It is a continuous the contagion of their houses.

It is disposed in extension of the little effort made to check the disease, that the authorities cannot compel a person having the small-pox to leave his or her domicil. But there is certainty some law, state or metional, to protect the people in this respect, and if our city clearter is defective, the authorities should long ago have invoked that law.

This is not a subject to be longer dility dallied with. The people are tired almost to exasperation of these small-pox reports, and insist that a new policy be adopted. A person afflicted with the small-pox seriously endangers the health and lives of those who may live in the immediate neighborhood, and the arthorities certainly have the right to give protection to the threatened people. If the council has not the power to remove the patient against his will, it certainly has the power to guard the people in the infected premises during the existence of the disease. The center of the small-pox to leave the region of the council has not the power to remove the patient against his will, it certainly has the power to guard the people in the infected premises during the existence of the disease. The center of the wises of the certainly has the power to guard the people in the infected premises during the existence of the diseases. The effect of this would be to compel the neighborhood. This can be done by making it missions sate fair gives the patients to accorde to the infected premises during the existence of the diseases. The effect of this would be to compel the infected premises during the existence of the diseases. The effect of this would be to compel the patients to accorde to the infected premises during the existence of the disease. The effect of this would be to compel the pat were taken outside the city and retained in quarantine until all danger of spreading the contagion is gone, there would soon be an ond to small-pox in this city. Will the authorities at least make an effort? If they cannot, let the people appeal to the state an therities for relief to rid us of this loathsome burden.

We were pained yesterday to learn of the ath of Thomas Brady, which and event ocsides a brother and other relatives in this city, to mourn his untimely death. Thomas Brady came to San Antonio only about two years ago, a sufferer from consumption, to obtain better health in this more genial clime. He soon became known to our people as an honorable and true man, and was held in high regard by all who know him well. A few months ago death invaded his home in this city, and robbed it of a wife and mother—a sad bereavement, which tended to hasten the event which we now record. But the deceased will not be forgotten—good men never should be. The funeral occurred last evening.
