Hospitals Urge Citizen Participation In Health Reform Debate

Hospitals Urge Citizen Participation In Health Reform Debate by Sister Kathleen Coughlin, FACHE

President Bill Clinton's bold initiative to reform America's health care delivery system is the catalyst needed to focus the nation's attention on an issue which affects every man, woman, and child.

The Texas Hospital Association believes that the fundamental element of health care reform is that everyone must be guaranteed access to a package of basic health services, with an emphasis on prevention and primary care. By encouraging collaboration, expensive duplication of services and technology can be eliminated. Scarce resources can be used more effectively.

Texas faces unique challenges with its large rural population and undocumented immigrant residents. Within a federally-determined structure, flexibility is needed to allow state legislatures to address the varying needs of their populations. Will all Texans have a place to use the health security care promised by the President's reform proposal?

Health care delivery is a complex subject. Its financing is intricate and complicated; it's not easily understood. However, every American must make the time and the effort to understand the fundamentals because the public policies enacted by Congress will affect every citizen.

The bottom line of all health reform proposals is the financing mechanism. The proposed $238 billion cut in Medicare and Medicaid proposed by President Clinton will jeopardize access to care, particularly in rural and inner-city areas, and put the stability of the entire system in peril.

Seniors: Health Care Reform Plan Needs To Close Gaps In Current System

Older Texans, like most Americans, appear to have adopted a wait-and-see attitude about the practicality and affordability of President Bill Clinton's health care reform proposals. They are clear, however, in their approval of the president's emphasis on assuring access to prescription medications and long-term care.

These two health care concerns have been identified as major unmet needs among the elderly by the Texas Department on Aging (TDOA), based on calls to its aging services hotline and those of its affiliated area agencies on aging.

"The hardest thing we have to do is tell seniors or their families there's just no help anywhere," said TDOA information and referral coordinator Barbara Allen. "But that's sometimes the case for people whose incomes are above the limit for Medicaid prescription drug help but too low to pay for all the medicine they need."

Department on Aging Executive Director Mary Sapp also noted a Catch-22 situation in the way our current system treats seniors who need long-term care services. "With few exceptions Texas seniors can only get long-term care paid for if their incomes and assets are low enough to qualify them for Medicaid nursing home coverage."

"Yet by failing to cover in-home services for people who don't need full institutional care, we drive a lot of mildly impaired low-income people into nursing homes. It's the only place they can get the care-and prescription drug coverage they desperately need. That unnecessary level of care comes out of all our pockets.

"We feel it's better from both the fiscal and humanistic standpoints to let people stay in their own homes as long as possible and receive only the services they need, as opposed to getting a full array of more expensive nursing home services whether they need them or not."

President Clinton has said he wants the reformed system to include prescription drug coverage, through Medicare Part B, by 1996. He proposes to phase in the long-term care component, including some in-home services, until full coverage is achieved by the year 2000.

Sapp said her agency's longtime support of community based services for the elderly is reflected in its Options for Independent Living care management program. "Options is a state-funded program in which trained personnel help seniors with temporary, limited disabilities by arranging customized packages of services that help them maintain the greatest possible level of independence while recovering at home."

Because of limited funding, Options is only available in about half of TDOA's 28 service regions. However, Sapp said she hoped it, as well as other independence-promoting services like transportation, information and referral, benefits counseling and nursing home ombudsman programs could be expanded in the future.

not some abstract, rigid formula designed to reduce the deficit.

Texas hospitals have pledged to work with the President and Congress, and the Texas Legislature, to rebuild America's health care system. The President's reform plan and many others must be considered thoughtfully. All voices need to be heard, and each issue of concern must be addressed.

Meal program participants at the Madella Hilliard Neighborhood Center, a senior center in the small Central Texas city of Georgetown, were generally familiar with the details of Clinton's plan, and liked what they'd heard so far.

Mary Burson, 81, approved of Clinton's emphasis on universal coverage that can't be taken away. "You can pay, pay, pay on your private insurance for years, but just get a little behind and you lose all your coverage. It's a business decision, pure and simple. As far as nursing home insurance goes, I doubt anyone would even sell me a policy."

Burson, who pays $100 a month for prescription drugs, and whose husband has been in a nursing home for four-and-a-half years, said she tends to believe the president's claim that waste and inefficiency can be reduced enough to partially finance these new coverages. "My husband gets good care," Burson said, "but you have no idea how much time those nurses have to spend doing paperwork when they'd probably rather be helping patients instead. I'm sure it would cost less to be in a nursing home if there was less bureaucracy."

Taxes on cigarettes have been proposed as ways to generate additional revenue for the reform package. This idea concerned longtime smoker Victor Burrier, 70, who quickly added, "I'm willing to pay a little more for cigarettes, but I do think we ought to spread it (the tax burden) around so everybody pays their fair share. I could live with that."

Save 50 percent, 10-20 percent off, $100 off... The question is off what? One of the areas of the BBB Code of Advertising we review often is savings claim advertising.

This is advertising that promotes a percentage off or a price reduction for a product or service. When these types of ads are used, a "reference price" needs to be included that shows what the savings is coming off of. Customers should be aware that most companies intend for the reduction to be off of their regular prices, but simply fail to say it. If you see an ad advertising a price savings, make sure there is a reference price. If there is not, please contact your Better Business Bureau at 763-0459 and we will check it out for you. As always, consumers should do some comparative shopping as to price and quality before making a purchase decision.

Washington State To Face UCLA Saturday

This weekend the Ohio State Buckeyes will take the field at Wisconsin's Camp Randall Stadium itching for revenge after last year's shocking 20-16 loss to the Badgers on the same field. At the time Ohio State was ranked 12th in the country and was heavily favored to win its fifth straight game over Wisconsin, but the Badgers had other ideas. With a pair of touchdowns by running back Brent Moss (who's one of the nation's top rushers this year) and 18-for-30 passing by QB Darrell Bevell, Wisconsin chalked up its first win over a nationally ranked team since 1985. This year the Badgers have proved themselves capable of beating a few more, but they stumbled badly against Minnesota two weeks ago. The Buckeyes, who lead this Big Ten series 45-13-4, should win by eight points.

The University of Louisville has made a Wisconsin-like turn-around since last season, when the Cardinals finished 5-6. This year, loaded with seniors who have played together for three years, Louisville has lost only to West Virginia. (More about the Mountaineers in two weeks) In Knoxville, Tenn., on Saturday, the Cardinals take on the Tennessee Volunteers, against whom they're 0-4. In '91, the last time they met, Tennessee won 28-11, and though this one should be closer, the Vols should deal Louisville its second loss. While Cardinal QB Jeff Brohm will come out throwing, Tennessee has a great ground game, and the Louisville defense is weakest against the rush. In one three-game stretch, against Pittsburgh, West Virginia and Southern Mississippi, the Cardinals gave up 633 yards on the ground. Tennessee by nine.

In the West, UCLA, one of the hottest teams in the country, faces Washington State on the road. The Bruins are looking to square things after the Cougars' 30-17 win last year, and they face no small challenge. Even after Washington State quarterback Mike Pattinson broke his collarbone three weeks ago in the first quarter of the California game, the Cougars went on to pummel the Bears 34-7. But Cal was cooling off, and UCLA still appears to be heating up. The Bruins are the six-point favorites.

Artichokes--Easy To Prepare, Fun To Eat, And Delicious!

Artichokes are one of the oldest foods known to man. They were first cultivated for food in the Mediterranean basin thousands of years ago. Early plantings were made in the U.S. by French settlers in Louisiana and by the Spanish in the mid-coastal areas of California.

Most of today's artichokes come from the coastal areas of California, where they hold the title of "The Official Vegetable of Monterey County."

SELECTION: California artichokes are available in most markets all year, with the peak season in the spring--March, April and May. In spring and winter, look for artichokes that are compact, firm, and heavy for their size; summer and fall artichokes tend to be flared and conical in shape. Fall and winter artichokes may be touched by frost--winter-kissed with a whitish blistered appearance--and show light bronze to brown on the outer leaves. These are often considered to be premier artichokes--tender and tasty.

Artichokes come in sizes ranging from baby to jumbo and all are mature when picked.

STORAGE: Sprinkle artichokes with water, package in an airtight plastic bag and refrigerate. Cooked artichokes should be cooled completely and refrigerated, covered. Cooked or raw artichokes will keep up to a week in the refrigerator.

These and other tips concerning selection and cooking of artichokes will be demonstrated by Patty Boman, representative of the California Artichoke Advisory Board. Boman will appear on "Creative Living" on Tuesday, November 9th at 12:00 noon. The program repeats on Saturday, November 13th at 2:00 p.m. Basic

Artichokes With Garlic Dip

- 1 cup plain lowfat yogurt
- 1 Tbsp. each chopped parsley and chives
- 2 teaspoons chili sauce
- 1/2 to 3/4 teaspoon garlic salt
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 4 medium artichokes, prepared and cooked

Combine all ingredients except artichokes; blend well. Refrigerate until serving. Serve with cooked artichokes. Makes 4 servings.

cooking methods will be presented on Tuesday, November 16th at 9:30 p.m. and repeated on Thursday, November 18th at 12:00 noon.

COOKING: To boil artichokes, stand prepared artichoke in deep saucepan or pot with 3 inches boiling water. Cover and boil gently 25-40 minutes, depending on size, or until petal near center pulls out easily. Stand artichoke upside down to drain. To steam, place prepared artichoke on rack above boiling water. Cover and steam 25-40 minutes, depending on size, or until petal near center pulls out easily.

Artichokes can also be microwaved. Place prepared artichokes in deep microwave-safe cup or bowl. Add water, cover and microcook at HIGH (100%) for time indicated. Give dish a quarter-turn halfway through cooking time. Let stand 5 minutes. When done, petal near center will pull out easily.

EATING TIPS: Artichokes may be served hot or cold. To eat, pull off outer petals, one at a time. Dip base of petal into sauce or melted butter, pull through teeth to remove soft, pulpy portion of petal. Discard remaining petal. Continue until petals have been removed. Spoon out fuzzy center at base; discard. The bottom, or heart, of the artichoke is entirely edible. Cut into small pieces and dip into sauce.

CCC Offers Free Career Workshops

A job career is usually one of the most important elements in a person's life. Are you where you want to be in your chosen career or would you like to be in a different field? If you would like to improve your present skills or retrain for a new profession, attend the Career Week Workshops, November 8-11, at Clovis Community College. Each workshop will be offered from 5-6:30 p.m. in room 512 at the campus. The workshops are free of charge and open to the public. Lupe Rosales, coordinator of career services at CCC, will lead the workshops and provide information on a variety of job-related topics.

"Professional Resume Writing" will be held Monday, Nov. 8. Rosales will review the different types of resumes and discuss their content, quality, appearance, and structure. Workshop participants are invited to bring resumes for evaluation.

"Body Language" is scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 9. This workshop is designed to prepare job seekers for the interview by focusing on non-verbal communication. Rosales says it is important for individuals to be aware of what their posture, gestures, and facial expressions "say" to the interviewer.

Look at an interview from the interviewer's point of view. The "Interviewer's Perspective on Interviewing" will be held on Wednesday, November 10. Rosales will share tips on how an interviewer evaluates and assesses a potential candidate's qualifications.

The final workshop, "Dressing for Interview Success", will be held

Thurs., Nov. 11. How an individual dresses can have an impact on the interviewer's evaluation. Slides will be used to demonstrate appropriate apparel for different types of jobs. Knowing how to dress correctly can have an impact on an individual's professional growth and development.

For additional information, contact Rosales or Phyllis Teague in the CCC Career Services Office, room 146, or by calling 769-4088.

Healthy Eating

By Harold Ligon, M.D.

Eggs are very high in cholesterol content. One egg contains as much cholesterol as many people should consume in a day.

All cholesterol in the egg is in the yoke--the white is innocent.

It's wise, therefore, if you are a lover of eggs to limit intake, and to eat only the whites if possible. Of course people have varying responses to lowered egg intake. Lowering consumption of eggs alone is not the complete answer to diet reform.

Cordless telephone sales explosion predicted.

Case Not Closed

A recent book claimed the Kennedy assassination case was closed—that the official finding that a lone gunman shot and killed President John F. Kennedy is the obviously correct one.

There has been so much transparent money-making by those advancing sensational and unproven claims about conspiracy, etc. that one almost wishes the case was indeed closed.

But unfortunately the case isn't closed. There are too many reputable witnesses and participants in the tragic events of November 1963 who raise serious, disturbing questions. A recent poll showed that a large majority of Americans feel there is yet much to learn.

The majority also feels all the facts about Marilyn Monroe's death are not yet known. For clever money-makers and sensationalists, opportunity still, unfortunately, beckons.

MOST COMICAL—Ashley Scolley took first place in the Most Comical Division of the Halloween Costume Contest Saturday afternoon, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture. She received a gift certificate. (Journal Photo)

Women Encouraged To Obtain Mammograms

While the mammogram is the "gold standard" for early breast cancer detection, it may not detect all the cancers, said a radiologist at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

"Just as gold is not pure, mammograms are not 100 percent diagnostic," said Dr. Alfred Watson, Jr., chief of mammography at Baylor.

There are a small percentage of cancers that, because of the way they develop, are more difficult to detect with a mammogram or x-ray of the breast tissue.

"If a lump or mass can be felt, follow up on it, even if the approach to early breast cancer detection--annual examinations by a physician, monthly breast self-examination, and an initial, or baseline, mammogram by the age of 40 followed by annual or biennial mammograms.

The American Cancer Society recommends that women ages 40 to 49 have a mammogram every one to two years and that women age 50 and over have a mammogram each year.

Watson encourages women in the 40-49 age group to opt for annual mammograms.

"At this age, the breasts are more dense with active glandular tissue," he said. "Smaller, early breast cancers can be obscured by overlying tissue and become difficult to find."

Cancer occurring before menopause often grows faster, Watson says, which is another good reason for annual mammograms.

Women with a history of breast cancer in an immediate relative, such as a mother or sister, are at greater risk. Women encourages these women to obtain their baseline mammograms between the ages of 30 and 35.

"The baseline mammogram begins the breast cancer surveillance," Watson said. "Each year a woman's previous mammograms are compared for subtle changes."

Because the need for comparison is crucial, Watson urges women to authorize a transfer of records any time they change mammography clinics.

"Women should make sure their mammography clinic is accredited by or seeking accreditation from the American College of Radiology," he said. "The accreditation procedure ensures high technical standards, low-radiation exposure and qualified interpretation."

The risk of developing cancer from radiation exposure during mammography is negligible or the same as the risk of getting lung cancer from smoking one-eighth of a cigarette in one's life.

"I tell my patients, 'You took more of a risk just driving to your mammogram appointment,'" Watson said.

AGRICULTURE SCIENCE FITS INTO NEW REQUIREMENTS FOR TEXAS HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

Today's high school students are facing many changes in graduation requirements and curriculum choices. The agricultural industry faces similar changes in a more urban, mechanized society. Students must choose career pathways that will lead them to vocations or higher education. The high school Agricultural Science and Technology program, offered in over 950 schools statewide offers a diversity of semester courses that can be applied to numerous careers and vocations.

Commissioner of Education, Lionel R. Meno says, "It is my belief that the minimum graduation requirements were never intended to be a full preparation program." He has proposed creating a Recommended High School Program. It will not affect the minimum graduation requirements, but will put the focus on a full preparatory program that should be provided to all students.

Concern has been expressed about how Agriculture Science and Technology programs fit into these graduation recommendations. The Commissioner's proposed Recommended Texas High School Program would allow students to take 3 credits in a coherent sequence of agri-science/agribusiness courses. The reference to a coherent sequence indicates planning to insure meeting the student's training needs. Other students who choose the more rigorous college preparatory courses would have only one elective. Options exist for increasing the number of electives for students. Many of the options available are subject to local administrative control and include: Conducting a 7 or 8 period academic day; Granting physical education credits to students enrolled in multi-period occupationally specific courses; Granting science, fine arts and economics credits for specific agriculture science courses; and Pursuing credit by examination and/or correspondence courses.

Agricultural Education becomes more significant with increasing challenges facing the industry. Texas' broadly diversified agricultural production is worth more than $11 billion annually. The consumer population, expected to increase from 17 million in 1990 to over 20 million by the turn of the century, increases the potential for Texas agricultural expansion. The Agricultural Science and Technology curriculum and FFA leadership programs prepare young men and women for careers in agricultural production and such diverse areas as biogenetics, international marketing, engineering, horticulture, communications, processing and business, as well as college. In the class and laboratory, they might work with computers and accounting, plants and animals, or mechanics and sciences as they learn useful problem-solving skills.

We must prepare our young people to meet the demands of a changing society, workforce and economy. Agricultural Education is an integral part of meeting the needs of the future. Students enrolled in Agricultural Science and Technology courses are preparing to meet the challenges of tomorrow.

Capital Scandal

A former sergeant-at-arms of the U.S. House of Representatives pleaded guilty this month to embezzling over $70,000. Many others, including members of the House, have been tarnished by the scandal.

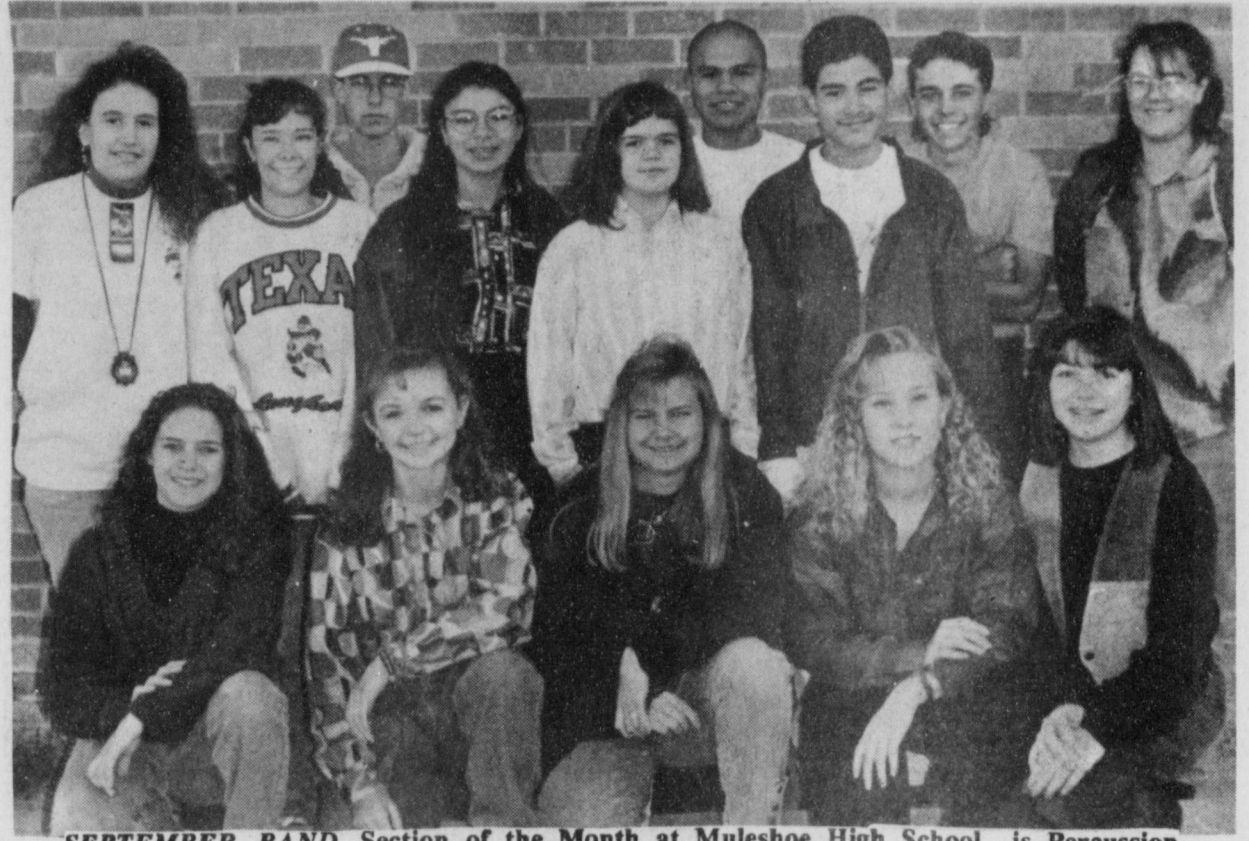

The continuing postponement of an indictment of Chairman Dan Rostenkowski (D-III) of the House Ways and Means Committee, under a cloud because of alleged financial misconduct at the House post office, continues.

The administration wants Rostenkowski to remain as chairman of the committee--to shepherd proposed legislation through the House.

Meanwhile, Attorney General Janet Reno, who approved the order to attack a religious compound with tanks, and who claimed, incredibly, she didn't think there was any chance of mass suicide (!), shelters behind an investigation by her own department which determined the killing of 75 cultists with tanks, teargas, gunfire and a firestorm (with no fire trucks on the scene) was "unpreventable."

Travelling With The Texas Angler

by Keith R. Warren

Excitement, anticipation, frustration and patience all come with the territory when you are fishing for schooling bass. I recently fished Fayette County Lake just outside of Fayetteville where schooling activity is in full swing.

My partner for the day was professional fishing guide and tournament fisherman Judy Wong. I've known Judy for years, but this was the first time we fished together.

Wong and I met mid morning to shoot an upcoming program for The Texas Angler featuring what we hoped would be predictable schooling bass. Anyone who has ever fished these full pattern fish knows the saying "you have to be at the right place at the right time."

The lake was calm with just a ripple on the surface. Approximately 30 boats were located between 1/4 to 1/2 mile from the dam fishing in 50 feet of water.

Occasionally a single bass would break water within casting distance. My guide instructed me that casting accuracy was a must. "Right now the fish are just getting started. Usually by 11:00 they are everywhere. Singles are tough to catch, but cast your lure immediately in the exact spot where the fish broke water. If it is still there, it'll usually bite." She said prop type topwater lures worked best. Her choice was a Torpedo, while I used a twin prop Snooker.

The closer to 11:00 it got, the more fish started appearing. Large schools of bass up to 5 lbs. were feeding on shad. Most of them just out of casting distance. They'd come up for 5 seconds or so, then back down.

If they'd only come up within reach, we'd score. We'd move the boat towards them, and they'd go down and come up where we just left.

Finally we decided to sit and wait. That paid off. We caught chunky large mouths to 22" long and got enough video for a great show.

Wong said this action should continue for a couple more weeks. Anyone wanting more information, contact Judy Wong at 713-933-9724.

Thinking about drilling a well or installing a CENTER PIVOT IRRIGATION SYSTEM?

Interest rates are the lowest since 1970. Our improvement loan rate is currently 6.95% fixed for 10 years. A $35,000 center pivot financed for 15 years will have an annual payment of $3,830 for the first 10 years. A 10 year loan would cost $4,971 per year. You can't hire a hand to move pipe this cheap. Take advantage of low rates. Save labor; Save water! Rates change every Wednesday.

Holiday Hints

Gift Buying Tips For The Holidays

(NAPS)—For many, the bells of Christmas include the ring of the cash register. If you plan to purchase an electronic product for a family member, friend or yourself, it may pay to heed these helpful hints from the Service & Parts Group of Sharp Electronics Corporation:

• Always keep your bill of sale as "proof of purchase." When you purchase a product, your sales receipt is the proof of how, when and where the sales transaction took place. Remember to hold onto it. Without the receipt, it will be very difficult to get a product fixed or replaced under warranty.

If you are giving the product as a gift, pass along a copy of the receipt to the recipient so he or she can get the necessary coverage on a product if a problem develops.

• Selecting extended warranty coverage. Before buying, ask what the warranty includes? How long the warranty lasts? Does the warranty cover whole products or just parts? When the product is serviced, will I have to pay labor costs? How does the extended warranty relate to the original warranty provided by the manufacturer?

Another issue to keep in mind is who honors the warranty. Some products must be returned directly to the manufacturer for service, while others must be brought to a local authorized servicer. A non-authorized local service store may be able to fix the particular product, but if they are not authorized by the manufacturer, they may not have access to the manufacturer's technical assistance, training and service manuals. This could lead to further problems.
