

County wrestles with amending personnel policy

By TERESA STONE
Journal staff writer

Bailey County employees could be seeing some major changes in their health care coverage as the County Commissioner's Court contemplates updating personnel policy.

Bailey County Judge Marilyn Cox stressed that commissioners need to focus on two things regarding changing personnel policy during Monday's regular monthly meeting.

"First, you need to decide how long the County will pay insurance premiums for an employee out of work due to illness or injury after they have used their sick leave and vacation time," Cox said. "Second, you need to decide how long someone will be considered an employee if they can't return to work due to illness."

Bailey County's current policy does not make any of the above specifications. As it reads, if an employee gets sick or injured and is unable to work, the County is responsible for paying their insurance premiums for an indefinite period.

Commissioners agreed that making these decisions will be difficult, especially because the County has a few employees that will be affected almost immediately if there is a change.

According to research done by Judge Cox, most county governments, as well as many businesses, pay premiums for 90 days after accrued time is used and the employee has not returned to work. Commissioners discussed time limits from three months up to one year.

Whatever the decision, if any, Cox reminded commissioners that the County will continue to pay insurance for employees not working due to illness until the specified number of days has elapsed, starting from when the policy is adopted, not from the first date of their absence.

Also in an effort to ease the decision process, Judge Cox reminded the court that once someone has recuperated and is able to return to work, their supervisor has the discrepancy to rehire the former employee at the same benefit and retirement level they had before

Changes lead to improved test scores at WJHS

By TERESA STONE
Journal staff writer

The staff at Watson Junior High has made major changes within the last few years to become partners with their students and increase the opportunities for academic success.

At Monday's school board meeting, school principal Sheila Joyner and counselor Brian Arnold told the board how the junior high staff and students are making major strides in areas such as math and reading.

Joyner said that one goal of her school's curriculum is to keep increasing TAAS scores. Since Joyner and Arnold came to the district four years ago, junior high scores have been doing just that.

Last year, math scores on the junior high level averaged 80 to 94, while reading scores topped off in the 80s.

One reason TAAS is stressed, said Joyner, is it lets students know that they can be successful.

Joyner told the board that when students moved to high school and are faced with the Exit TAAS, she wants them to know that they can pass it.

Backing up her belief in the importance of doing well in sixth, seventh and eighth grade, Joyner stated statistics revealing a direct correlation to failing the TAAS at the junior high level linked to failing the Exit TAAS in high school.

Although overall, students are performing well, Joyner said her staff is still working hard to fill the needs of students that aren't mastering the basic concepts. Keeping with their goal, Arnold explained how they have implemented

Most consumers trust advice from doctors, but they aren't quite as confident in their lawyers, according to a National Consumer Confidence Survey.

In fact, people surveyed rated their lawyer's advice just above advice their hair stylist would give them.

While 62 percent believe they would get good advice from a doctor, only 42 percent believed such from a lawyer, and 39 percent trust their beautician for good advice.

Ten percent admitted to trusting bartenders for good advice.

State tourism dept. creates website for Valentine's Day

Just in time for February 14, Cupid is sending Valentines from "deep in the heart of Texas."

For lovers seeking a unique, special way to adore their sweethearts, the Texas Department of Economic Development Tourism Division has created a virtual Valentine's Day website at www.valentines.traveltext.com — featuring Valentine's Day Facts and History, Words to Woo By and the True Story of Valentine's Day.

Romantics can also send virtual roses and Valentine postcards to loved ones via email. For those who really want to impress their true love, they can view the website to help plan a sweet retreat to any of the charming bed and breakfast locations or "toast" their love at the state's popular wineries and vineyards.

"We received overwhelming response from the site last year," said Tracye McDaniel, Tourism Director for TDED. "In addition to being fun and romantic, the site includes travel information about the diversity of the state, romantic bed and breakfast locations and Valentine's Day events going on throughout Texas."

Valentine's Day Most prefer simple celebration

By TERESA STONE
Journal staff writer

Valentine's Day is just a few days away and according to a national survey, most men would prefer to spend the day kissing on the couch.

But, like in many other areas of life, women have quite a different opinion. The majority of women who answered the survey said they would prefer a romantic dinner, sharing a decadent dessert and dancing to their favorite songs.

Whether staying at home or going out, tradition has taught people that Valentine's is the day to be with your "true love."

In the movies, couples always seem to be able to have the most romantic Valentine's Day. But romance in real life, especially time for romance, can be a bit more difficult.

When asked about romantic plans for Valentine's Day, ladies around Muleshoe had many different ideas. Sure there was the ever popular sending flowers and dining out, but surprisingly many women had simple, almost practical plans for sharing the evening with their loved one.

One Muleshoe resident said, "I told

New class has A&M students bugging out

Dear Mom, in class today we ate bugs. Love, Junior.

Not what every parent loves to hear about their child's college education; however, in Dr. Roger Gold's Entomology 222 class at Texas A&M University, that and other experiences make a lasting impression on the students.

The class was started three years ago as an introduction to entomology for non-majors, Gold says.

Since insects are a part of life in Texas, it seemed logical that students should know more about them. "Insects are in our homes, our businesses, our gardens and in our crops," said Gold, a professor and urban entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "A lot of people just really don't understand that the majority of insects are beneficial... they're interesting and fun to study."

Kate Fly, a sophomore studying agricultural education, says she took the course because her suitemate the previous year had taken it and said it was fun.

"I have enjoyed this class a lot," Fly says. "I am not scared of bugs, and I was when I came in here. I am scared of snakes, but not bugs."

"These classes help fill the gap," Arnold said. "It gives students a chance to catch up."

Besides additional instruction, Joyner explained to the board how students are given a copy of their TAAS results from the previous school year which breaks down specifically areas they mastered and ones they didn't.

"Most students don't fail because they missed a little of every area," said Joyner. "They fail because they have specific areas where they missed everything."

Once given the results, students sit down individually with staff members to help decide weak areas. "Students are becoming more aware of what they need to do," said Joyner, "They are taking it upon themselves to be successful."

Joyner and Arnold both stressed that success on the TAAS is a team effort between the students and staff, not only at the junior high level but also in the elementary schools and high school.

Factory farming tour

BAXTER BLACK
ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

Calving season is a good time of the year to invite those assorted anti's and detractors' to visit your "Factory Farming" operation.

Suit up the cynics in the requisite farm uniform, i.e. insulated coveralls, mud boots, scarf, work gloves and the Elmer Fudd cap.

Make sure they get to help stack bales on the wagon. That way they will be warm enough to ride on the back out to the field.

Pause after you've scattered the hay, long enough for them to look back at the cows. Sometimes it looks like a painting. It can actually give the viewer a peaceful feeling.

Shut off the engine. Let them soak up the clatter and the roar of contented cows. The screeching and screaming of sunlight hitting the snow. The racket and banging of no cars, no phones, no faxes, no television.

Then back to the barn to check the new mothers. Let the skeptics help you as you load the day old babies onto the little trailer and carry 'em to turn-out pasture. They can watch from the tractor as the new mamas follow protectively.

Your guests might get an inkling of the importance of the cow-calf relationship. It's not exactly like collating a 10 page PETA report on "How to spot animal abuse."

Mount the visitor's a horseback, so they can take part in the mothering check-up. Let them sit with you, patiently watching and occasionally helping as you make sure each new baby has found his own mother. It may be difficult for them to understand the importance of this bonding if they still think of animals like pieces of paper, inanimate units to be stapled together and filed.

After lunch at the Drab Factory Workers' Cafeteria where the family sits at a table of simple bounty basking in aromas not found around the office microwave, the visitors can join you to check the heavy bunch.

They can watch your concern as you work a cow that needs assistance, into the chute. Invite them to pull on the chains as you keep a hand in the birth canal to guide.

Stand behind them and help as the new life pops out into their lap.

Let them share those first anxious moments as the calf lies still in the palm of their hands. Then the calf twitches, he snorts, he blinks, he gives us that sign that tells us everything is okay. That we did good. He assures our soul that God was right when he put those animals in our care.

If we were able to allow each of these galvanized critics to experience this little miracle that is part of our daily lives, it could change how they look at life. Maybe even change how they look at us.

But that may be expecting too much. They have been programmed and shrinkwrapped, and it's hard to feel a baby calf's heartbeat through an animal rights solicitation envelope.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Farwell woman remains scared

Dear Editor:

I live in Farwell and have been reading about the opinions of people on the man who is suspected of the rape and murder of a woman (notice how I haven't used race as an issue).

I personally can't believe "our law" that I trust has let this man out on bond. I don't care if the person is White, Hispanic, Black, Asian, etc., when a crime like that is committed, that person should be behind bars until proven guilty.

I am a young woman and my husband works late at night. I am petrified that a suspected murderer is out.

I just hope that when the trial gets underway, and if he is found guilty, "our law" prevails and he is charged HEAVILY.

my husband that he's going to take the kids to my mother's, give me a few hours by myself to relax, take a long bubble bath, then return so we can be at home with just the two of us, no interruptions, just peace and quiet for one night."

Another Muleshoe woman said she would like for her husband to just turn off the television, pay attention to her, maybe go for a walk, nothing expensive, just spend time together without talking about overdue bills, or work, or any other problem.

Talking to people around town it is apparent that Valentine's Day means many different things to different people, from simply being together to grand celebrations of love.

Whatever the plans and whether or not they have the chance to do them, everyone agreed that they planned on making time to tell the special people in their life how much they mean to them, from spouses, to children, to parents and friends.

She said, however she knows a lot more about insects since coming to the class. "I didn't know they were helpful to us. I thought they were just kind of pests all the time and so that was interesting — to learn about the different ways they can help us."

Gold said each semester he has one or two students change their majors to entomology after taking this course. Others have finished their undergraduate degree and come back into the entomology graduate program.

The class is required to learn not just the names of 20 orders of insects, but their life cycles, diets, biology and impact on humans. Forensic entomology—or how to catch criminals by using insects and how to begin an insect collection are subjects of other lectures.

As a part of the class in which the students are insects, they learned how insects are in the food supply as a normal part of processing and also, how many cultures have been eating insects as a normal part of their diet for hundreds of years.

Students also are required to keep "insect pets." They have to keep an insect alive for 30 days and report on the insect and its biology and habits. "The students who take this as a serious endeavor actually learn a great deal from it."

Mules shake shooting slump

PERRYTON — Muleshoe regained its shooting touch and its winning ways Friday, blasting Perryton 89-55 in a District 1-3A boys basketball game.

Dustin Cleavinger had 20 points and 11 rebounds as Muleshoe halted a three-game losing streak.

Matt Mason added 16 points and eight assists and Cyrus Norman chipped in 12 points as the Mules shot 52 percent from the field and had eight 3-pointers in the lopsided win.

Muleshoe coach Ralph Mason had watched his team tumble out of the playoff picture recently in part because of a prolonged shooting slump.

"We were getting the same shots," Mason said. "We just made them. Any time you're in a shooting slump, you end up hoping the shots go in instead of believing they will."

Fueled by a 36-point second quarter, the Mules (18-10 overall, 5-5 in district) bolted to a 54-21 halftime lead.

Cleavinger scored 16 points in the Mules' game-breaking quarter, which also included

PERRYTON — Certain teams create matchup problems. Perryton gives Muleshoe fits with its size and athleticism.

Jaelyn Nowlin scored 16 points and Courtney Nowlin added 13 points Friday as the league-leading Rangerettes raced past cold-shooting Muleshoe 55-31 in a District 1-3A girls basketball game.

Perryton (21-6 overall, 10-2 in district) rocketed out to a 29-15 halftime lead. Jaelyn Nowlin drilled a pair of 3-pointers in the first quarter.

'Horns in danger of missing playoffs after 2nd loss to county rival Farwell

LAZBUDDIE — Poised to clinch a playoff spot, Lazbuddie was upset Friday and now is in danger of missing the playoffs.

Rebounding from a nine-point deficit early in the third quarter, Farwell beat Lazbuddie for the third time this season 63-60 in a District 3-1A boys basketball game.

Lazbuddie (14-6 overall, 5-

2 in district) needed a win at district co-leader Nazareth Tuesday or have Happy beat Farwell to make the playoffs.

Second-half rally foils Lazbuddie's upset bid

LAZBUDDIE — Lazbuddie took county rival Farwell to the wire for the second time this season — only to fall short once again.

Chelsi Kaltwasser scored 13 and Farwell rallied from a four-point halftime deficit to beat Lazbuddie 50-46 Friday in a District 3-1A girls basketball game.

Farwell made 7 of 10 free throws in the fourth quarter to stay out in front.

The Lady Blue beat Lazbuddie 64-57 in overtime in the team's first meeting.

Roxann Warren scored a game-high 18 points for the Lady Longhorns (14-13 overall, 0-7 in district) while Holly Engelking added three 3-pointers and 13 points.

"They made the plays when they had to and we just made too many mistakes," Lazbuddie coach Carey Sudduth said. "We've proved we can play with good people, we just haven't been able to pick one off."

Farwell (22-6, 4-3) held Lazbuddie to five points in the third quarter, tying the game at 31 and gaining the momentum.

"We kind of forgot what we were doing right," Sudduth
