DeShazo Celebrates Nation's Birthday

Friday, September 17 was a big day for students at Mary DeShazo Elementary School. They celebrated the nation's 206th anniversary of signing of the U.S. Constitution. The ceremony included the presentation of a certificate of appreciation from Jennifer B. Crabtree from U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm's office.

Joining the third, fourth and fifth grade students for a ceremony held at 1 p.m. in the school gym were:

principal Barbara Finney; Superintendent of Schools Bill Moore; and Mayor Robert Montgomery.

Ms. Crabtree, director of Gramm's office in Lubbock, delivered remarks regarding the significance of Constitution Week, which is observed Sept. 17-23.

"On September 17, 1787, thirty-nine delegates participating in the Constitution Convention in Philadelphia signed a document which established the American system of government and identified its powers. In so doing our founding provided a free and independent people a national framework of self-rule unparalleled in history; It was the dawning of a new era," Gramm said.

The senator said, "The United States Constitution has served as the foundation on which generations of freedom-loving people have built their hopes and dreams. It has furnished ordinary people, like you and me, an abundance of individual liberty and opportunity thus enabling us to accomplish extraordinary feats."

"It should never be forgotten that the effectiveness of America democracy has always depended upon an informed and involved citizenry. Proper stewardship of responsibilities which accompany American citizenship is essential if we are to preserve democracy and secure America's future," Gramm said.

The structure of the Constitution has not been changed since it was first written. Amendments have been added to meet changing situations, but the basic document has proven flexible enough to survive the many changes since 1787.

"The Constitution guarantees the freedom and rights of all people living in the United States, even if they are not citizens of this country. Everyone has the rights of freedom of religion and speech as well as other rights listed in the Constitution. The Constitution has three main principals, which are: inherent rights, or rights that anyone living in America has; government by the people, and; separation of powers, giving each branch of government different powers.

"These principles are what has enabled the government to work so well in the United States. Everyone's rights are protected if the citizens believe the government needs to be changed, they can

Local Youth National Merit Scholarship Finalist

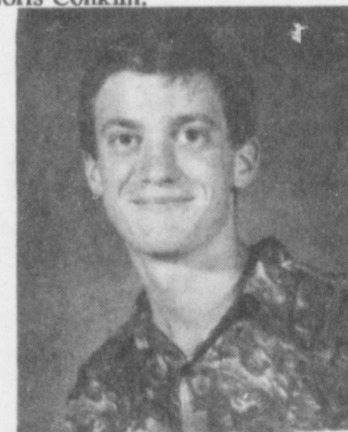

Mason Conklin, a senior at Muleshoe High School, has been designated as a National Merit Scholarship Finalist.

In each annual National Merit Scholarship Program, approximately 50,000 academically able secondary school students are honored, but only about 15,000 of them are named Semifinalists.

Students who qualify as Semifinalists are the only program participants who have an opportunity to advance to Finalist standing and compete for approximately 6,500 Merit Scholarships.

Conklin, along with other high school juniors across the nation, took the PSAT (Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test) in October of 1992. His score on the PSAT will allow him to continue in the competition for more than $25 million dollars in scholarships that will be awarded in 1994.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Norris Conklin.

Fighting Crime Is Our Business Too

by Dan Morales, Texas Attorney General

Crime is a concern for every Texan. Read your local newspaper and watch your local television news. Drive-by shootings are on the increase. Youth gangs are wreaking havoc on our cities. And the drug trade continues to flourish across our border.

The numbers are staggering. In 1992, a violent crime occurred in Texas every 3 1/2 minutes; a murder every 4 hours and a burglary every 2 minutes.

I find these statistics alarming and unacceptable. The street cop has never been busier. Prosecutors and the courts are overwhelmed. Our jails are bursting at the seams.

That is why the recent session of the Texas Legislature saw fit to give the Attorney General an even greater role in criminal law enforcement.

In the past, the primary function of the Office of the Attorney General has been to handle civil matters, such as child support enforcement and consumer protection. However, with our new authority, we are now—more than ever before, engaged in the fight against crime.

Under the legislation that took effect on Sept. 1, the Office of the Attorney General now can:

- Enforce money laundering laws.
- The Office of the Attorney General now has special jurisdiction in the enforcement of money laundering laws. By taking their illicit profits, laundering them into legitimate investments, drug traffickers get rich off the misery of those who are poisoned by drug use. Money laundering feeds the drug trade and provides an incentive for others to sell drugs. Texas, under a special program with the U.S. Department of Treasury, now has access to banking records involving large-scale transactions. We now have the ability to hit the kingpins where it hurts the most—the wallet.
- Shut down crack houses, and prostitution and gambling rings. We can now give assistance to law enforcement authorities by closing the residences or businesses where prostitution, gambling and narcotics trafficking take place.
- Eliminate frivolous and duplicate appeals by death row inmates. The death penalty is the law of the land in Texas. But too often, defense lawyers manipulate the appeals process so that convicted murderers remain on death row for more than a decade before justice is carried out. That's an abuse of our justice system, and a slap in the face of the victims' families.

Give crime victims more financial assistance. Give Crime Victims Compensation Fund, which is administered by the Attorney General, received a boost in funding, not at the expense of the taxpayer, but from the pocket of the criminal.

Through increased court costs and fees paid by criminals, more victims will receive compensation for the pain and suffering they incur at the hands of criminals. In state fiscal year 1993, which ended Aug. 31, the fund paid out more than $27 million in compensation money.

Lawmakers at the request of the Attorney General, also gave state judges more power to order restitution to crime victims. At each sentencing, a judge must either order restitution or give a written explanation why a particular defendant cannot pay it. Before, judges awarded restitution only at their discretion.

Also, state prisoners can now be ordered to deposit their finances into an inmate trust fund, which can be used to pay for child support, victim restitution, fines and court costs.

Convict environmental polluters. Polluting our valuable natural resources will no longer just cause a financial drain on violators. It could land them in jail. Our office has been given the authority to prosecute environmental criminals, and we intend to exercise that right.

In addition to pushing tough criminal legislation, we've done some internal reorganizing of our own to give crime-fighting a higher priority in our office.

Led by Deputy Attorney General Drew Durham, a former West Texas prosecutor, our increased authority and new initiatives take on a higher priority. Durham will oversee efforts to do such things as prosecute money launderers and environmental polluters; assist local law enforcement in highly technical criminal cases; and collect and provide data on trends in juvenile crime.

Our expanding role in the fight against crime does not mean we will abandon our bread and butter duties of enforcing child support payments and protecting consumer rights. Dead-beat dads and financial scam artists should not celebrate. We will continue to pursue them with unwavering diligence.

With an expanded role in law enforcement, the Office of the Attorney General will become a more active warrior in the never-ending battle against crime.

Ask The Vet

Dear Dr. Paul, My spayed male cat always gets into several cat fights this time of year and I'm never sure how to treat the wounds—which tend to be superficial—but I don't want to run him to the vet every time, either. I would appreciate your advice.

I understand the dilemma you face with your cat and the wounds he sustains from fighting. I wish it was a simple matter to tell you how to treat the wounds and not worry about taking your cat to the veterinarian. Sometimes, wounds that appear to be very mild can turn out to be a serious health problem. When your cat does receive a "mild wound," use good first-aid practices as you would for yourself for a mild cut or abrasion. Wash the wound with soap and water and apply a disinfectant repeatedly for a day or two. Meanwhile, observe your cat carefully for signs of infection such as lethargy or depression, not eating or puss oozing from the wound. If any of these symptoms appear, or if your cat sustains severe injuries, take him to your veterinarian right away.

COMPETITORS--Two young cattle producers from Lazbuddie competed recently in the 1993 TCFA Junior Fed-Beef Challenge, held at the Amarillo Livestock Auction and West Texas A&M University. They are (left to right) Brice Redwine and Jarah Redwine. Brice took fourth place in the live evaluation contest. Jarah took home a $1,000 scholarship for finishing the contest as First Runner Up. In addition, she took second place on the written exam and third place in the oral interviews. Sponsored by the Texas Cattle Feeders Association (TCFA), the Junior Fed-Beef Challenge allows students in 4-H or FFA to gain practical experience in the commercial cattle feeding industry by feeding a pen of three steers. Colorado To Host Miami Saturday

One of the biggest games of the week shapes up as one of the most unpredictable, because it doesn't have much recent history. When Miami visits Colorado, the Hurricanes and Buffaloes will be meeting for the first time in 15 years. Colorado has won five of the six games they've played, including the most recent, in 1978, 17-7. Even though Colorado is coming off a tough game at Stanford, we like the Buffaloes by two points.

Three longstanding series highlight the weekend. In Raleigh, N.C., the North Carolina Tar Heels take on the North Carolina Wolfpack, the 83rd game in a 99-year-old rivalry. UNC leads the series 52-24-6, but N.C. State has won the last five in a row. Last year's game in Chapel Hill couldn't have been closer: It was tied at the end of each quarter and again late in the game, until, with 1:02 left, the Wolfpack's Greg Manior ran for a two-yard TD and a 27-20 win. This one may be just as close, but we think N.C. State will run its streak over UNC to six.

In the Southeastern Conference, Georgia is on the road against Mississippi. Last Year Georgia, which leads this 53-year-old series 21-9-1, won easily at home, 37-11. Over the past 10 years the Bulldogs are 8-2 against Mississippi, which last won in 1990, but this weekend we're picking the Rebels.

New Mexico and New Mexico State also have playing football since 1894—they met six times before New Mexico became a state in 1912. This year they face off for the 84th time, with the UNM Lobos a 13-point favorite. In '92 N.M. State won a wild game 42-39 and went on to finish 6-5, its first winning season since 1978. For its part, UNM hasn't had a winning season since '82, though the team has had some winning moments. In their '92 season opener, at home against powerhouse Brigham Young, the Lobos missed a 41-yard field goal with a minute left and lost 34-31, but the crowd gave them a standing ovation just the same.

Sleep Patterns In Infants

There are significant differences between the sleep patterns of breast-fed and formula-fed infants.

Studies conducted at the USDA's Children's Nutrition Research Center at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston found that 4 month old breast fed infants spent more sleep time in a "quiet" cycle called NREM (non-rapid eye movement) than did formula fed infants.

Formula fed infants spent more time in the REM (rapid eye movement) cycle.

"This is another piece of the puzzle that appears to support increasing evidence that the way a baby is fed may impact growth and development," said Dr. Nancy Butte of the CNRC.

Dear Students,

On September 17, 1787, thirty-nine delegates participating in the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia signed a document which established the American system of government and identified its powers. In so doing, our founding fathers provided a free and independent people a national framework of self-rule unparalleled in history; It was the dawning of a new era.

The United States Constitution has served as the foundation on which generations of freedom-loving people have built their hopes and dreams. It has furnished ordinary people, like you and me, an abundance of individual liberty and opportunity thus enabling us to accomplish extraordinary feats.

It should never be forgotten that the effectiveness of American democracy has always depended upon an informed and involved citizenry. Proper stewardship of responsibilities which accompany American citizenship is essential if we are to preserve democracy and secure America's future.

You represent America's next generation of leadership. It is my hope that you will learn to love and appreciate the impact of the constitution on our way of life. I salute your participation in

Muleshoe Native Receives High Honor

A former Muleshoe resident, Dr. Carol D. Haire, was the recipient of Taylor County's highest honor for women, the Pathfinder Award, in recent ceremonies at Abilene's historic Paramount Theatre. The Pathfinder Awards honor women who have been first in their respective fields of endeavor and have made significant contributions to society.

Dr. Haire received the Pathfinder award in the field of Health. She is licensed and nationally certified as a speech-language pathologist, registered as a professional educational diagnostician, licensed as a professional counselor, and licensed as a marriage and family therapist, in addition to holding certification in eight categories from the Texas Education Agency. "As far as we know, nobody has ever done that before," said a representative of the Texas Department of Health speaking, of Dr. Haire's particular combination of credentials.

Dr. Haire has lived in Abilene since 1977. She is Professor and Director of Speech-Language Pathology at Hardin-Simmons University. Dr. Haire was selected as the Outstanding Young Woman of Abilene in 1983.

In 1986, Dr. Haire built and opened a clinical facility where she and her staff provide diagnostic and treatment services for children and adults with speech and language disorders; learning problems such as dyslexia, dysgraphia, dyscalculia, and dysphasia; attention-deficit disorders and hyperactivity; behavior problems; and self-esteem problems. Testing and counseling services for college and career planning are also provided at the clinic.

In recognizing Dr. Haire for her trailblazing approach to her career, it was noted that she has faced and continues to face the challenges associated with having systemic lupus erythematosus.

In accepting the prestigious award, Dr. Haire said "My life has been influenced by wise and caring parents; a creative and supportive sister who was willing to join me in my venture; the countless students, clients, and their families whose paths have crossed mine; and the frontier spirit of the Abilene community.

Among special guests at the awards ceremony and the reception which followed at Abilene's Center for Contemporary Arts were Dr. Haire's mother, Mrs. Vera Haire of Abilene, and the honoree's sisters, Barbara G. Haire of Abilene and Sue Haire Lombardi of LaPorte. Barbara Haire served as presenter for Dr. Haire's award at the Hollywood-style ceremony.

Dr. Haire, the daughter of Mrs. Vera Haire, formerly of Muleshoe, and the late Lloyd F. Haire, grew up on her parents' farm west of Muleshoe and graduated from Muleshoe High School in 1967.

Local Advisory Board Schedules Blood Drive

The Muleshoe Blood Advisory Board will sponsor a blood drive from 1 to 7 p.m. Tuesday, October 5, at the Muleshoe State Bank community room.

This drive will give regular donors an additional chance to donate this year. For more information contact Glenda Powell at 272-5676.

When human blood transfusions were first performed in the 1800's, the donor and the recipient were side by side. There was no typing or testing of the blood.

Modern innovations in blood transfusion therapy have changed all that, said Jana Belew, community relations representative of United Blood Services of Lubbock.

Today, blood plays a vital role in the total health care picture of this community. Blood for human transfusions can come from only one source: healthy volunteer donors who give of themselves. No manufactured product can accomplish the many complicated and wonderful tasks that blood carries out. "Blood is essential to life--it is life itself to a patient in need," Ms. Belew said.

Currently, less than five percent of the U.S. population donates blood to supply the 12 million units needed each year. Meanwhile, the demand is rapidly increasing due to modern surgical techniques and new therapeutic uses for blood. Additional donors are needed to make up the difference.

Extension Kicks Off Environmental Volunteer Program

A program that enables volunteers to return to their communities and train others in environmentally responsible waste management will begin in October when an expected 200 participants gather at the Texas 4-H Camp in Brownwood.

The EnviroSmart Master Volunteer program begins with Trash Camp '93.

"The United States produces 50 percent of the world's waste but has only 5 percent of the world's population," said Dr. Susan Quiring, housing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "Texans throw away enough trash every two weeks to fill the Astrodome."

Education can be powerful tool for changing attitudes and habits, and that's where the EnviroSmart program comes in, she said. "We've all got to become more aware of ways to reduce the solid waste that is clogging our landfills."

To earn the Master Volunteer title, volunteers must complete 25 hours of training and 50 hours of volunteer community service. The program is patterned after the successful Master Gardner volunteer program that has been active around the country for several decades.

Campers will return to their counties with 15 hours of training in such areas as solid and hazardous waste management, recycling, source reduction and composting. The other 10 hours of training will come at the county level. Quiring hopes that the volunteer program within a year will become active in at least 20 counties and reach at least 50,000 people with essential information on ways to reduce the amount of household waste going to landfills.

Trash Camp '93 begins with registration at 11 a.m. on Oct. 15 and closes at 2 p.m. on Oct. 17. Registration is open to all county Extension agents, city and county officials, 4-H adult and junior leaders, teachers, recycling coordinators, and other volunteers. Continuing education credits can be earned at the camp.

Registration is $80 by Sept. 17, which includes all meals, dorm-style lodging for two nights, and all materials. Late registration is $120. No registrations will be taken after Oct. 6.

Information and registration forms are available from county Extension agents, or from Quiring at telephone (409) 845-1332 or at 213 Special Services Bldg., College Station, TX 77843-2251.

'High Risk' Persons Need Influenza Vaccine

The Texas Department of Health (TDH) has warned that anyone who may be at increased risk of complications of influenza should be immunized before the 1993-94 flu season.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) each year predicts which strains of influenza pose the greatest public health danger. The vaccine CDC has recommended for the 1993-94 season is designed to combat the A/Beijing, B/Panama and A/Texas (first isolated in Houston in 1991) strains of the disease.

Since flu vaccines are subject to yearly change, and effectiveness of the shots declines with time, annual doses of the recommended vaccines are necessary for people most at risk.

People most at risk of severe or fatal complications of the disease are those 65 or older, anyone with chronic respiratory or heart problems and children weakened by disease.

"Occurring most often from December through April, influenza kills about 20,000 in the U.S. every year--most of them in high-risk categories," Robert D. Crider Jr., director of TDH's Immunization Division, said. Crider said that the elderly are among the hardest hit by influenza and its complications.

"Fewer than 30 percent of Americans in high-risk groups heed our annual warnings to seek influenza vaccinations," he added. "We know that one reason some older people fail to be vaccinated is because of an unfounded fear that the vaccine can actually cause influenza. The truth is that a vaccinated person may still contract some strain of influenza, but not from the vaccine. If they do become ill, the vaccine usually helps lessen the severity of the case."

The categories of people who are most likely to develop complications from influenza are:

- *Persons 65 years old and older.
- *Adults and children with chronic heart or lung disorders, including children with asthma.
- *People under medical care for chronic metabolic diseases, kidney or blood problems or weakened immune systems.
- *Children (18 and younger) who already are receiving long-term aspirin therapy, which can place them at risk of developing Reye syndrome after influenza.

"We strongly recommend influenza vaccinations for all people in high-risk groups, especially if they are international travelers or if they are pregnant," Crider advised. "People infected with the human immunodeficiency virus (the virus which causes AIDS) also may be at increased risk for flu complications."

In addition, physicians, nurses and other health professionals should be immunized against influenza to avoid spreading the disease to their patients, according to recommendations from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

"TDH and the American Lung Association already have reminded health professionals and others in close contact with high-risk people to be immunized, both for their own protection as well as for others," Crider said.

"We advise physicians to offer vaccine to their patients during routine clinic visits, beginning in September and throughout the influenza season--typically December through April," he said.

In addition, residents and employees of nursing homes and other facilities treating chronically ill patients should be immunized.

Crider explained that all unimmunized residents of chronic-care facilities, such as nursing homes, should be immunized during October and November.

Selecting The Right Word Processor

(NAPS)—Check the ads for best value. Not only clothing and books, but even software goes on sale. That's right. High technology has made an impact in the classroom. As the software market has matured, programs have become easier to use and are packed with enough power and functions so students won't outgrow them even as they leave school and enter the workforce.

Be sure the word processor you select provides clear and simple instructions.

An excellent example of this is Lotus Development Corporation's Ami Pro for Windows word processor. The program runs on Personal Computers (PCs) that use Windows, one of the most popular operating environments today. Not only can the application be helpful to high school students, it can advance them into higher education and later, the job market.

If you're in the market for a word processor, it pays not only to get the right price but to check on whether the program provides basic functions that are easy to learn and offer strong, higher level functions you can master as you become more expert.

Getting Started

New users should look for elements that include an on-line tutorial to get started quickly and context-sensitive help information for assistance in handling problems. High school users will quickly appreciate the benefits of a thesaurus and a spell checker.

As the student moves into the workplace, experience with widely used programs such as Ami Pro, can mean increased marketability. Ami Pro is also a key component in Lotus' SmartSuite, a group of five integrated Windows applications. In addition to Ami Pro, the SmartSuite products include Lotus 1-2-3 spreadsheet, Freelance graphics, ccMail, and Lotus Organizer, a personal calendar. Fortunately, Lotus desktop applications are ubiquitous in small and large businesses.

As high school students progress, they often want to add interesting cover sheets to book reports and other written projects. One helpful tool is style sheets, which are pre-developed formats for commonly used documents such as memos, cover
