Atlanta, Ga., July 7.—To day in the supreme court the first negro juror was called. He served with eleven well known with citizens and was made foreman of the jury, and brought in a verdict of, guity against a colored man charged with burglary, and fin next same he was refused by Asa Gunn, colored, charged with murder, who said he wanted no nigger to try him for his life. The incident caused much comment, and the addition of the names of intelligent colored men to jury lists in state courts is generally approved.

New York, July 7.—A special from Camden, Kershaw county, S. C., says of the ducl which was fought on the 5th inst., in which Col. Wm. M. Shannon was killed: The complication leading to the fatal feeling began over a year ago, when a man named Wiegans brought suit for damages against another named Ellerby, for injuries to person which he claims to have received at the latter's house. Col. Shannon and Capt. W. L. De Pass were attorneys for Wiegans, and they succeeded in getting a judgment against Ellerby for $2,000. It was then discovered that all of Ellerby's property was held by the wife of Col. E. B. Cash on a mortgage, and there was nothing to satisfy the judgments. Col. Shannon and Capt. De Pass secured evidence to show that the mortgage was a fraudulent one, and had been given for the express purpose of evaling the judgment, and the result of their efforts was to have the mortgage set aside on the ground of fraud. The evidence on which this action of the court was taken reflects strongly against the wife of Col. Cash, and been engaged in several duels before this one. He arranged with Bierby to call out Shannon and DePass. Elierby accordingly challenged Shannon to fight him, but the old gentleman refused on the ground that dueling was against the laws of the state as well as his principles. Cash posted the old gentleman as a coward, who had sullied his them as a coward, who had sullied his wife's name and then refused to give her husband the satisfaction due to a gentleman. wife's name and then refused to give her husband the satisfaction due to a gentleman. The cid gentleman protested he had done no wrong to Mrs. Cash, but wherever he went the vite epithets applied to him by his ene-my reached his ears. Finally he was gended almost to desperation, and sent a challenge to Cash, who immediately accepted it, and the duel took place as already stated.

Mrs. Hancock, the wife of the general, is a few years his junjor in age and as a woman is as imposing in appearance as he is see a man. Tail and well proportioned, with a most windome smile, a manner that puts you at you case at once-and a pair of eyes that animals every due of a immission face, she is still a beauty, although the hole is becoming streaked with gray. She was married when the general was but a young lieutenant doing duty in the far west. It was entirely a love match, and helther ofthem have since regretted it—in fact, their home is one of the happing timegraphic. Mrs. Itancock has always been, epipoced to her hu-band's becoming a candidate for the presidency, and see is even above the weakness of wishing to be the mistress of the White Home. She direads the werry of the canvan, and if her husband is elected she thinks that the homor which the position brings will be dearly purchased by the resumensision of all domastic life for four years to come and of his position as scalor major-general and his chances of soon becoming chief of the army. While she prefers her own home existence, however, there is no cone better qualified to play the hostesis on a grand scale than she. A Buddhis: Pable.

Bodhisat was a tradesman who went from village to village to dispose of his wares. One day when at the house of a carpenter, whose head was baid like a copper porringer, a musquite alighted thereon; and the carpenter called to his son, who was near, to drive it away. The sou taking a sharp axe for this purpose, aimed a blow at the insect, but split his father's head in two, and killed him. On seeing what he had done, Bodhisst said that an enemy was better than a foolish relative or friend.
