A short statement of the various steps that

No attentive observer of the legislative affairs of Texas but is impressed by our hasty, imperfect and unfinished way of doing business. We do not remember a single important law enacted since the adoption of the new constitution but which is either inoperative by reason of some fatal neglect or has, or is, to be, amended before being used. The new constitution itself is a fair sample of this crude, unfinished way of finishing up the laws made as we go along. Gov. Oake entered the lists in support of the new constitution while it was before the people for ratification, and we well remember that one of his strongest points was the facility with banks were very numerous, a majority of closed on Bunday. COMMISSION MERCHANTS Dealers in domestic and foreign exchange It will be seen at once from this that Tennessee will bear after this settlement lighter burdens than any southern state, even after Louisiana secures her reduction of interest to 4 per cant. for 15 years, leaving the principal intact. The question pertains to curselves solely. What is right, just and the beet policy for ourselves is the question; but if any one chooses to look to other states for light he will find that everything points out the reception of this settlement as the best possible course to take.

States board of trade of September 12, 1878. Out of this grew a national convention at the Masonic temple, on November 13, to consider the subject. Three hundred persons attended the convention, which appointed a committee to draw up a plan. The convention reassembled on March 12, and the committee reported in favor of holding the fair 1883. A citizens erganization, suggested at the convention, was formed on April 3, when a committee of 200 was named. The committee elected as its president Henry G. Stebbins, and also chose sub-committees to aftend to the organization of the fair. On April 30 a resolution was passed, inviting kindred committees to co-operate with it in the work.
