New Orleans Democrat.

Hancock's nomination ends all republican chances in the north. Virginia, which the republicans jocularly ciaimed in the event of Grant's nomination, by some usion with the Grant's nonination, by some noton with the readjusters, is more than certain; it never was really in doubt. As for the other scouthers states, the republicans have never put forward a chain to them, except discreetly guarited by a very hig 'if. Here are 134 voten to start off with heaving aniput to be found to elect Winfield S. Hancock our next president. If the democracy does no better than in 1876, when it secured 65 electoral votes from the north, Hancock will have a majority of 28 over Garfield. But while New York, New Jersey, Indiana and Connectious are reliably sure, there are a number of other states, formerly republican, that can now he called doubtful. Maine, for instance, is debatable. The prople of Maine, not pleased with the defeat of her favorite son, are lakewarm in the cases. The prohibitionists' national ticket with Neal Dow, of Maine, for president, will carry off a good many republicans have been in a point president when we mained that the republicans have been in a late of the restrict the republicans have been in a late for account.
