A QUICK READ OF THE NEWS

Police: Trixy bikini too racy

Finding her red bikini and apparent come-hither wave too distracting, police in Jacksonville, Fla., requested that Trixy dress a little more modestly. Even though Trixy is a storefront mannequin.

Police Lt. Steve Farley made the request to Richard Hayes, owner of the New to You consignment shop where Trixy appears.

"It was a suggestion. It wasn't an order or a threat. It was primarily a way we might avoid some traffic accidents," Farley said Tuesday.

Hynes complied with the suggestion but said he doesn't believe Trixy was a hazard. "If it was a thong or a real skimpy French bikini, I wouldn't let her wear it. But this is a real good size, two-piece bathing suit and she is covered. You see more at the beach."

Trixy now wears a more modest red gown.

The incredible sinking houses

As newly homeless owners watched, workers moved into a neighborhood Thursday and began tearing down 70-year-old rowhouses that were slowly sinking into the ground.

The homes on Hegerman Street were built in the 1920s on old creek beds filled with a 21-foot layer of ash and cinders. Residents had complained for some time about crooked floors and windows.

"I was cooking an egg in the frying pan, and it slid out and fell on the kitchen floor," Roseanne Allen said. "I couldn't believe my eyes."

Last week, an immediate evacuation was ordered for residents of seven small, meticulously maintained rowhouses. But residents at least got some good news with word that authorities planned to provide state aid to help cover their losses.

Citizens being asked to help make Fourth festive

By RONN SMITH
Editor

The Muleshoe Chamber of Commerce is looking for people who want to help the community celebrate the Fourth of July.

And Pam McCaul, the chamber manager, said that whatever talent or interest anyone has can be fitted into the event.

That could be organizing a team for the 3-on-3 basketball tournament (entry deadline June 30), entering something in the parade, setting up a vendor booth or entertaining the crowd on Main Street. It could even be something unique that expresses an individual or community interest.

It's all part of the "Eve of Freedom" — the theme of this year's celebration, which climaxes on July 3.

As far as vendor booths and parade entries, McCaul said the plan is to not turn anyone away, but it would be helpful if entries were turned in by Monday at the chamber office (218 Main St. or call 272-4248.

The fee for vendor booths is $10, and McCaul said most of those entered so far are nonprofit groups — mostly school and church — but anyone is welcome.

Experts: Cotton woes not root rot

What has been termed seedling disease, root rot or wet weather blight affecting thousands of acres across a half dozen counties north and west of Lubbock is not a plant pathogen, area scientists say.

The affected area covers Bailey, Parmer, Castro, Lamb, Hockley, Swisher and Floyd counties.

Neither Dr. Harold Kaufmann nor Dr. Terry Wheeler, both plant pathologists with Texas A&M University System Lubbock Center, have been able to extract foliar pathogens from the hundreds of samples they have examined in the past several days.

With 95 percent or so of the samples having intact terminals and pretty well all leaves

Local crop causes market blip — briefly

Concerns about the West Texas crop momentarily drove the cotton market higher last week before speculative selling pushed future prices lower once again.

Even recent supportive weekly export sales reports were not enough to rally the market higher.

The brief good news was a result of the heavy rain, strong winds and varying sizes of hail that battered crops across the region on June 11.

According to a report from Plains Cotton Growers, "as many as 771,000 acres — some being physically present on the plants, they have ruled out such diseases as black root rot (Thelaviopsis basicola) or pathogen-based wilt or blight as a cause for the widespread and growing problem.

Dr. Randy Boman, cotton agronomist, and Dr. John Gannaway, cotton breeder with TAMU Lubbock Center, have travelled across several of the affected counties inspecting fields and pulling samples over the past few days.

They report no common factors in the sick fields.

However, as to the damage, a common theme on inspected plants has been stem bruising

City's weather warning system on its way

By RONN SMITH
Editor

The city of Muleshoe should have a new weather warning system installed by next year's tornado season, City Manager Rick Hanna said Tuesday.

The city council approved Hanna's recommendation to accept the lowest of three bids — $43,054.50 from Federal Signal Corp. of Lago Vista, Texas — for the system based on three warning sirens.

Hanna told the council that the system as proposed would have a siren in the southwest part of town, one in the east part of town and one in the north part of town.

He said the system should be delivered by January and the supplier "assured us it can be in place before next tornado season."

Other bids received were from Federal Warning Systems of Rochester, Minn., for $50,245.50 and Blue Valley Public Safety of Grain Valley, Mo., for $49,367.

Mayor Robert Montgomery expressed pleasure that the city is installing such a system.

"This is something we've needed to do for a long time," he said.

Cattle placed on feed decline slightly

AUSTIN — Cattle and calves on feed for slaughter market in Texas feedlots with capacity of 1,000 head or more totaled 2.53 million head on June 1, down four percent from a year ago. According to the monthly report released by the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service, the estimate was up four percent from the May 1 level. Producers placed 620 thousand head in commercial feedlots during May, down 16 percent from a year ago but up 41 percent from the April, 1999 total.

Texas commercial feeders marketed 505 thousand head during May, unchanged from a year ago. Monthly marketings were down 10 percent from the April, 1999 total.

On June 1 there were 2.09 million head of cattle and calves on feed in the Northern High Plains, 83 percent of the state's total. The number on feed across the area was down two percent from last year, but up five percent from the May total.

May placements in the Northern High Plains totaled 499 thousand head, up 38 percent from the April total. Marketings were down 12 percent from last month, at 400 thousand head.

Council supports 'buyback' to help firefighters retire

By RONN SMITH
Editor

Although it may prove financially painful, Muleshoe City Council members voted Tuesday to honor a commitment the city made 20 years ago and apparently never kept.

Councilman Cliff Black moved to approve spending $85,000 to bring the firefighters up to date in the state retirement pool, with the exact method of funding it left open until discussions of next year's budget begin in a few weeks.

Councilman Jerry Hicks seconded. City Manager Rick Hanna recommended that the council consider a three-year buyback at $28,400 a year, interest-free. Paying the money over a longer period would cost the city interest, he said.

Hanna said a check of city records revealed that money had been budgeted each year for the retirement fund but had never been paid into the fund, and the city had not joined the retirement fund when it should have.

He said the allocated money had always been spent for other things.

The $85,000 buyback would fund firefighters' retirement just as if the local firefighters had been participating all along, he added.

Hanna also told the council that the minimum current contribution the city must make to the retirement fund is $12 per month per firefighter, for those who meet the qualifications for participating in the fund. A previous council vote set Muleshoe's contribution at $15 per month per firefighter, he said.

Jack Dunham of the fire department told the council that 20 years ago, the city promised the firefighters this retirement.

Mayor Robert Montgomery said, "My opinion is that prior councils obligated the city to do this. The city did not do it. I think we have a moral obligation to go ahead with it."

Other members of the council agreed. "I agree with you, but that's a heck of a lot of money," Councilman Jerry Hicks said.

Councilman Juan Chávez agreed to support the buyback, but said he didn't want his support of prior council action on this issue to be construed as meaning he would support other prior council actions.

The council also:

- Tabled action on a proposal for the city to begin seeking a landfill permit;

- Agreed to look into the possibility of tighter traffic control and better lighting in the Lenau Addition, particularly around Dallas Street;

- Agreed 3-0 to donate $500 from the hotel-motel tax fund to pay for T-shirts promoting the 15th annual Leal's Softball Tournament (Chávez left the meeting before that discussion because his brother-in-law was making the presentation);

- Approved leasing a parcel of city property to the hospital district contingent upon the legality of the $1-a-year terms of the proposed contract;

- Approved the performance contract covering the Muleshoe Economic Development Corp.'s help with the Boehning Dairy expansion and agreed to the terms of a proposed contract with Muleshoe Pea and Bean; and

- Approved participating in a federal program to develop an airport layout plan leading up to the airport being served by the global positioning system.

Clinic wins accreditation

The Muleshoe Clinic of the South Plains Health Provider Organization Inc. recently was notified that it has been accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations.

The clinic's laboratory also became accredited after an on-site survey.

An on-site review in May indicated that the clinic meets the commission's national standards in addressing the rights and responsibilities of patients, organization ethics, providing a continuum of care, educating and communicating with patients, leadership, human resources, management of information and improving organization performance, according to a statement from Steve DeWoody, executive director of South Plains.

Deadline for placement tests set

Muleshoe public school students planning to take acceleration testing in August need to have their parent or legal guardian notify the principal of the appropriate school by June 29.

Scoring 90 percent on a test allows any student, kindergarten through 12th grade, to be given credit for a class or a grade level without prior instruction.

More information is available by calling David Jenkins at Muleshoe High School, 272-7300; Shelia Joyner at Watson Junior High School, 272-7341; Barbara Finney at Mary DeShazo Elementary School, 272-7365; or Helen Grigsby at Dillman Elementary School, 272-7382.

Registration is scheduled to begin at 8 a.m. July 3, with play to begin at 9 a.m.

are expected to be diverted to crops other than cotton."

The growers' association also noted that "preliminary reports from the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in the most heavily impacted areas indicated almost 435,000 acres of cotton completely destroyed."

A true appraisal of cotton damage in the area will be difficult because conditions caused by the storm vary from complete disaster to slight improvement.

Additionally, the situation will become precarious for surviving cotton if fields dry out quickly and winds increase.

Blowing dirt at this state of crop development could cause more damage to an already fragile crop.

On a more positive note, however, moisture levels over most of the region are among the highest in several years.

If favorable weather conditions occur, there is a possibility of record yields on remaining acreage.

Overall, prospects for Texas cotton remain bright as the majority of the state's crop is in good to excellent shape.

The cotton harvest is getting under way in South Texas, and has traditionally attracted over 10,000 visitors annually.

Cost for an outdoor booth, which is 5' x 7' and is constructed of scaffolding covered with tarps, is $50. There are also several end booths available which extend 3' to the side and are $70. Booth rental agreements may be picked up at the Garden and Arts Center, Monday-Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

For more information, call the Center at (806) 767-3724.

many producers there expect a good crop.

Cotton crops in other portions of the country are in good condition, although there are some minor problems in the Southeast and on the West Coast.

Market observers are closely monitoring the dry conditions in Georgia and other southeastern states, but the situation has not yet become a source of anxiety.

Also, cool temperatures in California have delayed cotton development, but expectations of warmer weather have alleviated concerns.

At the moment, there are few major crop concerns in the U.S., and a satisfactory crop is expected.

Meanwhile, a recent USDA weekly export sales report was mildly supportive to the market but did not cause a substantial price increase.

The department reported net export sales of 1998-99 crop cotton in the week ended June 10 totaled 26,000 bales, a figure relatively unchanged from the previous week's sales of 27,400 bales.

Turkey was the largest buyer of U.S. cotton with purchases totaling 10,000 bales.

Taiwan and Malaysia completed the list of top buyers with 4,300 and 3,900 bales, respectively.

Net new-crop sales for the same week were a whopping 220,300 bales with Mexico accounting for most of the total.

Export shipments of 1998-99 cotton continue to be on track despite a shipping figure that was 2 percent lower than that of the previous report.

The decrease was of no concern to the market, as analysts feel the USDA export target will be easily met.

With seven weeks remaining in the season, weekly export shipments must average only 49,900 bales to reach the estimate of 3.9 million bales for the year, against the average of 55,914 shipped in each of the past seven weeks.

In contrast, sales on TELCOT were not as healthy as they have been in previous weeks due to a plunge in cotton futures prices, resulting in a lack of interest in spot cotton.

In the five trading days ended June 17, sales on the electronic marketing system totaled only 167 bales, vs. 3,213 the prior week.

Average daily prices received by producers utilizing TELCOT ranged from 36.16 to 43.33 cents per pound, vs. a range of 43.26 to 45.57 the previous week.

Worrall, Sears join Bruns in wheat breeding program

VERNON — AgriPro Wheat, a division of Garst Seed Co., recently announced that Drs. David Worrall and Rollin Sears will join forces with Robert Bruns as the new management team for its wheat breeding program, a move that should strengthen collaborative ties between private and public wheat-breeding programs.

Sears, a Kansas State University wheat breeder-geneticist, is widely known as "the father of Kansas wheat" for his 18-plus years of breeding and developing improved varieties for Kansas farmers.

His varieties are planted on 50 percent of Kansas' wheat acreage and 20 percent of the wheat acreage in Texas and Oklahoma. Sears chairs the National Wheat Improvement Committee and is known as a leading authority on wheat improvement and biotechnology. Worrall will leave his position as a Texas A&M University small grains breeder at the Agricultural Research and Extension Center in Vernon on June 30.

He began his work in Vernon in 1981, focusing on developing dual-purpose wheats for grain and forage production in varieties such as Siouxland 89; TAM 109, 200, 201, 202; and Lockett.

He also serves on the National Wheat Improvement Committee and worked for the International Maize and Wheat Improvement Center in Mexico prior to joining Texas A&M.

Bruns has held a variety of positions as an AgriPro wheat breeder. He helped develop 14 varieties from 1974 to 1985, served as hybrid wheat project manager from 1992 to 1994, and now manages the firm's research and marketing efforts.

He has focused on developing value-added and identity preserved varieties and hybrids.

"We have a unique window of opportunity to bring new-technology wheat varieties to the market through our new wheat team," said Col Seccombe, president of Garst Seed.

"North American wheat farmers and the market are ready for them. Our new team has the experience, knowledge and vision to bring these trait-enhanced varieties to wheat growers."

"I'll be doing the same thing, just wearing a different hat," Sears recently told a member of the Kansas ag media while in Hays, Kan.

Worrall's departure from Texas A&M was announced by Dr. Don Robinson, resident director of the Vernon center, at a recent ag day in Chillicothe.

"Farmers in this area know David as 'Mr. Wheat.' Whenever they have a problem or a question, they know they can count on him to help find an answer," Robinson said. "We wish him the best of luck, and we soon will begin the daunting task of filling his shoes in our small-grains research at Vernon."

Dr. David Mengel, head of Kansas State's department of agronomy, called Sears a "focal person" in their wheat breeding program and said the university will soon seek a replacement.

Worrall's departure from Texas A&M's statewide wheat breeding team will affect that team's direction, said Dr. John Sweeten, resident director of the university's Agricultural Research and Extension Center in Amarillo.

Scientists such as Sears and Worrall are not easily replaced, he said, but Texas A&M's wheat-breeding program will not diminish while national and international private-sector breeding programs continue to expand.

"A strong private seed industry is healthy for wheat research in general," Sweeten said. "Texas A&M's program remains well-positioned to collaborate with private companies such as AgriPro."

Dr. John Beverly, deputy vice chancellor of Texas A&M's Agriculture Program and deputy director of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, agreed with Sweeten.

"We have but one objective — providing Texas producers and the seed industry with the new varieties needed to meet production and marketing challenges, now and in the future," Beverly said.

"Our statewide wheat improvement team will miss David Worrall's experience and leadership," said Dr. Mark Lazar, Texas A&M wheat breeder-geneticist based in Amarillo.

"His move is yet another reason for us to keep our close ties to the private-sector seed industry. Our goal is to continue varietal development so that producers have access to the best genetics possible in the form of new wheat varieties."

Texas A&M currently has four hard winter wheat breeders, including Worrall and Lazar, Dr. Allan Fritz at College Station, and Dr. David Marshall in Dallas.

It also conducts a soft wheat breeding program, headed by Drs. Marshall and Lloyd Nelson, at Overton.

The university's other small grain research, focusing chiefly on oats, is directed by Drs. Marshall and Milton McDaniel in College Station.

Texas A&M small grains breeders were instrumental in forming the Southwestern Wheat

Research and Education Consortium, an alliance of land-grant universities and producer groups in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Colorado.

The university will soon add a new building at its Bushland research site, a facility where scientists will evaluate, process and store seed taken from their 20,000-plus research plots.

This seed is used to produce experimental lines of wheat that lead to new and improved wheat varieties.

AgriPro Wheat and Garst Seed Co. are part of the global Advanta Seeds group — owner and operator of a seed technology network that includes research, development and breeding facilities in 13 states and 12 countries.

Serving as Maid of Honor was Lacey Lloyd of Lubbock, friend of the bride. Best Man was Scott Wyble of Canyon, friend of the groom.

The bride wore an elegant gown of candle-light satin designed by Jacquelin. The bodice was heavily beaded with sequins and pearls and alencon lace, featuring a sabrina neckline and long fitted illusion sleeves. The gown was accented with a cathedral train beaded heavily with sequins and pearls. Her fingertip veil was attached to a halo of flowers and trimmed with satin. The bride carried a bouquet of white roses and mini carnations.

The groom wore a black Christian Dior Grand Luxe tuxedo with hunter green vest and bow tie, and a double white rose boutonniere.

Symbolizing something old, the bride carried wedding rings from both of her grandmothers; something new was her jewelry; something borrowed were her mother's wedding rings; and something blue was her garter.

A reception followed at the University Church of Christ fellowship hall. Serving at the bride's table were Suzi Davis, Mindy Davis, and Margaret Teaff all aunts of the bride. Serving at the groom's table were Brandi Bendele and Debbie Boehning, friends of the groom.

Heart pillows help reduce children's pain

Heart Hug pillows are a new form of postoperative therapy for pediatric heart patients at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston.

"It took medical science several centuries to acknowledge what moms and grandmothers always knew," said Mary Beth Mauer, director of the hospital's cardiology department. "Hugs can be powerful medicine!"

Like many remarkable volunteer programs, Heart Hugs began with a simple idea.

"Let's give patients a pillow they can use to collect autographs from their doctors and nurses," said Dr. Timothy Bricker, chief of cardiology. "It will give them a fun remembrance of their stay with us at Texas Children's."

That simple idea proposed by Bricker has blossomed into a huge project involving hundreds of volunteers who lovingly make soft, heart-shaped pillows for every child having heart surgery at Texas Children's Hospital.

Heart Hugs have become a community wide gift to young patients, propelled largely by the energy of Esther Weise, president-elect of The Auxiliary to Texas Children's Hospital and a volunteer in cardiology.

After surgery, children are urged to cough to expand their lungs. They can hold the pillow to their chests when they cough. It helps soften the impact, reducing the pain of the coughing.

Weise invented the idea of using a heart shape because psychologically, kids know hugs from the heart do not hurt. She investigated how thick the pillow should be to be effective and asked many of her friends to donate the material and volunteer to make the pillows.

"I did not expect the response to be that great; however, everyone wanted to help," she said. "We had several volunteers, including the National Charity League, the Houston Junior Woman's Club, the Hope Center Alternative School, Texas Children's volunteers and many American Heart Association members. They have helped make the Heart Hug pillows project a success."

The Texas Children's Heart Center performs nearly 500 surgeries on children each year. Weise said it has nearly 800 Heart Hug pillows to pass out to patients. These are expected to last to the middle of the year 2000.

The pillows are about 14 inches in diameter, stuffed with material, and sewn using many different patterns and several colors. They are packaged in a Texas shaped box, which includes informative literature from the Texas Children's Heart Center. The volunteers also write notes on heart cutouts to cheer up the youngsters.

It has been a heart-warming experience for Weise, who has seen the tremendous impact of the pillows.

"When you see some of the kids leave the hospital clutching their Heart Hug pillows, it brings a tear to your eye," she added. "The volunteers have given their time, talent and their hearts to help the children."

Fireworks only part of the fun

WASHINGTON, Texas — Skies above the banks of the Brazos River, where the Texas Declaration of Independence was written 163 years ago, will shimmer and thunder with the explosion of fireworks during what promises to be a new annual Fourth of July event.

H-E-B is presenting "Fireworks-on-the-Brazos" at Washington-on-the-Brazos State Historical Park near Brenham on July 4.

The free celebration officially kicks off at 5:30 p.m. with musical entertainment at what is being billed as an "old-fashioned family-style" Fourth of July celebration.

The Star of the Republic Museum will host various folk-life demonstrators performing crafts and skills from the 19th century from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m., and offer special discounted rates and extended hours as part of the celebration. From 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m., there will be special children's activities and early 19th-century games.

Throughout the day, the new state-of-the-art Visitors Center welcomes state park patrons to discover dozens of exciting exhibits that shed light on the Republic of Texas era.

Interactive exhibits, vintage photographs, newspapers, maps and documents provide insight into the men who declared Texas' independence in 1836 and the 19th-century history of Washington County.

For a fee, visitors can tour the home of Republic of Texas president Anson Jones, the Star of the Republic Museum, and Independence Hall and the original Washington townsite.

Blue Bell Creameries and Coca Cola will provide free ice cream and cold drinks for the July 4 event, which is moving to the state park from downtown Brenham where the fireworks display has been held periodically.

Germania Insurance Co., Bank One and the Texas Commission on the Arts are sponsoring a free concert by the Houston Symphonic Band before and during the fireworks show. Sunday's 18-minute pyrotechnic spectacular starts at 9 p.m.

"Bank One used to sponsor the Fourth of July fireworks display in Brenham up until recent years when it was dropped," explained park manager Tom Scaggs.

"County tourism leaders suggested the show be resurrected and held at the state park because of its historic significance as the Birthplace of Texas and because it will be the last Fourth of July celebration of the millenium."

In addition to free soft drinks and ice cream, Independence Day celebrants will be able to purchase snacks through the park's new restaurant that is part of an extensive $6 million park redevelopment project. The Brazos Crossing will offer traditional cookout fare. Or bring your own picnic and blanket and enjoy dinner in the park.

More information about the celebration is available by calling (409) 878-2214.

TOPSNEWS

The Muleshoe Church of Christ was the scene June 17 for the TOPS #34 meeting which was presided over by Laverne James.

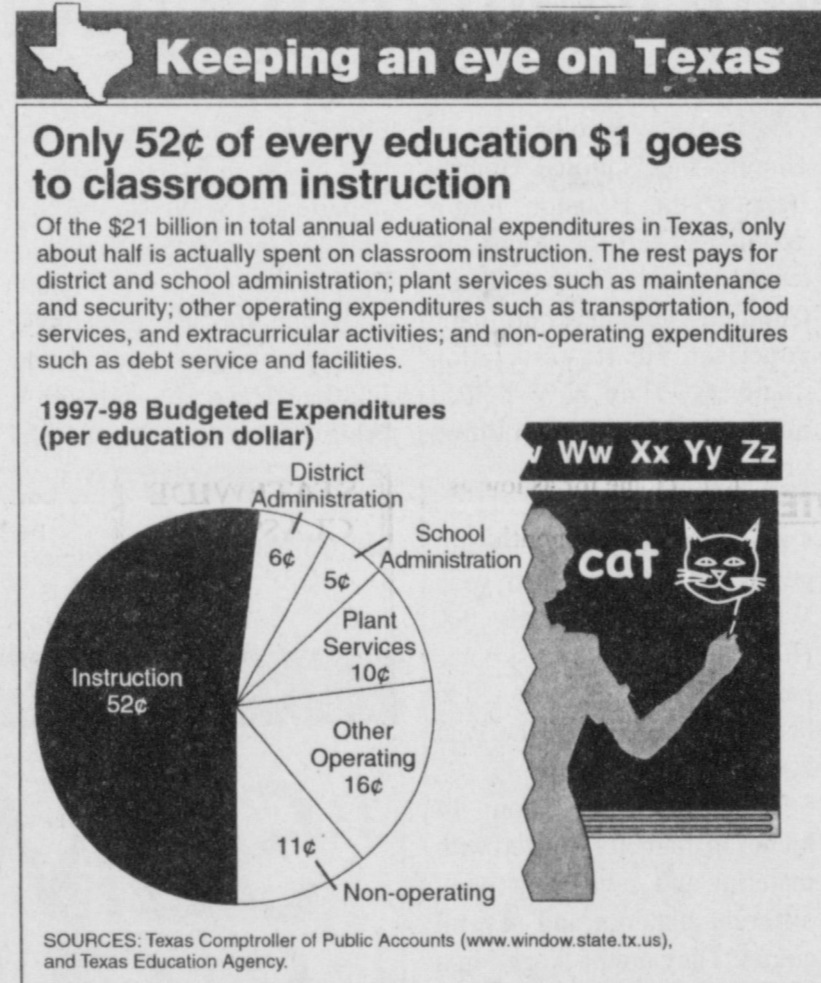

Last week's minutes were read by Janie Hughes and Alma Robertson led both the opening and good night songs.

Leader James read a Richard Simmons article about taking care of our bodies. Simmons suggested trying a variety of workouts until you find the one that best suits you. He also said that a never changing diet can be as boring as the same old exercise, and he mentioned that just because we're eating less, it doesn't mean we have to enjoy it less. Fourteen members weighed in at the meeting. We had one guest, Jennifer Hart, who attended with her grandmother and TOPS member, Lucille Harp.

Betty Jo Davis and Polly Otwell were the weight recorders. The best loser was Molly Davis with Polly Otwell and Rose Sain tying for first runner up. Tying for second runner up were Linda White and Alma Robertson. Laverne James had two straight losses and received a gift.

The next meeting will be a weigh in meeting only! It will be held June 24 at 6 p.m. in the auditorium of the Muleshoe Church of Christ. The regular meetings will resume on July 1 when the announcement of the six month best loser will be made.
