State Sales Taxes Increased To Help Education; Services

State Comptroller Bob Bullock early this week reminded everyone who collects or pays sales that there was an additional quarter percent sales tax collected on all taxable purchases beginning Sunday, July 1.

"The change means we'll all be paying a little bit more to help fund education and human services in Texas," Bullock said.

The new rate of 6-1/4 percent was approved by the Texas Legislature after a fourth special session on the issue ended in early June. The increase brings the maximum sales tax rate in Texas to 8-1/4 percent when optional local sales taxes are included.

According to Bullock's figures the taxes in Muleshoe went to .7750, which includes a city sales tax. For the rest of the county, the tax rate is .06750, which includes a county tax.

Cochran County is showing a rate of .07250, for Morton and the rest of the county.

Littlefield and the other communities in Lamb County, all show a rate of .07250.

For Parmer County, Farwell shows a rate of .07750, while the rest of the county will pay taxes of .07250.

Bullock's office estimates that a family of four making $35,000 a year will pay an additional $24.65 a year in the state sales tax.

The Comptroller's office has sent almost half a million post cards notifying sales tax permit holders across Texas of the change.

"Business owners with retail sales outlets will have to reprogram their cash registers virtually overnight," Bullock said. "This is a heavy burden we tried to lighten a little by giving as much advance notice as possible."

Bullock said new 6-1/4 percent and 8-1/4 percent rate cards are available at the 33

Comptroller offices in Texas. Also available is a new listing of the combined state and local sales tax rates for every city in the state.

"We've sent out over 55,000 of the new rate cards but there are plenty more free of charge for anyone who asks," Bullock said.

Anyone with questions about the sales tax or with a request for a copy of the revised sales tax rates may call the Comp-Cont. Page 6, Col. 3

100 On 12 Days

If you were 'off in your own world' and didn't notice during the month of June -- it was extremely hot -- all month.

For at least 12 days, the official temperature was recorded above 100 degrees in Muleshoe.

On June 4, the temperature was recorded at 89 degrees, for the coolest day of the month and on June 25, the high temperature was recorded at 108 degrees.

And -- in between? June 15, it was shown to be 101; 102 on both June 16 and 17; with 100 on June 18.

June 19 it was 102 again, followed by 103 on June 20.

Then on the 24th through the 29th, it was above 100 each day.

June 24 was 100; June 25, 108; June 26, 103; June 27, 106; June 28 and June 29, the temperature reached 103 each day.

And, during this time of extremely hot days, the nighttime temperatures stayed in the mid to high 60's, with some nights staying 70 or above.

Also, no moisture was recorded in Muleshoe during the entire month of June.

This was backed by less than one-half inch for May, to leave the entire area very, very dry, and many farmers frustrated as they either couldn't plant, or saw very young crops dry up and wither away.

National Weather Service attributed the lingering heat to a massive 'lid' over the entire southwest, extending westward to California, that has prevented moisture from moving in from the coast, and forcing the heat to the ground.

Some relief is expected during this week, and the possibility of showers actually exist for the area.

Negotiations Ended With Korean Group

Late last Friday, Walter E. Schmidt and Richard W. Clikeman released a joint statement concerning funding for the proposed enclosed greenhouse operation to be located just south of Muleshoe.

The following is a statement by Walter E. Schmidt, chairman, Almeria Group:

The Almeria Group has withdrawn its offer to the Jinro Group of Seoul, Korea, and its affiliates, effective tomorrow, June 30, 1990, due to irreconcilable differences in business philosophy.

Both Dick Clikeman and I are grateful for the tremendous support and encouragement we received from the organizations and business people of Muleshoe during the Koreans' visit. We could not have chosen a better place in which to locate or a finer community of which to become a part.

We are determined to go forward to justify the confidence in our project shown by the community.

Also making a statement was Richard W. Clikeman, president and CEO, Almeria Inc. He said:

We cannot, at this time, find a way of working together with Jinro on the Muleshoe project. Jinro is accustomed to exercising very close control over subsidiary operations. Since Muleshoe is so far away from Seoul, we cannot permit such close control and still preserve the freedom of executive action necessary to construct the facilities and conduct this fast moving operation in perishable commodities.

We are working closely with a recently organized State of Texas group established to help emerging agricultural businesses acquire funding. Their initial reaction to our plan is very favorable, and they appear to be geared for quick action. Additionally, we are exploring funding assistance from various federal programs and from private foundations.

While Almeria looks forward to continued good relations with the Jinro Group and its managers there, its directors' greatest regret about dropping negotiations with Jinro is the loss of nine months that could have been directed to pursuing other

Candle Light Ceremony Unites Miss Henry, Scoggin

Miss Kacy Karol Henry became the bride of Jason Scott Scoggin in a candle light ceremony at 7:30 p.m. Friday, June 8 in the First United Methodist Church. The Rev. Richard Edwards read the double ring vows.

Parents of the couple are Ms. Marcia Henry, Ms. Doris Scoggin and Kearney Scoggin.

White tri-level columns at each end of the altar held cascades of Boston fern and ivy with baskets of greenery at each base. Heart-shaped brass candelabras, interwoven with greenery and accented with iridescent ribbon and bows, flanked the columns. A white iridescent unity candle, surrounded by greenery in a brass stand completed the altar setting.

The center isle of the church was adorned with white satin ribbon anchored on each pew by iridescent bows accented with black and red hearts.

Beau Henry, nephew of the bride, lit the candles as Jeremy Bruns provided musical selections at the organ. Sheri King and Curry King of Amarillo, cousins of the groom, sang "Evergreen", "With This Ring", and "The Wedding Song", accompanied at the piano by Jeremy Bruns.

The groom's father and step-mother, Mr. and Mrs. Kerney Scoggin, were escorted to their seats by Jimmy Johnson, step-brother of the groom.

The groom escorted his mother, Ms. Doris Scoggin, to the altar where she lit the Scoggin family memory candle, and then to her pew at the front of the sanctuary.

The bride's mother, Ms. Marcia Henry, was escorted to the altar to light the Henry family memory candle and to her seat by Emanuele "Manny" DiMattia of Haverhill, MA, future brother-in-law of the bride.

As "The Wedding March" was played, the bride was escorted down the aisle by her father designate, Cecil Mardis, and her brother, Michael Henry. As she proceeded down the aisle, the bride presented her mother with a single red rose. Michael accompanied the bride to the altar and responded on behalf of both families in blessing the couple.

The bride wore a formal length gown of white satin and Venetian lace. The bodice was highlighted by a sweetheart neckline trimmed with Venetian lace, seed pearls and iridescent beads which continued to the waist. Off-the-shoulder sleeves of satin bows were accented with organza roses and seed pearl sprays. The skirt and cathedral length train were adorned with Venetian lace applique and finished with Scheffillie lace trim and a satin ruffle at the hem. The low-cut back featured a candy-box bow of white satin at the waist. Streamers from the bow complimented the back of the skirt. A satin-brimmed hat, applied with Venetian lace and accented with seed pearls and iridescent beads completed the ensemble.

The bridal bouquet was crescent-shaped, featuring ten red roses, symbolic of the couple's ten years of friendship and romance. The bouquet was accented with three white glamelias and white stephanotis centered with white pearls radiating from the bouquet. Queen Anne's lace added softness and English Ivy trailed throughout the design.

Keeping with tradition, the bride carried a white Bible borrowed from her sister. Something old was a strand of pearls given to the bride's mother from the bride's father, the late Doyle Henry, on her twenty-first birthday and passed to the bride and her sister on their twenty-first birthdays. Something new was her wedding ensemble, and she wore a blue garter. For good luck, she had two pennies minted in the couple's birth-year, 1965, in her shoes.

The groom wore a black cable, full-dress tuxedo, black tie and cummerbund and white pleated shirt. His boutonniere was a white rose surrounded by stephanotis with white pearl centers.

Kristi Henry of San Antonio served her sister as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Donna Peters of Levelland, Tori Brunton, cousin of the bride, and Lashelle Scoggin, sister of the groom. Bridal attendants wore street-length dresses with black and white floral dropped-waist bodices featuring a ruffled peplum over a solid black skirt. They all wore pearl drop earrings which were gifts from the bride. Black leather shoes completed their ensembles.

The maid of honor carried a bouquet of white glamelias centered with red roses. Stephanotis fanned from the bouquet while black pico satin streamers cascaded from the center to dress length. The bridesmaids hand bouquets were white glamelias with a halo of Plumosa fern and white stephanotis accented by streamers of black pico satin.

Haley Henry, niece of the bride, served as flower girl. She wore a dress of red hearts outlined on white background with a ribbon in her hair and carried a white lace basket with black pico satin streamers and bows accented by red pearl hearts and iridescent leaves. Haley dropped red and white ribbon bows as she walked down the aisle.

Best man, Darin Shaw of Lamesa wore a black cable full-dress tuxedo with red cummerbund and tie. Groomsmen were Joe Mustian of Plainview and the groom's brothers: Preston and Shane Scoggin. The groom's party wore black cable tuxedos with red cummerbunds and ties, accented with boutonnières of white roses and white feathered carnations.

Logan Scoggin, nephew of the groom, carried a heart-shaped, white satin pillow, topped by a heart-shaped ring box, black and white pico streamers, and love knots.

Ushers Jimmy Johnson and Manny DiMattia, and candle-lighter, Beau Henry were dressed in black cable tuxedos with red cummerbunds and ties.

Following the ceremony, the newlyweds greeted guests at a reception in the fellowship hall of the church. The bride's table featured a two-tiered cake topped with wedding bells and surrounded by four heart-shaped individual cakes. The cake was accented with white roses and black filigree lacework scallops. White froth punch, nuts and white heart-shaped mints were served from crystal appointments. The table was covered with a black cloth and skirted with white lace. A centerpiece of black tapers anchored by black crystal marbles and offset by a floral arrangement of white roses, snapdragons, and Galax leaves, in a shallow crystal dish adorned the table. Belinda Henry and Monica Henry, sisters-in-law of the bride, attended the table.

The groom's table was covered with a black cloth. Coffee was served from brass appointments. The cake was chocolate with white icing and a monogram on top. A black and white floral arrangement and brass candlesticks displayed the engagement photograph of the couple. Jennifer Johnson, step-sister of the groom, served at his table.

Guests were registered by

Ms. Mary Lou Nova of Slaton. Rice roses were distributed to guests by Blake Henry and Brad Henry, nephews of the bride. Rita Albro of Lubbock, Sybol Henry of Amarillo, Billie Downing, Nelda Hunt, Melba King, Kay Mardis, and Sheri Shipman assisted in the houseparty. They wore white corsages of feathered carnations with white satin rosettes.

The bride and groom are 1984, graduates of Muleshoe High School. The bride graduated from Texas Tech University in 1988, and is currently employed by the Marriott Corporation and South Plains College in Levelland, as the director of catering and special events.

Scoggin graduated from Texas Tech University in 1989 and is currently employed by DeKalb-Pfizer as a research technician in Hastings, NE.

Special guests at the wedding included the bride's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Selma Smith of Granite Shoals, and paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Henry of Canyon. Also in attendance were the groom's great grandmother, Mrs. Alline Bell, his paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Scoggin, and his maternal grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth King. Joining the couple in this special happening were numerous other relatives and friends.

Following the rehearsal, a dinner honoring the couple and the wedding party was hosted by Kearney and Jackie Scoggin in the fellowship hall of the church. The meal was catered by Dani Heathington of the Blue Goose. Fresh floral arrangements decorated the tables in the bride's chosen colors of black and white with red hearts.

A bachelor party hosted by Darin Shaw honored Scoggin following the rehearsal.

A lingerie shower and bachelorette party hosted by Kristi Henry, Belinda Henry, Monica Henry and Tanya Crawford honored the bride.

Farmers Union, Others Ask Farm Bill Change

Members of the Senate Agriculture Committee may have anticipated a respite from farm bill debate after the committee wrapped up its version of the bill during a late-night session Thursday. But by early Monday morning, dozens of farmers were already barnstorming Capitol Hill telling the members what they like, and don't like, about the legislation.

The National Farmers Union members say now that the House and Senate versions of the new 5-year farm program are ready for floor debate, they want a series of amendments attached to the bills that would enhance commodity prices.

One such amendment would raise farm program loan rates. During a briefing session Sunday, NFU President Leland

The Texas Employment Commission office in Muleshoe has reportedly taken some 410 applications to date, and another 125 persons have called in from surrounding areas.

During this time, however, technical and other refinements in the plans for our project have strengthened Almeria's private funding prospects.

The Almeria Group has resumed communications with other interested and qualified Texas investors including those with whom discussions were suspended during Jinro negotiations.

Within the past week, two organizations in Muleshoe have voted unanimously in favor of supporting steps toward obtaining a part of Almeria Inc.'s necessary funding from the public sector:

On June 22, 1990, the Bailey County Commissioners Court, meeting in Muleshoe, voted to meet with Texas Department of Commerce officials concerning preapplication qualifications for a Texas Capitol Fund loan for the Almeria project.

On June 27, 1990, the Board of Directors of the Bailey County Electric Cooperative Association, meeting in Muleshoe, voted to submit a preapplication for a Rural Electrification Administration grant for $100,000 on behalf of Almeria Inc.'s project to the REA Administrator.

While still too early to predict when the Almeria Group will be fully funded, the directors are confident that funding will take place and that Almeria will be in full operation early next year.

Swenson said higher loan rates would not only enhance farm income by raising market prices but would save the government money in deficiency payments.

"The argument against raising loan rates is that it would make us uncompetitive in world markets," said Swenson. "But, the market price of some commodities is already below the world price, and we have the Export Enhancement Program to help us maintain and build market share."

During the committee markup stage, NFU had pushed for farm bill language that would raise loan rates, and repeal the so-called "Findley Amendment," a provision of the 1985 Food Security Act, which authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to lower loan rates by as much as 20 percent per year. Both agriculture committees modified their versions of the Findley proposals during the debate.

The Farmers Union members are also asking that farm program target prices be indexed to inflation. "Without indexing, and with the freeze in target prices that's in the legislation now, farmers will get further and further behind over the life of the bill," said Swenson.

The NFU president pointed to Congressional Budget Office statistics indicating that for net farm income per farm to remain at 1988 levels under a support price freeze, 500,000 farms could be forced to leave the sector. "The pie will simply get smaller and smaller and producers will either have to settle for less income, or leave the business."

Five Farmers Union members from Texas joined 150 members from 22 states in taking part in the NFU "Fly-in" this week. In addition to lobbying on loan rate and target price provisions of the farm bill, the group is asking for the preservation of the Federal Crop Insurance Program; a proven yield amendment that would allow the use of past production data to determine base program payments; and targeting farm program benefits to certain levels of bushel or pound production.

States First Biotech Cotton

"This may look like an ordinary cotton plant, but it has the potential to fight off bollworms, earworms, and budworms like a Texas Ranger," Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said Tuesday (June 19).

Hightower toured the state's first experimental cotton crop of genetically-improved cotton with Dr. Charles Arntzen, deputy chancellor and dean of the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Texas A&M.

"The development of pest-resistant cotton illustrates how the right kind of advances in biotechnology can benefit both farmers and the environment," Hightower said. "Texas cotton farmers now spend well over $20 million each year on insecticides. By raising pest-resistant cotton, farmers could use fewer insecticides, which would not only reduce their costs, but would ease the stress on the environment that intensive chemical use causes."

The project to develop pest-resistant cotton, also known as Bt cotton, is under the direction of Dr. David Altman, a USDA Agricultural Research Service cotton researcher based at Texas A&M. Funding for the project has been provided by the Monsanto Company.

Researchers took a gene from a widely used, naturally occurring bacterium, Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt), and inserted it into the genetic material of the cotton plant. The cotton plants themselves then produce a protein that is lethal to certain kinds of caterpillars, including the larvae of the cotton bollworm and the tobacco budworm. When an insect feeds on the plant, it ingests the protein along with the parts of the plant. The protein interferes with insect's feeding ability and it dies. The entire process is organic and has no known effect on soil, water, or plant quality.

The state's first test plot of Bt cotton, which was planted May 7, stands knee high, is beginning to blossom. It looks like a good stand of cotton, Altman said.

"Throughout much of our state's history, Texas cotton farmers have fought an all-out war against insects to protect this important crop," Arntzen said. "Growers frequently spend $65 an acre or more per year on chemicals, making cotton one of our state's most chemically-intensive crops. Pestresistant cotton could give Texas farmers a real break at the chemical store. While Bt cotton does not resist the boll weevil, it is hoped to be virtually resistant to damage from the pink bollworm, corn earworm, and tobacco budworm. Other biocontrol projects aimed at the boll weevil are in the works."

"The technology used to create this insect-resistant cotton is also being evaluated on tomatoes and corn," Hightower said. "In time, this sort of 'beneficial biotechnology' may lead to a widespread reduction in chemical use."

The Texas Department of Agriculture has served as a state regulatory agency during the course of the project, working in cooperation with USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS). In addition to approving permits for interstate movement of the genetically-engineered cotton, TDA jointly with APHIS inspected greenhouses, laboratories, and fields where experiments using the new cotton have been conducted. TDA suggested safeguards to prevent the experimental gene from being transferred accidentally to nearby cotton fields. For example, TDA specialists recommended that cotton sampling be conducted up to a quarter-mile separation from the plot to test for accidental pollen movement. TDA has agreed to grant special exemptions of the cotton harvest dates fall beyond the harvest dates permitted for Texas' pink bollworm quarantine.

"Although a number of questions about the commercial potential of Bt cotton remain, the seeds of great promise are there," Hightower said. "Scientists still need to see how yields and fiber quality compare with conventional varieties, what level of pest control the plant provides, how to overcome the genetic tendency of insects to develop immunity, and how to ensure that there are no effects on non-target plants. And, cotton producers obviously want to know how much the seeds are going to cost. The price will need to be low enough to make it more economical than traditional plant-and-spray farming. Since producers typically use cotton seed as cattle feed, and cotton seed oil is used for human consumption, we need to be sure no harmful by-products are passed along into the food chain. But these problems don't appear to be insurmountable, and the payoffs could be big for farmers and the environment."

Arntzen predicted that the 1990s will be the "decade of delivery" for biotechnology. "Field testing of genetically improved plants will become quite common over the next 10 years, and farmers and consumers will start to see tangible benefit from our biotechnology research program."

Texas A&M has the largest cotton research program in the United States, Arntzen said, and its commitment to genetic engineering will ensure that Texas maintains its dominance in the cotton industry.

Arthritis Foundation Sets Public Forum July 10

The Arthritis Foundation is announcing a Public Forum featuring Dr. J. Michael Calmes. Dr. Calmes is a rheumatologist with the South Plains Arthritis Center. Using slides, Dr. Calmes will discuss basic facts about arthritis and how this disease affects individuals of all ages, including infants and small children.

The date and time set for this event is 12:30 p.m. Tuesday, July 10th at Carillon (formerly John Knox Village), 1717 Norfolk Avenue, Lubbock, Texas in the Skylight Inn. Refreshments will be served. There is no charge for admission and the public is invited.

The Arthritis Foundation can be reached by dialing 744-7733, and for those outside the Lubbock dialing area, on the toll-free number 800-283-7733 for further information, as well as, free literature and referrals.

Funding For Disabled Children

With the state lawmakers' help, the Texas Department of Health (TDH) now can continue its aid to thousands of Texas children with serious medical problems.

Until the Texas Legislature in special session provided the department with $10.9 million in special funding, the TDH program for Chronically Ill and Disable Children (CIDC) was threatened with having to suspend its services for the summer.

John Evans, director of the program, explained that an unexpected increase in applicants, plus spiralling medical costs, had almost depleted the program's funding by the end of May. TDH had been preparing for the worst--suspending the program until the beginning of the new fiscal year on Sept. 1--if the Legislature did not allocate new funding. "If we had had to begin cancelling services," Evans said, "the timing couldn't have been worse. The summer months often are the busiest for the CIDC program. Many families plan their children's surgeries for when the youngsters are not in school and the parents have vacation time."

In addition to medical services, CIDC also pays for braces, wheelchairs, and therapy. In all, more than 16,000 children with spina bifida, cancer, AIDS, cystic fibrosis, cerebral palsy, leukemia and other disabling conditions rely on CIDC annually.

Evans said that the legislation supplying the emergency funding (S.B. 11) not only ensured CIDC's continuity through the summer, it also allocated an additional $13 million for the next fiscal year. "We can never say that our money troubles at CIDC are over," he said. "But we can say that without these additional funds, some families already living with tragedy would have lost the only help available in Texas."

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has instituted a Class Action Lawsuit seeking judicial approval of a settlement reached in Docket No. 7297, an inquiry of General Counsel of the Public Utility Commission of Texas into possible overcharges which occurred between September, 1976, and February, 1987, due to rounding practices, on bills of intrastate WATS/800 customers sent by Southwestern Bell and other telephone companies which concur in Southwestern Bell's tariff. The suit is styled "Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, Plaintiff, vs. MCI Telecommunications Corporation, A Member of the Class of Texas Intrastate WATS and 800 Service Customers Who Paid Overtime Charges From September 1976 Through February 1987, Defendant," and identified as Cause No. 471,460 in the 126th Judicial District Court of Travis County, Texas.

Pursuant to the settlement, while not admitting liability, Southwestern Bell, the other local exchange telephone companies in Texas, and AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. have agreed to pay refunds to those WATS/800 customers who paid overtime charges attributable to the rounding practices for intrastate WATS/800 services at any time between September, 1976, and February, 1987. The refunds will be based upon either the actual or estimated amount of overtime charges attributable to such rounding practices. An exact refund will be determined for customers able to produce copies of their WATS/800 service bills. For customers who do not have copies of their WATS/800 service bills to establish actual overtime charges paid, an average refund of $4.53 to $5.95 per WATS/800 service line per month will be applied. All claims will be subject to verification. The refunds will also include interest at the rate of 7.80% per annum.
