DY REV. EDWARD A. BAND, How sharp the spires upon the hill! They rise against the sunset sky Like masts of ships, that sailing past A sea of flame, now auchored He.

But low: a pilgrim in the path, That dimly traced along the ground. Through orchard, mendow, pasters bare Winds up to the hillton town.

Ab, what is its save just a path,
A hasty walk for only one,
And childhood, manhood, are fields
Between us and the setting sun.

That tolling traveler gains the hill, He weary walks the village through And now he seems amid the clouds, As if to heaven and angels flew?

Oh bless the life that holy learn Beyond the ridge of death has passed. A shaded foot-path new, but merged in everlasting life at last.

God Careth. BY S. D. BARTLETT. One of the sweet old chapters,
After a day like this:
The day brought tears and trouble,
The evening brings no kiss,

Nor rest in the arms I long-for— Rost, and refuge, and home; Grieved, and lonely, and weary, Unjo the Book I come.

One of the sweet old chapters— The love that blossoms through His care of the birds and lilites, Out in the meadow dew. His croning Hes soft around them Their faith is simply to be; Ab! hushed by the tendor lesson, My God, let me rest in Thee.

"If ye plaz, mum, the cook has bowned ber hand, an axes to be excused for a few days, for it's most crasy she iz with the pain." 'Indued, Bridget, I'll do nothing of the sort. Where is the man who is going 40 days without a drink?

It cost little to hoard Doctor Tanner,
For he grew not a particle wanner,
Though he feasted six weeks
On the fat of his dheeks,
On the scent of an Orangeraan's banner.

The good wife of this great Doctor Tanner Was so fat that his arms wouldn't span her. So he made her partake Of North River ice-cake, And he said if she didn't he'd tan her.

For the forementioned Doctoress Tannor flad this most disagreeable manner, That holded cabbage and pork She would eat with a fork, Till the doctor no longer could stan' her. So to-day may be seen Mistress Tanner.
With a small colored urchin to fan her
While she eats pork and beans
Mixed with cabbage and greens.
Till she tooks like a hog from Olnjanner

While that greatest of heroes, Sir Tan Still as lively and neat as a panier, Makes his dinners of water, As all poor people oughter, And will not even smell a bananer.

The Fasting Tannah

There was an old doctor named Tannah Who decisred in a positive mannah That he could fast forty Long days, hale and hearty, And not even eat a banana, Then, to prove it, he fasted and fasted, And joked with his watchers, and binated His eyes if he didn't Feel better each minute His abstemiousity lasted.

And he lived upon nothing but watah-Though the dream of a drivk something Though the dream of a cribe some same, a lie often asserted Did much that diverted And tempted him more than it ought to For the first thirty days of his trial fits said he did nothing but smi-al,
And, in fact, through the lattah
Two weeks he grew fattah
On certainly nothing but bi-al;

And aithough he is now something this He is only a days from his diamah; And we tremble to dwell on The fate of the melon That first greets the eyes of the winmah.

They have a district judge at Fort Worth who entertains acounds views on the dignity of the law. A jury a few days ago, while in charge of the sherist, hed a nice time chatting on the streets, and rolleking at their boarding house, keeping the boarders awake and enjoying themselves hugely, till the court opened next day, when the sherist was fined $100 and each of the jurymen $50 for light and frivolous conduct. No nonsense about that judge.

A good joke recently happened on the M. K. & T., not very far from Denisou. At a concert, the choir leader gave to the minister (a visiting clergyman) a card on which he had written a list of songs the choir had practiced for the occasion. The minister fervently stated that the "choir would sing the songs selected," and the minister produced the card, which proved to be the acc of spades. The leader of the concert had pulled the wrong card out of his pocket.
