Ice Cream Crank-Off Champion Crowned

In front of a packed house enjoyed by the over 100 in at the Methodist Church last Sunday, Judy Porter was crowned the best of the best ice cream crankers by retiring Champion, Dora Price: Judy's strawberry banana nut concoction had been shared by son, Chris, from a popular bait house on Lake Allan Henry, up near Snyder.

Should Judy become unable to fulfill her duties as Champion, Bobby Jo Stewart, as 1st runner up, will step into that yet to be defined role. Her creative caramel macchiato came in a tight second to the bait house specialty. Lea Jean Wilkerson's super duper vanilla was right behind Bobby Jo's score and earned her the 2nd runner up certificate.

Other beautiful certificates suitable for framing were awarded to Jan Keyes, Jean McWilliams and Lee Anne Morton, while 8 other tanks of home-made ice cream were

The panel of anonymous Flavorologists who were "drafted" into the job of tasting and scoring every entry were Chuck and Norma Koch, John and Brenda Walling, Joe Perry, Andy Byerly and Michelle Kaiser. They were sequestered in a separate room; entering with the "well, somebody's got to do it" attitude and left with the big question of which entry to place a sticker on as to their Folks had their fill of grilled hot dogs with all the trimmings before being given their sticky smiley faces for voting on their favorite ice cream.

All in all, it was a wonderful way to kick off our local Independence Day celebrations. Hopefully, people will perfect their favorite recipe for homemade ice cream throughout the hot summer and be ready for the competition next July.

Project Pride Supports the Ice House - Project Pride is proud to financially support the Reed Construction's efforts to restore the old Ice House to its original look. This facility played a vital role in the life of Robert E. Howard, and as such, it currently plays an important part of the annual REH Days. The attendees share some of Howard's boxing stories on the same spot that inspired the local author to write his many short stories about the fighting Costigans for The Ring; the leading pulp magazine for boxing stories at that time. Summer Readers Learn About Miniature Houses

Cross Plains Library learned about miniature houses this week. Peggy Brock brought her collection up to the library for the readers to see. Peggy is the mother of Melody McWilliams and the grandmother to Colby, Shelby, Dobbs, and Cody McWilliams.

Peggy's collection started with her first house over 68 years ago. She currently has four wooden houses, one metal house and an assortment of smaller plastic houses. These houses are all fully furnished and are immaculate with details.

Peggy even had a book that contained patterns for houses and furniture that could be made from cloth. All the kids ere interested in the construction and tools you would need to build these little

The library and staff would like to thank Peggy for sharing her hobby with these kids and giving them an insight on the world of miniature houses.

The Market at Clyde presents Meet Our Vendors: Hatton Moore of "Broken Chain Creations"

Article and photos by: Danni Louw

Hatton Moore is a graduate of Wylie High School and lived in Clyde for several years while at McMurray University. He is now retired from H.E.B. in Abilene. Hatton is married to Daleca, who teaches real estate at Cisco College and sells for Real Apple Realtors. His daughter, Hannah, is a regular visitor to the Market at Clyde, and was one of the runners up in the Dog Pageant in April with Kaylie. Hatton is a member of a Christian Motorcycle Association and says he started out making paperweights and trying to make something to hold business cards at Bloodfest in Abilene, and other get-togethers. He then came up with the idea to make things out of motorcycle chains, and especially to use broken chain to make something unique; as he says: "Christ came and broke our chains to set us free!" That is also where he got the idea for the name for his work, as we are a creation with broken chains in Christ. He started his creations about 8 years ago.

The process of making one of his unique creations starts with ordering the motorcycle chain or sometimes smaller chain for other motors, online. The chain comes packed in grease, so the first part of the process is cleaning it very thoroughly with engine solvent. Then, after he conceives the idea of what he wants to make in his head, it has to be cut the correct length by grinding off the pins. Then he lays it upside down and welds it into the correct shape. Some shapes are flexible and get only certain spots welded. Then, painstakingly, all the weld splatters have to be removed. Only then is he able to polish it to a finishing shine. For some of his creations he cuts wood to fit inside the shape, like the Texas flags and the crosses.

Hatton's minions made from old propane tanks are a big hit, and immediately catches the eye at his booth. He starts those by cleaning the old can thoroughly, getting all the paint off. Then he cuts out the "tongue", before welding on all kinds of nuts, bolts and other interesting pieces of metal for arms, hands and legs. Finally some get a fresh coat of paint. There is no better gift for that minion fan among your friends or family!

Hatton started at the Market at Clyde as a new vendor in February 2017 and has not missed a single market. He has also sold at fundraisers for motorcycle associations. His dream is to see his business grow as something recognizable, and he says he has some great new ideas. For a sneak preview he is going to bring some of his creations for Christmas to his booth in July, since it can be Christmas in July, so be sure to come by his booth to chat and look at the unique items Hatton has to show. His daughter helped with some of the designs too. A visit to his booth at Market at Clyde will not disappoint, and any of his artworks given as a gift is not just a conversation piece, but will become an heirloom.

The Clyde Market is held every second Saturday of the month at the Old Firehouse on North First Street from 10 am to 4 pm. If you are an artist, crafter or home cook and would like a space at Market at Clyde please call 325-518-3939 or email themarketatclyde@ amail.com

Masonic Lodge Secretary suggests consolidating five area Lodges

Chamber Ribbon Cutting at Reed Construction "Icehouse"

In December we had the opportunity to purchase the Wild Texas Taxidermy building. I really thought it was too large for the purpose we were going to use it for but it didn't take Rusty very long to fill it up. He found items he had even forgot he had.

I had the idea to use the front room for myself. This was the area that Wild Texas Taxidermy used to display mounts. We searched for furniture and items dating back to 1928 when the "icehouse" was built.

I love history, especially concerning Cross Plains. My parents always lived in Cross Plains. My mother's parents were from the Dressy Community and my dad's parents from Pioneer.

I have found that the train used to come by the "Icehouse" and go by Dollar General and Food Plaza area cross Highway 36, close to Lawrence Farm and Ranch, then to Pioneer and its destination to DeLeon. It would turn around and come back to Cross Plains and turn around in the area of the cemetery and behind the previous Cross Plains Grain and Peanut business

I started collecting pictures of Cross Plains in the 20's and 30's. Most of any activities such as parades or pep rallies that happened on Main Street, in the middle of the street with Higginbotham's on one side and Citizens State Bank on the other. Many pictures, items and information were provided by people of Cross Plains.

Rusty found a City Pocket Directory dated 1927 when his crew tore down the old Higginbotham Lumber Yard. It showed Cross Plains having a population of 3,000. Wouldn't it be great if we had that many people here today and all could prosper?

Rusty and I have enjoyed working on this project together and restoring the "Icehouse". The Summer Reading Program toured the "Icehouse" and couldn't believe that a piece of ice could weight 5 to 10 pounds when they are used to getting crushed ice out of a refrigerator. Thanks to all who came to the Market at Clyde

Saturday, July 8, 10AM4PM in Chamber Building
The Chamber Building on in place with his yard banners

The Chamber Building on North First Street will be the new location for Market at Clyde beginning July 8, 10AM-4PM. Customers will be able to shop in air-conditioned comfort with their favorite vendors. This improved environment will enable vendors to be more diverse in the items that they bring to market. All items for sale at Market at Clyde are hand crafted by local artist, artisans and home cooks.

Several of the favorite jewelry artist will be showing their jewelry along beside leather workers and wood crafters, metal work and chain art. In the fabric and sewing department there will be custom embroidery, hand bags, kitchen decor and many other decorative and useful items. One of the newer vendors will be in place with his yard banners and self published children's books. In the pet department are collars, leashes, tags, and a brand new product to assist with training your dog. From the kitchen there are jams, jellies, baked goods and other snacks. Handcrafted soaps and scrubs are also a favorite of shoppers. And of course, fine art will be displayed. In conjunction with the Bicycle Parade that will be taking place on that day there will also be Face painting by one of the artist.

The curious Gainsville hangings in 1862 and the man fall to his death. He was accused of treason, but 150 men in the area. They were itary commander for Texas, for there was no evidence that the all charged with insurrection or improper use of martial law in

The roots of the Gainesville Hangings stretched back to counties along the Red River voted heavily against secession, including Cooke, Grayson, Collin, Lamar, and Red River. Once the statewide vote pulled Texas from the Union, most of the mounting, jurors unleashed a remaining Unionists across the state resigned themselves to the new political reality. Gainesville was a small community of only a few hundred people at the time, and less than 10% of county residents even owned slaves.

In April 1862, with the Confederacy facing manpower shortages and a frustrating lack of progress on the battlefield, a draft law was passed. Under the law, all able-bodied southern men between the ages of 18 and 35 were declared members of the military for three years. The only exceptions would be for teachers with 20 or more students, legislators, men who were willing to pay $500 to be exempted, and slaveholders who owned 20 or more slaves. Upset that men of means could exempt themselves from the fighting, a petition of 30 Cooke County men protested the exemption of slaveholders.

As the months progressed, more men concerned with the draft, the security of the community, and the direction of the Confederacy began meeting periodically in a peace society. The aim of the group was never specific and only sought to peacefully discuss their grievances. As one southern city after another fell in 1862, a number of North Texans believed there area would be struck next. In addition, troops who had been fighting Native American tribes nearby had been pulled back east to fight Union forces. Panic bloomed and rumors ran wild, ranging from an imminent attack by Kansas abolitionists to an uprising of Unionists.

At the end of September, after one alleged spy to these peace society meetings told officials

It was a cool morning in Gaines- that an uprising was imminent, ville on October 4, 1862. A Gen. William Hudson ordered hushed silence fell as witnesses the arrest of any man who had gazed at the man at the lonely not reported for the draft. On tree. They saw the rope tighten October 1, Col. James Bourland, a former state senator, arrested crime had even occurred. Six treason and none were slave- response. After the hanging of more were hanged that day on holders. Col. William Young, a the same charges. It was the Cooke County resident, former deserted his Confederate unit beginning of 42 such deaths U.S. Marshal, and slaveholder, and joined the Union Army in in October 1862 that would organized a citizen's court - a 12- protest. Several North Texas aunt Cooke County for years man jury of mostly slaveholders, men fighting in other theaters afterward. And it was the larg- hand-picked by Young, to hear of the Confederacy allegedly est mass hanging in American the cases and decide guilt or threatened a mass desertion or innocence on a majority vote even an assault on Gainesville instead of a unanimous vote.

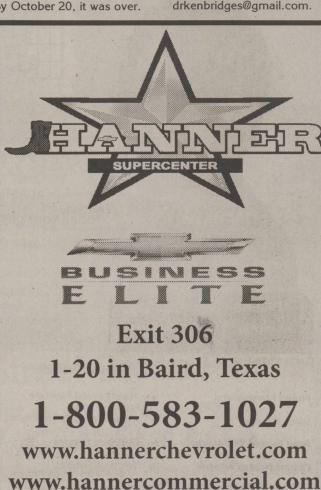

Seven men were quickly trial. A mob gathered to demand acquitted when the jury decided that only a two-thirds vote would convict. With pressures all men being hanged over the next two days.

Young was then murdered, found. When the jury reconvened, several members refused to appear, only to be replaced find guilt no matter what. Twenty-one more men were convicted on only the flimsiest of evidence. They were all hanged except for native, writer, and history protwo men shot trying to escape. By October 20, it was over.

While many Texas politicians and newspapers praised the hangings, others met the news with unease or anger. Confederate President Jefferson Davis fired Gen. Paul Hebert, the mil-Nathaniel Clark, his son, James, in retaliation.

Gainesville itself has struggled secession. In the chaotic push hanged in Gainesville over the with the memory of the events. for disunion in early 1861, the course of a week with barely a A federal effort for a historical marker was made by a Massaall be hanged, but dozens were chusetts congressman in 1916 but failed. Court records were lost in the 1920s. The State of Texas placed a marker in 1964, but the entire episode continued wave of 14 more convictions, to be downplayed by many in the area. Interest in the incident grew in the 1990s, pushed by descendants of hanging victims though the culprits were never and historian Richard McCaslin's 1994 book on the incident, Tainted Breeze. TEMPLE - There is an alarming trend on America's rangelands due to grazing and changing climate, and it's already costing producers almost $2 billion annually. according to recently published work by a Texas A&M AgriLife Research scientist in Temple.

Manure samples arrive at the Grazing Animal Nutrition Lab at the Texas A&M AgriLife Research and Extension Center in Temple. The manure samples are analyzed to show producers the nutrient quality of their forages. Thousands of samples collected over the past 20 years have shown long-term declines in nutritional value in native forages on America's grasslands. (Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service photo by Adam Russell)

Dr. Jay Angerer, an AgriLife Research rangeland ecologist at the Texas A&M AgriLife Research and Extension Center in Temple, recently copublished "Long-term declines in dietary nutritional quality for North American cattle" in Environmental Research Letters with Dr. Joseph Craine, of Jonah Ventures, Manhattan, Kansas, and Dr. Andrew Elmore, University of Maryland Center for Environmental Science, Frostburg, Maryland. Their research outlines the falling dietary value of forages on unimproved native rangelands in the U.S. over the past two decades due to nutrient losses changing climate.

Research shows protein on U.S. native grasslands in decline

The researchers suggested in the publication increased prevalence of drought, rising atmospheric carbon dioxide concentrations and sustained nutrient loss from grazing "all have the potential to reduce cattle performance by reducing the nutritional quality of Angerer said the downward trend in nutritional value on rangelands poses a measurable concern for producers and consumers in the future. The publication notes grazing livestock such as sheep, goats, cattle and buffalo, provide 15 percent of the global human protein supply.

The reduction in forage quality creates what Angerer and the other researchers labeled a "protein debt." The contributing factors have led to cattle "becoming increasingly stressed for protein over the past two decades, likely reducing cattle weight gain."

The research estimates it costs producers an additional $1.9 billion annually to meet the U.S. cattle herd's protein needs with supplemental feed. "There are financial implications for producers and eventually the consumer," he said. "Producers already have enough to worry about, and if their supplemental feed costs go up, their margin shrinks, and that may lead to a decision on whether to stay in the business or get out "

The Grazing Animal Nutrition Lab at the Temple center

associated with grazing and collected 36,000 manure samples from cattle in the U.S. that were measured for dietary quality between 1994 and 2015.

> The GAN Lab's short-term goal is to estimate a producer's forage quality, especially crude protein and total digestible nutrients, using manure samples to help them optimize supplemental feeding regimens, Angerer said. The lab receives and tests samples from various livestock producers from all over the U.S. including sheep, donkeys, cattle and wildlife such as white-tailed deer.

> Over the years, researchers have dialed in equations and parameters to determine forage quality based, on manure samples, the animal, the breed and other factors that help the lab give producers or consultants the information to provide the correct amount and type of supplemental feed throughout the year.

"If producers are looking for optimization, it's better to look at a number and not a range of numbers," Angerer said.

But the long-term look at information provided by the manure samples showed that digestible organic matter and crude protein quality were declining. Over 20 years, available crude protein decreased 1 percent which amounts to an average 10-pound loss per head without supplemental feed.

The U.S. had 86 million cattle that were not on feed, including 27 million calves, in July 2015, according to the study.

Angerer said potential losses depend on the rangeland, the animal's production stage, growth, lactation, gestation, the season, temperatures and other factors that could increase the amount of supplemental feed to make up for the crude protein

Enriching native grasslands with nitrogen is discussed in the study, but fertilizing millions of acres would be counterproductive, Angerer said, so producers face higher supplemental feed costs or the cost of establishing improved pastures for grazing.

"These aren't large differences after 20 years, but if that trend continues for 60 years it might get into something that makes a large difference for production capacity," Angerer said.

The study concluded the protein debt is likely to grow "if the drivers of the reduction of protein in plants cannot be identified and reversed, or adaptation strategies enacted" and could lead to net losses in cattle production.

In2010, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resources Conservation Service ramped up its conservation stewardship programthatprovidesincentives to producers who participate in the studies.

Callahan County Library news

Some paperbacks for kids, new to the library are: Fablehaven and Fablehaven: Rise of the Evening Star by Brandon Mull and Pillage by Obert

From the Past Callahan County Clarendon Saturday, August 12, 1882, Vol. III, No. 19

A young man E. L. House, formerly a citizen of Tom Green county, and has been through this county several times with sheep for sale, has been arrested recently, at New Mexico, for the murder of a Mexican who had charge of a flock of 5000 sheep which he was keeping on the shores. Three others, a man named Crow, Bill Johnson and a negro named Bill Lockwood are also implicated in the murder. The plan was to kill the Mexican and drive off the sheep, but the affair was so bunglingly managed that all were arrested.

Our wide awake postmasters, Phil. Schwartz & Brother, are alive to the growing trade of our young town and are putting their store in splendid shape. They have given the whole building a general overhauling by ceiling and painting it, putting up extra shelving, putting in new doors and fine display windows and putting on a new front. They have also made more improvements in the postoffice, which now is one of the best in the west. The jewelry store will soon be put it. We admire thrift and enterprise wherever we see it. We are justly proud of our postoffice. Mr. Joseph Reynolds, known as Diamond Joe Reynolds, has bought out the Parkman interest in the Claggett & James sheep ranch and sheep besides investing about $ 5,000 more in the business. Their ranch is known as the Black Jack Spring ranch and is located about nine miles north

Subscribe To The Cross Plains Review of town. Here we have a man interested in our county who represents great wealth and who is a shrewd steamboat and railroad owner. He sees that there is money in sheep, especially where nature has done so much for a country where on they graze, as she as for this. We congratulate our friends James & Claggett upon securing so good a financier-ing partner into their firm. Cap. W. J. Maltby, although living south of Bell Plain, is a strong advocate for Baird for the county seat. That big body of the Captain's holds a big heart, and he has a well balanced and active mine. He says "even if Belle Plain should again secure the county seat and should it be deemed prudent to build a $100,000 court house there that even that would not hold the county seat there; that sooner or later it must come to Baird", and now is the time to move it, when it can be done without expense to the county. There is no use to kick against the inevitable; and that no man who has the general welfare of Callahan county at heart will ever vote for the county seat to remain where it is. Quite a number of sheep have died at the Speer & Kerr ranch, on Hubbard creek within the last week. Mr. Speer informed us that he could not tell what the cause was, that he had made an examination of those which died but he failed to find any direct cause. Mr. S. says that they died in large numbers for several days but that the mortality has ceased and that the sheep are doing very well now, and he thinks that no more will die. Mr. Isaac Shaw, and old and successful sheep raiser informs us that he has lost sheep in the same way several years ago and he thinks it is caused by a poison weed which is generally found on the creek bottoms. We hope no more death will occur.

Summer Tanager

Many species of birds that can be found in Texas are intensely colored with vivid reds, blues, and greens. The majority of these species, such as the Northern Cardinal, are familiar to most folks, but there is a smaller species that resides in this great state during the summer that actually rivals the Cardinal in brilliancy, and that variety is the Summer Tanager.

The Summer Tanager (Piranga rubra) is an enchanting avian species that is often difficult to detect as it maneuvers among the treetops. During the colder seasons of late fall, winter, and early spring, it takes up residence in the warmer climates of southern Mexico southward as far as middle South America. As temperatures begin warming here in Texas, it migrates its way back north for the summer time. Interestingly enough, certain populations of this Tanager will return to its summer residence via land while others are known to take on the task of flying nonstop over the Gulf of Mexico. During the next several months, it can be observed in the appropriate habitats in Texas, save for the Panhandle. The habitats that it prefers are areas with dense cover from pine, juniper, and/ or shinnery oak trees. Beyond the borders of this state, it can be seen throughout most of the southeastern US westward to the southeastern corner of Arizona.

The Summer Tanager is a small, but chunky songbird, with a total length, as well as a wingspan, of just under 7 inches. Being a member of the Cardinal family, this bird exhibits a beautiful array of elegant color. Adult males are brilliantly adorned with a vivid red coloration from head to tail. In fact, it is the only North American bird to be entirely red in coloration. Adult females, as well as juvenile males, lack the red coloration and are bright vellow on the underparts and dull green on the wings and head. As males mature, they will be yellow-green with red patches. The bill is thick, light colored and blunt.

Aside from being easy on the eyes, Summer Tanagers are also

beneficial to humans due to their primarily invertebrate diet. This species is well equipped to chase, and capture, insects that are in mid-flight. These prey items include grasshoppers, cicadas, and butterflies. Bees and wasps are also pursued and consumed on a regular basis, and this species has adapted to have no fear of these stinging insects. Some raid wasp nests to feed on the soft-bodied larvae while others have been known to occupy areas near captive beehives in order to feed on worker bees. This high-protein diet is supplemented occasionally with berries and other small fruits.

specimens have been known to about another two weeks.

Females are the primary nest-builders, oftentimes under the supervision of a calling male. The nest is typically a shallow cup built in dense forested areas up to 35 feet above ground and is generally constructed out of grass, moss, leaves and even spiderwebs. Usually only one brood per year is produced, and the 3 to 5 blue-green eggs are incubated solely by the female for just over two weeks. After hatching, the young are fed by both parents as they prepare to leave the nest in

Despite its vivid coloration, this species can be difficult to detect. Watch for it as it darts in open areas between dense cover pursuing its prey in flight.

Senator Cruz: 'Bringing freedom to Cuba is a goal worth pursuing'

HOUSTON, Texas - Today, U.S. Sen. Ted Cruz (R-Texas) released the following statement regarding President Trump's Cuba policy announcement:

"Today's Cuba actions by the Trump administration are an important step in the right direction," Sen. Cruz said. "These are common sense measures I have supported in the past, particularly authoring legislation with Sen. Rubio to prohibit financial transactions with Cuba's military-controlled entities. President Obama's normalization policy with Communist Cuba has fundamentally undermined U.S. interests and strengthened the Castros' control over the island. As a result, American dollars are directly funneled to the Cuban military which sustains the regime's brutal activities. There has been no corresponding political liberation with the ease of travel and trade restrictions, only increased oppression,

imprisonments, and torture. "I commend President Trump for a positive step toward cutting off U.S. funds from going to the Cuban military. This is not an abstract issue to me. It is a personal one. My father and my aunt both were imprisoned and tortured in Cuba - one by Batista, one by Castro. They've seen firsthand the oppression that the Cuban government produces and they both fled to Texas seeking freedom.

"America should not be subsidizing the machinery of this communist government which has been exporting terror throughout Latin America for decades. Instead, we should be using American policy to encourage genuine democratic reforms and leadership in Cuba. I look forward to working with my colleagues and the administration to protect and enhance freedom for the Cuban people."
