OUR GALVESTON LETTER.

GALVESTON, Sept. 17, 1867.

The Death of Gen. Griffin—Effect on the Public—Departures—Political News—Flock's Bulletin and the Conservative—Items.

Editor Express:

It is with inexpressible feeling of sadness and regret that we chronicle the death of that brave soldier, gallant officer and christian gentleman, Brevet Major Gen. Charles Griffin, who died after an illness of only three days duration of the prevailing epidemic. To all loyal men in this State the death of the commanding general has proved a terrible shock; coming as it does so suddenly, and at a time too, when the oppressed and contemned Unionists throughout the State were at last feeling that the reign of terrorism and barbarity so terrible hitherto, was to cease, and that the wise and just measures of Congress should prevail, our loss is all the more bitter and depressing.

As an earnest, faithful and zealous officer, determined to do his duty under the the reconstruction bill, protecting the weak, establishing justice and insuring tranquility in this roughout of all the "military districts," Gen. Griffin endeared himself to the whole country.

An instance of that rare humanity and generous philanthropy that actuated the soul of our late commanding general, which occurred but a few months before his death, and published now for the first time, I believe, is related thus: A delegation of our newly enfranchised citizens called on the general; in the course of conversation with them, he stated that he was their friend—as they know and their sorrowful hearts testify to-day—that he was sent here to carry out the just and impartial laws of congress; that they nor their children's children should speak of him save in love, and that he wished no prouder epitaph than that he was true to the trust imposed in him by this oppressed and (hitherto) despised people.

With the exception of the News newspaper and its class of unwashed and unrepentant barbarian rebel readers, your correspondent has neither read or heard ought but regret at the untimely death of General Griffin.

General Doubleday with the bereaved widow of our lamented commander, the orphaned children of Col. Abert, and the desolate wife of Dr. Adams, went north on the 16th instant. We hope to welcome the general under brighter auspices in a few months.

Of political news there is little of real importance save the removal of the Supreme Court Judges by special orders No. 171. Our friend, the Hon. Amos Merrill, of Austin, is among the appointments of Associate Justices. The epidemic is apparently on the decrease.

Our friend Flake it seems is not reconciled with his conservative friends; they accuse him of sitting on the fence, being neither radical or conservative, waiting in fact to see which is the winning side and then plunge with the tide; a position which they allege is characteristic of the man, as he occupied it during the war.

Major Phymly who has been up and about was thrown into a relapse, which is not esteemed dangerous however, by the sudden news of the death of General Griffin.

Mr. Whildin, the editor of the Bulletin, is, I understand, about again. Mr. Stackhouse, who has been acting editor pro tempore, is a sprightly, genial writer, and I learn a good radical.

There is a youth who, every time he wishes to get a glimpse of his sweetheart cries "fire!" directly under her window. In the alarm of the moment she plunges her head out of the window and inquires "Where?" When he positionally slaps himself on the bonom, and exclaims, "Er, my Carolina!" We think a bucket of ice-cold water would put out that fire.

SWEET POTATO FUDGING.—Take five eggs, $\frac{1}{2}$ pound of butter, $\frac{1}{2}$ of a pound of sugar; add as much sweet potato as will thicken it, the juice and grated peel of a lemon; beat very light.

A PARISIAN STORY ABOUT OPALS AND DIAMONDS.

A Russian princess in the Parisian grande monde has lately spread the report that opals are the surest and truest soothsayers that ever woman consulted in harrowing doubt. She had a set of these gems; it had been given her by an admirer, a gentleman, of course; he was absent, and suddenly ceased to correspond regularly. The melancholy lady one morning opened the box containing his present, and fancied her opals looked wan. She held them to the light; they positively shone less than mother of pearl. "The image of my heart," she sighed, and put the box aside. That day she received a letter; her admirer was very ill. "Ah, the opals!" exclaimed the lady, and hastened in search of the box. The set looked very sickly indeed. "He's worse!" exclaimed the princess; "all her visitors that day had to be witnesses of the hourly change in her gems. The following morning at day dawn the box was again consulted. The opals were perfectly colorless. They looked like fishes' eyes; just as expressive, without a shade of wink or blink in them. The princess' tears can be fancied but not described. At twelve the opals had crumpled into the dust, when shrieks and spasms ensued. At one the postman delivered a letter, bordered round with black edges—the admirer was dead! I need not say that prostration completed the sorrows of that day, and the news ran like wildfire that opals were magnetic fortune tellers—magnetic, electric, mesmerist, or anything ladies do not understand. The Paris papers have all, more or less, recorded the above circumstance, consequently there is a great exchange of pearl and diamond rings for opals. To have the state of one's beloved eyes plainly indicated on one's fingers is too evident an advantage to be gossayed.

A HORSE FINDS HIS WAY HOME AFTER AN ABSENCE OF FOUR YEARS.—Mr. Green Triplet of Flemingsburg, Ky, sold a horse to a man who was buying horses for the Government early in the war. The same horse was taken to Cincinnati and sold to an officer in the United States army, and since that time nothing has been heard of him until a few days ago, when he returned to the farm of Mr. Triplet, who had raised him from a colt. The horse was four years old when left, and now returns aged eight years, having been on quite a tour since he left his home. Where he came from, or how he managed to find the place of his birth, is involved in mystery.

Mr. Triplet supposed that the animal was badly treated, and having evaded the vigilance of his master, has returned to the home of his choice. This horse was absent four long years in distant and strange lands, and how he managed to find his way back home is quite a problem for the naturalist. This is a remarkable illustration of the wonderful instinct possessed by the horse. It shows that the horse is possessed of a wonderful instinct, and that years do not wipe out his memory.

Bouquets.

The following may be of interest to the ladies:
When you receive a bouquet sprinkle it lightly with fresh water; then put it in a vessel containing soap suds; this will nutrifry the stem and keep the flowers as bright as new. Take the bouquet out of the suds every morning and lay aside ways (the stock entering first) into clean water. Keep it there a minute or two, then take it out and sprinkle the flowers lightly by hand with water; replace it in the soap suds, and it will bloom as fresh as when first gathered; the soap suds changing every three or four days. By observing these rules a bouquet may be kept bright and beautiful for at least a month, and will last still longer in a very passable state, but attention of the fair creature, as directed above, must be observed, or all will perish.

In the common method of killing an animal for market, it is bled to death, and thus much of the nutritive portion of its flesh is lost, as might be easily inferred from the fact of the sameness of composition of flesh and blood. Meat deprived of blood suffers most seriously by the waste of saline materials, especially the salts of soda, the carbonate and the phosphate of soda, and chloride of sodium. Iron is also drained out. The last flowing portions of blood carry off also potash salts. Savory depends on the withdrawal of soluble salts in the curing of meat, as first demonstrated by Dr. Aldridge, and hence it is thought from the above premises there is no doubt that the use of meat in which the blood is retained would prevent decay.

The Fifth Annual Convention of the National Telegraphic Union met in St. Louis on the 11th inst. Delegates representing practical telegraphers are present from all parts of the country.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

NEW YORK CITY, Aug. 20, 1867.

NEWARK.

On Sunday I took the steamer for Newark, New Jersey, a suburb of New York, containing over ninety thousand inhabitants. It is a desolate condition to be a stranger in this great metropolis of a Sabbath without aim or purpose; while having every required comfort one feels the awful oppressive desolation of being in a densely-packed city of two million human beings; when we consider that thousands are without means of subsistence and without friends, is it any wonder that so many suicides are recorded? However, my trip to Newark left me no time to contemplate the horrors of New York; these thoughts being suggested by a visit to the "Morgue," the receptacle for the unknown dead.

A trip on the Bay is a great relief from the din of the metropolis. As we glide away from the monuments of brick and mortar towards Staten Island, the upper harbor presents a beautiful scene, particularly to one who has been amidst those who sought to throw discredit upon the emblem of our nation during the past six years. Way off to the north may be seen the beautiful "stars and stripes" floating over prominent buildings in the city, while the upper harbor is literally crowded with ships bearing aloft flags of all nations. As we pass Governor's Island, the softened notes of the chime at Trinity Church, mingle their sounds with those of the Military Band which is calling together the troops for worship. Staten Island and the heights below Brooklyn are occupied with elegant villas, residences of the merchant princes. These beautiful homes, buried amid the trees that cover the banks of the harbor, are distinct from the city; parents can regulate the associates of their children, thus securing their minds against the corruption of the city, and at the same time giving them the advantage of metropolitan training and education. These country villas are organized into communities, sustain churches, &c.

After rounding the point below Jersey City and entering the Passaic River, the shore becomes flat and marshy, hence there is nothing to occupy one's attention save the immediate surroundings on the steamer. Here we have the old story—a maiden and youth in the morning of life are lost to the world in each other's perfections, and little dream that the fall-tide blush of her cheek telegraphs to outsiders the hand-squeezing surreptitiously carried on, watching the blushes come and go.

The low-lands are soon passed, and soon we are in sight of the industrious city of Newark. As it is Sunday I cannot give descriptions of the industrial pursuits, but of the manufactories, I was struck with the appearance of a flourishing mill recently erected; it is twelve stories high and has a capacity for making upwards of four thousand barrels of flour per week. Newark is anything but pleasant; it is smoky and begrimed and everywhere partakes of the air of "factory." "We Southerners," who have been educated to hold the "medals" in contempt, have a perfect right to be disgusted with it, so I leave it with the apology that I want for the ride.

CENTRAL PARK AGAIN.

Central Park would please the most fastidious. On my last visit I happened there on a gala-day. A splendid band of music (Giltmore's) were discoursing sweet notes, the musicians being on the beautiful lake in a rich gondola tastefully decorated for the occasion; the Park was crowded to overflowing; beautiful women promenade the walks, while light-hearted children gambled over the green sward; graceful swans gliding over the smooth surface of the lake gave poetry to the scene, a turbaned attendant in red Zouave breeches, riding a dromedary, did the "Oriental," coolers of ice-water at convenient distances allayed the thirst without cost; and gentlemen in red and blue uniforms to protect the timid and direct the bewildered. Oh! but ain't the Gothamites proud of their Park? It's their weakness, and they are justified.

FACTS AND FANCIES ABOUT NEW YORK.
It is difficult to say much about New York that has not already been said a thousand times, and worn threadbare; but it is so large, what can not be said? Within a circuit of ten miles from the City Hall one-fiftieth of all the people in the United States live. Within a strip one mile wide running six miles north from the Battery there are more people than in all Texas. More people pass through Broadway each day than Texas contains. A person going on top of the Custom House, will have within the sound of his voice more money and its representatives than would suffice to pay for all the negroes freed in the South, and satisfy the rapacity of Governor Throckmorton's leeches a whole month. To see the highest specimens of landscape art the visitor must see Greenwood Cemetery. To see architectural beauty, the Academy of Design. By the way, speaking of architecture, the elegant brown stone fronts so much boasted of are the greatest cheat I ever saw; they bear the same relation to substance that veneering does to real rosewood, or shoddy to cloth. The houses are made of common brick, and then slabs of stone are fastened on with hooks and eyes, serving as a covering for the poor material of the superstructure.

BUSINESS PRICES.
Of the business houses there is little to be said; but few are seeking the Southern trade this season. Many of those who made a rush for their old customers soon after the "break-up," were sadly taken in; a few instances have occurred where houses that went through the difficulties attending the war have smashed by renewing their Southern relations. Among the houses still having faith in the South is that of Faile, Coggeshall & Co., on Chambers street, a few doors below A. T. Stewart's wholesale house; they have made the most extensive preparations to suit the Southern trade of any clothing house in the city. While other houses have made up heavy goods for the Western and Northern trade, this firm have agents in the South who are studying the wants of that section, and the qualities and styles are selected in accordance with these reports. S. M. McCready & Co. have just added the reputation of philanthropists to their already good name; they have just divided one hundred dollars between Laveca and Indianola. The dry goods house of H. B. Claffin & Co. did a little more business than A. T. Stewart last year; the latter sold $75,000,000, and the former $83,000,000—only a $8,000,000 difference. It is thought Stewart will suffer for bread, his net income only amounting to one million three hundred and eighty-five thousand dollars this year against five million last year. Claffin & Co. employ five hundred and sixty men, have but one door for entrance and egress, and has regular detectives and police regulations. It is probably the greatest mercantile establishment in the world; they have one salesman who received twenty-two thousand dollars last year.

NEW YORK PRESS—THE COMING DANGER.
The papers in the city are "going it blind;" there is not a single paper issued in the city that discusses the ponderous questions at issue between the people and the traitor President with any logic. The fact that Mr. Johnson is riding his hobby over the will of the people, and is taking from the victorious North the fruits of their dear-bought victory, is as clear in the minds of all as the noon-day sun. What they want now is the logical arguments in support of their rights. They know it is bad logic for Mr. Johnson to grapple the nation by the throat and cry—"You cannot Constitutionally resist me!" They want to know if there is any precedent for nations to protect themselves. The papers here are simply asserting that Johnson ought to be impeached—because he ought to. Mr. Dana is about starting a paper that will probably infuse some life in the party in New York City. It is my opinion that a good live Republican paper would take the control of New York City out of the hands of the roughs in a few years. In the meantime the people are fully alive to the dangers surrounding them. The grand Army of the Republic is ready to spring into life at the near sound of approaching danger. You may rest assured that a sufficient number of loyal arms will be in readiness to protect Congress in their places next November against the Maryland militia; and when the House presents her articles of impeachment before Congress and Congress calls for Mr. Johnson's appearance for trial, there will not be a solitary soldier found in defence of the arch traitor who now wears the livery of the immortal Lincoln.

I know this last great trial to loyal men in the South will cause faltering by the way-side, but let them beware how they fall into the enemy's camp. The pursued deer only found speedy death when he sought refuge among men from the wolves—how much nobler to have died in self-defence.

There are fears of more failures. New York Republican Convention. WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The New York World's special from Syracuse says that the afternoon session of the New York State Republican Convention commenced with a strong speech from Roscoe Conkling, the prominent President of the Convention, giving a history of the party dangers which threaten the country; praising Stanton and Sheridan and denouncing Johnson. His allusion to Stanton was faintly applauded, while Sheridan's name was greeted with rounds of applause.

His remarks with reference to the course to be adopted by congress in reference to the President was an argument in favor of impeachment and in opposition to a permanent session, and an effort to circumvent the President without resorting to extraordinary powers by congress. Impeachment was the remedy to be applied instead of assuming doubtful powers by congress, or touching upon the prerogatives of the executive. It was in short an experimental speech, delivered in an impressive and telling manner.

Conkling declared that he did not admit that the time had come for impeachment but at the same time his whole argument on that point was that the hour had arrived to adopt that course immediately.

The following are among the Syracuse resolutions:
Resolved, That as Republicans of the State of New York, recognizing the obligations of the constitution and straight forwardness in the support of the great principles we unanimously declare that suffrage should be impartial, and that it is a right which ought not to be limited by position or color.

Resolved, That the course of the congress of the United States in carrying out measures of reconstruction on the basis of freedom, regardless of reduction of executive patronage, must have hearty approval, and that we do hereby assure them of our determination to stand by them through this struggle, and in all measures necessary to place liberty on a lasting foundation even to the severest remedies known to the constitution.

GENERALS MOWER AND REYNOLDS.
The N O Republican speaks thus of Generals Mower and Reynolds:

Major Gen. Joseph A. Mower, who succeeds to the command of the fifth military district, is a native of Woodstock, Vt. He was appointed to the first infantry in 1855, in which he remained until the close of the war, he being captain in the same, and colonel of the thirty-ninth infantry after the reorganization. He became major general of volunteers, and commanded the twentieth army corps at the close of the war. No one fought with greater bravery than he, and no one is more distinguished by gallantry and courtesy than is Major General Mower. Though recently suffering from an attack of yellow fever, we are happy to say he is at present in good health and able to discharge the heavy duties devolving upon him. Major General Reynolds will be recollected as commanding the defences of New Orleans during the war, and afterwards commanding the nineteenth army corps in the battles of Virginia. He is a native of Kentucky, and was appointed from Indiana.

POMOLOGICAL.—A dispatch from St. Louis of the 11th inst says:

Seventeen States are represented in the Pomological Convention now sitting here. No business was transacted to day other than the delivery of welcoming addresses by Henry T. Mudd, of the Missouri State Horticultural Society, and Mr. Spaulding—the latter addressing grape growers especially.

Over three hundred members are present. One of the features of the exhibition of fruit is some pears from a tree in Danvers, Mass., which was planted by John Endicott, first Governor of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay. The tree is supposed to have been planted a short time subsequently to the arrival of Governor Endicott, in 1628.

STORY OF A WIDOW.—A young widow of Quincy, Illinois, met a stranger on the street, and asked him the way; he asked her if she was not a widow; she said she was; he said he was a widower, a doctor from Palmyra, Mo., and proposed matrimony on the spot; she blushed and hesitated; wouldn't he come home to see her friends about it; the interview was satisfactory, the marriage was arranged for next morning, the widow's cash ($40) got into the doctor's pocket, he went to get shaved, and has never returned. He even left her, cruel man, standing in the public square while he "just ran over to the barber's." There was no such doctor in Palmyra, and the curtain drops on a woman in tears.—Cairo Democrat.

Local Intelligence.

A COLORED MAN RESCUED FROM A REBEL CONSPIRACY.—On Thursday last a colored man named Bracht, living near Brahan's ranch on the Cibola, was arrested by a man named Sharper, who claimed to be a deputy sheriff, and taken to Lavernia, where a self constituted rebel court were assembled to try him for theft. It seems that the colored man's offence was buying beef of a German who was charged with killing other people's cattle. The colored man in the vicinity seeing the danger of one of their number and believing that the proper authority to try the case was the Freedmen's Bureau, went in a body to Lavernia and demanded that Bracht be delivered over to them to be taken before the Bureau Agent, to see what offence he was guilty of. The demand was at first denied, but finding the colored men determined the prisoner was given up. He was then taken to Seguin and delivered to the military commander. This was exactly right, these people did not want to avoid justice but to have it fairly dealt. The small batch of rebels among whom they live and for whom they work, will no doubt take heart enough, encouraged by Johnson's policy, to attempt to re-enslave the colored people. We tender them a little good advice, to give up such an idea if they want to live in peace. This arrest of Bracht was simply a conspiracy to rob him and his family of the crop he has made. The colored men are now American citizens and have as many rights as the Sharpers, Rector's, Johnson's, Dyle's and Brahan's among whom they live, and they must stand up like men for those rights. Do no wrong and suffer no wrong. It will be remembered that a short while since a freedman was brutally murdered in broad day light in Lavernia, and yet these energetic conservators of the peace, who trump up a charge against a hard working freedman never took a step to arrest the murderers. This action of the colored men to protect one of their number from rebel justice, will of course be denounced as an outrage by the traitor press, while the outrageous murder in the same place was considered but the exercise of constitutional rights.

REOPENING OF THE EL PASO ROUTE.—Mr. B. F. Picklin, the new contractor for the El Paso Mail Route to-day for El Paso to arrange for putting on his line of stages, and takes with him his first mail. Mr. F. is an old stage man over the Salt Lake route and understands the business perfectly; he is also able to carry out all he assumes to do; he has no connection with Hall, Risher & Co. It will be a couple of months before the route will be in complete running order, and mails will not be very regular until that time. Mr. Picklin speaks in perfect confidence of his undertaking; his contract is for a weekly service but we hope it will be changed to a tri-weekly to make connection with the tri weekly service from Mesilla to California.

MORTUARY.—The health officer reports five deaths during the week ending September 28. Three infants, V. N. Wells, the policeman who died from a stab, and J. H. Davis, a stranger who came to the city sick. There is no city of the same number of inhabitants, twelve to fifteen thousand, in the United States that can boast of such a state of health; it won't support an undertaker.

REGISTRATION.—Registration closed on Saturday, eighty persons have been registered during this second sitting, making in all 1480 for Bexar county.

In the World, for the AMERICAN HOME CIRCLE.
The American Organ makes home attractive, refines and elevates the minds of all, beautiful in appearance and effects.
SIBERIA OTT,
783 Broadway, New York,
WHOLESALE AGENT.
The immense popularity of these Organs, and their superior musical powers, is fast bringing them before the public, as the instrument so long desired in American homes. And although the cost price is but a trifle over the Melodian, yet the musical advantages, beauty of tone and quickness of touch and action are so far superior, that they are fast superseding the Melodian, and the call is now almost exclusively for the American Organ.
It is adapted to any music from the quickest and most lively, to the heavy tone of the Church Organ. And almost universally they are preferred to the Piano, by persons who have them, yet costing less than half, and only taking a small amount of room.
Send for descriptive circulars giving full particulars and price.
