What might be called the proneness of Americans to appear as public lecturers, either in the hope of realizing pecuniary reward or attracting public attention—or both, is one of the peculiar features of American Because Treasurer Gates was a democrat ward or attracting public attention—or both, is one of the peculiar features of American life. There are, of course, public lecturers in other countries—but they are almost invariably men of thought, culture and depth, who prepare themselves by long study and application, and who accomplish good werk among their patrons as a result of their efforts, as well as acquire wealth and fame. We have a few of this class in this country, but the lecturing mania has seized upon so many, and the cuntry is so filled with lecturing tramps, that as a class they are regarded little better, sockally or morally, than any other kind of tramps. Let any Americans, men or women, gain notoricty, no matter if it be in a manner that would square the bush of shame to mantle the cheek of an ordinary individual, and straightway the make an effort to turn their notoriety to account by parading themselves before the public as "lecturers," r.lying upon the curiosity of the people to see them, rather than hear them, for success in gathering the success and admorate was a democratic legislature reason why a democratic legislature should have held him to assure should have believed the assurant the democratic party that it was the assurant the people would have believed the assurant the democratic party that it was a difficult to convince an intelligent and inpartial irury that the character of a member of the democratic state, the treasurer solid have believed the assurant the people would have believed the assurant the people would have believed the assurant the people would have believed the assurant the character of a member of the democratic party that it was the treasurer solid heave the firm the people would have believed the assurant the democratic party that it was another that the transcent was a democratic party that the character of a member of the democratic party have the treasurer should have held him to ass than hear them, for success in gathering shekels. They bring the profession almost founded charge of Odicial corruption, with no effort to cast out or procise the corrupt, and if the democratic party gives no promise of his productions for success, can merits of his productions for success, can undered. Those who established their reputations years ago are still well received, but new ones, to first secure the attention of their merits, must first gain notoriety through a mesalliance of some kind—a divorce suit, a breach of promise case, or scandal of sufficient magnitude to attract general attention, ficient magnitude to attract general attention, in impeached and punished as he deserves.

The Eventing News, a new newspaper at For Ten Deltars:

published by the democratic papers as curiosities and by republican papers as "expressiods of southern sentiment." The southern interest of whose party the States was working, made such to do about them that Harper concluded he would take advantage of the notoricty he had gained to go north on a was a failure. The people didn't flock. Probably the greatest reason for this is to be found in the fact that a new luminary in the States' peculiar line has risen up; an ass with much longer cars and a louder and more cleaned with the states of the states are such as the states of bray; and the States man, on the threshold

When the individual members of a business community unite to work for the business community unite to work for the general welfare, and join their energies to effect a purpose, there is good reason to hope for success, no matter if the obstacles appear great and numerous. But without unity—with one map or one class pulling one way and another another way; without unity—with one map or one class pulling one way and another another way; with demoralization instead of organization, the business interests of a city or community must inevitably suffer. Daily Review of the San Antonio OFFICE OF THE DAILY & WERELY EXPRESS, Wednesday, September 17, 1879. Wednesday, September 17, 1879.)
A good business has been done in all the leading lines to-day, and receipts from the country have been particularly heavy.
The receipts of cotton to-day have aggregated fifty five bales, making the total receipts thus far this season amount to two hundred and ninety-four bales. The market his at last declined, owing to the steady decline in the large markets. For a while these declines were resisted by our buyers, who in their rivalry paid prices not warranted by the condition of other markets, but the sleady declines in those markets, have at last had their effects here and prices are now on the basis of 9 cents for middling grade. We after our quotations to show the present state of our local market.
The receipts of hides to-day included only

A Missing Man.

Last Monday, a young German by the ame of Frank Hollaine, left his home in the name of Frank Hollaine, left his home in the third ward, telling his wife that he was going to the first mission or somewhere in that vicinity, to look at a piece of land, which he had an idea of securing for gardening. Since his departure from home, nothing has been heard of him. His wife, to whom he had been married only about four months, feels greatly concerned, and it is bolieved by her that he has met some terrible fale. Parties have been hunting and inquiring for the missing man in the vicinity of the mission, but no trace of him has yet been obtained, nor anything heard of him. He has a lot of money, recently forwarded him from Germany, at Groos's bank, and a loving wife and happy home in the third ward. Hence there could have been no reason for him to leave the city and abandon his interests here.

The London Chroniels contains the following reference to the English agriculturalists who sailed from Liverpool on the Helvetis, and who are expected to land at Calveston to day.

alists who sailed from Liverpool on the Helvelia, and who are expected to land at Galveston to-day:

The National steamship company's steam-of the Helvelia sailed from Liverpool yesterday for New York, and amongst her passengers was a party of no fewer than 80 farmers, who, dissatisfied with the prospects of agriculture at home, have determined to try their fortunes in Texas. With few exceptions the emigrants have been drawn from the northern districts of Yorkshire and Durham They comprise various classes of agriculturists, from the ordinary small tenant farmer upwards, several of their number being persons of good position, and commanding capital to the extent of £500 or £550. Several of the farmers have united in the enterprise by clubbing together. One party is said to have raised a capital of about $1,200$. The selection of South Texas as the locale of their new home has been due to the exertions of Dr. Kingsbury, who a year or two ago was sent over to England by a Texas railway company to lay before the farmer agriculturists of this country the advantages of laking up sites along a line of railway then being constructed.
