NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Madame Demorest's Opening.
A contributor to the New York Tribune—obviously a female—describes Madame Demorest's fall opening, which took place on Monday. We reproduce the most important points of the report:—

First, I note the exquisite embroidered waists in organdy, with bands, cuffs and belts; or berthas of silk worked with purple silk and beads. These are already familiar to many, as worn by the belles of Mahopac and Newport.

Dresses are plainer, and not so long. The plain gored skirt without plaits is the ruling model, and home, or demi-toilette dress, has but a few inches in train. The coat sleeve is still worn, though an appendage usually falls from the elbow, giving the effect of a flowing sleeve with comfort of a tight one. The real coat sleeve is made wider at the wrist than last year.

For elaborate dress, the sharply pointed flowing sleeve, short on the forearm, is usually made up. One of the best patterns in this shape is in light green, the inside sleeve about six inches long, only, the outside, three-quarters of a yard from the shoulder down, trimmed on both edges with black guipure, headed by bands of flame-colored satin; the sides held together by straps of satin fastened by black rosettes, with silver buttons in the center. The lower edge of the sleeve is straight, with guipure and satin trimmings. A pretty coat sleeve has a shallow pointed cap outlined in dents of narrow satin, with tiny ornamental buttons in each point; a deep cuff rises almost to the elbow from the wide wrist, made by the same trimming; inside this is a wide, pointed slash, crossed by narrow straps held with fancy buttons. The writer is explicit in describing patterns of any description, both to do justice to the designs themselves and to give lady readers a clear idea of what they will have to select from.

Basque waists are decidedly in favor, with sharp pointed lappels in front, and long ones behind. The prettiest one was a mauve, with square neck, very low in front, the basque graduated in five parts, the front pointed, the sides and back square, opened to the belt, and trimmed on all the edges with a quilting of the silk pinked at the border; flowing sleeve, with square end to fit the basque. Another waist is high in the neck, with pompadour outline of black lace, low on back and front, running so as to head the sleeve, and filled with three straps of lace insertion crossing each shoulder, an admired trimming, which gives much of the grace of the pompadour open neck.

The basque is short in front, having solely the effect of the double pointed corsage, which the belles are determined to have by some artifice or other, even if the fashion plates assure them that points are out of favor. The waist is of ordinary length under the arm, with three mitred tabs behind, trimmed with guipure, headed by a fold of satin the width of a belle's eyebrow. The little coat sleeve has two rows of lace straight round the wrist, and a cap in three pieces to match the basque points behind. A pretty high-necked blue pattern has the darling tiny points before, and is scooped and short on the hip, with rounded tabs falling four inches behind the front points, and much deeper each side of the single point that scarcely comes below the belt in the center of the back. The trimming is narrow double rows of satin, with round buttons in every scooped and dent; a row of them running down the front of the waist, three inches outside the fastening row.

Skirts are trimmed in two styles—the deep pointed pleat, or tunic, properly, the back point almost reaching the hem, and the apron style, which describes large tabs on every breadth.

The styles for children were so pretty that the writer wanted to describe them all. The simplest (that signifies most desirable, to best tastes), were Gabrielle frocks, with a deep paleot out-lined in trimming, and a little pointed cape on the shoulder. This is the favorite style of street costume, especially neat in buff leno, with black trimmings. Another pretty walking suit was plain green skirt and basque little jacket, the only trimming to which was a fancy edge, bound in rows of black and white. The skirts are cut out in all sorts of fancy edges, with rows of different colored piping, or bias silk put round.

A bright little dress was white alpaca, with diamonds of crimson silk set around the edge of the skirt, these trimmed with narrow black velvet. A sleeveless sack of crimson silk set around the edge of the skirt, these trimmed with narrow black velvet. A sleeveless sack of crimson silk, with a notched edge and sharp cap, is to be worn over this dress. Another is blue, trimmed with black ribbon, with solorino buttons. This ribbon passes over the shoulders to the edge of the skirt, describing a tablier back and front. Between these the skirt is gathered on the hips and frilled at the hem, with a heading of the gay ribbon, graduated straps of which, finished with solorino buttons, are set on the edge inside of the tablier hem. A little buff ruffled skirt and plain waist are overdressed with a crimson peplum which caps the sleeve; give a badice to relieve scooped point back and front on the skirt, being only half its depth on the hips.

SORGHUM CROP OF 1867.

It begins to be apparent that the quantity of cane growing this year, particularly in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, is considerably less than was grown last year or the year before. Various causes have combined to produce this falling off. Last year was unfavorable for sorghum in several respects. The season was wet, and the saccharine matter of the cane was very imperfectly developed. The quantity was large, and the quality poor, which combined to depress prices, and operators were obliged to sell their surplus for less than they expected to realize. At the same time, wheat, corn, and other farm crops were commanding unusually high prices, which, of course, made sorghum appear to a disadvantage.

In the next place, the seed of last year's cane was imperfectly matured, and much that was planted this spring failed to come up. Again the spring was wet, cold and backward, which deterred many from planting. Some had conceived the idea that Louisiana had become a reconstructed State, and would this year furnish molasses at, perhaps, twenty-five cents per gallon.

It is now too late to correct mistakes; but there is little doubt that those who neglected to plant sorghum because they thought it would not pay as well as corn and other spring-planted crops, have made a mistake. Corn and potatoes will not be worth a dollar a bushel this fall, and those who have sorghum to sell will not be obliged to hunt for purchasers at thirty or forty cents a gallon. The market will not be glutted with New Orleans molasses this year, nor for several years to come, and tropical molasses never will displace sorghum in the country where the latter can be produced with the little labor and trouble which it requires to make it.

Those who have cane this year will do well to attend to it carefully. We do not know what price it will command, but we predict that a gallon of good sorghum will pay for a bushel of corn, and that two gallons will pay for a bushel of wheat.—Sergo Journal.

ANTIQUITIES.

It may not be generally known that the ground on which the city of Nashville now stands was once the site of an ancient and populous town, yet such is supposed to be the fact.

Some of the most interesting antiquities of our State are found along the lower course of Stone river, but a few miles from Nashville. A wide area of the country there is covered thickly with thousands of graves of a now forgotten people.

But a few days ago several gentlemen made some researches in this region, and found their labors richly rewarded by some striking discoveries. At a place known as Schell's Spring they found a mound of considerable height and perhaps forty feet in diameter, which, upon examination, to be nothing less than a vast mausoleum of the dead. The graves were found to be made of flat rocks, symmetrically joined together and three feet deep from the base of the mound to the apex. Bones were found in a remarkable state of preservation. Very large ornaments have been dug out in this locality, made from shells found only in the Gulf of Mexico.

A gentleman of acknowledged skill and authority in antiquarian matters, who conducted the researches made a few days ago, estimates that the remains which they unearthed could not have a less age than six or seven hundred years. What is remarkable, no warlike implements are found in this locality, from which it is inferred that they were a peaceable race, and were probably exterminated or driven away by Indians. In one of the graves was found a beautiful little vase, which had been placed in the hand of the inmate of the tomb at the time of burial. Upon this little bit of earthenware was the model of a diminutive animal.

The care which these people took of their dead shows a high degree of humanity.—Nashville Tennessean.

THE NEW YORK TIMES ON THE PROCLAMATION.

The New York Times has been the Presidential apologist all along up to the last proclamation, and has been a rather milk-and-water Union paper; its course has given great comfort to rebels and made it their favorite journal to quote from.

"The most elastic interpretation of the power to pardon conferred by the Constitution does not fairly justify the proclamation we publish this morning. The common-sense version of the Constitutional provision limits it to individual cases, and deems it the remission of a penalty which has been legally pronounced.

"The plea is probable that the penalties imposed under the Reconstruction acts are equivalent to penalties decreed in ordinary form of law, and that therefore the Executive power to pardon comes properly into play.

"Despite the opinions of Binkley and Black, then we believe that the prevailing judgment will be against the step which Mr. Johnson has taken. The Unionists of the country will hold that it is an act of usurpation; an exercise of authority not intended by the Constitution, not sanctioned by law, not justified by the suddenness of the great emergency, not excusable on any tenable ground of public policy.

We take pleasure in informing all our readers outside of the State of Texas that the Austin Republican and the San Antonio Express are not Texas institutions.

We are much obliged to the Telegraph for advertising us as not being a Texas institution. We have lived in Texas all our life-time, but we want it distinctly understood that we are not a Texas institution after the manner of the Telegraph.

VALUE OF OLD ROPE.—Among the numerous, worn-out, and often considered worthless materials which the ingenuity of man has discovered means of re-manufacturing, and rendering of equal value with the original substance are old tarred ropes.

Some of the agricultural papers say that the American method of yoking is wrong, and that the Spanish method is correct. The latter custom is to yoke them by the head, with pads to protect it from external injury, and by these means the animals can make use of the tremendous muscles of their neck, and work easier than with the yoke upon their shoulders.

A REMARKABLE DINNER PARTY.—A dinner party of a somewhat remarkable character took place in the neighborhood of Greenock, Scotland, recently. A man, with his wife, residing near that town, invited their family, nine in number, and all of them sons, to take dinner together under the paternal roof, and they all attended on the day appointed. Five of them, who are married, were accompanied by their wives and children, fourteen in number, and these too, singular though it may appear, were all sons. The company comprised the venerable occupants of the house, nine sons, fourteen grandsons, and five daughters in law. There were no daughters, and there have been no deaths in any of the families.

A gentleman who has just been on a bridal tour to Niagara Falls, reports that the porters of the hotels, after the most assiduous labors for a series of years, have succeeded in accomplishing, to them, a very desirable thing. They can now, almost any of them, take a heavy truck on their shoulders, give it a twist over their head and bring it down so that the corner will strike the tiled floor at such an angle that it will invariably burst the lock. The baggage cannot go on without a strap, and this is furnished by the accommodating porter for the modest little sum of three dollars, it being worth twenty-five cents. The Niagara Falls porters have been at work at this for many years, and we are glad to learn that their industry has at length been so well rewarded.

We had returns yesterday, by telegraph, from two elections—from San Francisco and Berlin, from the shores of the Pacific and the heart of Europe. The daily miracles of advancing civilization cease to astonish people. If we should publish, some morning, a dispatch from the North star, no one would be surprised, but Young America would merely say, "So that's done at last. Well, that line ought to have been laid long ago!"

FORT INGE NEWS.—INDIAN ATTACK ON THE EAGLE PASS ROAD.—From a private letter from Fort Inge, we learn that considerable sickness exists among the troops, in consequence of the condition of the creek on which they are camped. The letter says: "Plenty of Indians—we are literally surrounded. The company at the Post continually scouting; they have recaptured inside three weeks over sixty head of horses; but Mr. Redskin knows too much to permit himself to be caught, and manages to escape, leaving his plunder behind. A Mr. McReynolds and a Mr. Pullam, with Mrs. Reynolds and her children, were attacked on the road between the Nueces and Turkey Creek, by a party of Indians. Reynolds and Pullam were both severely wounded, but the lady and children miraculously escaped, four bullets penetrating their carriage. McReynolds had three arrows shot into him. This occurred twelve miles from here. A party of soldiers, under the command of the post commander are after the Indians. There are not enough troops here; more should be sent, as it is impossible for horses or men to stand the fatigue much longer.

Registration has passed off quietly: The people have too much Indian on the brain to think of politics just now, but of course they will soon be called on to accept the Congressional dietum."

MUNICIPAL RETRENCHMENT.—At a recent meeting of the board of aldermen Alderman Fisher offered the following resolutions:

- Resolved 1st, That there be but seven carts employed by the city, three for sanitary use, and four for use of the street commissioner. Adopted.
2nd, That the police force be reduced to twelve in number, exclusive of the first and assistant marshal, after Oct. 1, 1867. Adopted.
3rd, That the sanitary commissioner be discharged and the street commissioner be required to perform the duty of sanitary as well as street commissioner after Oct. 1st, 1867. Adopted.
4th, That there be no more public improvements at present, except such repairs as are actually necessary, and then by order of a quorum of the board, and never to exceed $500 per month.
5th, That the above resolutions take effect from and after this date unless otherwise expressed.

DEAD MAN ON THE NEW BRAUNFELS ROAD.—We learn from Mr. Jordin, city undertaker, that he has received information that the body of a dead man has been lying several days on the New Braunfels road, three miles beyond Selma. Decomposition had taken place, and the body had the appearance of having received violence. This body has lain there exposed, and no effort has been made to interment or investigation.

ICE COMPANY.—During two of the most profitable months of the summer season just passed, the ice company failed to connect, to the great discomfiture of ice consumers and loss to the company. The washing is again in running order having had a complete overhauling and an improvement added to the machine. We learn that the company propose making up their loss by packing a couple of thousand barrels of beef this winter.

TALL CORN.—Our old Yankee friend Slow has presented us with a couple of corn stalks grown upon his little farm, ten miles northeast of the city. These stalks measure respectively, 14 and 15 feet in length. One has three ears of corn and the other two. These stalks are signposts and show what Texas soil will do under proper manipulation.

Dr. Herz.—A letter has been recently received from Dr. Herz, by a gentleman in this city. The Doctor will return this fall with his family. He writes that he is convinced that there will be a great war between France and Prussia, in spite of all the peace protestations.

SUGAR CANE.—We notice quite a quantity of sugar cane exposed for sale on our streets.

The immense popularity of these Organs, and their superior musical powers, is fast bringing them before the public, as the instrument so long desired in American homes. And although the cost price is but a trifle over the Melodian, yet the musical advantages, beauty of tone and quickness of touch and action are so far superior, that they are fast superseding the Melodian, and the sale is now almost exclusively for the American Organs.

It is adapted to any music from the quickest and most lively, to the heavy tone of the Church Organ. And almost universally they are preferred to the Piano, by persons who have them, yet costing less than half, and only taking a small amount of room.
