before the New York Historical society at its hall in Second avenue, at Eleveuth street. Many of the members of the society and their friends were present.

Mr. Brooks traced the newspaper from the albums and tablets pasted upon residences at Rome 2,047 years ago to the present time, noting as the first enemy of free publication the emperor Augustus, who, by force of authority, put an end to all kinds of publications. Stemography, which we introduced into the United States by the elder Gales, an exile for free writing, began with the notari of Rome, but, like many with the notari of Rome, but, like many with the notarii of Rome, but, like many other discoveries, for centuries was among the lost arts. The American press has grown from two journals in 1221 and twenty-five in 1770, to about 7,000 m 1870, and now there were nearly as many journals published in the United States as in the sect of the civilized world. The public being generally interested in the Sierra Mojada mining region, and as many persons are cased years and setting after the truth concerning the mines, our reporter makes it an object to interview all gentlament returning to this dity, from that region with the view of giving to the public the varied experiences had. Mr. M. H. Bardon and Mr. R. M. Pettit, of Austin, have just reached this point from the mines, and their experience may be of interest to some. These gentlemen left Austin on the 6th of October for the Sierra Mojada, via San Antonio and Eagle Pass, reaching their point of desimalities on the 21st. Setting busily to work, they surveyed the various mines and the country about, and gathered specimens of the ore. They report that about one hundred and eighty mines have as far been demonated,—that is, up to the date of the animal's head, until the dogree.
