The arrival of wool this morning, by earts and wagons reminds us of old times when wool, in the country back of us, reached this point for shipment to northern markets exclusively by such transportation, maxing business quite lively and giving most every-body something to do—an opportunity to make a living at least; but now things are quite different. The iron-horse having superceded the cart and wagon, it is seldom that we have the pleasure of noting the arrival of wool by such transportation any mors. Business has not fully opened yet. Large stocks are being received by the principal merchants, indicating that they anticipate lively times during the fall trade.

San Antonio Expranse:

In last, I spoke of the El Paso onion. The common red, or Connecticut can raise 500 bushels at the sere, Texas should raise 300 bushels at least, 300 bushels at 2 g to the sere; I seres to the hand—$1368 for erop taken off in June and July, giving you same land for sweet potatoes, say 150 bushels to the sere, at $1 per bushel, multiplied by 4 equals $600, nearly $2000 on 4 seres of series of the sere, at $1 per bushels, multiplied by 4 equals $600, nearly $2000 on 4 seres of series of the sere of series of the sere of series of the sere of the series of the sere of the sere of the series of the sere of the series of the sere of the series of equals $600, nearly $2000 on 4 acres of ground in one year.

Cabbages, still better. One acre of large drumbead cabbage, sown by the first of Normeron on heavy manured land, top dressing, will stand all winter, and be little affected from the frost, as the heat from the manure at the roots would protect ft, and in the spring you could set out 30,000 plants to the acre, and would average in our market at 10 cents each, $3000; but say 20,000 cabbages to the acre; this allows 2 feet each way, and at 5 cents per head, would make $1000 to the acre, still giving you the land for a second crop. One hand can cultivate 4 acres of this erop also. Now, Mr. Editor, this calculation beats them all. Flenty of good places can be had, with good houses, for from $7 to $10 per acre. Is this any encouragement to immigrants?
