Bullock Fears Loss Of Revenue

AUSTIN -- Comptroller Bob Bullock said Wednesday that if Congress doesn't extend the revenue sharing program, city halls and courthouses across Texas will have to close their doors or drastically increase local taxes to keep on providing the same level of services.

Bullock released a list showing the percentage tax increase each county and city would have to enact to replace revenue sharing funds they now receive.

The death of the program would also be a hardship on the state, Bullock added, noting that the Legislature would have to write a budget without the $100 million a year it could otherwise expect.

"But the real impact would be on the cities and counties that have received nearly $1 billion during the five-year life of the revenue sharing program," he said.

Aitken, who fought the battle in Washington for the farmers from April 1 through July 1, 1975, when the case was tried, said, "there is no way we can burn anything other than natural gas and have irrigation crops." He pointed out that there were a number of reasons it is impossible to use anything other than natural gas.

Food Stamp Office Changes Location

The local office of the Texas Department of Public Welfare and the Food Stamp office has moved to a new location. Their new quarters are located at 209 E. Avenue B, and the moved was made March 1.

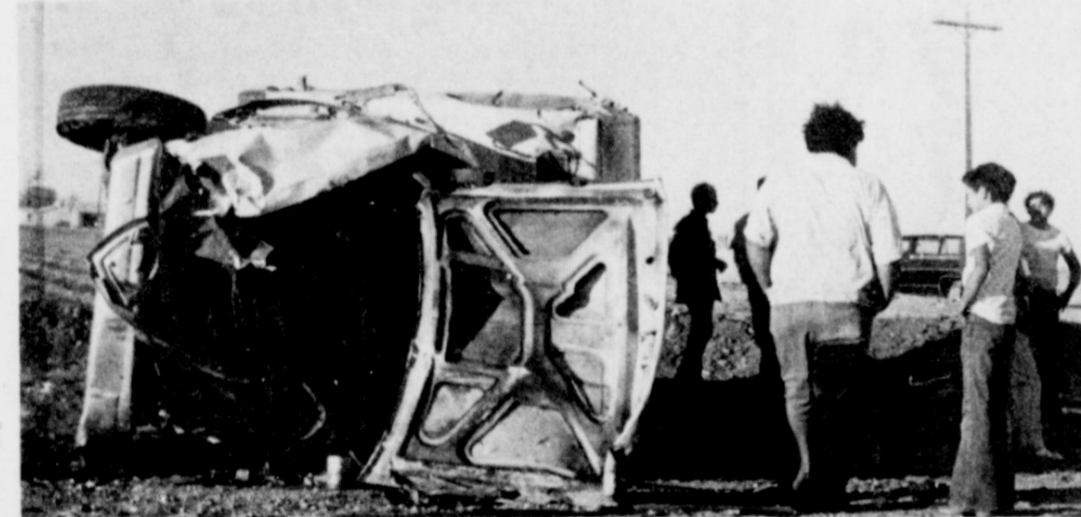

Bailey County Judge Glen Williams explained that the department felt the need for more office space about a year ago and planned to make a move then. However funds were not available at that time and the County was going to furnish them with office space in one of their buildings. Funds later became available for the local department to rent office space. Thus the move to this location.

Prior to the move, the Food Stamp office, Department of Public Welfare office, Family Planning and WIC offices were all housed in a building located just south of the Muleshoe Publishing Company on Second Street. Judge Williams said he has been informed that WIC is also

The Dangerous Weed What The Practicing Physician Should Know About Marijuana

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of four articles dealing with the harmful effects of Marijuana smoking. The article was sent to the Journal from "Private Practice", the journal socio-economic medicine, an official publication of the Congress of County Medical Societies.

"Writing in the January issue of "Private Practice", Dr. Hardin B. Jones, professor of medical physics and physiology at the University of California at Berkeley, and Assistant Director of the Donner Laboratory, described these effects for practicing physicians. This top scientist pointed out that, 1) Marijuana's effects are cumulative, since it is stored in fat cells and brain cell membranes; 2) It causes irreversible brain changes; 3) It quickly produces pre-cancerous lesions in the lungs, which usually appear only after thirty years of heavy cigarette smoking; 4) It changes the personality -- for the worse, usually causing paranoia; 5) It lowers the male hormone level; 6) It lowers the body's immunological responses; 7) It causes chromosome damage. It is truly called "the dangerous weed."

director of the Donner Laboratory, explains what the practicing physician should know about marijuana: The average marijuana user - the young man who smokes two to three "joints" per week - is adversely and persistently affected by the "weed." But he does not comprehend his situation. Young women are affected in the same way, but they are about half as likely to use the drug and they usually consume somewhat less when they do. Effects on these young people are, of course, less than with daily use of the drug, but young people who smoke marijuana to any degree are likely to be brought to physicians by concerned parents who are worried because of the change in their behavior.

Evidence of the cumulative nature of the effects of marijuana is found throughout the literature of this subject. It was my own initial observation upon interviewing marijuana users. I found that it was necessary to smoke marijuana cigarettes several times to get the first intoxicative "high," and that after that stage was reached (usually after about five cigarettes had been smoked, either all at once or spread out over several weeks), intoxication could be renewed by smoking only a portion of a joint. Because of my observations, I challenged the claims that marijuana has a "reverse tolerance," with the implication that it was, therefore, safe. The notion of safety due to reverse tolerance has remained in the pro-marijuana literature in spite of the proof that the active components of marijuana do indeed accumulate in the body and in the brain.

An authority on genealogical sources and techniques, Shepherd has personally visited most of the major record repositories in the country. One of his most important contributions to genealogical research has been his organization and notekeeping expertise.
Shepherd has information of great benefit to the beginner as well as to the professional. He is a recognized expert in the use of genealogical and historical records and specializes in the use of little known but extremely valuable record sources. He is always most pleased to answer questions from his audiences.

"We are at the point now, with the Priority thing still pending," said Aitken, "that there is no difference if we are put in Priority 3 for the use of standby gas, or where we are now, if the cost of gas gets so high we can't pay for it."

Aitken explained that the farmer has two options, passage of the Bob Kruger Amendment which would have the gas rates deregulated. This amendment failed two weeks ago in the House by two or three votes, Aitken said. He stated that it makes no sense to deregulate gas, "since all we would be doing, is turning the price loose." "We need to give the oil companies the incentive to drill more wells for oil and gas ... we need to encourage exploration," he said.

The other alternative according to Aitken is for the Gas Users Association to work up as good a testimony showing factual cost production records. "The biggest job we have is education, we need to convince the legislators what part the farming industry plays in the economy of with a radioactive isotope (either hydrogen-3 or carbon-14) and tracing it in the body for distribution, retention, transformation to other chemical forms, and excretion. The retention of labeled THC measured in humans is about forty percent at three days, thirty percent at one week; by extrapolation, ten percent at forty-eight days, and one percent at 4.6 months. The high retention of THC is confirmed by studies in which it was administered to laboratory rodents. The retention is comparable in mice, rats, and humans, except that small animals are more active per unit of size and time of retention is correspondingly reduced. There are also minor species differences in the partial degradation of THC prior to excretion as cannabinoil residue. A large fraction of administered THC is converted in the body to 11-hydroxy-THC - a substance that is several times more psychoactive than THC. Both active forms of THC tend to persist in the body for long periods of time.

During the "high" period following the smoking of marijuana, the organ concentrations follow that of the blood. There is a peak of concentration in the brain corresponding to that of the blood which lasts about four to six hours. Although the concentration of THC in the brain is much lower than in the other organs, the fact is not a measure of its effectiveness. The THC taken up by the brain is concentrated largely in the cell membranes, where the local concentration is twice as high as the THC content of the red blood cells.

The disappearance of THC from the blood over the several hours of the "high" is not due to its removal from the body; it merely accumulates in fat tissue, which has a high affinity for THC. Some of the THC is partially degraded, but it remains a cannabinoil residue. Cannabinoil residues and THC are excreted largely by the bile, but only at a very slow rate. When THC has been administered to laboratory animals on a uniformly repeated schedule, it accumulates in the fatty parts of cells at an essentially constant rate, since the rate of elimination is so slow - about ten percent per finding. The implication of this finding for humans is that progressive retention will increase the body burden of THC for many months before reaching equilibrium when the rate of excretion becomes equal to the rate of intake of THC. Based on animal studies, the concomitant accumulation in brain cells is such that the result of smoking marijuana every other day for a month is a retention of the same quantity of THC in brain cells as that which causes an acute "high" in the beginning marijuana user. The chronic marijuana smoker increases his brain's burden above this chronic level when he smokes by producing a transitory peak concentration in the blood and brain; but he is never without significant quantities of THC in the brain at a level determined by the brain's equilibrium with the body fat. In the chronic marijuana user, the high brain levels cannot be reduced without the many months of abstinence necessary to clear THC from the body fat.

(Sunday, March 7 edition of the Bailey County Journal will explain what the accumulation of THC in the body fat means when it becomes involved with lipoproteins and the lipid layers of the cell membranes.)

Announcing...
The Gospel Heirs Will Be At The Nazarene Church Sunday Mar. 14, 1976 -11:00 a.m. 9th & Ave. C Muleshoe DAVID GRAY-PASTOR

James Matthew Higdon is a professional agronomist with 16 years of intensive experience in growing hybrid corn and sorghum in the Southwest. His full time responsibility is to consult with farmers about their grain and silage growing problems.

"These are the sorghums I'd plant if I farmed in this area."

Jim Higdon
AGRONOMY SERVICE DIRECTOR

"Drouth, disease, insects, wind storms ... taking everything into account that can plague a crop in this area, these are the sorghums I'd go with."

It's my job to know which are the best varieties for each locale in the states of Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico. For the last five years I've had Crop Information Centers, Standard Comparison Tests and Uniform Strip Tests in this immediate area. In these carefully controlled tests, I've evaluated most of the sorghum varieties a farmer might consider planting. I've had the same headaches and frustrations you've had. My plantings have suffered the same weather conditions, epidemics and infestations yours have.

Based on these tests, there is no doubt in my mind what I'd plant in 1976 if I farmed hereabouts.

8311 is a champion producer of high test weight, yellow endosperm grain. Pioneer introduced this golden bronze hybrid three years ago and it's been setting yield records in this area ever since. One reason is its ability to yield in the face of too wet or too dry weather, insects or disease. Another reason for the high yields is that 8311 tends to adjust its maturity to the growing season in a particular area. Whatever else you plant ... put in some 8311.

8501

An outstanding new yellow endosperm hybrid with about the same maturity as 846. This hybrid has a superior yield record. The plant has excellent roots and stalks. Heads exert well above the flag leaf and are uniform in height. Pioneer brand 8501 has good tolerance to smut, MDMV, downy mildew and greenbugs. It performs well under stress and has semi-open heads that add to its good appearance.

A WORD ABOUT GREENBUGS

Tolerance to both greenbugs and maize dwarf mosaic plus high yield potential give these two sorghum varieties an economically significant advantage that you'll want to consider for your grain sorghum crop in 1976.

Performance of seeds or the crop produced therefrom may be adversely affected by factors beyond our control including environmental conditions, insects and diseases. The limitation of warranty and remedy attached to each bag of Pioneer brand seed is a part of the terms and conditions of the sale thereof.

Buy Fruit, Nut Trees With Care

COLLEGE STATION

To eliminate as many problems as possible when planting fruit and nut trees around the home, be sure to select plants that are disease-free, suggests the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Carefully examine the root system of trees at the time of purchase and avoid any trees which show signs of galls or deterioration of the roots.

Some of the things to look for are crown gall, nematodes and crown decay.

Crown gall is a bacterial disease occurring on many nursery trees. This disease is distinguished by large rough galls that may be one-fourth to three inches in diameter.

Root knot nematodes cause small galls on the root system which are generally more numerous and smaller than those formed by crown gall.

Examine the crown of the plant, located at the soil line, closely for any dead areas. These may later result in a decay that will completely girdle the stem and result in death.

Also check a tree's root system to make sure it has not dried out. Many trees, particularly pecans, that dry out after digging, will be greatly reduced in vigor.

So, when purchasing fruit and nut trees, make your selection with care. It will be well worth the effort.

THE TOP 3 CORN HYBRIDS FOR THE SOUTH PLAINS

Everyone knows the top corn hybrid for this area. PIONEER's brand 3369A is the most planted hybrid in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico. Not everyone realizes, however, that there are other PIONEER hybrids that do as well as this famous one... even beat it in some respects. You should consider them, too. They'll help you get exactly the right hybrid mix for whatever mother nature has in store for this season:

Number two in popularity with Southwestern farmers... 3306 is a hybrid with strong stalks and outstanding ear retention. Especially good in light soils, it has good drought and heat tolerance and is a good performer on irrigated or non-irrigated land.

An exciting new hybrid that has an even greater yield potential than 3369A. The added yield potential comes, in part, from a little later maturity while having the root and stalk strength to stand until harvest. It stays green later, too. This one can add significant profit to your corn crop.

new

Another new, good yielding hybrid. It's a little earlier than 3369A with exceptionally fast dry down. It has made from $9 to $12 more profit per acre than ordinary hybrids because of its fast dry down. It has long slender ears on small, hard cobs... really great for combining.

STATE CAPITAL Highlights AND Sidelights

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Local tax bills may go up steeply for the same level of services if Congress refuses to extend the federal revenue sharing program, Comptroller Bob Bullock warns.

"The cold truth is that in most cities and counties, (the taxpayer) will have to pay at least 20 per cent more in local taxes if the program ends," Bullock said.

"Death of the program would also cost the state $100 million a year," the comptroller noted.

Bullock emphasized these points:

— Real impact would be on cities and counties which have received nearly $1 billion from revenue sharing during the five-year life of the program.

— Inflation has forced local officials gradually to rely on revenue sharing as part of their operating budgets.

"A vote against revenue sharing at this point is most surely a vote to decrease local services or increase local taxes," Bullock stated.

A study by the comptroller's staff concluded:

General federal revenue sharing accounts for 30 per cent or more of tax revenue in 68 counties, 20 to 30 per cent in 102 counties and up to 19.99 per cent in 84.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe said he opposes continued revenue sharing for states but considers the program necessary for cities and counties.

Water Fight Rages

In the face of a threatened lawsuit by the attorney general, Texas Water Rights Commission approved a controversial sale of water by Lower Colorado River Authority to cool generators of the South Texas Nuclear Project power plant.

TWRC ratified a contract between LCRA and STNP for up to 102,000 acre feet of Colorado River water a year at $10 an acre foot (as much as $56 million) over a 55-year period.

Atty. Gen. John Hill said the water does not belong to LCRA but to the state, and he will seek to enjoin the TRWC action in court. A state permit for sale of the same water would cost only $500.

San Antonio, Houston, Austin and Corpus Christi electric utilities are partners in the STNP which plans a nuclear-powered generating plant near Bay City. Project heads fear failure to go along with the water sale would bring on a prolonged legal battle with LCRA which would cost more in lost electricity purchases, alternate fuels and construction inflation than the $56 million contract.

Courts Speak

The State Supreme Court agreed to review a test case on whether a church camp in Hood County can be taxed.

In another new ruling, the high court declined to consider a Harris County man's challenge of the doctrine that, in most circumstances, governments are not responsible for paying damages on injuries caused by employee negligence.

A former Kerrville school teacher who lost his job because he wouldn't shave his beard six years ago won a $6,000 back pay award in an appeal to the Supreme Court.

The high court held Amarillo could not tax the residence of a church music minister.

Supreme Court judges agreed with the Houston Court of Civil Appeals that a stockholders suit against Robert L. Moody alleging fraud in an insurance companies merger must be tried.

The Court of Criminal Appeals reversed a Wichita County murder conviction because the defendant was not given 15 peremptory jury challenges.

A Wilbarger County man sentenced for delivering amphetamines won release in an appeal to the Court of Criminal Appeals on finding the trial judge dismissed a jury which had been "deadlocked" only two hours.

An El Paso man won reversal of a life imprisonment sentence because the trial court refused to sever a multi-count indictment.

Third Court of Civil Appeals upheld a provision that Texas State Education Association members must affiliate with the National Education Association.

AG Opinions

Breakfast meetings of commissioners courts must be open to the public when public business is discussed there, Atty. Gen. Hill held.

In other recent opinions, Hill concluded:

The federal privacy act does not apply in general to the Texas National Guard while in state status.

An institution of higher education is not required to adopt terms of the College Coordinating Board's policy statement on academic freedom.

Death of a limited partner does not necessarily prohibit renewal of a mixed beverage permit issued to the partnership.

Workmen's compensation coverage is fully applicable to persons in the state military forces, notwithstanding any overlapping coverage.

A college may provide that terminated professors will receive either substantial notice or severance pay.

Short Snorts

Dr. Kenneth Ashworth of San Antonio is new Texas commissioner of higher education, succeeding Dr. Bevington Reed.

A far-reaching reorganization plan has been announced for Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission, with field operations under four regional offices answering directly to the ABC administrator.

The Sign Of Cotton Wins Consumer's Favor

NEW YORK -- Cotton producers are making a mark for themselves and their product. The familiar cotton seal, created by Cotton Incorporated as the emblem of U.S. cotton producers, is rapidly becoming identified in the mind of the American consumer as a sign of comfort and quality.

Recent tests show that the updated image for the fiber is helping to sell the public on cotton.

One of the tests has induced the Union Underwear Co. to use the cotton seal on its packages of "Fruit of the Loom" 100 percent cotton underwear.

The test showed that consumers are more likely to buy a package of underwear with the seal on it than the same package without the seal.

"That's a sure sign that cotton producers are making a favorable impression with the buying public," said Donald S. Kleckner, Cotton Incorporated vice president for marketing services. "The consumer is coming to identify the cotton seal with the comfort and quality of cotton."

Kleckner estimated the seal will go on about 80 million packages of underwear annually. "That amount of underwear represents 100,000 bales of cotton, or one percent of the total annual U.S. cotton production," he said.

The Union Underwear Co. will join about 40 other garment manufacturers who use the cotton seal on hang tags, labels, and packages, Kleckner said.

The Union Underwear Co. will join about 40 other garment manufacturers who use the cotton seal on hang tags, labels. Consumers surveyed identified the cotton seal with such qualities as "comfortable to wear ... made of highest quality material ... absorbs moisture well ... will wear well ... best value for money."

"Identification of the cotton seal with those qualities will easily translate into more sales for cotton," Kleckner said.

Two other tests showed that cotton producers are getting their message across, from the consumer right up to the corporate offices where mill men decide what fiber to use in their fabrics.

One study showed that consumer recognition of what the cotton seal stands for doubled in its first year of use, Kleckner stated.

said. In 20 major cities, where Cotton Incorporated concentrated much of its advertising, recognition nearly tripled.

The third study measured the awareness of key corporate executives of the work of Cotton Incorporated. Cotton Incorporated, which represents U.S. cotton growers as their fiber company, uses the seal as the dominant element in its corporate logotype and in all company communications.

That study, by the Consumer Response Corporation, concluded that mill executives already place Cotton Incorporated in the major leagues of textile marketing.

"Your prospects know your name, your banner, and your purpose," the polling company said.

"There is no question that the introductory phase of Cotton Incorporated's advertising has been a success and that it has provided a platform that will make the launching of future promotional and marketing efforts more effective," the report stated.

Income Adjustments Can Cut Tax Bills

COLLEGE STATION -- Farmers and ranchers still have time to make adjustments that could cut down their 1975 tax bills, says Dr. Wayne Hayenga, economist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"By taking full advantage of income averaging, depreciation and retirement plan policies, 1975 taxes may be reduced considerably," says the economist.

If your income has increased sharply over the past five years, you may be eligible for income averaging. Take the sum of your 1971 through 1974 taxable incomes, then take 30 percent of that amount. Subtract that figure from the taxable income in 1975. If the difference is more than $3,000, you are eligible for income averaging.

Another way to cut down taxes, says Hayenga, is to take the maximum amount of depreciation on machinery, farm equipment, breeding stock and buildings. The depreciation method you select should depend on your 1975 income. If it was high, you may want to take a "fast" depreciation rather than a straight line method.

"The shorter the useful life you assign to an asset, the more depreciation you can take," points out the Texas A&M University System economist.

"But to get full advantage of investment credit, the asset needs to have a useful life of at least seven years."

A taxpayer can take up to 20 percent extra first-year depreciation on machinery and depreciable livestock. However, the maximum amount is $2,000 for separate returns and $4,000 for joint returns.

"Individual retirement plans can be an important deduction on your 1975 income tax return," points out Hayenga. "You can put up to 15 percent of your earned income into a Keogh retirement plan, or a maximum of $7,500. If you set up a retirement plan before the end of 1975 but didn't put in the full amount possible, you can still add to the plan until the tax filing deadline and take the deduction."

The economist advises all producers to look into these three areas -- income averaging, depreciation and retirement plans -- when completing their 1975 tax returns and in planning their 1976 taxes and business operation.

Weed Symposium Reviews Herbicides And Treatment

BROWNFIELD -- How to deal with weed problems in cotton and sorghum was the central issue in a weed symposium for sandyland farmers, Monday, March 1, in Brownfield.

Native weeds have cost area farmers several million dollars annually in yield losses. Although preplant, pre-emergence and post-emergence herbicides and methods of treatments have been developed to aid in weed control, few farmers have been able to reduce light to heavy losses each year.

Dr. James Supak, area agronomist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Lubbock, told the gathering there were several new preplant herbicides being sold for cotton in 1976. In addition to Treflan, Cobex and Tolban, which were available in 1975, Basalin, Amex 820 and Prowl are being marketed this year, he reported.

Treflan and Tolban are the most persistent chemicals in this group, he said. They have the advantage of providing season long control but the disadvantage of risking damage to rotational crops such as wheat or early planted sorghum. Amex, Basalin and Prowl are medium residual chemicals that tend to breakdown by the end of the growing season. Cobex has the shortest residual which may be a real advantage in some rotational programs.

Supak said because of its short soil life, applications of Cobex should be delayed until March or April to insure better season long control.

"Pigweeds and annual grass weeds are readily controlled with preplant herbicides, but lanceleaf sage, cocklebur, devil claw, oakleaf thornapple and morning glory 'escape' injury from these chemicals," he said.

He mentioned other pre-emergence herbicides for cotton including Lasso, Karmex and Caparol.

He told the farmers, industry officials and agricultural representatives that post-emergence herbicides play a big part in a well planned weed control program in cotton.

"Directed sprays of Caparol, Karmex and Probe do a good job of controlling small broadleaf weeds," he said. "MSMA and DSMA are effective against annual grass weeds and Johnsongrass."

Supak said post-emergence treatments are relatively inexpensive but their application must be well timed to provide

Former City Man Dies

Robert Harvey Detwiler, 70, of Paducah and formerly a Muleshoe resident, died Saturday. Funeral services were held Monday at the Paducah Church of Christ with Don Carroll, minister, officiating. Burial was in the Garden of Memories Cemetery in Paducah by Norris Funeral Home.

Detwiler was a retired mechanic. He was born in McLean County and was reared in Paducah. He returned to Paducah from Muleshoe about two years ago. He was a member of the Paducah Church of Christ and was a veteran of World War II.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Zinniger of Dallas; two brothers, Lewis Detwiler of Paducah and W.M. Detwiler of Earth; and two sisters, Mrs. Grace Thompson of Alama, Arkansas, and Mrs. Goldie Criswell of Andrews.

satisfactory control. Supak said there are enough herbicides to control most weed problems that occur in cotton. Growers just have to make the proper selection.

Dr. A.F. Wiese, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station weed scientist from Bushland, described three years of research that led to methods of controlling watergrass in sorghum on the northern High Plains.

"Our best practice is applying three pounds per acre of Milogard preplant and incorporating it with a rolling cultivator a week or two before planting," the researcher said. "This system fails if the top of the bed is removed during planting. The

Texas Among Leading Southern Dairy States

COLLEGE STATION -- Texas is one of the leading dairying states in the South, according to recent Dairy Herd Improvement (DHI) statistics.

"Among the 13 southern states tabulated, Texas came in fourth in total DHI milk production for 1975," points out Dr. Michael A. Tomaszewski, dairy specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The ledge showed Texas milk production at 12,905 pounds per cow compared to the average for the southern region of 12,490 pounds. Texas dairy cows also averaged 464 pounds of butterfat, just below the regional average of 466 pounds.

"Texas dairymen who are on some type of testing program are to be commended for this accomplishment," says Tomaszewski. "Considering the high feed costs during the past year, they did an exceptional job in managing their operations."

He said Milogard and Milogard mixed with either Lorox or Ramrod applied pre-emergence gave good watergrass control if rain occurred shortly after planting.

Wiese said post-emergence application of AAtrex in an oil-water emulsion carrier is the best control for watergrass that may retain if preplant or pre-emergence treatments fail. Following this treatment, he added, a rolling cultivator can be used to incorporate the herbicide and kill the last watergrass in the field.

"Spending a little extra money for enough herbicide is profitable," Wiese emphasized.

Lebow Infant Rites Tuesday

Michael George Lebow, Jr., was stillborn Sunday at High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo.

Funeral services were held at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday at Llano Cemetery by N.S. Griggs and Sons Funeral Directors. The Rev. R.B. Cassidy, of the Trinity Temple Church officiated.

Survivors include the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael George Lebow, of Amarillo; the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hawley of Amarillo, Mrs. Ted Hodges of Fritch and great-grandparents, Mrs. Nona Davis of Muleshoe and Mr. and Mrs. W.O. Pyeatt of Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

were used, but increased to 4800 pounds per acre where a good herbicide treatment was added to the cultivations."

Wiese pointed out that the herbicide situation for sorghum in sandyland was not as good as for fine textured soil.

"There are no preplant herbicides for sorghum, and Igran is the only pre-emergence herbicide labeled for sandy soil."

"Banvel, 2, 4-D, and Karmex post-emergence herbicides can be used on sandy soil," he said. "However, it is hazardous to use, 2, 4-D near cotton, and Karmex must be directed at the base of 12-inch sorghum plants."

"Problem weeds such as nutsedge, silverleaf nightshade, (whiteweed) and Johnsongrass are our worst perennial weed problems," Dr. John Abernathy, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station weed scientist from Lubbock, said. "But field bindweed, Texas blueweed and Lakewood are not far behind."

He said morning glory, lanceleaf sage, cocklebur, devil claw and oakleaf thornapple are difficult to control in cotton growing communities.

He said subsurface layering of Treflan and Tolban may be the answer to controlling white-weeds. In research studies at Lubbock, twice the recommended rates of these herbicides applied to the same areas for two years did not injure cotton, yet gave excellent season long control of whiteweed.

Roundup applied at three pounds per acre in the fall has given excellent silverleaf nightshade control, he said. Johnsongrass control with Roundup has been obtained in cotton with an experimental reciprocating sprayer.

Abernathy announced that knife injection of eptam is another technique that shows promise for controlling nutgrass in cotton.

Kenneth Purtell, farmer from near Brownfield, told of his experiences controlling weeds on sandy soil.

"The most trouble I ever got into lately was not using a herbicide," Purtell said.

His normal practice for cotton, he said, was disk incorporation of Treflan on flat ground, bedding up, and planting by splitting the beds with a lister.

"This practice worked just fine, but when I started planting cotton on the bed, injury started," he said. "Cotton roots must have had too much exposure to the herbicide." He reported that he has had good yields from planting with a lister and banding Sancap over the row.

"The herbicide situation for sorghum on sandy soil is not good," he said.

"There has been injury from every pre-emergence herbicide if it rained at the wrong time."

He admitted there are problems with herbicides, but that it would be practically impossible to farm without them.

Wane Chenault, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station weed researcher from Bushland, described several different types of nozzles used for spray applications.

Two new spray nozzles, the Raindrop Nozzles and Uniform Droplet Nozzle, produce fewer fine drops that tend to drift, he told the group. Research at Lubbock showed that more spray material hit the ground with these spray nozzles than with conventional flat fan nozzles, he said.

He added that research with Nalco-trol, a spray thickener, showed that a small amount of this chemical mixed in a spray solution greatly reduced drift.

Chenault also revealed a simple method for calibrating sprayers, before the symposium participants. It consists of carefully measuring and determining the number of seconds it takes a sprayer to travel 100 feet. Later with the sprayer setting still and the pressure set, spray is caught from nozzles used to cover 40 inches. The number of ounces caught in the number of seconds required to travel 100 feet is equal to gallons applies per acre.

The meeting was designed especially for growers in sandy land areas of Dawson, Gaines, Lynn, Terry, Yoakum, Cochran and Hockley Counties.

Co-sponsoring the event were the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the South Plains Development Program (SPD) and the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. SPD is a voluntary organization of citizens interested in the social and economic improvement of the South Plains area.
