versed on the subject with a good many of our citizens, among them was his honor Mayor French, all of whom favor the ides of having sewers to drain the city of the seum and accumulated filth, but they differ as to the best plan to pursue. One suggests open sewers, even on our busiest streets, but a very serious, and insurmountable obtacle exists against the adoption of that plan, and that is, the narrowness of those streets. There is no room to spare in the street, or the sidewalks. Another gentleman favors the idea of using the river for an outlet and dispensing with the mains, and that a dam or reservoir be built on the river above the city, to be emptied, periodically, which would wast the banks and carry off any deposits of decayed vegetation, etc., tha might accumulate. The question arises would there not be danger of damages is property along the river by these periodics floods? Then, again, would it be any cheap er in the long run, to erect and keep in re is pair the reservoir, than to lay two main pipes, one on the east and the other on the west side of the river, and a third-from the liver helow the city.

The Neal Case.

Strange and peculiar difficulties seem to be encountered at syery turn in the trial of the R. H. Neal case. George White, one of the jurors, after the jury had been emphaneled evening before last, separated himself from the remaining jurors, and appearing upon the steets alone, asked marshal Shardein to stop at his house and send him some bedding. The marshal replied that he was not going home soon, and that if he was, he would not go near the juror's house, as it was out of his way. White then stepped down to the plaza and sent a hack for his bedding. Deputy sheriff Samuel appeared about this time in search for White, who had escaped from his charge while the panel was being escorted to supper. White was yesterday fined $100, and the jury of which he was one, was discharged, and a new venire of fifty menordered. It was afterwards determined that the term of the court, being near an end, would not allow time to try the ones, and it was continued until September.

The Parliament.

London, Juhe 30 —Measrs. Parnell, T. P. O'Conner and McCarthy, have fasued an appeal to the Irish electors of great Britian, stating that there is scarcely a fown in which the Irish exises may not do something to advance the Irish cause. The addition of ministry and the Ilberal members of parliament, makes the organization of the Irish voters more necessary than ever. Several liberals who are most archent in the cause of occretion, would not be in parliament but for the Irish electors, and the latter may have any day an opportunity of repaying the treacherous ingratitude of several of the ilberals as they deserve, and this can only be done by a thorough organization of the Serious Affany.

Strange and peculiar difficulties seem to be encountered at every turn in the trial of the R. H. Keal case. George White, one of the jurors, after the jury had been empanneled evening before last, separated himself from the remaining jurors, and appearing upon the steets alone, asked marshal Shardein to stop at his house and send him some bedding. The marshal replied that he was not going home soon, and that if he was, he would not go near the juror's house, as it was out of his way. White then stepped down to the plaza and sent a back for his bedding. Deputy sheriff Samuel appeared about this time in search for White, who had escaped from his charge where the search as the search and a sew ventre of fity men ordered. It was afterwards determined that the term of the court, being near an end, would not allow time to try the case, and it was continued until September.
