strange to say, but, neverthetess, it is ac-tually true, that we had a nice shower of rain to-day at this place, and appearances are favorable for more rain in the near future. The almost incessant gale of wind that has been blowing for months has ceased, and the clouds are apparently condensing. Well, it is never too late to do good, yet it is too late to prevent the grad damage to the country. Already much stock has perished. Many persons have left the country with their stock in search of grass. However, they will return when it rains and grass comes, which it does very quickly when there is nighture in the soil. Rain is the all-bearshing distinct new with us. What absorbing question now with us. What would we care about commutations, vetoes, or anything else, should it not rain?

Bounes, August 3d, 1879. Borner, August 3d, 1879.

Editors San Antonio Expuss:

The rains have all missed this place so far. We have pienty of dust, but nothing else much except pleasant nights. There are no vegetables or meions to be had except those brought from San Antonio. The people are hauling water from the springs here for miles around. Grass is tolerably plentiful out in the mountains away from water—where there is grass there is no water. Visitors are except here this season, but the itors are scarce here this season, but the hotel-keepers are looking for an influx soon.
This is no doubt a delightful place in ordinary seasons.

The committee of inquiry into the cau The committee of inquiry into the causes of agricultural depression, says the London Times of July 15, has a wide field before it, and is certainly not limited to the causes to which may be assigned a legislative origin. As it will take cognizance of American competition, it will be bound to estimate as nearly as it can the advantages and disadvantages enjoyed or suffered by the home produce. The advocates of our own agrecultural interest appear to calculate, with great nicety, the prime cost of American produce, and the expenses of transport from the interior of the vast western continent, by land and sea, to the heart of this metropolis. They are bound to apply the same keen, least doubt but what the commission will be and sea, to the heart of this metropolis. They are bound to apply the same keen, commercial seumen to the transport of their information that can be gathered on the sub-GOLD mining in New Hampshire is gradually assuming the proportions of an import-at 8d, bacon and hams at 5d and cheese at 4d? The general complaint of the agriculturists is that they do not know how to dispose of their goods, and that, when they attempt to discover or force a straighter way to a consuming public, they find themselves headed by a ring of middlemen or thrown upon unknown people, who prey on their ignorance and simply rob them of their goods. But if Americans can bring their products to market and place them well for sale—which it is always assumed they do—why can not the English land owner and farmer? One answer will suggest itself to main.y It is that the American is much keener and sharper than the Englishman, and that he pursues his melancholy business simply with an eye to profit. On the A noand of architects recently made an investigation late the construction of the new City Hall of Cificago, and discovered no less and that he pursues his melancholy business simply with an eye to profit. On the other hand farming is here an amusing and dignified occupation, and only exceptionally a plan for money making. It is too true that many country gentiemen would feel themselves sinking in their own estimation if they found an annual balance in their favor, even after repairs and odd expenses. They might take a sort of competitive pride in proclaiming the fact, but they would, nevertheless, feel it too much like real farming. Such a spirit may be very generous, incorrections, leaf it loo much incorrect narming. Such a spirit may be very generous, but it has no claims to legislative aid. The committee will have to treat agriculture on its own merits as the manufacture of food out of the soil.

The Pacts in the Case;

Philadelphia Times.

The south was never so loyal as she is to-day. She is loyal not alone from necessity, but as well from choice and self-interest, which is after all the strongest consideration. But she is not loyal to the republican party. On the centrary, she hates it with a fervent hatred. How far such hatred is justifiable in view of the manner in which the republican party has dealt with that section since the relation was a such hatred is justifiable in view of the manner in which the republican party has dealt with that section since the result with that section since the result with that section able, and it is not worth while to argue. That this hatred crists is unquestionable, and it is quite as cartain that the present manages of the republican party cordially reciprocate the hostile feeling. There is no statesmanship in perpetuating this state of affairs. So long as it continues the republicans must resign all hope of carrying a single nouthern state. If there were any prisciple at the bottom of the antagonism then hay result be right in holding on to it, although they could not carry any state, whether more or south. But there is not. It rests only on tradition and prejudice. Is it not well, therefore, simply from considerations of policy to lay it aske? Philadelphia Times.

The Growth of New York. New York Sun month, all but a small portion of them wer going up north of Fortieth street. These efficial statistics of the department of buildings merely confirm what the observation of every one who has traversed the upper wards of the city has trayers him. New York is growing at a rapid rate in a northerly direction, and the center of the population of the metropolis is advancing towards the Central park, which latter will, before many years, be as nearly the center of New York as the common formerly was of Boston, and thus justify the name given to it by the foresight of its projectors.

Gov. Chamberlin's speech at Woodstock.

Is it not folly, is it not babyish weakness, to complain that the southern states are back again in congress, and that they have sent there such representatives as they must naturally choose? We send our best minds to congress, of course, to manage the vital interests of our country. Why should they not send their best minds? If, gentlemen, we do not want the rebel generals there what did not want the south to have an increased majority in the electoral vote or in congress, why did we not think of that wheng by giving the enfranchised slave the ballot, we thereby added to the southern strength thirty-five the enfranchised slave the ballot, we thereby added to the southern strength thirty-five electors and representative votes? Whoever did that should not stultify himself by whining about it or setting up, a powwow over it, and trying to make the people think that the great war has not settled something.

Editors San Autonio Extruses:

The coroner's jury adjourned this evening, with the following result:

"We, the jury, summoned to hold an inquest upon the body of John T. Baker, deceased, find, from the evidence, that John T. Baker came to his death on the 28th day of July, 1879, by means of a wound caused by a leaden builtet shot out of a pistol, in the hands of some party to these jurors unknown, the wound being in the left temple, and of the width of one-fourth of an inch, and passing through the brain, of which wound he then and there died."
