

We received, yesterday, letters from Knoxville and Somerset, dated September 24th, and a postal card from Carrizo Springs dated September 22. The people are not satisfied with the James call service. She star service is preferable.

Texas is a total of $10,000,000 for the arrest and conviction of the three robbers who robbed the Iron Mountain train in Arkansas last week—$5,000 each by the railway company and $500 each by the governor. This amount is $200,000 more than the amount appropriated for this purpose.

Revised trip tickets from Houston to Atlanta, during the exposition, will be sold at $2.75, the rate from this point not yet having been announced, as far as we have ascertained. A large number of our citizens expect to attend this exposition.

The official statement of the revenue and expenditures of the Dominion of Canada for the fiscal year 1890-91 shows that the total receipts were $29,712,000, of which $18,000,000 were from customs, $5,545,981 from excise, and $5,500,000 from other sources. The expenditures amounted to $27,870,000.

One of the nearest and most useful hand-books for immigrants we have yet seen is an illustrated pamphlet published by the Houston & Texas Central railway company. Its statistical information alone makes it a valuable work of reference, useful to the people of the state as well as those for whose special benefit it is published.

The contributions to the Michigan sufferers, generous as they have been, have fallen short of the necessity. Clothing is especially needed, and many who have no money to send can furnish garments. The popular mind has been engrossed with the national grief, but it is to be hoped that the victims of the conflagration will not be forgotten.

It is reported that the Mexican army is being reorganized into six battalions of infantry, 10 regiments of cavalry and a battalion of artillery. This army will be divided into four divisions with appropriate subdivisions, and will be organized in case of war such division can be mobilized up to 50,000 men, or a grand total of 300,000.

The position of the manufacturer of agriculture appears to be a hard one to fill and make a satisfactory reputation. It is now said that as between Leasing and Leasing, the former is "the biggest business of the two, and that the department of agriculture is likely to become more than a thing of content."

The agricultural department does not take enough time in politics to make a matter of importance to a good many of our "farmers." Talk in reference to the establishment of a large cotton factory here, we do not believe it possible for some individuals to invest, or to carry out, except through the grossest mismanagement.

The results obtained in manufacturing cotton goods in Georgia, in no part of which are the advantages superior to those of the States, should make men clamorous to secure an interest in the proposed enterprise.

The publisher of the Texas Prohibitionist was "prompted by the belief that the prohibitionists need an organ and would support it," and started his paper. But he is rather broadly intimated that the brethren have been exceedingly backward in coming forward with their subscriptions. "The Prohibitionist" will only half-heartedly support an organ, but they don't want to pay for it. They want everything done "for the good of the cause."

An Indiana court has decided that smoking creates an appetite which is necessary to appease, and, therefore, cigar eating on Sunday is a "necessity" within the meaning of the statute. Whiskey also creates an appetite which is also necessary to appease to secure comfort; but the "same" cannot be said of bread. Bread does not create an appetite; it only appeases it. Bread eating on Sunday is not a "necessity" if the people have no bread to eat on that day.

A Washington special says Mr. J. Stanley Brown, private secretary to the late president, has been requested to remain at his post, but it is not likely, nor does he himself expect to officiate permanently in his present position. Mr. Brown is of New York, who was General Arthur's secretary while he was collector of the port of New York, and also vice-president, will doubtless be appointed Mr. Brown's successor. Mr. Brown will probably be transferred to some desirable office in one of the executive departments.

A Mrs. Johnson, of Cold water, Michigan, has sailed for England, where she proposes to collect 300 to 400 servant girls to bring back with her. She already has orders in this country for about 100, and has received many letters from Detroit, Chicago and many minor places. About six weeks will be necessary in the trip, she is native English, and the several lists was promulgated by her own wants and a desire to provide for a few personal friends, when finally she decided to make the trip and engage a large number of girls.

The Boston Traveller makes this question of members of the senate or house of representatives, who are sent to the end of securing a seat in the senate for the individual or some of his friends. All nominations or elections of state officers, or members of the senate or house of representatives, are sent to the end of securing a seat in the senate for the individual or some of his friends. All nominations or elections of state officers, or members of the senate or house of representatives, are sent to the end of securing a seat in the senate for the individual or some of his friends.

Senator Mahone draws $5,000 a year from the United States; his readjuster-conditions for government draws a salary of $1,500 as mayor of Petersburg, and his candidate for the second place on the readjuster ticket draws a salary of $5,000 as United States marshal for the western district of Virginia. "Set long ago," says the Norfolk Virginian, "Mahone was given a check by a railroad official for $7,000 for stock of the Norfolk and Western railroad, for which he never made a cent, but he has a contract for the stock of another railroad for the present year, and is now to be paid $130,000 by the owners of the Norfolk and Western road for services never rendered."

The Kansas City Journal of the 28th inst. says: "It will be remembered when the late President Garfield was elected senator, that in a speech before the Ohio Legislature accepting the honor, he said a beautiful tribute to his predecessor, Senator Thurston, between whom and himself a close friendship existed, and in recognition of usefulness and valuable services performed by his distinguished predecessor, and in referring to him he said: 'The flowers of sweetest fragrance are those that bloom upon party walls.' And now that he has passed away from all party associations the truth of his metaphor is wonderfully illustrated, for among the wreaths that are hung about his tomb by a sorrowing nation, there are none of sweeter fragrance than come from the other side of the party wall that divided him from a part of his countrymen. The words meant more than ever to be intended in the history of the nation he himself is his highest illustration."

The Cincinnati Gazette says: "It is too much to expect that bitter partisan warfare is at an end in this country. The nation's attention is now directed to the election of a president, and the recollection of his virtues and his sufferings, now unite the people in a common brotherhood which shows no place for party differences, but it is to be expected that the election will be a contest of publicans, the selfishness and greed of individuals will invent excuses for reclamation. But 'we be to him from whom the course is set, and the nation will never be united on important measures and matters than at present."

The people depending on the star service for their mails will not be heart-broken if the resignation of postmaster general James is accepted, and a man selected at the head of the department who will pay some attention to efficiency as well as economy in the service. The Express moves that a new postmaster general be appointed, and that, from the ranks of the army, a man be selected to prosecute the star route swindlers. We believe the interests of the country would be best served by such a course. The present postmaster general appears to have no appreciation of the necessities and benefits of mail service to a country not supplied by railroads.

referring to her he said: "The flowers of sweetest fragrance are those that bloom upon party walls." And now that he has passed away from all party associations the truth of his metaphor is wonderfully illustrated, for among the wreaths that are hung about his tomb by a sorrowing nation, there are none of sweeter fragrance than come from the other side of the party wall that divided him from a part of his countrymen. The words meant more than ever to be intended in the history of the nation he himself is his highest illustration."

The Cincinnati Gazette says: "It is too much to expect that bitter partisan warfare is at an end in this country. The nation's attention is now directed to the election of a president, and the recollection of his virtues and his sufferings, now unite the people in a common brotherhood which shows no place for party differences, but it is to be expected that the election will be a contest of publicans, the selfishness and greed of individuals will invent excuses for reclamation. But 'we be to him from whom the course is set, and the nation will never be united on important measures and matters than at present."

The people depending on the star service for their mails will not be heart-broken if the resignation of postmaster general James is accepted, and a man selected at the head of the department who will pay some attention to efficiency as well as economy in the service. The Express moves that a new postmaster general be appointed, and that, from the ranks of the army, a man be selected to prosecute the star route swindlers. We believe the interests of the country would be best served by such a course. The present postmaster general appears to have no appreciation of the necessities and benefits of mail service to a country not supplied by railroads.

It is said the great number of speculating presented at the recent medical college in London was too tempting for the English of medical imaginations in England, and many of the doctors made good things out of their visit. One specialist for gout and rheumatism is said to have taken more fees in London during his short stay than he ever received during a whole month in Paris. The exhibition of pills and draughts and bottles at South Kensington was very fine.

The Prince of Wales was moved to such unaccountable laughter at his mischievous and general. The gravity with which the pills were distributed among the company produced the finest comic effect witnessed on any stage.

This New York Herald produces long rows of figures to show the rapid growth of cities in the United States, and the craze of young America for town life. During the past fifty years New York has changed from agricultural to an urban state. The population of the rural portion of the state has increased 50 per cent, and of the cities 501 per cent, or ten times as rapidly. To-day, considerably more than half the people of the "Empire state" reside in the cities. Every day the tendency to move to the cities, and enjoy the pleasures of urban life, grows and grows.

While presenting to-day to our readers a sketch of Kalaiana'ohi, King of the Hawaiian or Sandwich Islands, who has just arrived in this country, we are forcibly struck with the fact, that the four great gospel messengers—the printing-press, the telegraph, the steam-engine and the telegraph—have drawn the ends of the earth so closely together, that a common hearthstone of the world around which all nations, kindreds and tongues are gathered, and hold their interrupted converse, so to speak. The great national exposition which has for so far characterized the latter half of the present century, illustrate with force the truth of this statement, and even now, while we write, we have a still further exemplification of the power and influence of these mighty agents through the presence of this worthy monarch in our midst, who represents a people who, although redeemed from utter barbarism during the last sixty years, are now ready to enter into treaty with the world at large in all the arts of peace.

Mr. Kalaiana'ohi, who has just arrived in this country, is a native of the Hawaiian Islands, and was educated at the royal academy of Honolulu. He is a man of high intelligence, and has been a member of the Hawaiian legislature for several years. He is a man of high intelligence, and has been a member of the Hawaiian legislature for several years. He is a man of high intelligence, and has been a member of the Hawaiian legislature for several years.

The Methodist Episcopal conference of Ohio last week resolved that as intemperance is their right and duty, with out fear of intimidation, to use their prerogatives as citizens, and to wield their personal influence in behalf of those who are opposed to the ultimate suppression of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and the extinguishing therefrom and they further declared that they would endeavor to secure the support of their ministers on account of their vote and labors in this cause, do hereby exhibit an unworthy spirit, unworthy of the cause in which they are engaged. The conference was only half-hearted. The prohibitionists want an organ, but they don't want to pay for it. They want everything done "for the good of the cause."

An Indiana court has decided that smoking creates an appetite which is necessary to appease, and, therefore, cigar eating on Sunday is a "necessity" within the meaning of the statute. Whiskey also creates an appetite which is also necessary to appease to secure comfort; but the "same" cannot be said of bread. Bread does not create an appetite; it only appeases it. Bread eating on Sunday is not a "necessity" if the people have no bread to eat on that day.

A Washington special says Mr. J. Stanley Brown, private secretary to the late president, has been requested to remain at his post, but it is not likely, nor does he himself expect to officiate permanently in his present position. Mr. Brown is of New York, who was General Arthur's secretary while he was collector of the port of New York, and also vice-president, will doubtless be appointed Mr. Brown's successor. Mr. Brown will probably be transferred to some desirable office in one of the executive departments.

A Mrs. Johnson, of Cold water, Michigan, has sailed for England, where she proposes to collect 300 to 400 servant girls to bring back with her. She already has orders in this country for about 100, and has received many letters from Detroit, Chicago and many minor places. About six weeks will be necessary in the trip, she is native English, and the several lists was promulgated by her own wants and a desire to provide for a few personal friends, when finally she decided to make the trip and engage a large number of girls.

The Boston Traveller makes this question of members of the senate or house of representatives, who are sent to the end of securing a seat in the senate for the individual or some of his friends. All nominations or elections of state officers, or members of the senate or house of representatives, are sent to the end of securing a seat in the senate for the individual or some of his friends. All nominations or elections of state officers, or members of the senate or house of representatives, are sent to the end of securing a seat in the senate for the individual or some of his friends.

Senator Mahone draws $5,000 a year from the United States; his readjuster-conditions for government draws a salary of $1,500 as mayor of Petersburg, and his candidate for the second place on the readjuster ticket draws a salary of $5,000 as United States marshal for the western district of Virginia. "Set long ago," says the Norfolk Virginian, "Mahone was given a check by a railroad official for $7,000 for stock of the Norfolk and Western railroad, for which he never made a cent, but he has a contract for the stock of another railroad for the present year, and is now to be paid $130,000 by the owners of the Norfolk and Western road for services never rendered."

The Kansas City Journal of the 28th inst. says: "It will be remembered when the late President Garfield was elected senator, that in a speech before the Ohio Legislature accepting the honor, he said a beautiful tribute to his predecessor, Senator Thurston, between whom and himself a close friendship existed, and in recognition of usefulness and valuable services performed by his distinguished predecessor, and in referring to him he said: 'The flowers of sweetest fragrance are those that bloom upon party walls.' And now that he has passed away from all party associations the truth of his metaphor is wonderfully illustrated, for among the wreaths that are hung about his tomb by a sorrowing nation, there are none of sweeter fragrance than come from the other side of the party wall that divided him from a part of his countrymen. The words meant more than ever to be intended in the history of the nation he himself is his highest illustration."

The Cincinnati Gazette says: "It is too much to expect that bitter partisan warfare is at an end in this country. The nation's attention is now directed to the election of a president, and the recollection of his virtues and his sufferings, now unite the people in a common brotherhood which shows no place for party differences, but it is to be expected that the election will be a contest of publicans, the selfishness and greed of individuals will invent excuses for reclamation. But 'we be to him from whom the course is set, and the nation will never be united on important measures and matters than at present."

The people depending on the star service for their mails will not be heart-broken if the resignation of postmaster general James is accepted, and a man selected at the head of the department who will pay some attention to efficiency as well as economy in the service. The Express moves that a new postmaster general be appointed, and that, from the ranks of the army, a man be selected to prosecute the star route swindlers. We believe the interests of the country would be best served by such a course. The present postmaster general appears to have no appreciation of the necessities and benefits of mail service to a country not supplied by railroads.

It is said the great number of speculating presented at the recent medical college in London was too tempting for the English of medical imaginations in England, and many of the doctors made good things out of their visit. One specialist for gout and rheumatism is said to have taken more fees in London during his short stay than he ever received during a whole month in Paris. The exhibition of pills and draughts and bottles at South Kensington was very fine.

referring to her he said: "The flowers of sweetest fragrance are those that bloom upon party walls." And now that he has passed away from all party associations the truth of his metaphor is wonderfully illustrated, for among the wreaths that are hung about his tomb by a sorrowing nation, there are none of sweeter fragrance than come from the other side of the party wall that divided him from a part of his countrymen. The words meant more than ever to be intended in the history of the nation he himself is his highest illustration."

The Cincinnati Gazette says: "It is too much to expect that bitter partisan warfare is at an end in this country. The nation's attention is now directed to the election of a president, and the recollection of his virtues and his sufferings, now unite the people in a common brotherhood which shows no place for party differences, but it is to be expected that the election will be a contest of publicans, the selfishness and greed of individuals will invent excuses for reclamation. But 'we be to him from whom the course is set, and the nation will never be united on important measures and matters than at present."

The people depending on the star service for their mails will not be heart-broken if the resignation of postmaster general James is accepted, and a man selected at the head of the department who will pay some attention to efficiency as well as economy in the service. The Express moves that a new postmaster general be appointed, and that, from the ranks of the army, a man be selected to prosecute the star route swindlers. We believe the interests of the country would be best served by such a course. The present postmaster general appears to have no appreciation of the necessities and benefits of mail service to a country not supplied by railroads.

It is said the great number of speculating presented at the recent medical college in London was too tempting for the English of medical imaginations in England, and many of the doctors made good things out of their visit. One specialist for gout and rheumatism is said to have taken more fees in London during his short stay than he ever received during a whole month in Paris. The exhibition of pills and draughts and bottles at South Kensington was very fine.

The Prince of Wales was moved to such unaccountable laughter at his mischievous and general. The gravity with which the pills were distributed among the company produced the finest comic effect witnessed on any stage.

This New York Herald produces long rows of figures to show the rapid growth of cities in the United States, and the craze of young America for town life. During the past fifty years New York has changed from agricultural to an urban state. The population of the rural portion of the state has increased 50 per cent, and of the cities 501 per cent, or ten times as rapidly. To-day, considerably more than half the people of the "Empire state" reside in the cities. Every day the tendency to move to the cities, and enjoy the pleasures of urban life, grows and grows.

While presenting to-day to our readers a sketch of Kalaiana'ohi, King of the Hawaiian or Sandwich Islands, who has just arrived in this country, we are forcibly struck with the fact, that the four great gospel messengers—the printing-press, the telegraph, the steam-engine and the telegraph—have drawn the ends of the earth so closely together, that a common hearthstone of the world around which all nations, kindreds and tongues are gathered, and hold their interrupted converse, so to speak. The great national exposition which has for so far characterized the latter half of the present century, illustrate with force the truth of this statement, and even now, while we write, we have a still further exemplification of the power and influence of these mighty agents through the presence of this worthy monarch in our midst, who represents a people who, although redeemed from utter barbarism during the last sixty years, are now ready to enter into treaty with the world at large in all the arts of peace.

Mr. Kalaiana'ohi, who has just arrived in this country, is a native of the Hawaiian Islands, and was educated at the royal academy of Honolulu. He is a man of high intelligence, and has been a member of the Hawaiian legislature for several years. He is a man of high intelligence, and has been a member of the Hawaiian legislature for several years.

The Methodist Episcopal conference of Ohio last week resolved that as intemperance is their right and duty, with out fear of intimidation, to use their prerogatives as citizens, and to wield their personal influence in behalf of those who are opposed to the ultimate suppression of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and the extinguishing therefrom and they further declared that they would endeavor to secure the support of their ministers on account of their vote and labors in this cause, do hereby exhibit an unworthy spirit, unworthy of the cause in which they are engaged. The conference was only half-hearted. The prohibitionists want an organ, but they don't want to pay for it. They want everything done "for the good of the cause."

An Indiana court has decided that smoking creates an appetite which is necessary to appease, and, therefore, cigar eating on Sunday is a "necessity" within the meaning of the statute. Whiskey also creates an appetite which is also necessary to appease to secure comfort; but the "same" cannot be said of bread. Bread does not create an appetite; it only appeases it. Bread eating on Sunday is not a "necessity" if the people have no bread to eat on that day.

A Washington special says Mr. J. Stanley Brown, private secretary to the late president, has been requested to remain at his post, but it is not likely, nor does he himself expect to officiate permanently in his present position. Mr. Brown is of New York, who was General Arthur's secretary while he was collector of the port of New York, and also vice-president, will doubtless be appointed Mr. Brown's successor. Mr. Brown will probably be transferred to some desirable office in one of the executive departments.

A Mrs. Johnson, of Cold water, Michigan, has sailed for England, where she proposes to collect 300 to 400 servant girls to bring back with her. She already has orders in this country for about 100, and has received many letters from Detroit, Chicago and many minor places. About six weeks will be necessary in the trip, she is native English, and the several lists was promulgated by her own wants and a desire to provide for a few personal friends, when finally she decided to make the trip and engage a large number of girls.

The Boston Traveller makes this question of members of the senate or house of representatives, who are sent to the end of securing a seat in the senate for the individual or some of his friends. All nominations or elections of state officers, or members of the senate or house of representatives, are sent to the end of securing a seat in the senate for the individual or some of his friends. All nominations or elections of state officers, or members of the senate or house of representatives, are sent to the end of securing a seat in the senate for the individual or some of his friends.

Senator Mahone draws $5,000 a year from the United States; his readjuster-conditions for government draws a salary of $1,500 as mayor of Petersburg, and his candidate for the second place on the readjuster ticket draws a salary of $5,000 as United States marshal for the western district of Virginia. "Set long ago," says the Norfolk Virginian, "Mahone was given a check by a railroad official for $7,000 for stock of the Norfolk and Western railroad, for which he never made a cent, but he has a contract for the stock of another railroad for the present year, and is now to be paid $130,000 by the owners of the Norfolk and Western road for services never rendered."

The Kansas City Journal of the 28th inst. says: "It will be remembered when the late President Garfield was elected senator, that in a speech before the Ohio Legislature accepting the honor, he said a beautiful tribute to his predecessor, Senator Thurston, between whom and himself a close friendship existed, and in recognition of usefulness and valuable services performed by his distinguished predecessor, and in referring to him he said: 'The flowers of sweetest fragrance are those that bloom upon party walls.' And now that he has passed away from all party associations the truth of his metaphor is wonderfully illustrated, for among the wreaths that are hung about his tomb by a sorrowing nation, there are none of sweeter fragrance than come from the other side of the party wall that divided him from a part of his countrymen. The words meant more than ever to be intended in the history of the nation he himself is his highest illustration."

The Cincinnati Gazette says: "It is too much to expect that bitter partisan warfare is at an end in this country. The nation's attention is now directed to the election of a president, and the recollection of his virtues and his sufferings, now unite the people in a common brotherhood which shows no place for party differences, but it is to be expected that the election will be a contest of publicans, the selfishness and greed of individuals will invent excuses for reclamation. But 'we be to him from whom the course is set, and the nation will never be united on important measures and matters than at present."

The people depending on the star service for their mails will not be heart-broken if the resignation of postmaster general James is accepted, and a man selected at the head of the department who will pay some attention to efficiency as well as economy in the service. The Express moves that a new postmaster general be appointed, and that, from the ranks of the army, a man be selected to prosecute the star route swindlers. We believe the interests of the country would be best served by such a course. The present postmaster general appears to have no appreciation of the necessities and benefits of mail service to a country not supplied by railroads.

It is said the great number of speculating presented at the recent medical college in London was too tempting for the English of medical imaginations in England, and many of the doctors made good things out of their visit. One specialist for gout and rheumatism is said to have taken more fees in London during his short stay than he ever received during a whole month in Paris. The exhibition of pills and draughts and bottles at South Kensington was very fine.

referring to her he said: "The flowers of sweetest fragrance are those that bloom upon party walls." And now that he has passed away from all party associations the truth of his metaphor is wonderfully illustrated, for among the wreaths that are hung about his tomb by a sorrowing nation, there are none of sweeter fragrance than come from the other side of the party wall that divided him from a part of his countrymen. The words meant more than ever to be intended in the history of the nation he himself is his highest illustration."

The Cincinnati Gazette says: "It is too much to expect that bitter partisan warfare is at an end in this country. The nation's attention is now directed to the election of a president, and the recollection of his virtues and his sufferings, now unite the people in a common brotherhood which shows no place for party differences, but it is to be expected that the election will be a contest of publicans, the selfishness and greed of individuals will invent excuses for reclamation. But 'we be to him from whom the course is set, and the nation will never be united on important measures and matters than at present."

The people depending on the star service for their mails will not be heart-broken if the resignation of postmaster general James is accepted, and a man selected at the head of the department who will pay some attention to efficiency as well as economy in the service. The Express moves that a new postmaster general be appointed, and that, from the ranks of the army, a man be selected to prosecute the star route swindlers. We believe the interests of the country would be best served by such a course. The present postmaster general appears to have no appreciation of the necessities and benefits of mail service to a country not supplied by railroads.

It is said the great number of speculating presented at the recent medical college in London was too tempting for the English of medical imaginations in England, and many of the doctors made good things out of their visit. One specialist for gout and rheumatism is said to have taken more fees in London during his short stay than he ever received during a whole month in Paris. The exhibition of pills and draughts and bottles at South Kensington was very fine.

The Prince of Wales was moved to such unaccountable laughter at his mischievous and general. The gravity with which the pills were distributed among the company produced the finest comic effect witnessed on any stage.

This New York Herald produces long rows of figures to show the rapid growth of cities in the United States, and the craze of young America for town life. During the past fifty years New York has changed from agricultural to an urban state. The population of the rural portion of the state has increased 50 per cent, and of the cities 501 per cent, or ten times as rapidly. To-day, considerably more than half the people of the "Empire state" reside in the cities. Every day the tendency to move to the cities, and enjoy the pleasures of urban life, grows and grows.

While presenting to-day to our readers a sketch of Kalaiana'ohi, King of the Hawaiian or Sandwich Islands, who has just arrived in this country, we are forcibly struck with the fact, that the four great gospel messengers—the printing-press, the telegraph, the steam-engine and the telegraph—have drawn the ends of the earth so closely together, that a common hearthstone of the world around which all nations, kindreds and tongues are gathered, and hold their interrupted converse, so to speak. The great national exposition which has for so far characterized the latter half of the present century, illustrate with force the truth of this statement, and even now, while we write, we have a still further exemplification of the power and influence of these mighty agents through the presence of this worthy monarch in our midst, who represents a people who, although redeemed from utter barbarism during the last sixty years, are now ready to enter into treaty with the world at large in all the arts of peace.

Mr. Kalaiana'ohi, who has just arrived in this country, is a native of the Hawaiian Islands, and was educated at the royal academy of Honolulu. He is a man of high intelligence, and has been a member of the Hawaiian legislature for several years. He is a man of high intelligence, and has been a member of the Hawaiian legislature for several years.

The Methodist Episcopal conference of Ohio last week resolved that as intemperance is their right and duty, with out fear of intimidation, to use their prerogatives as citizens, and to wield their personal influence in behalf of those who are opposed to the ultimate suppression of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and the extinguishing therefrom and they further declared that they would endeavor to secure the support of their ministers on account of their vote and labors in this cause, do hereby exhibit an unworthy spirit, unworthy of the cause in which they are engaged. The conference was only half-hearted. The prohibitionists want an organ, but they don't want to pay for it. They want everything done "for the good of the cause."

An Indiana court has decided that smoking creates an appetite which is necessary to appease, and, therefore, cigar eating on Sunday is a "necessity" within the meaning of the statute. Whiskey also creates an appetite which is also necessary to appease to secure comfort; but the "same" cannot be said of bread. Bread does not create an appetite; it only appeases it. Bread eating on Sunday is not a "necessity" if the people have no bread to eat on that day.

A Washington special says Mr. J. Stanley Brown, private secretary to the late president, has been requested to remain at his post, but it is not likely, nor does he himself expect to officiate permanently in his present position. Mr. Brown is of New York, who was General Arthur's secretary while he was collector of the port of New York, and also vice-president, will doubtless be appointed Mr. Brown's successor. Mr. Brown will probably be transferred to some desirable office in one of the executive departments.

A Mrs. Johnson, of Cold water, Michigan, has sailed for England, where she proposes to collect 300 to 400 servant girls to bring back with her. She already has orders in this country for about 100, and has received many letters from Detroit, Chicago and many minor places. About six weeks will be necessary in the trip, she is native English, and the several lists was promulgated by her own wants and a desire to provide for a few personal friends, when finally she decided to make the trip and engage a large number of girls.

The Boston Traveller makes this question of members of the senate or house of representatives, who are sent to the end of securing a seat in the senate for the individual or some of his friends. All nominations or elections of state officers, or members of the senate or house of representatives, are sent to the end of securing a seat in the senate for the individual or some of his friends. All nominations or elections of state officers, or members of the senate or house of representatives, are sent to the end of securing a seat in the senate for the individual or some of his friends.

Senator Mahone draws $5,000 a year from the United States; his readjuster-conditions for government draws a salary of $1,500 as mayor of Petersburg, and his candidate for the second place on the readjuster ticket draws a salary of $5,000 as United States marshal for the western district of Virginia. "Set long ago," says the Norfolk Virginian, "Mahone was given a check by a railroad official for $7,000 for stock of the Norfolk and Western railroad, for which he never made a cent, but he has a contract for the stock of another railroad for the present year, and is now to be paid $130,000 by the owners of the Norfolk and Western road for services never rendered."

The Kansas City Journal of the 28th inst. says: "It will be remembered when the late President Garfield was elected senator, that in a speech before the Ohio Legislature accepting the honor, he said a beautiful tribute to his predecessor, Senator Thurston, between whom and himself a close friendship existed, and in recognition of usefulness and valuable services performed by his distinguished predecessor, and in referring to him he said: 'The flowers of sweetest fragrance are those that bloom upon party walls.' And now that he has passed away from all party associations the truth of his metaphor is wonderfully illustrated, for among the wreaths that are hung about his tomb by a sorrowing nation, there are none of sweeter fragrance than come from the other side of the party wall that divided him from a part of his countrymen. The words meant more than ever to be intended in the history of the nation he himself is his highest illustration."

The Cincinnati Gazette says: "It is too much to expect that bitter partisan warfare is at an end in this country. The nation's attention is now directed to the election of a president, and the recollection of his virtues and his sufferings, now unite the people in a common brotherhood which shows no place for party differences, but it is to be expected that the election will be a contest of publicans, the selfishness and greed of individuals will invent excuses for reclamation. But 'we be to him from whom the course is set, and the nation will never be united on important measures and matters than at present."

The people depending on the star service for their mails will not be heart-broken if the resignation of postmaster general James is accepted, and a man selected at the head of the department who will pay some attention to efficiency as well as economy in the service. The Express moves that a new postmaster general be appointed, and that, from the ranks of the army, a man be selected to prosecute the star route swindlers. We believe the interests of the country would be best served by such a course. The present postmaster general appears to have no appreciation of the necessities and benefits of mail service to a country not supplied by railroads.

It is said the great number of speculating presented at the recent medical college in London was too tempting for the English of medical imaginations in England, and many of the doctors made good things out of their visit. One specialist for gout and rheumatism is said to have taken more fees in London during his short stay than he ever received during a whole month in Paris. The exhibition of pills and draughts and bottles at South Kensington was very fine.

referring to her he said: "The flowers of sweetest fragrance are those that bloom upon party walls." And now that he has passed away from all party associations the truth of his metaphor is wonderfully illustrated, for among the wreaths that are hung about his tomb by a sorrowing nation, there are none of sweeter fragrance than come from the other side of the party wall that divided him from a part of his countrymen. The words meant more than ever to be intended in the history of the nation he himself is his highest illustration."

The Cincinnati Gazette says: "It is too much to expect that bitter partisan warfare is at an end in this country. The nation's attention is now directed to the election of a president, and the recollection of his virtues and his sufferings, now unite the people in a common brotherhood which shows no place for party differences, but it is to be expected that the election will be a contest of publicans, the selfishness and greed of individuals will invent excuses for reclamation. But 'we be to him from whom the course is set, and the nation will never be united on important measures and matters than at present."

The people depending on the star service for their mails will not be heart-broken if the resignation of postmaster general James is accepted, and a man selected at the head of the department who will pay some attention to efficiency as well as economy in the service. The Express moves that a new postmaster general be appointed, and that, from the ranks of the army, a man be selected to prosecute the star route swindlers. We believe the interests of the country would be best served by such a course. The present postmaster general appears to have no appreciation of the necessities and benefits of mail service to a country not supplied by railroads.

It is said the great number of speculating presented at the recent medical college in London was too tempting for the English of medical imaginations in England, and many of the doctors made good things out of their visit. One specialist for gout and rheumatism is said to have taken more fees in London during his short stay than he ever received during a whole month in Paris. The exhibition of pills and draughts and bottles at South Kensington was very fine.

The Prince of Wales was moved to such unaccountable laughter at his mischievous and general. The gravity with which the pills were distributed among the company produced the finest comic effect witnessed on any stage.

This New York Herald produces long rows of figures to show the rapid growth of cities in the United States, and the craze of young America for town life. During the past fifty years New York has changed from agricultural to an urban state. The population of the rural portion of the state has increased 50 per cent, and of the cities 501 per cent, or ten times as rapidly. To-day, considerably more than half the people of the "Empire state" reside in the cities. Every day the tendency to move to the cities, and enjoy the pleasures of urban life, grows and grows.

While presenting to-day to our readers a sketch of Kalaiana'ohi, King of the Hawaiian or Sandwich Islands, who has just arrived in this country, we are forcibly struck with the fact, that the four great gospel messengers—the printing-press, the telegraph, the steam-engine and the telegraph—have drawn the ends of the earth so closely together, that a common hearthstone of the world around which all nations, kindreds and tongues are gathered, and hold their interrupted converse, so to speak. The great national exposition which has for so far characterized the latter half of the present century, illustrate with force the truth of this statement, and even now, while we write, we have a still further exemplification of the power and influence of these mighty agents through the presence of this worthy monarch in our midst, who represents a people who, although redeemed from utter barbarism during the last sixty years, are now ready to enter into treaty with the world at large in all the arts of peace.

Mr. Kalaiana'ohi, who has just arrived in this country, is a native of the Hawaiian Islands, and was educated at the royal academy of Honolulu. He is a man of high intelligence, and has been a member of the Hawaiian legislature for several years. He is a man of high intelligence, and has been a member of the Hawaiian legislature for several years.

The Methodist Episcopal conference of Ohio last week resolved that as intemperance is their right and duty, with out fear of intimidation, to use their prerogatives as citizens, and to wield their personal influence in behalf of those who are opposed to the ultimate suppression of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and the extinguishing therefrom and they further declared that they would endeavor to secure the support of their ministers on account of their vote and labors in this cause, do hereby exhibit an unworthy spirit, unworthy of the cause in which they are engaged. The conference was only half-hearted. The prohibitionists want an organ, but they don't want to pay for it. They want everything done "for the good of the cause."

An Indiana court has decided that smoking creates an appetite which is necessary to appease, and, therefore, cigar eating on Sunday is a "necessity" within the meaning of the statute. Whiskey also creates an appetite which is also necessary to appease to secure comfort; but the "same" cannot be said of bread. Bread does not create an appetite; it only appeases it. Bread eating on Sunday is not a "necessity" if the people have no bread to eat on that day.

