NOTES.

Austin, April 4.—Committee on asylums reported recommending an expenditure of $7,500 as necessary for the buildings of the blind asylum.

Disagreements of the two houses on the amendment to the constitution exempting all farm products and family supplies, has been settled.

The motion to lay the bill reorganizing Hall's committee on the table was lost by vote of 41 to 35.

The bill to ascertain arrears due teachers of free schools from 1873 to 1876 was lost.

The appropriation bill was postponed until Monday. Amendments were recommended by the finance committee to strike out the appropriation of $100,000 for frontier protection, and reduce the amount for free schools from $400,000 to $300,000.

A long report on the lunatic asylum reporting charges of cruelty was received, and dominating superintendent Wallace as the right man in the right place.

The bill providing that the bodies of paupers may be used for dissection passed.

Tax bill was postponed till Tuesday.

NATIONAL CAPITOL NEWS.

HOUSE PROCEEDINGS.

Washington, April 4.—The house met at 10 o'clock yesterday, yesterday, and the general debate which closes at 3 o'clock today.

The first to address the house was Blaine, of Mississippi, who stated the question to be whether the house had enough authority to determine to repeal the pension law or would rather and fall in its duties to the country.

He admitted that under the present constitution no troops have been stationed at polls, but no one could prevent whatever the course of the last administration in that respect might not be followed in the next.

It is thought that the return of the pension law to public life, meaning, perhaps, Senators Chandler and Logan, did not go to the republic in the face of the danger which it would bring upon the country.

The heated freedom of America was a mockery and a lie. In conclusion, Blaine urged the return of the pension law to public life, meaning, perhaps, Senators Chandler and Logan, did not go to the republic in the face of the danger which it would bring upon the country.

He therefore urged the return of the pension law to public life, meaning, perhaps, Senators Chandler and Logan, did not go to the republic in the face of the danger which it would bring upon the country.

con, and was considerably applauded on both sides.

Waver was followed by three other greenbackers, Delamater, of Indiana; Jones, of Texas; and Wright, of Pennsylvania.

Delamater expressed his intention to vote for the bill as it stands.

Wright opposed the placing of political legislation in the appropriation bill.

Wright concluded the reciting of the dead names of the war, and predicted defeat in 1880 for the party that raised them.

During a long course of service in the house he had never heard disputed the right of the house to enact on the appropriation bill other necessary measures of legislation.

Blaine, of Connecticut, followed, denouncing the purpose of the majority which would leave the government to be controlled by the voluntary services of its officers, or voluntary contributions, such as flowed into the treasury in 1860.

It was threatened by gentlemen of that majority that if the present should vote they would apply thumb-screws to the minority in order to obtain a two-thirds majority, and falling in that, that the appropriation should fall.

To that proposal, however, the minority would invariably vote nay to the end of the chapter.

Chandler, of Virginia, next spoke. He denied that the right to legislate by means of proceedings used by congress, and if he voted the pending measure he must do so in his own name, and not on the name of the majority.

He said that he would vote nay to the measure, and that he would vote nay to the measure, and that he would vote nay to the measure.
