It does not always require great wealth to possess a presty home. If the home is unpainted, a woodbine or climbing rose trained over the door or window is a great improvent. But trees I always thought one of the restliest emanuents to a farmer's home the presence of the restliest emanuents to a farmer's home the house on a hot summer's day; and if a few evergeens are yet on the windward side, they will afford as much, pleasure in the winder season as decidous trees do in summer. Flowers, too, add a great deal to the beauty of a home, and they should in no wise be neglected. Let the farmer prepare the ground, and the wife and daughters will be glad to plant and cultivate them. As general thing, farmers do not like "posies,"
