A report came out in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram on last Tuesday from Snyder and here is what it "Snyder, June27 .- Farmers

This might have been Snyder, Oklahoma. It did not say Texas. But kind and to make everything as nearsince seeing that report we have asked a number of farmers if there was such a thing as boll weevils in Scurry county and we have been unable to find any trace of boll weevils here. In fact the boll weevil has never worked in Scurry county.

We cannot imagine where this report came from out of Scurry county, therefore it must have been intended for Snyder Oklahoma. No boll Weevils in Scurry county, Texas.

No Cabbage at All.

Mrs. T. P. Garner brought in a cabbage to Stokes Bros. & Co.'s grocery department which weighed eleven ounds even, with all the loose leaves pulled off. This is the largest cabbage yet on record in this market, and it would be fine to have such things on exhibition at the county fair.-Lampasas Leader.

That is a pretty good cabbage, we will admit, but yet it is small when compared to Scurry county's record. W. R. Wren brought to J. E. Ketner's grocery store the other day a cabbage that weighed 22 1-2 pounds. Mr. Wren grew this cabbage in his garden and has a fine lot of them. Had it been in the field where it could have had plenty of room to grow, there is no telling how large it would have grown, he said. Mr. Wren was at one time a resident of Lampasas county, and he says cab- and devoted. As a soldier he was lage is not the only thing that grows patriotic, brave and manly. He was large in Scurry county, but that he himself has grown twenty pounds since coming to this county. Come to Scupry county.

Off on Vacation.

Leslie McQuinn and family will leave today for a month's vacation going by way of Los Angeles, Cal., through San Francisco, and on into the states of Oregon and Washington, back through Idaho, Montana and Colorado, and will visit the most important places along the way. This will be a very pleasant trip for Mr. McQuinn and family, and we hope they will enjoy it.

Arrangements are being made to have this gathering the best of its ly free as possible. The program will be made up of ball games, horse races, barbecues, fireworks display and speaking. The Legion contemplates obtaining one of their most prominent leaders for one day's address, and either the 29th or the 30th will be designated as Legion Day with a reunion of all of he Posts in this territory. As a citizen he was loyal greatly loved by those who knew him best in civil life, and by those who learned to know him best as a soldier. He was one of those splendid young chaps that can always be depended upon when our country needs citizens, or soldiers.

The beautiful military service was held from the east steps of the courthouse. The body arrived Wednesday morning on the 2:30 train and was taken to the Stokes undertaking establishment where it remained until 10 o'clock when it was removed to the family residence. At 4:30 the local Legion Post repaired to the family residence and took possession of the body, conveying it to the courthouse square where the services were held. The remains were then taken to the Snyder cemetery.

At the cemetery Lieutenant Waterman, in a brief but very appropriate address, presented the bag that came wrapped around the casket, to the Porter family. After the lowering of the body and the filling of the grave, Bro. Hull, a long time friend of the family, pronounced the benediction. After the benediction the salute was fired over the grave and taps were sounded. There we left our comrade sleeping beneath a mound, covered with a profusion of beautiful flowers. SCURRY CO. ODD FELLOWS' ASSOCIATION MEETS JULY 8

Among the most important events in Scurry county Odd Fellowship is the semi-annual convention of the order known as the Scurry County Odd Fellows' Association which meets in Snyder on Friday, July 8, at 10:00 o'clock a. m.

For some time past preparations have been going on in every lodge in the county, and especially among the degree teams in the contest to be put on for the Second Degree. It is said that Hermleigh, Ira, Dunn and Pyren will enter teams in this contest, and if all these lodges are represented it is evident that the goat supply will be greatly depleted. However, the Snyder brothren say if the goats do not hold out, they have some first-class two-year-old steers in re-

Mr. Fred Grayum was master of ceremonies at a chicken fry given in honor of Miss Alice Grayum on fast Monday night at Wolfe Park.

Punch was served while the lunch was being served, and it seemed the the participants in a game of "snap" got more than their share.

An unusual excitement filled the whole park while the tables were being cleared of the good things, but suddenly a lull, which lasted for some time, descended over all before the cream and cake could be disposed of.

If actions speak true, each one enjoyed the evening, but were a bit sad when they realized that Miss Grayum will soon be returning to her home in Oregon.

Something to Think About By F. A. WALKER

THE SOUL SEARCH

N ENGLISH scientist has devoted A a lot of time and effort to writing a book which he calls "In Search of the Soul."

At the end the scientist finds himself no nearer discovering the whereabouts of what he was searching for or even knowing the character of the thing he sought than was Plato or Seneca or Pythagoras or Epictetus, all great teachers, but all disagreeing when it came to the thing which none of them KNEW anything about.

Always there has been a doubt as to whether the soul was within on without the body. One investigator who died not long ago spent years of his life in an attempt to devise a weighing mechanism so delicate that he would be able to determine if there was any determinable difference in the weight of a human body just before and just after death, hoping thereby to establish the weight of the soul.

There were reports, never perhaps justified, that the government bureau of standards had under consideration a similar line of experiments.

It would be just as satisfying, in all probability, to try and weigh a thought, for it is probable that nothing more tangible leaves the body at

Did you ever wonder what becomes of the thinking power when the body no longer has power to breathe and move? Is the thinking power the

Where goes the genius of a Beethoven or a Mozart and that indescribable power to group sounds into harmony when death has robbed those fingers of writing down the notes upon the ruled paper?

What becomes of the analytical powers of a Newton or a Euclid or an Einstein when he can no longer pen his formulae or give to the world his conclusions?

What becomes of the genius of the painter when his hand can no longer hold the brush or of the sculptor when his hammer and chisel have been laid down for the last time?

Is there tangibility to knowledge, to talent, or are they wholly spiritual and without dependence on material things and existence?

Plato said, "The body is a prison, from which the soul must be released before it can arrive at the knowledge of those things which are real and im-

Is the soul really imprisoned within the body or is the body only an il-

The scientist who is studying matter, for no one yet KNOWS what matter is, tells us that everything material is made up of electrons and that electrons are really only a manifestation of electricity and that electricity is not matter but only energy, and we, therefore, end up with the statement that matter is not material but only a demonstration of energy, so after all what is there to the thing which we ordinarily think of as the home of the soul?

What an enigma! What an eternal problem! We stand upon the edge of a great ocean and wisely discuss it as a whole when we do not know more than the merest fraction of the truth about the one wave that washes at our feet.

We write books with sounding titles and confess at the end, if we are truthful, "I know nothing."

Only ONE thing man really KNOWS. That is that he is conscious, that he has been endowed with some power of recognition and reason. Whether his use of that power results in a truthful conclusion he does not know. It may be that one of the greatest giories and privileges of the hereafter will be to know something and know that it is the truth.

There are many question marks in the paragraphs above but all life is a question to which none of us have ever known the satisfactory answer. (Copyright.)

WRIGHT MOOAR RECALLS EARLY DAYS IN COLORADO

Early days in the history of Colotown between Fort Worth and El days. Paso were recalled Tuesday by J. Wright Mooar, pioneer cattleman of Scurry county. Mr. Mooar spent the day here on business and meeting with "Bud" Coe, "Bill" Doss, John Doss, Charlie Adams and other citizens whom he knew here in the early eighties.

Mr. Mooar settled the Mooar ranch on Deep Creek in Scurry county forty-six years ago and has made his home there ever since. For many years, however, he was actively identified with the business interests of Colorado, and in '84 built the Mooar livery barn on Walnut street, the to close their places of business all property now owned by Judge Coe. These buildings were constructed of Colorado-made brick, as were many others of the early bricks.

"In 1885 I did a livery business of $36,000 in that building," said Mr. Mooar. "I never refused anyone credit who came to my stable for horses or rigs and during the year l lost only $8 in bad accounts. I lost no horses from overdriving during that year.'

In those days Colorado was a thriving city of from four to five thousand people, and the commercial center of a territory extending approximately one hundred and fifty miles out. Abilene, Sweetwater, San Angelo and other towns that have since outstripped Colorado were then designated

CLARITY IN NIGHT THOUGHTS

Brain is Frequently at Best During the Still, Quiet Hours of the Darkness.

Many writers sleep with pencil and notebook under their pillows and a lamp at hand, so that they may dash off the thoughts that come to them in the watches of the night. There is about these thoughts a clarity that does not come with daytime thinking -a sureness of vision that approaches the clairvoyant. Misfortunes never loom so full or realistic as after midnight; but joy and pleasure lose something of their glamor, their evidence; doubt creeps in with them.

A problem which we have wrestled in the daylight, weighing it with all our intelligence, is settled in a certain way, calmly and judiciously and after mature reflection. Our decision seems the right one. And then, suddenly, in the dead of the night, that self-same issue bobs up before our mental vision, wakes us from a sound sleep and settles itself in quite another way, in one great flash. A strong white light, has been turned upon the brain and has revealed there a conclusion of which we had no inkling before. The processes of arriving at it are a closed chapter. The clairvoyant brain has registered a result only. And again and again it will be found to be the right. the expedient solution.

Memory, too, is peculiarly keen in the silences between midnight and four in the morning. All the cobwebs have been swept from the brain by the first hours of sleep; the body and nerve centers are singularly rested; there are no noises to disturb and some subconscious power is at work within us.

THAT LUCKY RABBIT'S FOOT

Must Be Procured Only Under Certain Circumstances if the Charm Is to Have Power.

You have undoubtedly heard about wearing a rabbit's foot for luck. Do you know what is the significance of it, where it is to be carried, and why it is lucky? Well, here it is:

"The rabbit's foot is esteemed a powerful talisman to bring good fortune to the wearer and protect him from all dangers," says an authority. "As this belief is more or less common throughout the South it may be well to state how the charm is prepared, for the benefit of those who wish to he put on the royal road to health, wealth and prosperity.

"It must be the left hind foot of a graveyard rabbit, and that is one caught in a graveyard, although one captured under the gallows would probably answer as well. It must be taken at the midnight hour and the foot amputated. The foot must then be carried secretly in the pocket until by chance the owner happens upon a hollow stump in which water has collected from recent rains. The foot is then dipped three times into this water and the charm is complete.

"Among the negroes and uneducated whites of the South the reputed possessor of this potent talisman is at once feared and respected."

Silk Cultivation in China.

That the secret of the silkworm was jealously guarded is well known, and a tradition is told of a Chinese princess who tried to import the insects into the country whither she was going. Certainly it seems probable that silk making was known as long ago as 2800 B. C., when Emperor Chin Nong, to whom is ascribed the invention of the plow, is said to have begun the planting of mulberry trees, and his successor, Hoan-ti, intrusted to his wife the investigation into the rearing of the silkworms, in the year extends over an area of 500,000 square | 2602 B. C. Certainly her work was successful, and her name to this day is held in high honor, an encouragement to those who, like Lui Tsu Si Ling Chi, devote their time to the care of any form of investigation work.

Inheritance of Insanity.

According to Doctor Kener, director of a large lunatic asylum in Roumania, insanity, when transmitted, occurs at an earlier age in each successive generation. Of 250 pairs of parents, reports the Journal of the American Medical Association, and offspring, 39 per cent of the offspring were found to have had their first attack of insunity before the age of twenty-five, a considerable portion being congenital imbediles. Mothers transmitted much more frequently than fathers, and daughters are affected more often than sons; also the offspring are affected at about half the age of the parent, being in most intimes exhibit congenital imbeciles or cases of adolescent invanity.

Precise Old Lady Convicted of Using Slang.

Dictionary Brought Forward to Prove That Term With Which She Fright ened Youngsters Was Taboo.

My mother detested slang, says a writer in Scribner's. The use of slang expressions was to her something very closely akin to making up a bed without properly airing it or going to a party without a clean handkerchief.

When my sister or I used some of the slang of our day, she used to say plaintively that she couldn't think where we got hold of such expressions. Had anyone said to me then that my mother used slang I should have been incredulous and very likely indignant. While I considered my own right to a latitude of language inalienable to my youth, I felt, if only subconsciously, that mothers (and especially mine, who was of the good old-fashioned variety of genuine mothers) were different. One would no more expect them to use slang than one would expect them to wear short skirts, or dance, or ride a bicycle, or want the largest helping of ice cream. I am sure if I had heard my mother say "rubberneck" or "for the love of Mike," the sound of such words on her lips would have horrified me even more than they horrified her when she heard them on mine.

It was only recently that the great revelation came to me. Harking back to my childhood, I had used one of my mother's favorite words, "rambunctious," and was promptly asked what it meant by a person who had not had the advantage of being brought up in New England. Surprised at her ignorance, I explained at once that it was my mother's word for-well, for what? I had to put my reluctant brain to work before I could find words that gave even a faint flavor of what mother meant when she said: "Now, you children, you're getting altogether too rambunctious." Not satisfied with my own definition, I finally sought Mr. Webster's aid. Rambunctious was not in the 'abridged' on my desk. When I had turned, grumbling at the words they select to leave out of the abridged to the unwieldy colossus in the hall, I could scarcely believe my knowledge of the sequence of the alphabet. But a careful resurvey failed to find me tripping. Rambunctious was not there. The dictionary passed blithely on from rambler to rameal (the same as ramal, if you must know).

As I laid the dictionary down a new light burst upon me. Rambunctious was not a word in good standing. What was it, then, but the slang of an older generation! My mother had used slang.

Death to Rate.

A study of barium carbonate as a rat poison, made by the United States Department of Agriculture, indicates that a 20 per cent mixture with food makes a satisfactory bait. With this percentage a rat ordinarily needs to eat only one-third or three-eighths of a meal of average size to get a fatal dose. It was found that with this dose many of the rats poisoned died within 24 hours, though an occasional rat was found which survived an even larger amount, thus indicating that 100 per cent mortality is not to be expected in any case. A summary of results of experiments conducted by various persons with a view to determining the deadliness of barium to different animals shows the fallacy of the assumption that barium is polsonous only to rats. It is pointed out that the fatal dose of barium per pound tends to decrease relatively as the size of the animal increases, and that a balt calculated to be fatal to rats may be assumed to be more or less dangerous to small domestic animals also.

Phillip's Wish.

Phillip, Jr., two and one-half years old, is very fond of having his mother sing to him as she rocks him to sleep. She has told him a number of Bible stories, the usual number of "Mother Goose" stories, and other stories so dear to children. He often requests her to sing about "Mother Hubbard," of "Jack Spratt," or some other equally well-known character, and she willingly obliges, "filling in," as she goes along, to suit the occasion. The other evening she had been singing to him about "Santa Claus" and his various activities, and, seeing that Phillip was almost asleep, stopped to rest. Suddenly he opened his eyes and said: "Mother, sing me a song about Moses, and Mutt and Jeff."

New Vecation for Women. As Corney Grain used to say, "We all come round, you come round. I come round." It was never imagined, in his day, that the smart London clubs would come round to having a woman as secretary, but the Devoushire and Green Room clubs have done so, and the Savage threatens to follow suit. It is pointed out, however, that during the war men saw how extremely comfortable a woman could make a club, and, as clubs become more and more the homes of both men and women, a woman secretary seems to supply the touch needed to make them complete.

WOMAN BEGAN LONG DISPUTE

Shakespeare-Bacon Controversy Had Its Origin in Book Published by American Author.

The long-drawn-out controversy over the authorship of the Shakespearean plays had its origin in a remrakable book written by an American woman, Delia Bacon, a native of Tallmadge, O., with a preface written by her friend, Nathaniel Hawthorne. She was a woman of intense application and capacity for esoteric study and her book was the product of a lifetime spent in the feverish pursuit of her hobby. Her book was entitled "The Philosophy of the Plays of Shakespeare Unfolded," copies of which are now rare, as it has long been out of print.

The book is written in a very laborious style, difficult to read. Some of the sentences are three to four bundred words long, but the entire work shows evidences of intense study of the works of the poet and a masterly knowledge of the history of Shakespeare's period. The intense obsession with which she pursued her theories brought her life to a tragic end. Becoming convinced that Shakespeare's secret was hidden in his tomb at Stratford, she went to reside there to confirm her researches. She was found one midnight at the tomb, muttering incoherently, and evidently making preparations to open the tomb in search of concealed manuscripts which she believed had been interred with the body of the poet, beneath the cryptic inscription, "Good friend, for Jesus" sake forbear to dig the bones inclosed here." She was removed to an asylum.

DAZZLED OLD LONDON TOWN

Becky Wells, Beautiful Madcap, Well-Knewn Character During the Reign of George III.

Becky Wells, beautiful English act ress, journalist and author, was born in 1759, married at eighteen, and a few months later saw her husband desert her for her bridesmald. She went to London and won success by her beauty when she went on the stage. She took up with Edward Topham, an eccentric, and they established a newspaper that thrived on Becky took to wearing furs in sum mer and muslins in winter, which perhaps stamps her as a woman in advance of her age. She hired hackney coaches to drive her to Oxford or Cambridge for her health, and her vagarles were the talk of the town.

She imagined that she was irresistible and took it into her head to infatuate George III, the dull king gave up her honor to save her friend. whose only redeeming virtue was his apparent faithfulness to his wife. She was thrown into jail by her creditors, ty went about the town charging up and there she infatuated a Moor, son bills of enormous amounts, and he of the prime minister of Morocco, who had been sent to prison for contempt of court. They were wedded in jail with festivities that lasted a week and which cost the bridegroom $2,500. Her husband, Joseph Sumbel, then secured his release by paying his brother $50.-600 and he also paid Becky's creditors and took her with him.

Tricking Fate.

Every Hindoo must have a son to perform the proper rites in his behalf so that he may be released from purgatory after death, says Asia Magazine. Especially cursed, therefore, is he whose fate it is to be sonless. One such, a Brahmin, propitiated the god Vishu and obtained a boon. He asked the man's fate, Vishu refused. Twice this happened, but the third time the might be shared by gods and men alike. This was granted. He then his wife, began to sing and dance. Thereupon, all the gods and men, by the terms of the boon, were compelled to sing and dance, with him, and the rascal."-Mildred J. Sharp, in the Palbusiness of the universe was brought to a standstill. "Stop," begged the gods. "Only when you grant me & son," answered the Brahmin. And be had his way.

The room in which palms and geraniums are kept should not be allowed to get cooler than 40 or 45 degrees. The palm should be placed in a partly shaded spot, but never where it may come in contact with gas or cold draughts. It should never be placed in the direct rays of the sun. The leaves should occasionally be sponged with fishoil soap and warm water. I should not be too well watered, and perfect drainage is necessary to see cessful culture. The gerantum requires plenty of sunlight and its roots should be kept moist. It should be sprayed with tepid water occasionally to keep the foliage bright and green and prevent dust from lodging on the leaves

PREFERRED TO LIVE ALONE

Water-Hog Chose Lonely Existence in English Pond to the Confinement of a Menagerie.

Two years ago a large and intelligent water-hog from South America, tired of the local British menagerie which exploited him and his brethren, crept away, and took up his abode in a pond at Manning's heath, Sussex. There he lived a hermit-like existence, swimming and diving, or scrambling along the fringe of the pond by way of exercise, and harming no man, until quite recently a young foal disputed his claim to the lake. The threefeet-long water-hog had the impudence to chase the foal, and suffered death at the hands of a gamekeeper for his misdemeanor. The hog's life in the Sussex pond is regarded as all the more strange because few of his species have survived the English climate. Such creatures abound on the river banks in South America, and, while possessing the skin and bristles of an ordinary hedgehog, can swim and dive like a fish, often remaining under water for lengthy periods. They have long, curiously molded teeth, which enable them to grind to a pulp the vegetable matter that forms their sustenance, and allow it to pass down the very narrow passage of their throat. They bark and growl like dogs, and are altogether unpleasant animals when roused. The Manning pond specimen was regarded by the villagers as quite harmless, however, and they deplored its untimely end.-London Mail.

COURTESAN OF LOWLY ORIGIN

Lady Hamilton Rose to High, if Anomaleus, Position, Solely Through Her Great Beauty.

Lady Hamilton, who, during the latter part of the Eighteenth century, was a world figure, and whose activities did much to change history, was born of a blacksmith and a cook. The time was to come when she was bedfellow with the queen of Naples, and close friend to kings and princes, as well as the wife of the British ambassador to Italy, and mistress of the great Nelson, but It was as Emma Lyon that she began her career of mastering power and authority by her woman's beauty and wiles.

While walking along the street at the age of sixteen she saw an old schoolfellow in the hands of a press gang that was about to convey him aboard a British ship bound for forced service. She went to Captain Payne, commander of the ship, and begged his release. The captain agreed-on a condition. The girl accepted it and The captain paid dearly for his act shortly afterward, as the young beauwas forced to settle Pioneers' Prairie Bunk.

The necessity of finding a more convenient and comfortable place than the ground upon which to sleep produced the "prairie bunk." This onelegged bedstead, now a piece of furniture of the past, was improvised by the pioneer in a unique manner. A forked stake was driven into the ground at a proper distance from the corner of the room and upon it poles, ushally of hickory, were laid reaching from each wall. These poles, where they touched the walls, rested in the openings between the logs or were driven into auger holes. Upon these poles slats of clapboard were placed, for a son, but, since a son was not in or linden bark was interwoven from pole to pole. Sometimes an old-fashloned "cord bed" was made by using Brahmin asked that his merriments basswood bark for the cord. On this framework the housewife spread her straw tick or piled the luxurious went home, locked his door and, with mound of her homemade feather bed. Such a sleeping place was usually known as a "prairie bedstead," but sometimes it was called a "prairie impsest.

Thermometers Grow Old. Even thermometers become old, and consequently inaccurate with age, mercurial instruments reading too high and spirit instruments too low. In the former case the bulb appears to shrink, thus forcing the quicksilver too far up the stem. This gradual shrinkage is supposed to be due to the fact that the external pressure on the buib may be considerably higher than the internal pressure, the air as far as possible having been removed before the glass is sealed.

On the other hand, the spirit thermometer is sealed with the bulb covered-in a freeding mixture, in order to lock up in the glass as much air as possible. The instrument thus starts with the internal pressure which in time appears to be reduced either by expansion of the glass under the internal pressure or by leakage.

Beard and Mustache Defended. Dr. Arjan Das, in the Indian Medieal Journal, deplores the fashion for cropped hair which is gaining in India. He says hair is an additional ornament for a rich woman, and often the only ornament of the poor. The sharing of mustache and the epilation of nasat duirs is bad, as they prevent the introduction of even minute particles of dust entering the nose. Worse still is the iscreasing practice of shaving the beard as this protects the throat and hinders dental neuralgia. Shaving has become the fashlon both with Hingins and Mohammedans, though a hearded man among the latter is shewn more respect.

"Mr Cairman, I intend to support this measure, but I think there should be two amendments to it. In the first place, instead of making it discretionary with the Secretary of the Treasury whether the funds should be deposited with the farm loan banks it should be made mandatory. We were permitted to go along as people engaged in the Treasury discretionary power to all kinds of speculation until the currency of the country became inflated, until perhaps it was necessary to have some sort of a halt. By virtue of the graduated rediscount rates that were put suddenly the country almost went to smash. I submit that if it was necessary to put graduated rates on the banking system of this country, on the money people desire to borrow, it should have been put up gradually and there should have been notice given of the intention to put rediscount rates on a graduated scale into effect, and then the country could have adjusted itself and been prepared to meet conditions that exe can practically withdraw that at any time, and it is made his duty to do so. The people who are engaged ip agriculture in this country are face to face with problems that are real and not fanciful. It is a condiion and not a theory. If the time ever comes when the people who produce the elemental wealth of this country fail to function, the whole country will go on the rocks. If basic production fails, your industrial smokestacks will rust in idleness. That, probably, is too plain to be discussed. Therefore, I say that the Nation can well afford to say to the Secretary of the Treasury, you shall deposit funds so that they may use them in relieving the distressed condition of agriculture at the present time.

"The language of this bill makes it perfectly safe to do so. There is no better security on the face of the earth than that which will be back of the securities that are deposited here. Why should it be limited to the sum here specified? That is a nere drop in the bucket. Why should not an amendment be offered to make it a sufficient amount to furnish real relief? I believe it ought to be offered, and I believe it ought to be passed and made mandatory."

Proper Housing Is Essential to Success With Live Stock.

HOGS NEED LIGHT AND AIR

No Type of Farm Bullding Is Given More Attention in the Agricultural Colleges Than Hog Houses-Good Plan Shown Here.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answe, questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1837 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Success in raising hogs depends on two things-well-bred stock, both sows and sires, and proper housing. Well-bred stock is plentiful, and no farmer in these days of better farm live stock can afford to breed or raise "scrubs." In every community, especially in the so-called "corn belt" states, hogs are one of the principal farm products, and high-bred, if not registered purebred sires, are available. With a start of one or two wellbred sows and the service of a purebred boar, careful management will insure a good profit in hog raising.

The second essential-good houses is just as available as good breeding stock. During the last ten or more years, architects who have made a careful study of the needs of farm animals have designed, and local contractors have erected, thousands of buildings-barns, hog houses and chicken houses-that provide the livestock with houses where they can be kept at the highest state of productivity and in the best of health.

The product that farmers turn into cash with their hogs is flesh. Both can be obtained with "scrub" stock, but the cost is prohibitive. About the illustration. It is of frame construc-

Too much emphasis cannot be laid on the need of fresh air, dry beds and sunshine in a hog house. These three essentials to healthy young pigs cost nothing and can be obtained in abundance by planning the house correctly and constructing it according to the modern knowledge of what is best for

By proper care in laying the concrete foundations and floor this hog house can be built at any season of the year. By heating the aggregates of the concrete and covering the foundation and floor so as to prevent freezing until the concrete has fully set, which, in cold weather, requires at least six days, the work can be done and the superstructure erected in time for the early spring litters.

All Sorts of Blood-Curdling Stories Current in the Mexican Metrop-

tion set on a concrete foundation and will hold 14 sows and their litters. The dimensions are 48 by 20 feet. To get the most of the early spring sunlight this house is run east and west, and has double sets of roof windows, one set to permit sunshine to filter into the pens on the south side of the building and the other into the pens on the north side.

Two suction ventilators in the roof provide for a circulation of fresh air, without there being drafts near the floor, where the young pigs and their mothers are penned. Surrounding the building is a concrete feeding floor where the corn and dry feed is thrown for the hogs.

CITY OF GHASTLY LEGENDS

olls, and Belleved.

Mexico City is a city of legends, chostly horrors, most of them established at least upon a basis of truth. One of them is about the deeds of Don Juan Manuel who had the merry habit of stalking the streets in his cloak at night and asking the first man he met what time it was. Upoff being answered, "It is eleven by the clock," he would reply: "You are very lucky, for you know the exact same amount of care will bring a well- hour you die." Thereupon he would bred young pig to marketable size in 1 stab the chance-met stranger. He had half the time required by a "scrub," and the amount of feed both consume per day is practically the same.

Before the days of efficient hog houses, a farmer considered himself lucky if half the litter was brought to maturity. Young pigs are subject to many diseases and have little stamina to withstand them. Pneumonia is one of them. The pigs that were littered in the early spring and were not housed in weather-proof, well-ventilated and warm quarters had and still have little chance of reaching maturity.

It was with these facts in mind that the modern hog house was designed. And in passing it might be said that no type of farm building has been given more attention in the agricultural colleges than hog houses.

The modern hog house is a well constructed building. It usually is set on a concrete foundation, with a concrete floor. The side walls are weather-tight, and the roof is designed so that a maximum of sunlight can reach the pens on both sides of the building. Also some system of ventilation, either through the roof or by the suction ventilators that are used on every modern dairy barn, is provided. Half of the floors, whether they be of concrete or cinders, are covered with heavy boards, raised slightly above the ground. On this half floor there is placed plenty of bedding, so that the young pigs will be kept dry-with emphasis on "dry"-and warm.

When the farm has such a hog house, the sows farrow in early spring and again in the fall, which is as nature intended. Late February pigs are hept in the warm, sunny house, and ret the start that makes them healthy and strong when they are weaned and ready for the pasture in spring. There they develop rapidly and are of marhetable size when there is small supply and better prices.

One of the modern types of hog ouses is shown in the accompanying not a dearly loved nephew, and one night he met him in the dark, and not recognizing him followed his usual custom of homicide. The next day, mad with grief, Don

Juan went to the priest, who ordered him to say his beads at midnight before a church and near the public gallows. He tried three times before he was able to do so, and then, the legend says, angels took him and hanged him. The basis of the story lies in the fact that a man of the name of Juan Manuel did stab at least one man, and his body was found hanging on the public gallows without any explanation ever being made as to how It got there

Dice Gaming Ancient Sport.

Gaming with dice and cards has prevalled from the earliest times. We do not read of gambling houses in the classic literature of Greece, but there can be no doubt that the vice was very widely practiced in private houses. In Rome, under the emperors, gambling prevailed extensively. Augustus and most of the succeeding sovere gas were passionately fond of the dice, and the Emperor Claudius wrote a book on the subject. A Roman would transport to a gambling resort his whole fortune -coins, papers and chattels-and, after losing all, would even seize the cloaks of his slaves to stake on a change of luck.

Where Coffee Is Painted.

In Rio de Janei o there are certain mills in which raw coffee beans are painted and polithed. South Africa buys about 300,000 bags a year of coffee tinted a blaish green; northern Brazil wants its coffee black. It is said that all the graphite, ochre, talcum powder and other materials are destroyed in the reasting, so that no one would know from drinking the coffee whether it had been painted or Tennessee Farmer Wants to Go From House to House and Tell Everybody About Tanlac.

"If I were not so busy with my farm work I would go from house to house and tell the people about Tanlac," said A. J. Livingston, a wellknown farmer, living near Ashland City, Tenn.

"I had stomach and kidney trouble and suffered torment with my back and side. The doctors could do nothing for me so I wrote to a friend of mine in Nashville about Tanlac and he advised me to try it, saying he had heard so many favorable reports about it and sent me a bottle

"After taking the first bottle I felt so much better that I ordered another bottle myself and the result is I am a well man. I told a friend of mine about it and ordered a bottle for him and he had good results. I can eat anything I want and it don't burt me and can sleep like a log. To tell you the truth, I just simply feel like a new man and have more strength and energy than I have had in years. It is simply the grandest medicine in the world. I would like to see all of my friends and get those who are suffering to try it and I hope you will reach them through this testimonial, which I have gladly given."

Tanlac, the celebrated medicine. which accomplished such remarkable results in this man's case, is a wonderful tonic, appetizer and invigora healthy appetite, promotes digestion and assimilation of the food and makes you feel strong, sturdy and well as nature intended.

Chickens crave feed, especially during spring and summer. It improves the condition of the liver; aids digestion, thins the blood and contributes to general good health, thereby stimulating egg production.

Green feed supplies various nutritive elements in a form easily digestable, and a generous supply will aid materially in reducing the

When chickens do not find green feed, either in grass or palatable weeds on the range, special care should be taken to provide it for them as hot weather comes on, says the poultry specialist of the Agricultural College. Fresh cut grass, cabbage, lettuce, young corn or other growing plants can easily be fed by tying in bundles and hanging in the shade where the hens can pick at it. or by holding it tightly in the hand and slicing into half-inch lengthe with a sharp knife. Different green feeds add variety that is appreciated by the bens and they are an effective sid in filling the egg basket.

A check in egg production during the summer may cause a molt. Hence, a good supply of green feed, by aiding production, serves to lengthen the egg laying season. Provisions for an adequate supply, therefore, should not be overlooked.

A fall and winter supply of growing wheat, alfalfa, rape, or other crop adapted to local climate and soil, should be planned for, by sowing in August or September. In addition to providing late green feed for chickens, the fall grown crop is beneficial to growing calves and pigs. The root growth adds humus to the soil which in return supplies plant food for future crops.

Chickens often suffer for water during hot weather. Be sure to fill the water crocks and pans every where the chickens gather during the heat of the day .- Southwest Plains-

"LION" AT LITERARY FEAST

How Great Historian of Civilization Squeiched the Jackals Who Had imagined Him Discomfited.

He had but one rival in that lines went off on a trip together.

"It's an even chance which will return alive," said one man, solemnty When they did come back, Palgrave THE STATE OF TEXAS: was pale, emaciated, silent; but Stan ley, it seemed, was unmoved and more all-knowing than ever.

One night, Buckle, the author of "The History of Civilization," was lay ing down the law on every subject, century out of the way. Stanley, who was present, had borne some preceding inaccuracles very well, with only a slight shaking of the head and a red-

Suddenly his self-control gave way, and he leaped to his feet. He extended his hand, and piped forth, in a vigorous treble:

"I beg your pardon, but the last witch was burned at such-and-such a place, in such-and-such a year, in such- 4 and-such a manner. And her name Clerk County Court, Scurry County, was so-and-so, and you will find all about it in a book to which I can easily refer you, and about which you evidently don't know."

Torrents of imprisoned knowledge were thereupon poured on Buckle's head, and the historian of civilization sat wrathful, extinguished, mute. But a little later he had his revenge. Some one mentioned a new dictionary as a good one.

"It is," said Buckle with solemnity "It is one of the few dictionaries I have read through with pleasure."

The intimation that he had read any dictionary through with pleasure so astonished the guests that they forgot his past discomfiture in new awe, Noises Made by Elephants.

The elephant uses both his trunk and his lungs in calling, and he has a large variety of sounds and combinations of sound with which to express himself, writes Charles Mayer in Asia Magazine. When rushing an enemy he trumpets shrilly, when enraged by wounds he grumbles hoarsely from his throat; he expresses fear by a shrill, brassy trumpet and a roar; and pleasure by a continued low squeaking through his trunk.

When apprehensive of danger or when attempting to intimidate an enemy, he raps the end of his trunk smartly on the ground and trumpets, The peculiar noise sounds like that of tin.

In a moment of danger, the elephant colls his trunk to protect it from inwork, such as piling lumber, he may prescribed by physicians for twenty-use his trunk to balance the load he to keep his trunk out of the way.

The beetle gnaws a slot in the bark and deposits one or two eggs therein. From these eggs come the trouble making grubs that gnaw into the heart and sapwood and so riddle the tree that the first strong wind snaps the weakened timber.

Poplar and aspen-both fast growing trees, and for this reason very valuable to manufacturers-are the objects of this borer's attacks. The imported Lombardy poplar and the commercial cottonwood of the Mississippi valley are very seldom injured, but all other native varieties are damaged by the grub.

In some areas, where poplar and aspen predominate, the standing dead, fallen and dying trees exceed 50 per cent of the total stand.

How to Plant Trees.

Place the tree in the prepared hole, letting it stand, according to size, it grew in the nursery row. You can readily distinguish this by the earth mark on the tree. Fill in around the roots until the hole is about two-thirds full, press dirt down firmly, then fill the remainder of the hole with water, allowing it to stand until soaked in. Fill again with water and when it has soaked in, fill up the dirt very slightly toward the tree, leaving a slight depression at the outer edge so as to drain the water to the ends of the roots rather than toward the body of the tree.

They have also received in dues, food sales, How Shall We Find Our etc., the sum of $480.83 which has been expended for the comfort and education of the children.
