How an Astronomer Found a Rivel

Little Rock Gazette.

The other night a man came to Little Rock and began to exhibit the moon through a tripod. Old Mack, the colored fisherman, came up and listened very intently to the exhibitor as he explained the peculiarities of the stars. Pretty soon he left and after a while returned with a stove pipe munt den a step ladder.

"Heah's whar yer ken see de moon and eschen stars fur half price," he began, "De plantation nigger what would rob his wife an' chillum by gibin ten cents to look at demoon through dat man's 'scope, when he ken look through mine for a nickle, oughter be moon through dat man's 'scope, when he ken look through mine for a nickle, oughter be moon, hose? only five cents. Gimmy a nickle, boy, an' see Jubi'am an' his gran', mudder, de moon. Here, ladey takea look. Bay, John, play me a couple of chunes on dat mout harp." John began playing, and the people lett the tripod telescope and c-me over to the stovepipe observatory. Thoursged exhibitor finally came over and askof:

"What are you doing?"
