Over and over again.

Over and over again.

No matter which way I turn.
I always find in the book of life
Some lesson I laws by learn.
I must take my turn 6t the mill:
I must grind out the golden grain.
I must work at my take with a resolute of
Over and over again.

We cannot measure the need
Of even the Uniest flower,
Not check the flow of the golden sands
That run through a single hour;
But the morning dew must fall,
And the sun and the summer rain
Must do their part, and perform it all

Over and over again.

The brook through the meadow flows;
All over and over again.
The ponderous mill-wheel goes;
Once coing will not suffice,
Though doing he not in rain;
And a blessing failing un once or twice,
May come if we try again.

The path that has once been ired,
Is sever so rough for the feet;
And the fesses we once have tearned.
Though sorrowful to repeat.
Though sorrowful to its depth be rives.
With storm and tempons, we need them all
To render us meet for heaven.

The Path Across the Fields

But lo! a pilgrim in the path,
That dimly traced along the ground,
Through orchard, meadow, pastures
Winds upward to the hilltop town.

Ab, what is life save just a path, A hasty walk for only one, And childhood, manhood, age, are fields Between us and the setting sun. That tolling traveler gains the hill, He weary walks the village thron And now he seems amid the clouds, As if to heavan an angel first!

can only cry, which she proceeds to do coplously.

Ladies of good families who have wealth at their command make the most desporate smuggless and are dealt with the hardest by the officials, as they do not deserve as much len'ency or sympathy as the paor woman who has invested her little all and would be destitute if stringently dealt with, such to whom the good bargain duty free is really a great temptation. The class of goods which the Canadians purchase in Detroit and smuggle into Canada is white cotton cloth, domestics and drees goods. The Detroit purchaser steps on the ferry and goes over to Windoor for gloves, laces, silks, velvets and cashneres, these articles being considered nuch cheaper and better whether they are or not. There are hundreds of Detroit ladies wearing velvet and silk dresses who smug-of the head officials, from her position and wealth, was by some slight circumstance suspected when crossing to her home on the Canada side, and politely invited to step into the inspector's office. There was no lady detective them, and, showing her into a private room, the gallant gentleman informed her that he should leave her alone and return in fitteen infustes, when he would expect to see the goods in her possession lain again the table. She cried and protested, but in vain, and when the gentleman finally returned purchases to the amount of $17 were lying on the table, while the mortified woman cried and sulked alternately. She was obliged to pay their full value, which whe did, begging the official not to inform her husband. With a gallantry not expected in a government official he has never apoken her. mane in alluding to the circumstance, nor has he ever recalled the incident to her memory when mesting her socially, as be frequently does. But she never fails to lock a conscious when in his presence, and no doubt regards him as her bitter enseny.

In Miss Thompson's private office are some curious relics in the shape of shirts made of strong brown cloth, with pockets turned up around the bottom. This is extend up around the bottom. The internal chopilites wears, and in the pockets the parcols are neatly secreted. Parasols can be made to hold ribbons and laces to the amount of $20 or $30, and then folded carefully and carried jauntily, look as natural and conspect as usual. It is not always safe to buy a garment and put it on, as the woman watcher can easily detect the fraud. A lady loarding at the Orawfordhouse made a leipte detroit, and on her return, when the evening was late and cook, were a cloth jacket. She was inmediately requested on landing to step into the office, where the new garment was appealed and repaid to:
