Cattlemen Want Kent To Remain Head State College

The executive board of the New Mexico Cattle Growers association, in session at Albuquerque Saturday, passed a resolution asking that Dr. H. L. Kent be not replaced by a new appointee as president of the New Mexico Agricultural College unless he fails to recover his health. The board also commended the regents of the school for granting Dr. Kent a vacation on half pay to enable him to recuperate following a severe illness.

The board endorsed the work of the feed and fertilizer department and commended F. E. Oaks, supervisor; they decided to continue to oppose the plan of the government to return to commercial channels drought cattle which were purchased during the drought last year; and protested the proposed reciprocal agreements between the United States and Canada and the United States and Argentina to allow admission of cattle.

Other action taken by the board included: Approval of the government policy of moving homesteaders and settlers from sub-marginal lands to more suitable areas.

Approval of the Kleberg bill placing a ten cent per pound tax on oleomargarine made from other than domestic fats and oils.

Approval of amendments that would remove the limits on acreage under the Taylor grazing law. The original bill set the total at 80 million acres.

Opposition to including cattle in the AAA reduction until the entire industry has favored such action.

The next meeting of the board will be held at Las Cruces. About 70 cattlemen attended the meeting at Albuquerque.

LOSEY NAMED ON PLANNING BOARD

C. M. Botts of Albuquerque was named chairman of the land use committee of the state planning board at a meeting at Albuquerque Thursday. W. A. Losey of Hagerman was elected vice-chairman, Arthur N. Pack, secretary, and Blanche Clark, assistant secretary.

Attending the meeting were: Floyd Lee, representing the cattlemen; Pack, Losey, Frank Vesely, state land commissioner, M. M. Cheney, U. S. Forest Service official, and A. D. Molohon of the department of grazing.

A resolution recommending temporary use for recreation of the Gabaldon area purchased by the federal government near Santa Fe, was passed by the meeting.

Joe Hamann, former resident of Artesia, who has been operating a trucking line for several weeks, left Monday for Denver, Colorado, to establish headquarters. Mrs. Hamann left with him and plans to spend the remainder of the summer in Denver, and return here in the fall to take up her duties as an instructor in the Artesia schools.

Miss Helen Nolte of Lincoln, Nebraska, niece of Mr. Hamann, who has been visiting in the Hamann home, went on to Denver to spend a short time there before going on to Lincoln.

McGhee Upholds Carlsbad Liquor Law In Decision

Carlsbad's new liquor ordinance was upheld in district court last Thursday by James B. McGhee when he overruled the suit filed by Fred Tipton, Carlsbad liquor dealer, asking that the city be enjoined from enforcing the new law.

The jurist upheld the right of the city to pass zoning ordinances and refusing to invalidate the ordinance because it was passed by a four-man council.

Stress had been placed by Tipton's attorneys on the fact that the state law required an eight-man council, five of whom should be present at meetings when ordinances were passed.

"It is a matter of necessity for me to uphold the ordinance," McGhee said.

"The city has operated under a four-man council since it incorporated as a city in 1918. Indebtedness has been incurred under this set-up," McGhee said.

"It is too bad," he added, "that they didn't start in 1920 by electing four additional councilmen, but the people of the city acquiesced to the legality of a four-man council. It was up to them to file an objection in 1922 or at any time after that, but none have. I don't think it is up to the district court to upset all of the ordinances passed since that time," he said.

The attorney for Tipton announced that an appeal will be taken to the state supreme court.

McGhee said that it is probable that the supreme court may point out a way to elect the other four men required by state law.

STATE CLOSES YEAR WITH A BALANCE IN ITS ACCOUNTS

SANTA FE—State Treasurer J. J. Connelly Saturday said the end of the fiscal year, June 30, will find a balance in the appropriations account for the second time within recent years. The account, he said, showed no overdraft during the last year, the first time since the administration of former Governor A. T. Hannett.

Although the appropriations account Saturday showed $446,000 "in the red," Connelly said this was expected to be wiped out by $300,000 receipts from miscellaneous sources and $180,000 from property tax collections up to June 15.

G. R. Spencer left last Thursday for the national educational association convention at Denver, Colorado, going by way of Santa Fe to attend to some school matters. The national educational convention convened June 30th and will last until July 5th.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Hobbs left Monday for Waco, Texas, where Mr. Hobbs will spend some time conducting a revival near Waco for the Church of Christ. They were accompanied by Mrs. C. N. Calmes, who expects to enter a Dallas, Texas, hospital for treatment.

WASTED FOOD DOLLARS

The Penalty of Poor Refrigeration

According to the U. S. Government, food spoilage wastes one dollar of every ten that the average family spends for food. This appalling waste is largely the result of improper refrigeration... of temperatures too high to prevent the growth of the tiny micro-organisms that cause decay.

50 Degrees... The Danger Line

Science has proven that 50 degrees is the danger line in food preservation. Above 50 degrees, micro-organisms multiply and foods become tainted. Below 50 degrees, the spread of micro-organisms is retarded and foods remain fresh and wholesome.

Use Electricity... But Refrigerate Adequately

Modern electric refrigerators maintain temperatures below the 50 degree level. They assure you proper food preservation at low cost. If your present means of refrigeration fails to provide the temperatures prescribed by science, see the modern electric refrigerators on display at your dealers. Prices are low and terms are moderate.

A Sermon On Interdependence

(A sermon by Thos. Massie)
 Scripture: Isaiah 59:1-13.
 Text: "So then let us follow after things which make for peace, and things whereby we may edify one another." (Romans 14:19).

We are about to celebrate American Independence Day. This day has a deep meaning for many of us; but the time has come for the nations of the world to declare a day of Interdependence, and with Bishop G. Ashton Oldham let us hope that our own country will be the first to declare it. Listen to the statement of his ideal for this country:

"America first:
 Not merely in matters material, but in things of the spirit.
 Not merely in science, inventions, motors and skyscrapers, but also in ideals, principles, character.
 Not merely in the calm assertion of rights, but in the glad assumption of duties.
 Not flaunting her strength as a giant, but bending in helpfulness over a sick and wounded world like a Good Samaritan.
 Not in splendid isolation, but in courageous cooperation.
 Not in pride, arrogance, and disdain of other races and peoples, but in sympathy, love, and understanding.
 Not in treading again the old, worn, bloody pathway which ends inevitably in chaos and disaster, but in blazing a new trail, along which, please God, other nations will follow, into the new Jerusalem where wars shall be no more.
 Some day some nation must take that path—unless we are to lapse once again into utter barbarism—and that honor I covet for my beloved America.
 And so, in that spirit and with these hopes, I say will all my heart and soul, 'America first.'
 Any weakling can assert his independence, but it takes a life given to strong character and Christ-like will to practice the demands of interdependence. The same thing is true with nations.
 There are a great number of things going on in the world today which are making for peace, and things whereby men are seeking to edify one another. But there are perhaps a far greater number of things going on which are making enduring peace impossible. It shall be our purpose in this sermon to note some of the things on both sides, and examine them in the light of the teachings of Jesus, the Prince of Peace.
 What then are some of the conditions and actions which are blocking the doorway which leads into the kingdom of peace? Someone has said that the causes of war are primarily economic. The day has come when human lives mean nothing when dollars are involved. We look with horror upon the hijacker who repeatedly follows the practice of emptying his gun into man, woman or child for the sake of securing a few dollars. But in the past, when our country and other countries have sent soldiers into foreign territory to defend and protect big corporations which are exploiting backward people for rich gains in land and natural resources, we have sat back and commended the government for its business foresight and wise planning for territorial expansion. By covering the guns with a mantle of respectability and hiding many of the facts of the case, the promoters of such an enterprise succeed in blinding the eyes of the majority of people to the fact that it is wrong and that it is one of the greatest obstacles to peace. We have been led to believe that we have a right to everything we can take, regardless of the way it is taken.
 When people first began to come to America, many of them bartered with the American Indians and time and again traded worthless strings of beads for extremely valuable furs, thousands of acres of fertile land, and other rich possessions. And now in our stories of early American history, we make heroes of those who scalped the greatest number of Indians and drove them from the face of the earth to "make America safe for Americans." In modern times our big companies go into Cuba, Mexico, the Philippine Islands, South America, Africa, and elsewhere. Here large quantities of raw products are often available at relatively low cost, and labor in many places may be secured for a song if the laborers are handled in tactful ways. In case trouble arises, the owners of these companies expect their home government to protect them. This is not following after things which make for peace.
 Again, the international armaments building race does not make for peace between the nations. Think of it from the standpoint of a neighborhood—and the world has become a neighborhood because of the rapid means of communication which have developed during the past few decades. Suppose you lived in a small community of fifty families, and you had contacts just as any community will have, one family with another. Would you consider it a very peace-loving neighborhood if each family maintained a standing guard, equipped with several types of guns and other deadly weapons and materials, and spending more than half of the family's income to make this possible? If you valued your life and happiness, you would not care to live in such a neighborhood. In other words, if my neighbor puts his gun in my face with the exhortation, "Let's be friends and love each other," I am not likely to trust him without question. Neither does such an attitude between nations make for neighborliness and peace. "So then let us follow after things which make for peace, and things whereby we may edify one another."

 For generations the children of our country have been taught a false conception of patriotism. To most of us, the waving of the flag fills us with a war sentiment and a war emotionalism, because patriotism has so long been made synonymous with willingness to fight for one's country. The motto, "My country, right or wrong," has led many people to defend her when she was wrong, under the name of patriotism or duty to one's country. These are not things which make for peace. These are not the elements of true patriotism; the term needs to be re-defined; the flag of our country has a far deeper meaning than that associated with its being carried over the top in battle, and being stained by the blood of innocent soldiers.
 These are only a few of the things that the countries of the world are doing to make the world unsafe for democracy—things which do not make for the peace and welfare of men—things which will always block the door to world brotherhood and prosperity. But let us turn our attention now to a discussion of some of the efforts that are being made to promote peace, and of some of the things which must be done if we expect to save civilization from committing suicide through the instrument of war.
 The workers for peace have long labored under the false generalization that since there has always been war it follows that there will always be war. Back in the first half of the nineteenth century, many people were saying, "There has always been slavery, and there always will be slavery." But by persistent effort on the part of a few, this statement was shown to be false. There was a time when people were saying, "You cannot stop dueling. It's the best way to settle a dispute, and it will always be practiced." But how extensive is the practice of dueling today as a means of settling an argument? One rarely ever hears of it any more. There are better ways of settling international disputes than by resorting to the war method.
 If trouble between individuals can be settled justly in court, presided over by impartial judges, and the individuals compelled to abide by the decision by the backing of public opinion, why is it not a reasonable plan to have a world court of international justice to compel individual nations to settle differences by peaceful means? Such an idea has been put into effect, in part at least, through what is known as the World Court and the League of Nations, and a number of successful settlements have been made. But these agencies cannot become very effective unless all of the great power nations, as well as the smaller countries, are wholeheartedly affiliated with them, in spirit as well as in name. Public opinion and international opinion is the strongest power in the world—if it is asserted! A number of authorities have stated that less than two per cent of the people of the world believe that we should have war; and that two per cent are made up of those whose money and power are multiplied many times by war. Then let the ninety-eight per cent put their opinion into action, and make war impossible.
 You ask, "What can we do about it? The whole thing is so tied up in politics and big business that the people are helpless." That certainly does seem to be true and such a condition presents a real problem. But surely it is not right for two people to tell ninety-eight what to do, especially when the ninety-eight are being told to do something which they are convinced is wrong! There must be some way to put into effect the will of such an overwhelming majority!
 One thing which may be done is to substitute for the widespread war propaganda a wider propaganda for peace. We have a war department in our government set up to which millions of dollars are appropriated every year, and out of which much of the war propaganda is paid for. Why not insist upon a United States Peace Department, with appropriations equal to those set aside for war purposes? With such a department and with such an extensive fund, well-informed christian men and women could be sent throughout the country, educating the public in matters of peace. Courses in public schools and colleges on ways of promoting peace could be added at government expense. The cost of sending carefully selected students to other countries and bringing foreign students to this country for the purpose of promoting international good will and understanding could be paid. Many other things could be done to enable us to "follow after things which make for peace, and things whereby we may edify one another." And what is more, we would soon be brought to see that the war department is a detriment to world peace and should have no place in our government.

 Another thing which is gaining a popular following among the young people throughout the world, and which is doing much to make for peace, is a pledge on the part of the young people to refuse to take any part whatever in any future war. If every young man and every young woman would make this pledge, saying, as many have, that we must obey God rather than men, when the orders of men are contrary to the will of God; if this pledge were made by all, there would be no more war; there would be none to fight. The promoters of war are never willing to go into the thick of the battle to be blown to bits or eaten up by gas; they have better sense!
 Finally, if we want to follow after things which make for peace, and things whereby we may edify one another, the christian churches, the christian homes, the christian schools—christians everywhere, must teach children and youth and men and women the way and spirit of Jesus Christ in every relationship. We cannot expect nations as a whole to become christian in their actions and attitudes until we have made the people in every community to know and follow after the teachings of the Prince of Peace. Nations are made up of people; and only as nations have to do with people can they become christian.

Chevrolet Sets A Record In May On Sale of Accessories

The Chevrolet Motor Company set a new all-time record during May for total volume of parts and accessories sales. The previous record dated back to the boom year of 1929, when August sales reached a peak that stood as a record for nearly six years.
 Announcement of the new record was made at White Sulphur Springs by M. D. Douglas, manager of the Chevrolet Parts and Accessories division, before a gathering of the leading field men of the division, guests of the company during a three days' stay awarded them in recognition of their success in rolling up regional and zone records contributing to the high May total.
 According to Mr. Douglas, the May peak of sales can be attributed largely to a general resumption of touring for pleasure, a natural sequence to the increase in spending power throughout the country. "The curve of new car sales shows heavy gains over last year," he declared, "and new cars themselves create a demand for accessories—everything from insect screens to radios. However, our May record was far above what could be attributed to the sale of accessories for new cars, and it can be definitely concluded that much of the buying was for old cars."
 "That means that motorists are taking to the road in larger numbers than during the recent touring seasons, and are equipping their cars with accessories that will contribute to their convenience, comfort and safety. They are making their old cars look new with seat covers, modernizing them with radios, equipping them with spot lights, visors, dual windshield wipers, and other articles that add to the convenience and pleasure of both the driver and the passenger."

YEAR'S DEFICIT IS THREE AND HALF BILLION

WASHINGTON—After collecting 52 cents for every dollar spent, the treasury Saturday closed its books upon the fiscal year with a deficit of nearly $3,500,000,000.
 With two days' transactions still to be reported in detail, expenditures exceeded revenues by $3,472,000,000 as compared with $3,881,000,000 for all but two days of the fiscal year of 1934.

C. Neblett Head of Game Commission

SANTA FE—Judge Colin Neblett of Santa Fe was re-elected chairman of the New Mexico Game and Fish commission at a reorganization meeting held at Santa Fe last Thursday afternoon. Other members, both present, are J. Gilberto Espinosa and Henry Raithel of Deming, newly-appointed member, as well as State Game Warden Elliott Barker.
 The commission tentatively approved a budget of $11,500 for improvement work at fish hatcheries during the coming year, some of the work contingent upon whether or not contemplated FERA projects will be approved. The game commission would furnish materials and the labor would be furnished by the relief administration.
 At present one such project is in progress at the Parkview hatchery and it is hoped by the commission that others will be started after July 1 at the Lisboa Springs and Taos hatcheries.
 The commission passed a resolution continuing its opposition to the establishment by the United States biological survey of a federal game refuge in Hidalgo county. Federal plans called for a 644,000 acre preserve for upland birds and game animals. Asserting there was "no need" for such a refuge, the commission decided to oppose any such preserve unless it were for migratory waterfowl. Both the state planning board and the state cooperative committee, it was said, have registered opposition to the proposed refuge.

DON'T BUY HOUSE PAINT ON PRICE ALONE

Price per gallon alone does not determine the cost of paint. The actual number of gallons used, and the number of years it wears—these things determine the actual cost of painting. That's why it pays to choose LOWE BROTHERS HIGH STANDARD House Paint. For HIGH STANDARD covers more surface per gallon and wears years longer! Let us tell you why.
