rrid y Morning. Dec. 24, 1880. A VERY REALISTIC ARTIST.

San Francisco Post.

"Do you—shean—do you ever print any art items is your paper?" asked a rather seedy-looking man with long hair, a slouch hat, and paint on his isseers softly edging into the Post's inner sanctum the other day.

The managing editor glanced savagely up from his noonday sandwich, and after evidently repressing a desire to add the long—haired party to his visads, replied in the suffirmative.

"Because," continued the young man, soowling critically at a cheap chrome on the wall, of the same of thought if you cared to record the const you might send your art culture on this const you might send your art culture on this const you might send your art culture on the wall, "'' Might, ch?" said the clitor, between chews. "Yes, sir. For instance, there's a mammoth winter storm landscape I've just finished for Mr Mudd, the Bonanza king. It's called A Halistorm in the Adirondacks, and a visitor who sai down near it the other day caught a sore throat in—less than fifteen minutes. The fillusion is so perfect, you understand. Why, I had to put in the fluishing touches with my uniter and Arctic overshoos on."

"Fact, sir; and then there's a little animal gem I did for Governor Gierkins the other day—portvatt of his Scotch terrier Snap. The morning it was done a cat got into the saudio, and the minute it saw the pleture it went through the window like a ten-luch shell."

"Did, ch?"

"Yes, and the oddest thing about it was that

"Dunno."

"Dunno."

"Ounno."

"We will be seen a me. When the governor examined her work he insisted on my painting on a post with the dog chained to it. Said he didn't know what might happen."

"Good scheme," growled the president maker.

"Wasn'ti, though? My best hold, however, is water views. You know George Broniey, and how abstracted he is sometimes. Well, George dropped in one morning and brought, up before an eight by twelve view of the Jan Joaquin river, with a boat in the foreground. I'm blessed if George didn't absent-mindedly take off his coat and stepped through the canvas trying to jump into the boat—though he'd go out rowing, you know, with the small-pox?" and the cellior, winking at the foreman, who had come in just then to swear for copy.

"Small-pox?" That reminds me of a realistic bistorical subject I'm engaged on mow, entitled the 'Plarute in Egypt.
