A OUICK READ OF THE NEWS

Nothing fits like homemade

Dick Alexander of East Canton, Ohio, knows where he's going when he dies: right into the coffin he's fashioned for Concerned about burdening his family with a casket's cost, Alexander spent the last six months building his own.

His poplar handiwork cost $500, much less than the usual retail price. "I had a lot of fun building it," said the 76-year-old retired carpenter.

"I did slip into it to see if it would fit," he added. "No problem."

Heir advertiser needs air

Clayton Goward had a problem: He was looking for someone who could inherit his $375,000 estate.

Now the Pine City, Minn., man has a bigger problem: He can't get any peace and quiet.

Since the 79-year-old retired lathe operator placed an ad in the Minneapolis Star Tribune last month asking for advice on how to find a suitable heir, he's been besieged with 22,000 letters, postcards and packages.

He got so many phone calls — from as far away as Europe — that he had to change his number to an unpublished one.

"I sought only ideas and a solution for making my will, nothing more," Goward said. "What followed is not what I wanted. Worldwide coverage resulted, and I am now swamped. About anything that you can think of has been written."

He said most of the responses have come from women with romantic proposals or stories of hardship.

County discusses cuts to avoid raising taxes

By RONN SMITH

Editor

Bailey County commissioners are looking for ways to balance next year's budget without cutting services or raising taxes, and it won't be easy.

With a declining population a declining tax base, and lower interest being earned on county deposits than in years past, offset by inflation and a mandate to provide services to the citizens, there were some serious faces at Monday's budget workshop by the comissioners' court.

One reason this year's picture is so bleak is the expectation of two local murder trials during the coming fiscal year, requiring the line item covering them to be increased from $10,000 to $100,000.

County Judge Marilyn Cox first outlined cuts that would be necessary to balance the budget even with a tax rate increase. Then she said the increase might be avoided by shifting money from the precincts back into the general fund for a year to see if the situation looks brighter next year.

Commissioners discussed the issue at length and agreed that might be the move to make.

The money involved — about $28,000 per precinct — is 5 cents of the tax levy that in recent years has gone to the precincts to help get them on a more solid financial footing than they once were.

Cox told commissioners that all four precincts are in better shape

Rainy-day crazies

Some people just don't know how to handle it anymore when they see more than a few drops of rain at a time. Brett Bamert uses his Go-Kart to give his friend, Ashley Dickson, a very chair-y ride Tuesday north of Muleshoe alongside Texas 214. Motorists honked and waved in the spirit of the performance after two brief downpours hit Muleshoe.

Second-generation corn borers hit fields

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

LUBBOCK—South Plains farmers growing corn should dence of Southwestern corn borer eggs, a Texas Agricultural Extension Service integrated pest management agent said.

"The second-generation Southwestern corn borer recently began laying eggs in Castro County. Even though egg counts were relatively low the week of July 19, we will likely see increasing egg numbers in the next two weeks," scout their fields soon.

"Second-generation Southwestern corn borers usually begin laying eggs after plants have tasseled. Most of these eggs will be found on the plant's middle seven leaves — from four leaves below to two leaves above the ear leaf."

These borers often lay single eggs, but masses of two or more eggs are not uncommon.

The eggs overlap each other, said Johnna L. Patterson, Ex- much like fish scales or roof tension IPM agent for Castro shingles. Freshly-laid eggs are and Lamb counties. "As a re- creamy white in color, while scout their crop soon for evi- sult, producers should plan to day-old and older eggs sport three red-colored bands. The eggs usually hatch in about five

> "Hatchling larvae from these eggs will feed behind the plant's leaf collars and ears, and beneath the shucks of the primary ear," she said.

"Older larvae will bore in the stalk and continue feeding on the plant," she added. The mature dull-white larvae are about 1 inch long.

House Ag Committee OKs improvements to crop insurance plan

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. House Committee on Agriculture finalized proposed improvements to the federal crop insurance program Tuesday.

The changes are designed designed to attract more farmers and ranchers purchasing policies through improved crop protection and the development of new coverage for lost market revenue, and livestock losses.

H.R. 2559, "The Agricultural Risk Protection Act of 1999," meets the commitment of Agriculture Chairman Larry Combest (R-Texas) to affordable, flexible coverage based more closely on productive capability than the financially harsh actual production history formula.

Instead, the committee bill allows farmers to exclude the recorded yield in any crop year when such yields are below 60 percent of the transitional yield, and to replace with a yield equal to 60 percent of the applicable transition yield.

Combest said improved coverage and increased federal premium assistance provide incentives for producers to reach out to a strengthened farm safety net.

"Too many producers are forced into the financially risky decision to work without a crop insurance safety net, judging that polices are not effective in coverage nor cost," Combest

"Unpredictable weather damage and fluctuating world markets threaten farm families with a financial free-fall. This bill's insurance against crop, livestock and revenue losses offers more secure anchors for a stronger safety net that producers need and want."

Premium assistance levels would increase for 50/100 coverage from the current 55 percent to

Texas citizens to get sales-tax break

JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

Texans will get their first-ever break on sales taxes Aug. 6-8 — at least if they're in the market for certain items.

Almost any type of clothing and footwear that costs less than $100 falls under the terms of the break. That's enough to save shoppers about $8 per $100 spent, according to the office of Carole Keeton Rylander, the state comptroller of public accounts.

Back-to-school buyers can save the tax on shirts, pants (including jeans), coats and jackets, gym wear, caps, socks, jerseys, lingerie, sweaters, raincoats and ponchos, shorts and suits.

The exemption even covers formalwear and tuxedos (even rentals) at one extreme and work clothing at the Rylander says Texans are expected to take advantage of the tax break to the tune of $69.2 million in state tax savings, plus a smaller amount in local sales tax.

Merchants expect the "tax holiday" to be a boon for sales.

Questions may be directed to Rylander's office at (800) 252-5555.

Hunting licenses to go on sale Aug. 11

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

AUSTIN — Hunting and fishing licenses go on sale Aug. 11, and Texas Parks and Wildlife is encouraging dove hunters to purchase their licenses well in advance of opening day — Sept. 1 in much of Texas — to avoid peak sales

Anyone planning to hunt migratory game birds, such as dove and waterfowl, must be certified under the Harvest Information Program. HIP certification will automatically be printed on the license at the time of purchase after a brief series of questions have been answered.

Lifetime license holders must also be HIP-certified in order to hunt migratory birds.

"There are only a few basic questions," said Allison Arnold, Parks and Wildlife's HIP coordinator. "It takes just a minute to answer the questions, and if you don't hunt migratory birds, you don't have to answer."

The objective of the program, which was initiated by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, is to create a harvest database now, and that leaving the $130,000 in the general fund would be a major step toward balancing the budget for one more year without a tax increase.

"This year is a bad year to be raising taxes," Commissioner Butch Vandiver said. "Any year is a bad year, but this one's especially bad."

Early in the discussion, Commissioner C.E. Grant expressed the down side of shifting the money back into the general fund.

"If we take that out (of precinct funds), we could get ourselves in hot water real quick," he said.

Vandiver asked whether the county's red ink is coming from anywhere other than the ambulance service and the sheriff's office.

"Those are the only departments we can cut," Cox said.
"The rest of us are already barebones."

She said she strongly favors giving raises to the county's employees but not necessarily to members of the commissioners' court. "I think these employees definitely need a raise, but I don't think we do," she said.

She added that the raises proposed for the sheriff and chief deputy already had been revised downward — to $1,000 for the sheriff (from $2,000) and to $750 (from $900) for the chief deputy.

In regard to the sheriff's pay, she added, "I think that is a pitiful, pitiful salary that he makes."

Figures show that Bailey County does pay its sheriff less than surrounding counties.

Major cost-cutting possibilities that were discussed included not buying a new car for the sheriff's department (to save $23,000), cutting the sheriff's staff by one deputy (to save $29,000), not buying a new ambulance (to save $30,000 this year and about $88,000 total), and cutting one paramedic.

The ambulance service is "really our black hole," Cox said, but as far as cutting it, she added, "I don't think this is going to be popular with the citizens."

"We have got a topnotch EMS service — the best one around," she said. "I think we may have a nicer EMS service than we can afford. Our people have grown accustomed to what we have, and it's a source of security."

Grant asked, "If you cut back a deputy, is there an opening in the jail so that person wouldn't be unemployed?"

Cox said she thought there would be, but it would be up to Sheriff Coy Plott to decide what to do if the cut were made.

Grant also pointed out that if one deputy is cut from the staff, the department's overtime would increase, eating up part of the anticipated savings.

Vandiver asked whether leaving the precinct transfers in the general fund, plus cutting a deputy and not buying a new ambulance this year (but otherwise leaving the ambulance service as it is) would balance the budget.

Cox heaved an almost visible sigh of relief and said she thought it would.

She also said she would hate to see the sheriff's office bear the brunt of the budget squeeze.

"I hate for the sheriff to take all the cuts. We're cutting what he thought he was going to get as a raise, we're cutting his chief deputy's raise. That doesn't set well with me," she said. "Give it some thought and see what you think."

While Vandiver's scenario might get the county through the coming budget cycle, it may not be a permanent solution.

Cox summed up the situation when she said: "We have got to get something in the county to bring in some money, or I don't know what we're going to do."

67 percent; for 55/100 coverage premium assistance increases from 46.1 percent to 64 percent; for 60/100 up from 37.8 percent to 64 percent; while 65/100 assistance increases from the current 41.7 percent to 59 percent; for 70/ 100 assistance rises from 31.9 percent to 59 percent; for 75/ 100 assistance goes from the current 23.5 percent to 54 percent; for 80/100 the assistance rises from 17.3 percent to 40.6 percent; and for 85/100 coverage the premium assistance increases from 13 percent to 30.6 percent under the legislation as approved.

(As an example, a 65/100 policy is shorthand for 65 percent yield coverage that sets a 35 percent deductible for the farmer, that will pay 100 percent of the USDA-set price for the yield.)

Provisions of the act include:

• Affordable coverage at every level, with strong incentives to purchase higher levels of protection, and new flexibility for producers to choose the level of coverage that best meets their needs;

• More affordable policies to protect farmers against price and income loss, in addition to production loss;

• Encouragement of greater flexibility and diversity of coverage by expanding policy development and providing incentives for the creation of new policies;

• Introduction of a livestock pilot program to test the effectiveness of risk management tools to protect livestock producers; and

• Strong compliance and enforcement provisions against fraud, waste and abuse through substantial sanctions for violations and monitoring by the Farm Service Agency.

Some plants provide more than one season's show

By RONN SMITH Editor

I'm sure there will always be a place for such one-shot flowering plants as bearded iris and Oriental poppies.

And actually, even though we usually think of bearded iris as one-season wonders — and its a spectacular spring blooming season — they actually serve well throughout the summer with their strongly vertical foliage, providing a good strong accent in contrast to more rounded or droopy plants.

There are also repeat-blooming varieties now that give us another, smaller burst of bloom later in the season.

As for Oriental poppies, I doubt that repeat-bloomers are within the plant breeder's power, and if you want to see just how ratty foliage can get as the growing season begins to wind down, I have some poppies that seem happy to demonstrate it.

But today's gardeners also keep an eye out for plants that will be eye-catching in more than one season. This can take the form of spring flowers and fall fruit, colorful fall foliage or even interesting winter seed pods.

It can also take the form of color in spring buds as the leaves unfold. Some species flash bits of pink, red or orange at this season. Granted, it's more subtle than a flame-colored tree in the fall, but then our eye is more likely to notice small patches of color in early spring, after the drab of winter.

Among the interesting winter seed pods are some common flowering plants: sedum (Sedum spectabile), that standby of gardeners in dry climates everywhere, has flat flower heads that retain their shape well into winter — and longer if the weather is dry; love-in-a-mist (Nigella damascena) has long-lasting and bizarre-looking seed pods; and the popular native purple (Echinace coneflower purpurea) bears globular seed heads that are popular with birds during the winter.

Our area has seemed slower than most to embrace the idea of fruiting shrubs, and that fact sort of mystifies me.

The endless varieties of yapon holly (Ilex vomitoria) do well here, given some extra water for the first few years to get them going.

They vary from dwarf bushy types to head-high and taller. Most have the typical red berries, but there are yellow-fruited and orange-fruited ones as well.

To get the fruit (as with most hollies), you have to make sure you plant a male somewhere near the females. And if you want simply the look without the berries, you can plant all

One male variety of yaupon that I find interesting is the cultivar 'Will Fleming,' named for a Houston nurseryman.

This type can grow 10 feet tall but only 2 feet wide, a growth pattern known as "fastigiate" and present in many plants that otherwise have bushy growth.

If you're prepared to give them the water, winterberry (Ilex verticillata) is another nice holly — and, for us on the dry High Plains, it has the advantage of dropping its leaves in the winter so that the winds can't scorch it so badly. (The previously mentioned yaupon doesn't seem as susceptible to dry winds as most hollies are.)

The way I "cheat" to grow winterberry here is to sink children's wading pools into the ground and plant inside them. (For winterberry, the pool needs to be at least a foot or so deep.) That holds the moisture, and in fact will keep the soil soggy for weeks after a rain.

A classic combination for winterberry is the male 'Southern Gentleman' with a heavybearing female such as 'Winter Red' (excellent together) or 'Sparkleberry.'

There also are dwarf types of winterberries easily available.

Certainly one of the most spectacular fruiting shrubs is the beautyberry (Callicarpa species), with its heavy crops of amethyst-colored berries.

Both the American and the Japanese species grow well here, though they may need a dose of powdered sulfur if they start looking chlorotic.

The only problem with them (for me, anyway) is that I haven't persuaded them to bloom and bear fruit here. Both species seem to freeze to the ground when the temperature gets close to the 0-degree mark; at first I thought they must bear fruit on old wood, and that was the problem.

But I've read books that advise cutting them back heavily in the spring, anyway, so I guess old wood isn't necessary. Anyone out there getting fruit on these things?

There's a whole family of nice viburnums — enough to fill a book, rather than a column. They tend to be big (from 6 to 20 feet, depending on which species you pick), and just about all of them except for the common snowball produce berries. Those can be in a rainbow of colors, depending on species and cultivar.

There are two that I know grow easily here. The wayfaring tree (Viburnum lantana), which seldom gets more than 8 feet tall despite its name, has downy leaves and a sturdy but flexible branching habit that should help it resist ice and piled-on snow.

The cherry-leaf viburnum (Viburnum prunifolium) is about the same size but very different looking: It has shiny leaves that do resemble those of cherries.

All of these shrubs can take sun, though the beautyberries can appreciate some afternoon shade and the cherry-leaf viburnum doesn't seem to mind it.

Happy planting!
