CATTLE.

Bulk of Supply Southern, Market in Good Active Tone.

While there was more of a total of cattle here today than has been common for this day of the week the supply was largely made up of southern yarded over in the quarantine division. For the few natives there was a ready outlet and prices were well sustained on a basis of the stronger market established on former days of the week. The best of the fed cattle were some at medium weights that went over early in the day at $7.40 and a sale was considered good and long. The entire contingent of natives was taken out of first hands at an early hour and the market for the week practically closed on a good and encouraged basis of prices.

QUARANTINE DIVISION.

The largest run of quarantine cattle for the week, about 1,000 head, was here today. The trade wanted cattle and the market was active with prices strong to a dime higher. More southern cows are wanted at this price.

HOGS.

Another 10 to 15 Cent Slump, Lowest Since May.

Hogs sold lower today than they have since the first week in May, and with one exception the lowest since last February. The supply was not large at any of the leading points but the packers were bearish at all markets and forced a decline in prices all around. At the start this morning there was some buying at not more than a dime under the market of yesterday but as the forenoon progressed there was a further weakening in prices and heavy grades of good quality and all offerings on the commission order in quality met slow sale at prices that were 10 to 15 cents under prices for the same grades of stock yesterday.

WANT MORE CANNERS

The St. Joseph market wants more cattle than have been coming here during the current week. This is true of all grades of killing stock and is notably so of the canner grades of cows. It is a fact that Kansas City speculators have been buying canners on that market during this week, shipping them here and making good money on them. The country might as well get this profit by shipping the canners direct to this market. There are not many of the southwestern cows coming as yet and this is causing the packers to bid well for the native stock that will fit the canner trade.

The demand is also good for all of the fat kinds of native steers, and shippers will find it to their advantage to send more of their shipments to this market as the packers have announced that they want more of the good fat corn-fed beef to go along with the beef made from the southwestern cattle.

AFFECT STOCK MARKET.

But Few Feeders Purchased at This Time.

"This is a time of year when conditions in the country are sharply reflected in the stock market," said a dealer in stock cattle at the stockyards yesterday. "The backward spring has thrown corn cultivation, hay and wheat harvest upon the farmers all at once and you don't find any of them on the market looking for the young cattle that should be out in the pastures growing into our next winter's supply of beef. The farmers will not leave their work at this time to come in and buy cattle. Another factor against a lively inquiry for stock cattle is the fact of the weather becoming threateningly dry in some sections. I look for a good bid demand for cattle to go back to the country later on if we get rain soon enough to start the grass and insure the corn crop."

HOGS NOT PLENTIFUL.

Many Spring Pigs Dying Off in Hiawatha District.

Rosa Zimmers, a prominent farmer and feeder, was down today with a mixed car from his feed lots at Hiawatha, Kan. They were good medium weights and sold well. He says farmers in that part of the country are not feeding as many hogs this summer as they have been accustomed to, the high price of corn being the reason given. Mortality among spring pigs has been quite large.

ITEMS IN BRIEF.

The Farmers Protective Elevator Association of Alexandria, Neb., was represented here today with one load of hogs.

M. C. Sanders, a large farmer and feeder of Shambaugh, Ia., sent down one car of hogs again today.

MANY MEN RESPOND TO CALL

Many More Could Find Employment to Take Care of Crop.

Topeka, Kan., June 29.—The big rush of the wheat harvest is now on in fifty counties in Kansas. The call for 40,000 men to help in the harvest fields has been responded to by probably 25,000, and as many more could be used in the wheat and alfalfa cutting with profit.

The western half of Kansas will harvest this year its best and heaviest wheat crop. Out near the Colorado border the yield will run close to twenty-five bushels per acre, and in a few counties some fields will exceed this. Beginning along the southern tier of counties ten days ago, the hum of the header and binder have been heard on every hand.

Sunday Work If Necessary. Kansas respect Sunday as a day of rest, and for religious worship, but they consider it a duty to go into their fields and work on that day to save their crops, if that is deemed necessary.

The local employment agencies have been deluged with calls for hundreds of men from all sections of southern and central Kansas and Oklahoma. In Oklahoma the word comes that many fields of wheat is so ripe that it is falling to the ground.

Alfalfa Demands Great. The demand for men to help in the harvest of Kansas' great crop of alfalfa is almost as insistent as that for the wheat fields.

DESERT BLOOMS

Lost River Tapped and Water Used to Make Lands Productive.

ONE OF IRRIGATION WONDERS

Flourishing Farms Where But a Few Years Ago Was Nothing But Sand.

Deming, N. M.—Private capital is accomplishing wonderful things in many parts of the southwest in the way of reclaiming arid lands. These projects are not of great magnitude when considered singly, but in the aggregate they are doing more to bring prosperity and contentment to the people than the great government reclamation enterprises of which so much is written. This new era of development began only a few years ago and is spreading with a rapidity that promises to make this vast region of desert sand an agricultural Aforesaid.

When the water is not available on the surface for irrigation purposes, the energetic homesteaders delve into the earth and bring forth a bountiful supply. The southwest is noted for its so-called lost rivers. Many of these streams come out of the mountains where they are fed by the snows of winter and perennial springs, only to disappear into the gleaming sand, perhaps not to reappear upon the surface again for several hundred miles.

The phenomena of the "lost" Mimbres river has long been a subject of interest to geologists and scientists who have investigated the water resources of this part of the southwest. This river has its source in the mountains north of Deming, the flows in a cold stream until it gets within a distance of about twenty miles of Deming, when it suddenly plunges headlong into the sands. It follows a channel beneath the surface until it gets beyond the boundary line between the United States and Mexico, when it again makes its appearance in the form of a large lake.

The course of this stream underground takes the form of a broad valley, and at any spot in this depression an almost inexhaustible supply of water is obtainable by means of wells. The life-giving supply of fluid seems to percolate the underground sand over a broad scope of territory. So great is this available water supply that it is claimed by visionary boomers that by digging a canal 20 to 30 feet deep and 75 to 100 feet wide along the course followed by the underground river, Deming would be given water navigation.

How River Was Lost.

It is the theory of scientists that the Mimbres river was covered by the erosion from the mountains that was brought down by the periodical overflows and that it could be restored to its natural flow by removing this surface obstruction. Many relics of a great civilization have been found 10 to 20 feet beneath the present surface sand, which fact goes to support the theory that the river was gradually choked and covered by the silt that it brought down from the mountains. With the deepening of the sand, the moisture beneath could not reach the vegetation that grew above, and in time the broad valley became a desert. The memory of some of the old settlers runs back to the time when grass grew luxuriantly and afforded the best cattle grazing ground in the southwest all along the course of this "lost" river. But that was many years ago.

Human energy and ingenuity are rapidly bringing about a transformation of the territory between Cook's Peak and the Florida mountains. The desert is being reclaimed on a scale that has already added an enormous amount of wealth to this part of New Mexico. Individual farmers are doing the work. They are tapping the underground river in many spots, always obtaining a water supply to irrigate their lands and produce abundant yields of crops.

It is in the Deming section that the successful utilization of electricity in the operation of small pumping plants may be seen in the highest stage of development. A central power plant was installed here and electric transmission lines run out in different directions for the benefit of the farmers. Some of these wells have a capacity of 1000 gallons of water per minute, and all that a farmer has to do in order to flood his crops with water is to touch a button. Upon every farm are these wells and systems of irrigation. It is claimed that the cost of the well, installing the pump, motor and other necessary equipment is only about $500. The electric power can be put to many other uses, such as operating farm machinery, lighting the residences and barns and lightening the labors of the households in various ways. This system of farming by means of electricity is said to be more extensive in the Deming section than in any other locality of the United States. It is rapidly doing away with gasoline engines and other power methods.

Use Gravity Ditches.

The farmers in the upper portion of the valley obtain their water supply from the Mimbres river by means of gravity ditches. Many of the men who are employed in the work of reclaiming the land of this region came from California, where they had experience in raising fruit and various other kinds of agricultural products. It was through these men that the industry of growing California pink beans, or frijoles, was introduced. It has proved highly profitable. J. J. Jacobson, who has a farm eighteen miles north of Deming, raised 100 acres of these beans last season. He says that he threshed 1600 pounds per acre and received 1 cents a pound for the beans on the cars. The bean crop requires comparatively little moisture, one flooding of the ground before planting and two while the plants are growing being all that is necessary.

Apples and alfalfa is the cry of many of the Mimbres Valley farmers. Splendid fruit orchards and many fields of alfalfa are to be seen on every side in driving along the roads leading over the valley. The alfalfa cuts an average of five tons per acre per season.

The impressive amount of land reclamation work that has already been accomplished in the Mimbres Valley by means of private capital is only the forerunner of what is to follow, according to the views of men who have made a study of the possibilities of the land and the inexhaustible water supply. Of the 7,500,000 acres of land in New Mexico there are less than 1,000,000 acres in cultivation. The agricultural awakening has dawned, however, and in many of the smaller valleys, where water is available for irrigation, the desert land is being made to grow many blades of grass where none grew before.

Heavy investments of private capital in irrigation enterprises are also being made in many parts of western Texas and in Arizona. The Pecos river and Toyah Creek, which flow through the most arid part of Texas, are already giving up vast quantities of their life-giving fluid for the development of the crop-growing possibilities of the soil. Only recently an irrigation company with a capital stock of $1,500,000 was formed for the purpose of constructing a canal and ditch system in western Texas to reclaim 22,000 acres of land situated above the valley of the Pecos river. The main canal of this proposed irrigating system will be sixty-five miles long. It will carry the water to level stretches of desert upland which no one ever dreamed until recently of being susceptible of irrigation. In the vicinity of Fort Stockton, Tex., the immense flow of springs is being utilized to irrigate many tracts of farm land, although the locality is at present fifty miles from the nearest railroad point.

Valley of the Pecos.

The wonders that have already been accomplished by means of placing water upon the land in the upper valley of the Pecos river in New Mexico around Roswell and Artesia, where hundreds of acres are in apple orchards and waving fields of alfalfa are well known to all persons who have kept track of the agricultural development of the southwest.

Water is the most valuable asset of the southwest. By its proper use an agricultural empire may be made of this arid region. Without water the land is practically worthless, except for cattle or sheep grazing purposes. The moment a water supply for irrigation is developed for a particular piece of land its value instantly mounts to from $50 to $100 per acre. Many young men who took public lands as homesteaders have suddenly found themselves well to do by the discovery of a water supply, either from flowing stream or wells, that was available for the purpose of irrigation.

Dry farming has its earnest advocates all through the southwest and much good in the matter of land reclamation is being accomplished along that line in different localities, but it is from the irrigation of the soil that the greatest possibilities exist in the way of profitable revenue, it is claimed. Water is now being brought to the surface by means of pumping in many arid localities where it was formerly thought such a thing as obtaining a supply sufficient for irrigating even the smallest tract of land was an impossibility. These wells irrigate anywhere from 10 to 100 acres. In most sections of the southwest cheap Mexican labor is available, and this lessens the cost of growing the crops.

LAMB LOVES TROLLEY RIDES

Animal Boards Car Repeatedly, Conductor Permits It to Stay.

Kansas City, Kan., June 30.—Andrew Brugh, a lively man of this city, has a lamb that insists upon taking street car rides. This little creature a few days ago boarded a trolley car on the Grandview division of the city system when the car stopped to pick up passengers near the stable where the lamb is kept.

"Whose lamb is this?" demanded A. A. Pettit, the conductor.

All declared that they were not the possessor of the lamb, so the conductor threw the little animal to the street as he rang the starting bell.

But the lamb was not intending to go home without a car ride and showed its persistent disposition by taking the car for a "header" and galloping after it until it stopped again. After this had been repeated several times the conductor became weary and tied it in the vestibule. At the car barn he notified the division superintendent. Before the car had returned the owner of the lamb, who had heard it had gone for a "joy ride," had called up the car barn and asked if they would bring it back. The lamb was returned safely to the barn and appeared to be satisfied with its trip.

Since then the lamb tugs at its rope whenever it hears the bells of a passing street car.

BLEACHED FLOUR BEST.

Is the Opinion of Local Men in Kansas City Court.

Kansas City, June 30.—St. Joseph men told what they thought of the bleaching process in the bleached flour trial in the United States district court this morning. R. R. Clark, manager, and J. C. Dolan, head miller of the Davis Milling company at St. Joseph, both testified that they thought bleached flour made better bread than unbleached flour.

Both told of a test made at the mill to determine the amount of shrinkage in weight caused by the bleaching. They ran 3500 pounds of unbleached flour through the bleaching machine and afterward they found they had lost thirty-seven pounds in the pro-
