A New York Herald correspondent writing from Drogheds, Ireland, under date of Oct 13th, declares there will be no more emigration to America from that country. He says whether they pay rent for it or not. In Mayo and Galway and Reacommon, at every market and every fair, the farmers had made that resolve to one another, and the very feet attempt at existing and the cause of these walls, and the cause of these government they were framed. would have been the signal for an uprising in the West. While this was going on local meetings were being held in the West of Ireland, and resolutions were being presented to the landlords or their agents by the single landlord had responded or offered the lightest abatement of rents, and all hope fied that a good or even a moderate harvest ould come to relieve the black prospect The appearance of the "active" members of the Home Rule party as the leaders of the rent agitation was the immediate precursor of the offers made by the Endlords to reduce the rents for the past half year by twenty five per cent., and, in a few instances, to remit the half year's rent altogether. In almost every case where the temporary reduction or remission has been made there was not the slightest chance of the tenants being able to pay it—even in the reduced form—and the practical result will be that the tenants, when the bad season is over—if they like through it—will start afresh in debt to the first through it—will start afresh in debt to the first through it—will start afresh in debt to the leading guilty, which he did. The jury then retired to decide upon the precision to some more interesting to the process of the repulsion and the precision procedule. Another aspect of the question preat in most of the counties the rents paid that the teants, especially the small tennats, from sixty to seventy acros downward, have been precluded from saving. They kave, is moderately prosperous years, been hardly able to live. In exceptionally good years, they have been honest enough to pay off accumulated debts and were thus left without capital to face the depression. It is idle to tail them that as farming does not pay they should take to some other husiness. There is no other business to take to in Ireland As for emigration they answer that they have not money to emigrate, and that the "great shelter hand," as Parnell calls the United States, is shock fall and does not want the m. Besides, they are determined to stick to the land. They will not leave the land this time. This is simply the polley which Mr. Parnell jacon mends—the hold to the land under any efficumatances, rent or no rent; to hold, in fact, treland for the Irish against all edds.
