan abolishes.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd (D-W.Va.) and Minority Leader Howard H. Baker (R-Tenn.) both said the plan did not go as far as they wanted, but "it's better than what we have." Byrd, together with Rules Committee Chairman Howard W. Cannon (D-Nev.), helped work out some of the concessions and compromises that smoothed the way for

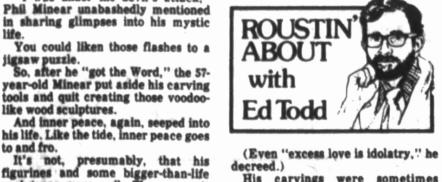

Stevenson had sought a reduction of the committees from 31 to 15, but as approved by the Senate, the plan reduces the number of committees and joint committees form 31 to 25. However, the number may drop to 22

However, the number may drop to 22 by the end of the year through later abolition of panels on nutrition, joint printing and joint library.

In one of its most significant features, the plan ends huge overlaps on energy policy by consolidating into a new Energy and Natural Resources Committee virtually all energy and minerals legislation. It also planearly all jurisdiction overlaps vironmental matters in ment and Public Works

Unemployment here again lowest in state

Midland regained its position as the city with the lowest unemployment rate in Texas in December, as employment increased by 1.5 per cent to Unemployment in Midland in December was 2.4 per cent. The civilian labor force was 37,690, up 3.3 per cent from December 1975, the Texas Enployment Commission said.

December's 2.4 per cent unemployment rate was down from 2.9 per cent in November. The commission projects a 2.6 per cent unemployment rate in March, with approximately 36.850 persons working.

Odessa's unemployement rate for December was 2.8 per cent, down from 3 per cent in November. The commission projects a 3.1 per cent unemployment rate in March for

The civilian labor force in Odessa during December was 52,690.

The commission's study on employment trends in Midland showed a continued climb in wage and salary employment during December, with 29,660 persons in that category.

Durable goods gained slightly but the increase was partially offset by a minor loss in non-durable goods manufacturing.

Nonmanufacturing jobs increased by 360 during the month, with largest increases in mining and retail trade. The increases were caused by new contracts taking effect and the holiday season.

The early cold weather slowed construction a little but gave the cotton harvest an assist, the commission said, and all gins ran at full capacity.

For March, the commission projects a further advance to 29,740 persons in wage and salary positions.

Further gains in manufacturing, related to oil expansion and needs. are predicted. Mining employment is expected to be nearly stable. Stability also is expected in most nonmanufacturing needs, although some small advances are expected. Agriculture will be in the completion stage of land preparation in March. The mid-December figure of 890 resident workers looking for employment was the lowest in the state and well below the national average. Some hard to fill but primarily skilled job openings available now are alteration person, auto body repair, auto mechanic, service station attendant, insurance claims adjuster, clerical (all fields), drafting clerks, drilling engineer, electronic technician, electrician, geological drafter and geologist.

Other openings are for a janitor. manager trainee, orderly, payroll clerk, pumper, restaurant workers (all types), sales (all types), secretary, security guard, seismic observer, sheet metal worker, stenographers, truck mechanic and

Also in demand are a production agineer, electrical designer and a contract procurement manager, all with considerable years of experience in petro-chemical or petroleum backgrounds.

There is a steady demand for bookkeepers, cafeteria workers, cooks, cashier-checkers, roustabouts, compressor sales and service personnel. Persons with these skills usually can be placed on the job in a short time.

Mild winds, cooler forecast

It was a pleasant spring-like 65 degrees for the high Friday, but the temperature today is expected to reach only the mid-50s, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal said.

Sunday is expected to be slightly warmer

Winds are expected to be southerly from 10 to 15 mph.

It was 45 degrees under clear skies Friday night in Andrews, and 40 degrees in Stanton Friday night. Temperatures elsewhere in the Midland area were also reported pleasant, with little or no winds.

Fair temperatures and clear skies prevailed over most of Texas Friday as part of a welcome warming trend that settled over the state, but cooler temperatures were expected during the weekend.

Only the extreme east and southeast portions of Texas reported cloudy skies. The blanket of low clouds and patchy fog extended east of a line from Texarkana to Longview to Houston and was moving slowly eastward out of the state.

Winds across the state were light and northly to northwesterly spreading dry air over Texas and helping clear the skies.

Temperatures early in the afternoon ranged from 52 in El Paso and Wichita Falls to the mid 60s in Dele Rio, Waco and portions of the Lower

The National Weather Service said cooler temperatures will prevail Saturday under partly cloudy skies.

After the January 1976 accident, the CTA board issued an order prohibiting any such bypassing on trains in passenger service.

The driver of the second train. Stephen A. Martin, 34, was reported in serious condition at Northwestern. Rescue workers climbed a ladder in the snow and darkness and crawled through the mangled and twisted wreckage of the cars still on the tracks to search for persons remaining in the wreckage. 'Some man was saying, 'Don't

Another passenger, John Williams, said a girl kept wailing, "My mother is dead...my mother is dead."

The last serious CTA crash occurred on Jan. 9, 1976, when one train crashed into the rear of another standing on the tracks, injuring 333 persons. There were no fatalities in that accident.

In 1974, there were four serious CTA accidents, the worst of which was a similar rear-end collision at a South Side station that injured 224.

Another 41 persons were hurt in a September 1974 crash. After last year's crash, CTA authorities embarked on an extensive renovation program to revamp safety switches, installing the automatic fail-safe signaling equipment. The project, which cost several million dollars, was designed to prevent further collisions.

Some two hours after Friday night's accident, City Health Commissioner Murray Brown said that "all the seriously injured people have been brought out" of the trains.

Fire Commissioner Robert Quinn said cleanup of the wreckage was uncertain because the sidewalks under the mangled train cars alo both houses of Congress. But Carter said he wanted "the same authority" past Presidents enjoyed and his press secretary, Jody Powell, said the administration felt there was "absolutely no way" to meet its goals without that authority. "It would be a futile effort," Powell said, if Brooks' proposal prevails.

With Brooks sponsoring his own legislation, Powell said he was unsure who would introduce the President's bill in the House. He also indicated uncertainty about the prospect for hearings in Brooks' committee.

The Texas Democrat said in an interview, "Of course, we'll have hearings," but added that he might put the controversial consumer protection agency legislation ahead of the reorganization authority bills. "Carter was strong for consumer protection, you remember," Brooks said.

In a sarcastic tone, the Government Operations chairman said that while the hearings were pending, Carter 'can start writing some of his reorganization plans. I'd like to know what they're going to reorganize. In view of their openness, they might tell us that. They haven't told me a thing."

Powell said there were no firm reorganization plans, but that the executive office of the President was a 'likely' target for the first of them. He said Carter wanted "a massive study" of the Federal bureaucracy by a group drawn from the public, Congress and the executive branch, but said the first reorganization plans would be ready this year.

The bill submitted by Carter would allow the President to transfer, consolidate or abolish sub-cabinet agencies by submitting reorganization plans to Congress. The plans could be amended by the President within 30 days of submission to meet congressional objections, but would take effect automatically unless vetoed by the House or Senate within 60 days.

Brooks and others have questioned the constitutionality of the "one-house but Powell said the Justice Department had advised Carter it is proper "in this context."

The dispute with Brooks began to develop just before New Year's, when the Texas Democrat visited Carter in Plains. He told a press conference then that he would cooperate in getting quick action on the reorganization authority, without indicating any disagreement on the details.

Subsequently, it was learned that Brooks had told Carter that he wanted that authority changed to require affirmative action by both houses of Congress. Both the President and Thomas B.

(Bert) Lance, director of the Office of Management and Budget, have been dealing with Brooks on the issue. They were unable to persuade him to back down from his opposition to Carter's proposal. officials Administration and Democratic congressional leaders both expressed puzzlement Friday about the reason for Brooks' adamancy on the issue.

Brooks himself said it was because "we have just lived through a time when we saw what can happen when Congress makes broad delegations of its powers to a President. I do not want any President to have the opportunity to abuse our governmental process that Mr. Nixon assumed he

Coffee is the economic base for most Central American countries. and the spreading disease will pose a difficult choice for their governmenta: burning every plant in in-fected areas, or spending millions of dollars in an effort to control it.

The rust is a fungus transmitted by tiny windborne spores that can be carried to fields miles away by men and machinery. It invaded Nicaragua last November and has already infected 12,946 acres of its 266,868-acre coffee region.

'There is no doubt the rust will reach the rest of Central America. The question is when and where," said George H. Berg, director of a U.N.-sponsored project for plant protection and quarantine in Central America, Mexico and the Caribbean.

No one knows how the rust got to Nicaragua. It originated in Africa, spread across Asia and in 1960 crossed the Atlantic to Brazil. Nicaragua's first attempts to eradicate it have failed.

The governments of Nicaragua and neighboring countries have agreed to invest $20 million in a massive campaign to impede the rust's

Some countries have considered stopping all imports from Nicaragua to keep out spore-carrying goods, but they have not yet acted on this

Coffee experts say the rust usually wipes out 30 per cent of production within three years, the time it takes to destroy individual plants. In some countries 90 per cent of the crop has been lost. Sri Lanka switched from coffee to tea production after the rust ruined its crops.

Dr. Dorothy Shaw, an Australian plant scientist who successfully killed off coffee rust in New Guinea in 1965. says the coffee countries must choose between total eradication and undertaking expensive control measures to retard the spread of rust.

"There may be a chance to stop it if it comes through the main ports," Dr. Shaw told a recent conference of government officials and growers in San Salvador. "However, neither you, nor I, nor anyone know where windborne spores might land. This is the difficulty I see with El Salvador."

She said eradication can be accomplished only through a scorchedearth policy - using herbicides and fire to destroy all the plants in an infected area.

Even a delay of one day might be the difference between success or failure of an eradication campaign,"

WASHINGTON - In an unprecedented action, a former mental patient has recovered money damages from state hospital doctors who illegally confined him in an institution against his will.

A settlement, announced here Friday, provided for payment of $20,000 to Kenneth Donaldson, a former Florida mental patient who won a landmark ruling from the Supreme Court in 1975.

The justices unanimously held then that nondangerous, self-sufficient mental patients could not be confined involuntarily in state hospitals without

Krueger pursuing decontrol

DALLAS (AP) - If you don't know what "Hinshaw gas" is, don't feel lonely — House and Senate members didn't know what it was when they included it in President Carter's emergency gas legislation, Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Tex., said Friday. Krueger made a pitch for total deregulation of the gas industry, then pointed out the pitfalls of the Hinshaw language added to the emergency legislation that temporarily deregulates interstate sales of gas.

'Put simply, Hinshaw gas is intrastate gas that at some point in the distribution system flows within an in-terstate pipeline," Krueger told a news conference. "Under the emergency legislation, President Carter can allocate that intrastate gas, although we don't think he will."

The language was added by a staff aide to Sen. Adlai Stevenson Jr., D-Ill., Krueger said. "It was pretty well greased by the time we found out about it," he said. The Hinshaw name is taken from a congressman who originally included it in federal controls in the 1950s. "We have some Hinshaw gas in East and West Texas," Krueger said, "and we could feel some slight effect. But the people in New Mexico and Louisiana could really be hit hard under the Hinshaw language." Krueger said the emergency legislation was "unavoidable" at this time, but also said it won't solve the long-term problem of gas supply. "It will perhaps be our swine flu legislation for 1977. "Texas uses 20 per cent of the natural gas used in the whole country," he said, "and this legislation does nothing for Texas.' He said Texas consumers would probably see slight increases in their gas bills because of the measure. 'We have to address the long-term problem," Krueger said. "We can't simply leap out like Wonder Woman from this ditch we're in.

The Texas congressman said the indicated ceiling on interstate bids for gas of $2.25 per million cubic feet was a form of protection for Texas gas users in that it will keep bidding from getting out of hand. But he said on a long-term basis, ceilings could be part of the problem (of regulation)

Salad Gang never did get it right

By CHRISTOPHER SWEENEY The Manchester Guardian

LONDON — With guffaws and hoots of derision still ringing in their ears, the "Salad Cream Gang," Britain's most incompetent group of criminals, has gone to jail for drug smuggling. During their knockabout career, the gang, which set out to illegally rake in millions, was repeatedly double-crossed, cheated by their friends, robbed by the Moroccan police and finally caught after throwing salad cream at each other during a melee in a

To add to their humiliation, Judge Karmel then passed lenient sentences of one to three years on the seven men and one woman because he said they were clearly too clumsy to be part of any serious international drug opera-

The eight had pleaded guilty to charges of illegally importing drugs

Prosecutor Alan Suckling told the court that on one occasion 95 pounds of cannabis was bought but the gang was unable to smuggle any of it.

Stewart said most of the blacks migrated west after the Civil War. Between that time and the turn of the century it was relatively easy for them to own land, he said.

for which drug dealers are willing to ply their wares. With the increase in price comes an increase in potential profitability if a person is not caught. The increase in potential profitability attracts persons who think they are smart enough to get in and make a big profit and then get out before they are caught. Generally they get in and stay until they are caught. 'But someone else is always standing in line with that same American dream of making it big, so the supply does not diminish. Finally, the enormous profits which the law has made possible have made this an ideal area for organized crime to take over. An example of how tougher laws increases drug traffic, Duncan said, is what happened in the Rocky Mountain states Before the federal Drug Enforcement Administration was created, they had no drug problem in states like Montana and Idaho, he said.

Unworldly athletes no match for cunning of agents

(Second of a series) By DAN LAUCK Newsday

Greg Pruitt was impressed immediately. This agent, Wayne Rodgers, was tailored beautifully and his shoes had a shine that would please a Marine drill sergeant. he radiated success. Even better, with his horn-rim glasses and mild manner, he came across as a high-school physics teacher, someone you would trust. And he was black — "Just what every black wants to see," Pruitt.

Pruitt was sold. He signed an agreement with Rodgers though he was still a junior at the University of Oklahoma and it violated National

"Wayne was constantly enticing me to sign with him," Pruitt said.

Pruitt's action was hardly unusual. Far from it. Rodgers admits that he has signed "several" college athletes while they were still competing, and he was far from a one-man con-glomerate in the field of agentry. Agents are constantly enticing the great players - even the not-so-great players - to sign contracts or take money. How many do? Pro football scouts suggest that it is fairly common in college football. One college basketball coach said he thinks 50 per cent of the blue-chip basketball players are paid by agents. Some people say the figure is higher.

AND PRUITT was better than blue-

Heisman Trophy balloting in his junior year, and he figured to have a good chance at the Heisman his senior year. He was hot property: The agents were banging on his door, including Rodgers. Finally, Pruitt signed. "He (Rodgers) said he wouldn't date it until after the legal date ... He told me, 'Don't you tell anybody.'"

Pruitt, now a star running back with the Cleveland Browns, told no one until a few weeks ago. Had word leaked out, he likely would have been declared ineligible because NCAA rules forbid any player from entering into an agreement with an agent — written or verbal — until he completes his eligibility. With him, Oklahoma won the Big Eight championship, went 10-1 and defeated Penn State in the Sugar Bowl Dec. 31, 1972.

Later, Oklahoma forfeited eight games because of another ineligible player.

There is no way for anyone to know how many college players have signed early, but probably hundreds have signed, or at least committed themselves. They are pressured constantly. Agents call at all times, day and night, suggesting that the players could own half of New Jersey by the time he retires if he will just sign with him. All you have to do, the agent says, is sign on the dotted line. And if you don't want to sign, how about a loan? You need money?

FOR MOST athletes this is the beginning of their life with agents. Only the beginning. They tell every player, "You have to have an agent.

You have to have someone to invest your money and set up your tax shelters and arrange your television commercials and pay your bills."

"I asked one guy how come he charged so much (in fees)," said Sam Green, a rookie linebacker from the University of Florida now with the Seattle Seahawks, "and he said 'cause he'd do little things like pick you up at the airport and take care of your father when he got old." But all that is for show. The one thing which gets a player's name on the dotted line with the greatest consistency is money. There almost always is a hint

"They don't just come out and say, 'Here's $5,000," said Dave Logan, a rookie receiver from the University of Colorado, now with the Browns.

"They make it ambiguous so that later they could say you just misunderstood them. They say something like, 'If I can ever help you out financially ...' That could mean stamp money.

But that isn't what it means at all. It means money for anything: cars, trips to the Bahamas, a sister's operation. Or just 10 bucks, if that's all you need. They just want to get the money into the player's pocket. Once they establish that the player owes them something, it becomes a knife in the player's back. And it works most of the time. That is the reason that Ron and Ken Delpit, a brother agency in California, have gone so far as to have a player's credit checked. The player who told the story, and asked to re-

Rebs spank Cooper, 52-49 As time began to evaporate, Cooper five seconds left.

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

Paul Stueckler has been called a lot of things during his forty-plus years of existence, but predictable has never been one of them. Abilene Cooper found that out the hard way Friday have used the man-for-man defense this season about as often as they've had malaria. They've practiced it behind closed doors when no one was looking, but come game time they've gone strictly with the zone. Until now. Trailing Cooper by two at halftime, and facing possible extinction from the District 5-4A playoff race, the Rebels made the defensive transition and walked away with a 52-49 win over the Cougars at the Lee gym.

"The defense won the game for us," explained Stueckler after the victory that kept his team tied for the second half 5-4A lead with Abilene, who beat Midland Friday.

'We haven't used it all season long because I've always been afraid of getting into foul trouble with it," he said. "But it worked tonight, and now we've got the confidence to use it whenever we need it."

While the Rebels' defensive heroics stole the show, they managed to put the points on the board when they needed them, thanks to a balanced scoring attack that saw four players crash into double figures. Billy Ray nnis led the way w Mike Wallace, Roy Lee Smith and Mike Denny contributed 11, 10 and 10

Dennis Bradford, whose outside shooting got the Cougars off to a fast start, paced the Cooper offensive attack with 14 points. Keith Turner and Tim Orr each had 10.

Stueckler hadn't planned to unload the defensive surprise on Cooper, but a dreadful first half performance that saw Cooper dominate the offensive and defensive boards stimulated the need

"I thought we would have much better success boxing Orr and Bradford out underneath in a manfor-man defense," Stueckler explained

He was right.

Denny, the Rebels' 6-foot-5 postman took charge of Orr, who had found a home under the basket in the first two

After losing the lead seven times in the first half, a Mike Wallace jumper that caromed off the glass with 3:44 remaining in the third quarter put the Rebels out in front for good, 33-32.

With Ennis in foul trouble in that period, Smith, Denny and Wallace picked up the slack, and Denny's jump shot with five second left in the quarter gave the Rebels their biggest lead of the night, 41-34.

But Cooper battled back, as the powerful Orr fought off Denny in the early portion of the final stanza to keep his team within striking distance.

Stueckler gave the Lee fans some uncertain moments at the 6:06 mark of the quarter, when he used up his fourth time out with his team up 45-38.

Stockton stays alive

ANDREWS-The Fort Stockton Panthers remained alive in the District 2-AAA second half cage race here Friday night with a 51-42 victory put on full court pressure, but Wallace penetrated it time and time again with an outstanding display of dribbling, and the Rebels still had an eight point cushion with 1:35 left in the game, 49-41.

But Turner hit from 25 feet, and Cougar forward Sam Houston followed that up with a bucket from inside, and suddenly the advantage was cut to four with just a minute remaining.

Cooper kept up the defensive pressure, but Wallace dribbled the ength of the court and fed off to Smith for a crucial basket with just fifty-

The Cougars still had a final oppurtunity to catch Lee, but Houston failed to connect on a 15-footer with less than a half minute to go, and that iced the game, Stueckler surprised everyone when he used his final timeout with 3:40 left in the last quarter and his team up by six, but their was method in the man's madness.

"You have to a lot of coaching by the seat of your pants," he said, "and I knew then that I had to do something different to shake things up, just like we did with the man-for man defense. I figured there was no use saving our timeouts since we can't use them next season. And once again, the man of unpredicability figured right. The Lee junior varsity team made it a Rebel sweep of Cooper, downing the Cougars 44-43. David Stueckler was high for the winners with nine points.

Lamesa upsets Estacado

LUBBOCK-Lamesa's Guy Price hit a 15-foot jump shot here Friday night to give the Golden Tornadoes a major District 3-AAA basketball upset, 67-65 in double overtime, over Lamesa is now 3-0 in the second half chase, and the upset came only three days after Estacado had upset first half champion Lubbock Dunbar. Estacado is now 2-1 in the second half.

The game was knotted at 55 after regulation play and at 61 after the first overtime. Arnold Martinez hit a 20-foot jumper at the buzzer to send the game into the second overtime. That set up Price's final heroic jumper in the waning seconds of the second overtime period.

Price led the Lamesa charge with 21 points while Clarence Wellington and Ray Pearson each contributed 14 points. Willie Powell had 17 and Freddie Ivory 22 for the Panthers.

Estacado won the JV game, 43-42.

The victory now gives the Tors high hopes of winning the second half race and forcing a district playoff with Dunbar. Lamesa has three second half games left with powers Snyder. Dunbar and Sweetwater

Eagles edge past Pack

ABILENE - The Abilene Eagles came from behind to knock off the Midland Bulldogs, 61-58, Friday night in a District 5-4A basketball game to stay in First place with Midland Lee in the second half of the race. . David Little poured in 20 points while teammate Crisco Smith and Byron Roberts added 16 and 15, to lead the Warbirds to their 17th victory against 12 losses, but more important, a 3-0 league reading.

Midland, ahead at the half, 27-26, gave the Warbirds all they wanted before losing late in the contest.

Paving the way for the Purple Pack was Brently Jackson with 17 points followed by James Hicks with 16 and 14 more by Craig Dunn.

January's 64 good for lead

HONOLULU (AP) - Don January. the slow-moving, softly drawling selfstyled "Old Folks" of the pro tour, had to shoot an almost errorless eight-under-par 64 Friday to take the second-round lead in the $240,000 Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament.

He missed only one green, didn't make a bogey and didn't have a "5" on his card this bright, warm, sunny tropic day in compiling a 36-hold total of 135, nine under par

"Probably the best score I've had since I've been back," said January. His heroics—as usual performed at a relaxed, casual, ambling pace-were necessary to hold off former Hawaiian Open champ Grier Jones and Japanese star Takashi Murakami, tied for second only one stroke back at 136.

Jones birdied his first five holes on the way to another 64, while Murakami, an infrequent player in the United States but a national hero in his homeland, matched the record for the 7,234-yard Waialai Country Club course with a 63 that included 10 birdies and an bogey.

The old record was set by Jack Nicklaus in 1974. He could do no better than a 72 Friday and, for only the second time in six years, failed to qualify for the final two rounds with a 145 total, one over the cutoff figure.

Four of golf's $1 million winners and current PGA champ Dave Stockton also failed to make it. Johnny Miller, who has only $680 to show for his efforts this year, Tom Weiskopf, Gene Littler and Billy Casper all missed

Tom Watson, a record-setting winner in his last two starts and only one stroke out of the lead after the first 18 holes, also had his problems with the gusty Trade Winds that swept over the beaches and through the palm trees of this oceanside layout nestling under the shoulder of Diamond Head

for trade

HOUSTON (AP) - Quarterback Dan Pastorini has told the Chicago Tribune he wants to be traded because he doesn't like the Houston Oiler "management, the fans or the

The Tribune said Pastorini, 27, had asked to be traded to Los Angeles of the National Football League but that Oiler Coach Bum Phillips had told the quarterback the Rams weren't interested.

"I don't believe him (Phillips) because I know better," Pastorini was quoted as saying.

Asked about the Tribune story, Phillips said Thursday night, "I don't know anything about the story. He could have said those things. I'm not saying he didn't. We are all human, but he's been here (in Houston) all week and he didn't say anything to me about being unhappy or wanting to be traded.

"You know it is a contract year for him. That's the year when 90 per cent of the players ask to be traded or announce they are going to retire. I'm not saying that's the only reason why he said those things," the coach said.

Tony sees his future in Seattle

SEATTLE (AP) - If Heisman Trophy winner Tony Dorsett of the University of Pittsburgh can predict the future as well as he can run with a football, he'll be playing for the Seattle Seahawks of the National Football League next season.

Clad in a $5,000 raccoon skin coat, Dorsett told a news conference Thursday, "Personally, I think that there will be a (player) draft and that I'll be in Seattle.'

Court battles have made the future of the player draft doubtful, but Dorsett reiterated, "I have a feeling there will be a draft.'

If there is, the Seahawks are slated to choose second behind the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, the other NFL ex- secure the franchise for a pansion team last year.

Pastorini Cup pressure campaigns caused flight

SEATTLE (AP) - Young tennis star Martina Navratilova, who defected to the United States from Czechoslovakia in September 1975, says the captain of the Czech Davis Cup team drove her from her homeland.

Miss Navratilova, competing this week in a $100,000 women's professional tennis tournament here, said her decision to leave had nothing to do with the Czech government and that she did not defect for "political reasons."

Instead, Miss Navratilova said in an interview published Friday in The Seattle Times, she placed the "blame" on the Czechoslovakian Tennis Federation in general and Czech Davis Cup Coach Antonin Bolardt in particular.

"The tennis federation didn't want me to go out of the country because I was becoming too 'Americanized,' or that I was not a good example of Communist youth, or something like that," the 20-year-old Miss Navratilova said. One person in the association was particularly against me—the Davis Cup team captain, Antonin Bolardt.

'And I believe he was the only person in the association who was against me. Many people were for me, but I have heard that those who were have felt repercussions."

Miss Navratilova has won three of the four touraments on the women's pro circuit this winter, including last week at Bloomington, Minn. She is seeded No. 2 here—behind top-seeded Chris Evert-and plays a semifinal match Saturday.

Miss Navratilova said harassment from the federation reached a peak following the 1975 Wimbledon championships where "they said I was paying too much attention to the American players, that I wasn't paying enough attention to the "Two weeks after Wimbledon I was supposed to go to France for a tournament. But the day before I was to leave the federation said 'no,' that it was sending somebody else instead.

Fla. (AP) — A pair of French-made Inaltera prototypes are poised to challenge Porsche domination as the 24 Hours of Daytona endurance race begins Saturday at 3 p.m.

The Inalteras literally are surrounded by the durable Porsches in the bloated 70-car starting line-up

From their side-by-side second row starting positions, the Inalteras of Jean Pierre Beltoise of France and Italian Lella Lombardi are fronted by the favored Porsche 935 turbos of Jacky Ickx and Bob Wollek, and followed by another two rows of the German marque.

Ickx, the Belgian endurance racing star, gets the honor of starting the pole position Porsche. even though his codriver, Jochen Mass of West Germany, posted the fast time of 127.658 miles per

STERLING CITY—The Greenwood Rangers kept their slim District 10-B cage hopes alive here Friday night with a 71-59 victory over Sterling City. Greenwood is now 21-6 on the year and 3-1 in the second half cage race. Four Rangers soared into double figures as Gordon Williams led the way with 18 points while Russell Brooks added 16. Johnny Womack pumped in 15 points and Mark Swafford had 12 points. Roger Currington led Sterling City with 21 points and Mike Bowen had 10.

The Greenwood girls may have put the final icing on the cake as far as a district title is concerned after defeating Sterling City, 58-39. Greenwood's girls are now 4-0 in the second half and 16-9 on the year. They can sew up the crown with a victory Cindy Brewer had 26 points for Greenwood while Russan Ratliff and LaVonda Pruitt had 12 and 10 points

Houston's Edmond nips Olympian Jones in 60

Houston's Greg Edmond, who beat Auburn Olympian Harvey Glance last week, added yet another Olympian scalp Friday night with a narrow vic-tory over Johnny Jones of Texas in the 60-yard dash at the 4th annual Southwest Conference Indoor Track and Field meet.

Edmond, a transfer from Louisiana State, beat freshman Jones out of the blocks and the Olympian could never make up the stride difference. Edmond was timed in 6.25 while Jones was second at 6.28.

For Edmond, it meant he has now beat half of America's gold medal winning spring relay team at Montreal. "Johnny Jones has a slow start-that make him a target for 60 yards," said Edmond. "He has a gold medal so beating him is prestigious. I need one more meet and then I'm ready. Then I can go against Steve Riddick and Donald Quarrie."

RIDDICK WAS another member of the U.S. sprint relay team.

Jones, a starting halfback in football, said "I've only been working out for two weeks. I don't know if I have the football out of me yet."

Texas A&M's Shifton Baker was an easy winner in the 60 yard hurdles with a 7:31. and Rice won the distance medley medal.

Olympian distance runners Niali O'Shaughnessy, a native of Ireland running for Arkansas, and Canadian Paul Craig of Texas both escaped the upset bug.

O'Shaughnessy established a new SWC record in the 1,000- yard run in a time of 2:06.75, breaking by almost

Nets shock Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Recently acquired Mike Bantom scored 32 points, including two game-winning free throws, as the New York Nets overcame a 15-point deficit to defeat the Philadelphia 76ers 113112 Friday night in a National Baksetball Association game.

Bantom's foul shots with 10 seconds left snapped the Nets' nine-game losing streak on the road.

The 76ers led 85-70 with 3:19 left in the third quarter. But the Nets went on a 16-6 tear to trail by only seven at the end of the period.

The tenacious Nets kept pecking away and finally took a 9998 lead with 7:40 to play. It was their first lead since early in the second quarter Henry Bibby's field goal put the 76ers back on top. But Al Skinner, who finished with 20 points, hit a basket to send the Nets ahead again. The Nets held on until Julius Erving tied the game at 110-110 with a pair of field goals, the last coming at 1:57 remaining in the game.

Chris Evert...the Ice Maiden

Inhuman Chris continues to win

SEATTLE (AP) — They can call her inhuman, even "Ice Maiden," but it won't keep Chris Evert from winning tennis tournaments.

Twice the winner at Wimbledon. Twice the winner of the U.S. Open, and of the French Open, and of the Italian Open. Three times champion on the pro circuit. On clay court, 101 straight victories.

So they call her some more names. So she wins some more.

But she hurts some more, too.
"It's always bothered me," Miss Evert says. "It's bothered me when I've read about myself and felt that the whole world was reading it and is judging me by this particular article, and that's not the way I am at all. 'Because I'm cool on the court and unemotional on the surface, they think that carries over to my private life. I'm very emotional, and I'm very outgoing to my friends. It's like night

SHE DISCUSSED her private side in an interview Thursday with the Seattle Post-Intelligencer during a break in a $100,000 women's tennis tournament where she is, as usual, seeded No. 1.

"There's a lot of things about my, quote, 'image,' that I don't think are me at all," Miss Evert said.

"When I get out on the tennis court. I'm there for a job. That's my career. "Right now I'm not into it entertainment-wise — I'm in it to win. That's the way I've been brought up since I was 6 years old. When I walk out on the tennis court, I want to win,"

"I'm a perfectionist. Whatever I do

I don't want to be mediocre in it, I don't want to be average in it."

AT THE age of 16, her mother started taking her around the tennis world and she started beating all the established players.

Now Miss Evert fears she might go the way of Margaret Court or Billie Jean King, succumbing to a new and younger sensation on the tennis court. "If I let up just a little bit, these girls are just going to come right in and beat me," she says.

Miss Evert says her best friends among her competitors are Kristien Shaw of New York, Rosie Casals of Sausalito, Calif., and Val Ziegenfuss of El Cajon, Calif.

A year ago, Mrs. Shaw gave her a journal in which Miss Evert says she uses each day to set down her thoughts and feelings.

"YOU CAN'T be super, super close with a lot of the girls," she said. "Even though they don't show envious feelings, I know they're there."

She misses relationships with men,

"Winning Wimbledon, winning Forest Hills, and not having anyone to share it with took away some of the glamour," she said. "Ever since Jimmy (Connors), I really haven't had anything deep at all.

Agents pressure college kids main anonymous, said that once the Delpits found out he was behind in a car payment they increased the pressure to lend him money.

THAT PLAYER says he did not give in. Neither did former Notre Dame basketball player John Shumate. Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps said New York agent Norm Blass and Len Snyder, Blass' former partner, tried to lure Shumate into signing during the 1973-74 season. Phelps wrote in his book, "A Coach's World," that Shumate called him and told him of the offer from Snyder. He quoted Shumate as saying, "He told me I shouldn't say anything to you, and he would give me money or plane tickets home anytime I asked." Phelps said in an interview that he called Blass and told him he would never sign one of Phelps' players.

"And he hasn't," Phelps said. Blass said he does not know if it was true or not: He wasn't there. And Snyder? "He denies it, of course," Blass said.

Even though Shumate did not give in to that offer, others do. "I'd say that 50 per cent of the blue-chip (college) basketball players in the country have agents while they're still playing," said George Raveling, Washington State's coach. And Henry Williams, a former basketball player at Jacksonville University, says the figure is higher. "I'd say at least 85 per cent of the top players - players who are gonna make it in the NBA are being paid," he said. He speaks from some experience. He was paid.

In September, 1974; Henry Williams was a basketball player at Jacksonville University, married and had a child. "I had to have money coming in," he said. All the NCAA allowed for a college player, as Williams was then, was books, tuition, board, room and $15 a month.

So when Ron Delpit offered money, Henry Williams accepted. "It wasn't like I was being paid." Williams said. "How can $75 be being paid? If I needed a little extra money for something, they paid for it.

What the players don't realize is that even if they get away with it through college they have forfeited their freedom of choice. And the agents are not real life Santa Clauses. After Gret Pruitt signed his pro contract, his agent, Wayne Rodgers, presented him with an itemized list of everything that Pruitt owed, down to long-distance phone calls. "He insisted that if I needed anything to let him know," Pruitt said. So Pruitt called often. The bill didn't come until time to make a move. The writer with Adams got lucky and snaked in two successive birdie putts to beat the opposition's press. It's mentioned because it's the only golf success story we have to brag about. All the rest are disasters...

One West Texas high school football coach, who just may know what he's talking about, says Odessa High quarterback Darrell Shepard may have committed for Texas, "but that just takes care of the Southwest Conference. Don't count out Oklahoma yet."

MIDLAND LEE basketball Coach Paul Stueckler and his Rebels are concentrating on winning the second half 5-4A title outright, but the veteran mentor can't help looking back over his shoulder at the first half.

"We lost to Midland by two and Odessa Permian by three," reflects Stueckler, "and the fact that we lost by only three to Permian is remarkable. That night they hit 68 per cent of their field shots, which is a Lee gym record. We didn't have a bad night outselves, hitting more than 50 per cent of our shots."...

MIDLAND COLLEGE Coach Deinor Poss says Neill Laws, Richard Holland and Phil Durrette. "haven't been playing, but they've been a definite factor in our success by the way they make the starters hustle in practice."

Amarillo College Coach Gary Cardinal says, in his case, "farm outs" from major colleges are rare. "We try to do our own recruiting, but three players who played for Amarillo last year are playing in four-year colleges this year.

Makes you wonder who's getting the $175,000 salaries. At those prices a long schedule and jet travel are no longer excuses for the admitted practice of "getting acquainted for three periods before starting to play."

Is anyone naive enough to look around at the world today and seriously believe that athletic results aren't doctored? The only question would be, to what extent, which ones and the means...

It seems as long as man crawls out of bed each morning, there will be controversy about his activity the rest

We, who call ourselves sportsmen. know very well the pressures of criticism other than the constructive type. Hunters and fishermen have braved frontal attacks of cynics and anti-groups for many years.

Now, because of these pressures, we have to be critical of ourselves as well. We have to do this to insure that our activities are above reproach to those who are misinformed amd close-minded We know full well about hunters who are stereotyped as slaughterers and trigger-happy killers. About the fishermen who are litter bugs and pollutionists. Now, the latest topic for discussion is the modern technology which is becoming more and more prominent in hunting and fishing endea vors One of the latest articles, appearing in one of the foremost outdoor magazines, really laid it on heavy, particularly on the fishermen.

THE AUTHOR was trying to indicate a trend, as I interpreted it, by talking about how man was taking away the sporting edge with the use of such things as the sleek, carpeted bass boats, fully-equipped with depth-

I suppose there is some truth in all criticism, but the thing that worries me, is the general tone of extremism that always seems to come out in

I'm not really qualified to be promoting my opinion, but it seems that there should be room for us good ol' boys somewhere between fishing for black marlin with cotton string and a safety pin, and hunting kodiak bear with a nail file, to using atomic submarine and a B-11 bomber for

The largest documented hybrid white/striped bass taken in Texas waters was landed by Albert Mata on Lake Nasworthy near San Angelo. It weighed 9 1/2 pounds with a length of

Barbie widens ice lead

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) - Barbie Smith of Denver widened her lead over favored Linda Fratianne Friday after the short program in the senior women's event at the U.S. Figure Skating Championships in the Hartford Civic Center.

Miss Smith, 18, apparently fully recovered from a leg fracture that forced her out of last year's nationals, received all seven first-place votes in the short program, two minutes of mandatory maneuvers. Miss Smith's hort program performance, worth 20 percent of the final total, gave her nine ordinals and 65.48 points as the skaters moved into Saturday night's freestyle finale.

Freestyle accounts for 50 percent of the final total and is considered Miss Fratianne's strong suit, Miss Fratianne, an Olympian from Northridge, Calif.-who, according to some observers, skated a better freestyle routine than champion Dorothy Hamili in last year's nationals-finished Friday's program in second place with 14 ordinals and 64.44 points.

WASHINGTON - The Rev. Dr. Charles A. Trentham's study is appointed with presidential memorabilia. Harry Truman's church pew is off to one side. George Washington's and Dwight D. Eisenhower's inaugural prayers are framed behind glass. Color portraits of all chief executives cover one wall. And on the coffee table is a copy of Jimmy Carter's autobiography,

'Why Not the Best.''
Trentham, senior minister of First Baptist Church at 16th and O Streets NW, has never been a president's pastor. But his new role as minister to President Jimmy Carter and his family becomes him.

While the thought of being the President's pastor would have scared some clerics, Trentham was ready. He is a person who does his best in a demanding situation, according to associates.

"When all odds are on him," said one acquaintance, "Charlie Tren-tham can deliver better than

The softspoken Trentham, a man with white wavy hair, eyes that crinkle at the corners and an easy smile, is a genial Southerner, dapper, gracious and self-assured. He is deliberate but not aggressive. "He is a very warm person, so-meone you automatically have a great deal of affection for the first time you meet," said Dr. William McBeath, executive director of the American Public Health Association and a First Baptist member for three Trentham is outwardly attuned to others' feelings and in turn sensitive about what others think of him.

"As he was leaving church on Sun-day, the President said to me, 'I want you to know I already feel close to you," Trentham recalled. "I was deeply touched. I was feeling the same way. He put me at ease."

Trentham's forte is widely recognized to be his preaching, a tradition among First Baptist

"The pulpit is my craft," said Trentham. "I am more comfortable in preaching than in any work of the Trentham's progressive views come through in his sermons, the locus of his social action. He leads his people primarily through his words and intellect and by lending his prestige to various projects aimed at bettering society. He is not afraid to speak his mind.

In the pulpit Trentham turns ex-pressive. He rocks forward on his tiptoes, then back on his heels. His voice rises and falls. His hands grip the lectern. He quotes poetry, famous figures and data from a variety of disciplines, frequently without referring to a note.

"He believes in the church's need to attend to social issues," according to Floyd Craig, a staff member of the Southern Baptist Christian Life Commission. Trentham was a member of the commission, the church's social action arm, for six years and chairman for part of that time.

There are those who would like to see him engage in social action himself, but it is his style to do it from the pulpit," Craig added.

West remembers in the 1960s when he and Trentham were serving on the Southern Baptist Convention's executive committee and racial violence broke out in Birmingham.

"He proposed a resolution deplor-ing the incident and expressing sym-pathy for the family," said West, now a deacon at First Baptist. "Some committee members took this as a personal accusation against some whites in Birmingham. The resolution

President Kennedy appointed Trentham to an 18-member committee to investigate racial turmoil in Birmingham. "I was a great admirer of Kennedy," the pastor noted.

Charles Trentham was born in Jefferson City in east Tennessee. He earned a doctorate in moral philosophy at the University of Edin-

He has been a pastor in Fort Worth, Tex., a professor of religion at Baylor University and a professor of systematic theology at Southwestern Baptist Seminary. For 21 years before coming here in 1974 he was pastor of First Baptist Church in Knoxville, Tenn., and dean of the School of Religion at the University of Tennessee Trentham, an acknowledged scholar, has written four books — "Shepherd of the Stars," which he calls a "theology of outer space"; 'Getting on Top of Your Troubles," a counseling book; 'Daring Discipleship," which is given to new church members and a commentary on the Book of Hebrews.

President Carter took a copy of "Daring Discipleship" back to the White House after Sunday's service for Amy, 9, to study. She will be baptized at First Baptist.

Trentham and his wife, Nancy, live in Vienna, Va.

The Carters are not the first First Family to worship at the stately First Baptist Church. President Truman frequently walked the six blocks up 16th Street from the White House to attend services there Undoubtedly, however, the First Family's presence will have an impact on the 950-member congregation, a predominantly middle-aged and older group of many leading Baptists forces, Maj. Gen. Henry J. The blast came from the faculty of Concordia Seminary here at the work of an interLutheran commission set up in 1965 by four Lutheran denominations, including the Missouri Synod body.

Two of the others, the American Lutheran Church and the Lutheran Church in America, embracing nearly two-thirds of the nine million U.S. Lutherans, already have given tentative approval to the new book. The fourth body is the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Canada.

Although the 960-page book is tentatively scheduled for final approval and completion by 1978, the Concordia faculty criticized it for accepting "modern higher criticism" of Scriptures and for approving "the socalled ecumenical movement." The Missouri Synod is scheduled act on the new book at its convention in July in Dallas.

He can't be too 'open'

President Carter's eagerness to produce an historic breakthrough in control of nuclear weapons has become one of the dramatic elements of his first two weeks in office.

In his inaugural address, he promised a "first step" this year toward elimination of all nuclear weapons. In a recent interview he spoke of the successful completion of the current Strategic Arms Limitation Talks as a foregone conclusion, and went on to propose a ban on all nuclear testing as the prelude to the worldwide nuclear disarmament he envisions.

Nobody can argue with Mr. Carter's goals. A world free of the menace of burgeoning nuclear arsenals is devoutely to be wished. But the new President clearly has caught some of his own people off balance in talking about his ideas in the specific terms of negotiations with the Soviet Union. Chances are the Russians are a little surprised,

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance was busy trying to square his own statements with Mr. Carter's as to whether there had been an "encouraging message" from the Soviet Union in response to proposals for a nuclear test ban advanced by Mr. Carter during his campaign. Mr. Vance and the National Security Council, meanwhile, are offering further explanations of what Mr. Carter meant when he indicated that a SALT II agreement might be signed without resolving the issue of how to deal with the Soviet Backfire bomber and the U.S. cruise missile.

In a few words to reporters, Mr. Carter had hinted that settling this bomber-missile controversy was not important to a safe and effective SALT agreement - a hint that Mr. Vance and the NSC are now trying to dispel.

Mr. Carter has come to office with a commitment to a more 'open" presidency. During his campaign he was critical of secrecy at high levels of government and in diplomacy. We hope he is not confusing the need for candor and honesty in government with the demand for discretion in conducting negotiations with foreign governments, and the importance of being clear and unequivocal in what he says about U.S. policy.

Our SALT negotiators must play their cards close to the chest. How far the U.S. government is willing to go in obtaining any arms agreement is a subject for the people on the other side of the table to ponder. So is the question of what our government has in mind for any succeeding steps. Public statements by either side must be weighed carefully for their influence on the climate of negotiations.

Mr. Carter is not alone in longing for a series of negotiations and treaties that would see the dismantling of nuclear weapons and an end to the threat of their proliferation. Indeed, every U.S. president since the dawn of the atomic age has spoken of that long-range goal - and face; the agony of dealing with the Soviet Union and other countries defending "human life against any determined to become nuclear

There is no need for Mr. Carter to dramatize his concern for controlling the spread of nuclear weapons. However, he may need a better understanding of the patience and caution that must guide each step along the way to that goal - including his own public statements.

'Ethics' wins!

Voters in the Florida district represented by Rep. Robert Sikes were unperturbed over the reprimand issued by his House colleagues last summer for using his influence for personal gain.

They sent him back to Washington for another term.

But his fellow Democrats, with reform in mind, were less charitable. The House Democratic caucus has rejected his bid to retain chairmanship of the Appropriations subcommittee on military construction by a lopsided vote

HEMISPHERE REPORT:

Latins expect more of President Carter

By WILLIAM GIANDONI Copley News Service

Latin America promises to be a sharper headache for President Carter than either he or his advisers seem to expect.

The new administration's priorities in Latin America appear to be limited to Panama, Communist Cuba and human rights, if the reports from Washington are any indication. Immediate negotiation of a new treaty covering the Panama Canal tops the list. Then comes renewal of relations with Cuba and the effort to promote observance of human rights throughout the hemisphere. But anyone who thinks that may be all it would take to satisfy Latin America, has another think coming. Brazil, for example, grants highest priority to the matter of nuclear proliferation and then, probably, trade relations with the United States.

Argentina and Chile are inclined to feel that the United States grossly overemphasizes the reports of human rights violations in their countries.

While, perhaps, all three of those South American nations sympathize with Panama in its demand for a new canal treaty under which the United States would guarantee the isthmian republic jurisdiction over the waterway within a stated period of time, they also seem inclined to feel that the matter is a question that the two countries should work out bilaterally

Cuba figures not at all, or toward the bottom of the priority list of most Latin American countries. They know it to be a Marxist dictatorship, part of the Soviet bloc. What is more, Argentina is painfully aware of how insecure commerce with Cuba can be. After doing hundreds of millions of dollars in business with Cuba for several years, the Argentines suddenly discovered last August that Cuba was no longer sending ships to pick up the autos, trucks, railway equipment and other items it had

The bottom had fallen out of the sugar market and Cuba stopped most of its imports from non-Socialist countries. The same has occurred with Japanese-Cuban trade.

Even Mexico, the only Latin American country that never broke relations with Cuba, finds its port facilities in Tampico and Veracruz jammed with freight long waiting movement to the island.

Argentina, Brazil and Chile also have experienced troubles with guerrillas and terrorists trained in Cuba and they know Commander-in-Chief Fidel Castro has a hand in at least some of the subversion that plagues the hemisphere.

As for the human rights question, Latins themselves see no easy solution. "Should a distinction be made between the Chilean regime, where no traditional democratic institution remains, and the Brazilian regime where, although with limited powers, Congress, civilian courts and unions continue to function?" the newspaper O Estado de Sao Paulo asked editorially.

'Should the United States adopt a 'realistic' position, forcing such countries as Uruguay and Paraguay to respect human rights; and should it overlook repression in strategically important countries such as Argentina and Brazil?"

To Brazil, though, the nuclear issue is of greater importance. Under an agreement with West Germany, Brazil is in the process of acquiring eight nuclear reactors for generation of electric power by the year 1990. President Carter has criticized the arrangement because it will provide Brazil access to uranium-enriching and reprocessing techniques, also applicable to production of nuclear weapons. Of course, as O Estado pointed out, that "threat already exists in Argentina, the Latin American country with the most advanced nuclear program," and could in Mexico and Venezuela, which have less well-developed programs.

There also is the continuing problem of trade relations. Those countries that rely on sale of raw materials to the United States want to receive fairer prices and those that also have achieved some industrial development, such as Argentina, Brazil, Colombia and Mexico, object to U.S. barriers to trade that keep their manufactured goods out.

In other words, if the Carter administration finds easy answers to the Cuban and Panamanian questions, other, perhaps more controversial seemed impressed. When he met later topics will move to the top

The Country Parson was particularly worried, he said,

INSIDE REPORT:

Carter faces hard choice in the politics of winter

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON - While President Carter's bountifully publicized helicopter ride to Pittsburgh was intended to reassure a winterwounded public, the presence at his side of energy expert S. David Freeman added more uncertainty here over his long-term course on natural gas.

What's more, on the day following the Pittsburgh excursion, Freeman was working on energy legislation out globe-girdling Vice President Mondale's vacant office in the Capitol. That confirmed the widespread impression in Washington that Freeman, a top assistant to presidential energy adviser James Schlesinger, is the point man in handling the new President's first

Freeman is regarded with anguish the oil and gas industry and its Congress as an enemy who ontinued government price controls. How then does Freeman's trategic position square with Mr. Carter's campaign pledge to free natural gas from federal price regulation?

With the President reacting to the fearful gas shortage through public relations gestures (such as the Pittsburgh trip) and an "emergency" bill that will not accomplish much, the future is murky. Nobody can be certain whether the deregulation pledge will be honored or not. Nor, indeed, can anybody be certain where

Dr. Schlesinger will end up once he fully settles into his new post.

Mr. Carter's senior aides say he wants deregulation phased out over five years, much too slow to generate needed new gas production in the view of the industry. But the presidential campaign rhetoric was, characteristically, mixed. Mr. Carter supported deregulation, without any mention of phasing it out, in an Oct. 19 letter to the Democratic governors of three gas-producing states.

However, any attempt to fulfill that pledge risks bitter opposition from key Democrats in Congress totally unrepentant about their false prophecies last year when the House killed the Senate-passed deregulation bill. One congressman after another claimed that a predicted national gas shortage was scare talk from an acquisitive gas industry seeking price decontrol.

The new administration's ambivalence is heightened by two facts about energy czar Schlesinger. First, he is still learning some of the basics of energy; second, as Mr. Carter's only cabinet-level Republican, he entered the White House under fire from environmental groups.

Friends believe this hostile fire persuaded Schlesinger to lean leftward in picking his assistants. One was Freeman, a longtime bureaucrat for the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) and Federal Power Commission (FPC) who earned the oil industry's fear as Ford Foundation energy expert. Another was Alvin Alm, who as assistant administrator at the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) was regarded as "the by deregulators at the Federal Energy Administration (FEA) during the Ford administration.

Moreover, when the expanding natural gas crisis was discussed at the White House the day after the inauguration, Schlesinger's office invited in a staunch foe of deregulation: Lee White, former FPC chairman and now a spokesman for consumer groups. White's presence and the absence of industry representatives - outraged oil lob-

The result, not surprisingly, was to finesse any decision on gas deregulation. Instead, there was the 'emergency" bill. Along with the President's public exhortation of his cabinet, followed by his trip to Pittsburgh, that bill showed something was being done.

The bill was rushed through Congress with the unspoken consensus that it will accomplish little. while preparations are made for allout combat - by warriors such as James Flug, a battle-seasoned liberal lobbyist on energy issues. Flug, who has been conferring with Freeman (and also turned up at the absent Vice President's office), wants no deregulation at all, not even phased over five years.

But the other side is also mobilized. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, cosponsor of last year's deregulation bill, made clear to Schlesinger his displeasure that the only Senator given a preview of the emergency bill - Adlai Stevenson of Illinois - voted with the Senate minority against deregulation. Furthermore, Bentsen added, any attempt to change last year's bill - with a five-year phasein, for example - will lose in the

Dr. Schlesinger encoumtered similar static in the House. Rep. Robert Krueger of Texas, House sponsor of deregulation, told him that Jimmy Carter is President today only because of his Oct. 19 letter pledging deregulation without any hedge, and is honor bound to that commitment So, with his self-imposed April deadline, the President faces a hard choice in the politics of winter which cannot stop at media events.

Millions have been spent, meanwhile, on studies to find out how to get people off welfare. The studies have been a total waste of money. The latest study, like all the others, is expected to show that welfare increased in most catagories during Footnote: HEW sources link the

New French cultural program has troubles

By JOHN VINOCUR

PARIS (AP) - The refurbished theater of the Comedie Francaise has opened again after $13-million-worth of repairs and the event is being taken as an illustration of how French culture has become hamstrung between grandeur and poverty.

The 300-year-old company's Salle Richelieu has a computerized light system that can put lighting effects for a whole season's repertoire on a tape cassette. It also has individual audio boosters for hard-of-hearing spectators, fewer and wider seats, plush backstage rooms for actors awaiting cues and a closed-circuit television system that allows drinkers to filter Moliere through the comfort of the all-marble bar.

The details are a handful of the ones that critics of the government's cultural program use to assert that official culture in France is elitist, limited to Paris and obsessed with show-off tradition.

Almost symbolically, the theater administration had to announce after the opening performance of Alfred de Musset's Lorenzaccio that it could not put on two other plays it planned last fall because the new mechanical grandeur at the Salle Richelieu was a little more complicated than expected.

After a cost overrun of about $3 million at the Comedie Française, the $180-million construction of the Georges Pompidou cultural center, which many consider an architectural abomination, and increases in the budget of the Paris Opera, there seems to be a real current of op-position to what a Communist National Assembly delegate called a program of "waste and aberration."

The secretary of state for cultural affairs, Francoise Giroud, has treaded lightly around criticizing the big undertakings, but she has pointed out that nine out of ten Frenchmen have never been to a concert or to an opera, that the provinces need a better share of the budget, and that television is vastly under utilized for spreading culture.

What Mrs. Giroud cannot get around is that about a quarter of her annual budget of $369 million for 1977 will go into heavy equipment like the national theaters and the Pompidou center. But she has been able to explain that the tough economic situation means there will be a pause in the building of spectacular cultural monuments, with the emphasis going into spreading culture.

Woodcutter's trade now booming again

CAMBRIDGE, Wis. (AP) — Jack Folz is a holdover from a backwoods era whose time has come again.

His woodcutting business is flourishing in this southern Wisconsin community as commercial camp-grounds, farms and homeowners step up their demand for winter-fuel alternatives to the rising cost of conventional fuels.

"Solar heating is still way out of reach, sometimes $10,000 for a unit, and fuel oil prices are going up," he said. "People are really busy buying old-fashioued, wood-burning stoves." Folz, 32, who had been cutting pulp wood since age 12 in northern Minnesota, moved to Cambridge in 1974 from Ely, Minn., equipped only with "my two hands" and a power chain He set up shop as a seller of fireplace wood, cutting dead and diseased timber on neighboring farms and in Kettle Moraine State Forest.

As the energy crisis stimulated the sales of fireplaces, Franklin stoves and pot-belly stoves, Folz prospered enough to afford a motor-driven wood splitter to replace his 16-pound maul.

He lives with an Irish setter in a small trailer, cooking on his own wood-burning stove, and earns what he calls a comfortable living by selling an estimated 500 tons of wood annually for about $35 a face cord.

Yet business is getting so good that he fears big business may exhaust the

"I think there is enough timber around here to keep me going for 20 years," he said, "Unless some big company moves in and starts to exploit it."

His advice to customers includes using caution when installing wood-burning facilities and avoiding overloading.

"Don't chuck those babies full," he said, relating that his Minnesota sister-in-law once put in too much wood, causing a stove to explode and burning down her dwelling. Take care to build a chimney or stovepipe with adequate draft, install the damper as high as possible to utilize the pipe's heat-radiating ability, and throughly insulate hot metal from combustible walls and ceilings, he said.

Folz said he preferred traditional cast iron for stoves.

"They keep the heat longer," he said. "Some of the newer metals don't seem to dissipate the heat as well."

His equipment now includes an assortment of chain saws and two radio-dispatched pickup trucks. But he doesn't wander far from tradition.

He wears lumberjack attire "because it's sort of the right image," and thrives on the rigors of winter

"I love the outdoors," he said, "even when it's 30 below, as long as the equipment runs."

Bridge players need good crystal ball

By Alfred Sheinwold

What this country needs is a good cent crystal ball so that a bridge player can find out in advance which suit is going to break well for him. In the meantime, ask the opponents. If you ask them the right way, they may give you a truthful answer.

opponent has three clubs, or a diamond if each opponent has three diamonds. But you must choose the right suit, since otherwise the opponents will get five tricks before you get nine.

COUNT SIGNAL Win the first trick with the king of spades and lead the king of clubs. West may begin a high-low by playing the eight; and this will tell you that the clubs won't break favorably. If so, switch to diamonds and play low from dummy. When a spade comes back, win with the ace and lead your other diamond. You can get to dummy with the queen of spades to cash the king of diamonds and then run two more diamonds.

What if the opponents fail to signal when you lead the clubs? If the deuce of clubs appears, keep on with the clubs; if it fails to appear, switch to diamonds.

What if neither suit breaks 3-3? You may not be able to buy a crystal ball, but you can buy a crying towel almost anywhere. DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold: S-AKJ, H-AK72, D-52, SAK63. What do you say? ANSWER: Most experts would bid one club. The opening bid one club. The opening of 2 NT should guarantee a stopper in each suit. Still, some fine players would take a chance on bidding 2NT to describe the general strength of the hand.

But will it write?

Luther Burch has a pen that is 200 years old. It originally belonged to Gen. Francis Marion, the Swamp Fox, who carried it in his pocket while outwitting the British in Georgia and

South Carolina during the

ATLANTA (AP) -

Revolutionary War. The pen has survived to this day because: Gen. Marion presented it to Edward Burch, an ancestor of Luther Burch, with a request that it be handed down to his descendants. At 18, Burch was the youngest soldier under Gen. Marion.

The pen is in a case which also contains an ink well and a small knife blade for scratching off a
