I hear again the dear old sougs Which our uhildish voices sung, And think the music sweeter far Than any I since have sung.

I wander again on the grassy lawn, With Allie, my love and pride, And Whisper softly of what would be When she was my little bride.

Ah! the day we wished for me, or can For my Allie was called away, and angels welcomed my darling one To the land of endions day.

To hear her ewest voice join with mine, In the twilight east and dim, he we stood in the perch of the house And sang our e eating hymn.

Adam and Eve.

OF MEA ANNIE O. MARGRALL, OF DUNBARTON

How did Pa Adam wash his hat do:
In basin made of wood,
Marble, or chins, brass or tin?
The tilman never case that way,
Marble was all unknown,
Ohina or brass unthought of them,
And glass had nover been blown.
No! Adam must go to the brook,
And bend him like a highland crook,
And without soap or towel good,
Must wash him there as best he could.

How could Ma Eve comb out her hair.
Her hoeks of sunay brown?
No hooking-glass was tande for her,
Reflecting smile or frown.
No breath to smooth her silly hair.
No hot no to uri it on,
Nor could she roll on lead;
No lit is mansi wear it hanging down.
That sunny hair of golden brown;
I really feel inclined to grieve,
When thinking of poor Mother Eve.

And could Adam plow his land?
A glow he could not make;
Toke for his oxen he had none,
Harrow, nor scythe, nor rake.
He had not tools to fashion aught,
No axe or spade og hae.

He had not tools to fashion ampht, No Exe or spade or hee. No drag or eart or chains had he. He could not plow we know. No! Adam lived on fruit, 't's plain, There were no mills to grind his gra The rigness fruit that grew about, Adam must eat, or go without.

And how could Eve a dinner get?
No stove on which to coch;
The seasons the could not read,
For site had no book
How could the woman agin her yarn?
No wheel on which to spin;
How could ash wrave a web of cloth?
No loom to weave it in.
No Leve, bour suchers and poor wrice,
Did live an insconvenional live;
Only to dress in dark green leaves,
Sexud with the bark of cocon trees.

And how could Adam build a house,

And how could Adam build a house, Without a saw or plane? Had he no home for his young bride, No fire or lamp at hight? Window or table, bed or chair? Ah, ne? a soure plight, No? Adam in the garden fair, Lived only in the open air?-Flowers and fruits around him grew, Aboge him just 8 sky of blue,

How could their marriage be perfora ed !

 The Messra, S. Hart & Dro, have been appointed sole agents for Western Texas of the celebrated "Schleicher Silver Bill" brand of cigars. The manufacturers could not have given it to a more whice which im, and the Hart boys will no doubt make a success of this fine brand. Each box contains fifty cigars, with a picture of the late Hon, G. Schleicher on the lid of the cover. We have tried them, and can recommend all salcons and cigar dealers to have the "Schleicher Bill" always on hand. Carmival Preparations.

 A meeting was held last evening at Karber's saloon to take steps toward the inauguration of a carnival procession on Mardi Gras, now something like three weeks distant. After talking over the matter, the gathering adjourned until next Wednesday, 5 p. m., at the same place. It is the intention to get up the finest procession that ever occurred in our city. The move deserves the fullest encouragement.
