

From the year ending April 30th the amount of exports from this country over imports amount to $210,000,000, being a gain over $80,000,000 over the excess of the previous year.

During the past ten years the annual production of hickories in the United States has increased about two million bushels. Turkey has increased $15,000,000 and 720,000,000 bushels in the same period.

The demand for real estate south and southwest of San Antonio is unprecedented. One gentleman—Elias Edwards—in Tilden, though not in the real estate business, had applications for 250,000 acres in McAllen county in one month.

Under orders from the war department Gen. Pope is stationing troops at the most accessible points for service in case there should be trouble with the Ute Indians, when their removal under the Ute treaty is to be consummated. Care is taken that no movement of troops likely to excite the Indians is made.

An effort will be made to remove the complaint made by tobacco dealers all over the country that the stamps furnished by the bureau of engraving and printing are of inferior quality and almost worthless. A committee from the treasury department has been directed to visit the bureau and see how the defects can be remedied.

The court of claims at Washington has overruled the petition of the Union Pacific railroad company to be allowed additional compensation for carrying the mails in postal cars in excess of rates now and heretofore paid by the government for postal-car service on this and other roads generally. The decision leaves the past and present rates unchanged.

Gen. Ketchum says California will go democratic at the next election by at least 5,000 majority. He also says his old friend and political foe, Dennis Kearney, is extremely poor circumstances, and his friends are trying to get the great workingman of the office of collector of license so he can "make a living without working."

We have read with no little interest a communication in the Houston Post, from "An Editor's Wife," protesting against the lack of courtesy heretofore displayed in not inviting the wives to the press matters in this state. The lady is perfectly right. The Express will have its wife there next year, or "break a banistering" a-try-ing.

It is said secretary Windom will have something to say in reference to the appointment of the 1,300 employees of the New York custom house, which appointments he has to approve. Heretofore the secretary of the treasury, we believe, has not interfered with the collector in such matters, but Windom appears to feel an enthusiastic Hobbesian man.

The Inter-Ocean thinks it would be interesting to know whether there is any truth in a story published in New York, that when governor Foster came to the Chicago convention he brought with him a lot of badges on which was printed "Our Own Garfield," and that these badges were in circulation less than half an hour after the nomination.

We have still got to go through with Bader's military history of Gen. Grant. Grant will not suffer at Bader's hands, for Bader's hands, and has been since the war, in Grant's hands, but the official data and correspondence the volume will present to the public for the first time will make it an interesting and valuable work, whatever the writer may put them—to glorify Grant and his friends or punishing the enemies of his patron.

The little town of Akron, Ohio, was the first to try the tower system of lighting with electricity. The system has been in operation there for over a month, and has been found with a complete success that the city council has just determined to establish five more stations, each with a tower 175 feet in height. Dallas has the electric light fever, and if the experiment is made there it will be watched with special interest by other Texas towns.

The French government having applied the electric light to four of its light-houses, and become satisfied with the experiment, has resolved to use it on all its other signaling stations. The cost of the change in the system is set down at 7,000,000 francs, but the results gained appear to warrant the additional expenditure. With the addition of another 1,000,000 francs the steam power used to generate the electricity may, in foggy weather, be adapted to the blowing of gigantic fog-horns. The latter improvement is under consideration.

Several papers have mentioned several gentlemen in connection with the gubernatorial party for the next term, while several of the papers are waiting to see whether the old should will bow himself down among the gubernatorial pins set up by the several papers first mentioned. As the special organ of the democratic party in Texas, The Express will say that, if the democracy of Texas demand it, the o. s. will serve another term, or several terms, providence and the democracy willing and insisting. Just at this time, however, we do not feel called upon to consult the democratic party to any such demand.

The circulation of the standard silver dollar from the treasury vaults has practically stopped altogether. During the fall and early winter there was quite a demand for this coin for the purpose of moving the crops. That demand stopped when the crop movement was over. Since the first of January last there has been no call for silver. All of the dollars that have been coined since that date remain in the treasury. Farther than this, silver in circulation has found its way back into the vaults. The amount outstanding has steadily decreased. Colonge at the rate of $2,000,000 a month goes steadily on.

The largest grain elevator in this country is a new one just put in operation in South Brooklyn. This elevator has been over a year in building, and has cost its owner, David Davis, nearly $2,000,000. It has a capacity of 2,500,000 bushels for storage, besides extra transfer facilities and storage for half a dozen vessels or more which can load at a time, differing from all other elevators hitherto built. It has three enormous towers as high as the building on which they rest. These, with the engine house, contain all of the machinery, leaving the warehouse proper, proof, without opening for belt or shaft, consisting of a large number of separate fire-proof stores.

The sale of wool at the merchant exchange, Saturday, at 29 cents created quite a sensation in wool circles. The dealers in other markets trying to compete with San Antonio for the wool trade, stand against at the prices paid here, and declare they are ruinous; but as the wool is mainly bought on account of northern and eastern manufacturers, the people here can stand a great deal of that sort of retaliation. The seller is not very particular about whether the buyer can afford to pay as much as he does, but is content to take all he can get for his wool.

A WASHINGTON dispatch of the 31st all- says ex-senator Dorsey is lying ill at his residence in that city. Sick with apprehension of coming evil, haggard with years of expense and punishment, he spends his days and nights in bed, nominally afflicted with some disorder which requires the ministrations of a physician. Meanwhile his estate is watched by detectives; those who enter and leave it are noted, and should its owner come forth he would be shadowed wherever he went. While Dorsey, dying daily, covers within four walls, the star-rout investigations are forging a chain of evidence which, when riveted around his limbs by the attorney-general, will defy attempts to break it.

If there are any quarrels or contentions to arise concerning the fair in this city this fall, let them be "staved off" until the fair is over. We have heard of but one question of difference, so far, and that is concerning the location. This matter is in the hands of the directors. Let us give the directors advice freely and cheerfully, and in the right spirit; but after they have settled the matter definitely, let all work shoulder to shoulder for a grand success. We cannot afford a failure, and the individual who falls back because he cannot have his way, when the management is delegated to others, will be a disgrace to the city. Covets are splendid, sick in face condition, the people prosperous and anxious to show what they have been doing in the stock and agricultural line. Our merchants and artisans will have an ample opportunity to display their goods and wares, and the stock owners and implement manufacturers from abroad will be there to advertise what they have for sale. If the fair is not a grand success, which we now feel confident of, it will be the fault of the people of San Antonio themselves.

The northern newspapers of last week were filled with accounts of the oratorical and dramatic display, and as a general thing the sentiments breathed were those of party patriotism and freed from a spirit of party diatribe against those who crossed swords and clashed arms with those whose graves were receiving the flowery tributes. While honoring the graves of those who fell in the ranks of the northern army, many a kind word was spoken for those who fell on the other side, and justice was done their memories by many recognitions of the fact that the southern soldiers were actuated also by a spirit of patriotic devotion to what they so firmly believed was right that they were willing to shed their life-blood in defense of its principles; that any man who devotes his life to a cause in all honesty and sincerity is entitled to honor even from those who were as determined in their opposition to him. In his address on the occasion, made up of the orator of the occasion, made up of the following language, which should be spread far and wide, as showing to the world but at least one ex-union soldier regards the soldiers of the south, and we believe he truly expresses the sentiments of four-fifths of the true, patriotic volunteers of the northern army, though his utterance, if declared in the south and by a southern man, would be seized upon by the republican politicians and branded as treasonable; the utterance of an unrepentant rebel.

I am satisfied that we do injustice to those who fought the great war as we ascribe to them any less holy or worthy motives, impugning them to the fight, than those which actuated us. Through a series of generations it has been held by their ancestors that it had come down to them as a hallowed tradition that a man's first duty was to his own home and his own state. Such a sentiment, though practically a great evil, partook of the nature of a virtue, and we can not wonder that when the hour of conflict came, he was promptly found at his post for his state and home, and against the national government. And we must remember that there is only one distinction between rebellion and revolution, between treason and patriotism—the element of success converts the one into the other.

There is a singular unanimity of sentiment among the people of the northern and western Texas towns concerning the location of the state university. The people of each town think that's the very place for it. The probabilities, however, are strongly in favor of Austin. The matter is not of sufficient importance for San Antonio to make an effort to secure the university here. It is true that the construction of the edifice would cause the expenditure of a hundred thousand or so here, the various professions and other officers connected with the institution would add several families to our population, and the large number of students yearly in attendance would add a considerable sum annually to our business, and the visitors to the university would add several thousand more, to say nothing of the ornament and pride such an institution would be to our city; but such little matters are not calculated to move San Antonians to action. In the location of business as it is alarming the town of San Antonio, and filling them with dread through fear that they will have to employ additional clerks and secure a more commodious quarters. Some of our business men would doubtless consider this university worth considering for, but they are not strong enough to overcome the apathy of the others, especially our heavy property owners, who are already almost distracted at the great increase in the value of their property, and consequently having to pay more taxes. If the state should elect to establish the university here there would likely be a riot over the question of location, for it would greatly increase the value of the property around it, and people can scarcely pay their taxes on the present valuation of their property. With the university, a few more railroads with machine shops, and a good manufacturing establishment or two here, the value of property would be so greatly increased as to bankrupt the owners, and this is what we must guard against, though if the few busy-bodies who are always trying to get such things for the city are not more honestly encouraged or aided, the danger cannot be said to be imminent.

Records have been astonishingly frequent of late, throughout the country, and San Antonio has contributed her full share. Many believe this is always the result of insanity—that no sane man would commit self-destruction; but there can be little doubt that many of these people commit self-murder in the full possession of unimpaired reasoning faculties. They have met with some misfortune, or disappointment, which makes their lives a burden, and after carefully weighing all the circumstances, conclude there is not sufficient pleasure in life to live for sweet, and as soon as a man feels convinced that there is no hope of further enjoyment in this life, or that what few enjoyments are open to him will be constantly embittered by a feeling that makes his life a hell upon earth to him, no matter what the cause, or how much reason others may think he should use to get rid of it, he will prefer death to relief in sought in death. To interfere to prevent the act in such a case would be a thankless task, if not downright cruelty. It would be enforcing a man to live a life of misery, to which death itself were far preferable. It is true that many of the troubles are the result of idleness, or the constant brooding over real or imaginary wrongs, or availing themselves of the assistance of some business man very rarely, for their business affairs engage their attention, and by occupation of mind in business pursuits, they forget for many hours at least, every day, the grief that oppresses them during idleness. Therefore, it is generally the idler who commits suicide; and for that reason there is generally little sympathy felt for the victims of self-destruction. The loss to the world is in most cases insignificant, while sometimes the world is really the gainer. The man who can sit in idleness, month in and month out, is certainly of no benefit to either himself or society, and can always be well spared. He can at least make his mark in the world to the extent of making a sound. The cases which shock the fancy, and which work upon the sympathies, are those of men struck by some great grief or disappointment to the extent that their reason is temporarily deranged, and who take their lives while in that condition. The prevention of self-destruction in such cases would be an act of mercy, for with the restoration of reason the victim might become a useful citizen, and outlive his trouble. But the man who only and deliberately arrives at the conclusion that death is preferable to life, is justified in destroying it, and should not be interfered with. He is weary of the world, and in most instances the world is wearily of him; the man and the world being mutually benefited by his death.

EX-GOVERNOR E. J. DAVIS RISES HIGH ABOVE THE HORRORS OF A BARRAGE, BEGGARS, JUNKIES, NON-TEXANS IN WASHINGTON—COL. RUSSELL RETIRES.

Lestly Letter in the Wyoming Journal
Many had, no doubt, come through curiosity to see how the prizal essay would be received in this, his initial journey. Upon the large audience which gathered around the speaker of the occasion, when he arose, he delivered his remarks with a freedom and independence. This was the first time, since the prize was offered, that he had been so liberally collected his thoughts, and he was able to fall on his feet and play it for all it is worth. You all know that the prizal essay is the game, and of course, I may be expected to make wild breaks, but I don't believe that a reporter in any case, enough to take advantage of my ignorance and could expect to get a prize through my reporting. I am sure, however, that I will not be disappointed, for when a man takes such a lay-out on his side, he plays every card to win, and if he does not win, he is not a man.
