Hardly small change

Robert Massengale, a retired Lubbock city employee, is separating dirt and debris from about 7.6 million pennies that spilled out of a tractor-trailer during a traffic accident Oct. 4 as they were being transported from the U.S. Mint in Denver to San Antonio.

Massengale, hired by an insurance company to clean the pennies, hopes to finish the job within 60 days.

"I hope we can find somebody to take them in bulk rather than having to roll all of them" into 50-cent packs, he said.

Soaring safari takes off

Visitors to the Philadelphia Zoo soon will get to see the animals from a whole new perspective.

Officials announced plans for a tethered balloon that will carry passengers 400 feet above the zoo. Called "Soaring Safari," the 126-foot balloon will carry 20 to 30 people.

Philadelphia will be the first zoo to have such a balloon, which is scheduled to debut in June. The balloon replaces a monorail that gave tours around the zoo from 1968 to 1998. It was closed as too old to repair.

Hug is a record-breaker

Paddock Elementary School organized the hug on the last day of classes in June at a field behind the school. Officially, 1,478 huggers stood for 10 seconds to accomplish the feat, shattering the previous record of 899.

Area dairymen plan to present the public with "the state of the industry" during a meeting scheduled for 7 p.m. (Mountain time) Thursday in the Clovis Community College Town Hall.

The meeting comes as a group called Concerned Citizens for Clean Water has announced plans to seek a five-year moratorium on dairy and feedlot expansion in Bailey, Roosevelt and Curry counties.

Art Schaap, a well-known dairyman in the Clovis-Portales area, said Tuesday, "We're just going to let people know what we're doing. We'll have people at the meeting who know science, who can answer any questions that people have."

Paul Elders of Ranchvale, N.M., spokesman for the environmental group, has made presentations arouind the area stating that the area's groundwater reserve is minimal to non-existent and that the waste from "factory dairies" is roughly twice what dairymen say it is.

Elders' figures indicate that when Curry County had 14 dairies, the waste being generated was equal to that of a city of 1.05 million people.

Schaap said, "Basically, the guy is making accusations and attacks that are not true. We just hope people will come out and find out what is really happening."

Curry County Commission Chairman Pete Hulder of Clovis said Tuesday that he has seen Elders' presentation but would not comment until he hears the other side

Mules force another overtime before falling 66-57

By DELTON WILHITE Journal sportswriter

The Mules fought their way to their second overtime in less than a week but lost again Friday — this time in a 66-57 heartbreaker to Shallowater.

The free-throw line has almost taken on a life of its own for the Mules as they converted three of eight charity tosses in the final two minutes.

Shallowater's Eric Morris slashed to the bucket and sent up a prayer that went in; then he was given a free one for his effort to knot the game at 53 and send the Mules into another overtime.

Three Mustangs scored 56 of the team's 66 points, with Morris and Kiel Kitchens leading all scorers with 20 each and Clay Cristy adding 16. Morris hit from just past the city limits to send the Mules a message to open the game.

D.J. Domínguez delivered the answer from outside the arc at the top of the key as the first minute of play came to a close.

The teams jockeyed for advantage in the first frame, and Brennan Broyles closed the period with a two as the Mules trailed 17-14.

The Mules pounded the ball inside to Lincoln Riley to take the lead early in the second period and reach a 32-29 margin by intermission.

Riley put in eight during the quarter for the Mules. Broyles and Luis Sánchez hit

Lady Mules dip to 4-1 in district

By DELTON WILHITE Journal sportswriter

Thepredicted head-on collision between the Lady Mules and Shallowater took place Friday, but the Lady Mules never seemed to get up to speed, losing 49-41.

They seemed to always be standing along the lane on the Lady Mustangs' end of the court watching Shallowater attempt 33 free throws, 25 in the second half.

Katy Pounds led the charge for Shallowater with 16 points, scoring only twice from the floor but knocking down 12 of 18 free throws. Niki Timms added eight points for Shallowater.

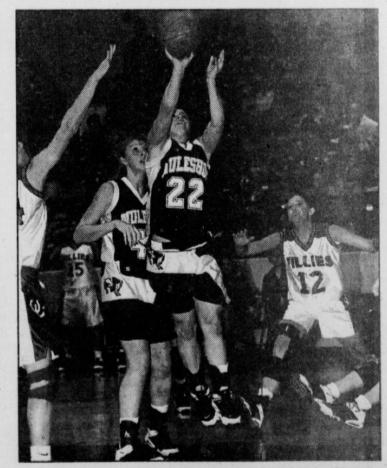

The Lady Mules were able to tie the game only once, early in the first period when Sara Benham grabbed a Shallowater pass and got the ball to Britni Gartin. Gartin was drilled on the layup attempt but made both ends of a two-shot foul less than one minute into the Shani Rasco blocked a put-back attempt by 6-7 Sara Broome, but the loose ball went to a Lady Mustang who put the ball up and in as Shallowater made three buckets in a row.

Benham made two free throws and then made a move around Broome to cut the Shallowater lead to two points with less than three minutes left in the first period.

Shallowater missed two freebies at the end of the first period but still led Muleshoe 12-6. The Lady Mustangs pushed their advantage to 25-17 by intermission despite Rasco completing an oldfashioned three-point play.

Maybe we take things for granted •

Have you ever thought about some of the things we take for granted that have just "always" been there, things like deodorant or toothpaste for instance, or breath mints or gum?

If we've eaten something with spices in it, we just pop in a stick of "winterfresh" and go, not even thinking about what in the world we would do if we had to face the world with garlic breath.

It seems silly, I know, but how many modern conveniences do we just assume have been around forever and will always be there?

If we run out of something we can just "run" to the store, what if we really had to run? Or what if, as in so much of the world, there was no store to "run" to? No cash on Saturday night, go to the ATM.

Have you ever wondered what it would be like to be the smelly person? Imagine if we had no way to stay "powder-fresh" all day?

How much more responsible would today's society be if we actually had to plan things like "running" to the store or a random trip to the mall? Things wouldn't be so haphazard if we had to make sure everything was in line before we left the house.

I'm as bad as, or worse than, the next person that's why I was suddenly struck with this idea.

How about indoor plumbing, or plumbing in general?

There are so many things we just overlook.

Bonilla popped out on the arc and tied the game at 11 with a three from the top of the key. Cooper scored the final two points of the quarter.

In the second frame, Cooper went on a 9-3 run to take a 24-16 halftime lead.

After the Mules had spent the whole second quarter stuck on 13, Barry Morris blasted the Mules off again when he dropped in a three for the Mules one minute before half.

But then, the Mules left their offense in the dressing room at half. Kory Atwood nailed a three from the corner for the Mules' only points of the third period.

The Pirates owned what appeared to be an insurmountable 34-19 lead as the final period began. Thomas Buenrostro got the Mules cranked 15 seconds into the quarter when he scored

Book details eating cheaply in Vegas

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

LAS VEGAS, Nev.-A new book reveals hundreds of dining bargains in and around the Las Vegas area.

The book, 777 Cheap Eats in Las Vegas (Triple Seven Press), reveals more than 777 dining bargains found within and around the Las Vegas area.

Wendy Y. Tucker, author of the self-published book, is a native and lifelong resident of Las Vegas and owner of The Paperless Office, a document imaging and paperless office solutions company.

What constitutes a "cheap eat"? "A cheap eat must represent good quality and great value for the price," Tucker said. "Over 700 of the listings are under $10."

The book idea was contrived after the author left a stressful job in the computer industry and began thinking about alternative ways to make a living.

"One of my brainstorming sessions developed into the idea for the book—a list of 777 of the best food bargains I could findhere....Ieven findmyself referring to it when I want an inexpensive meal. I hope locals and tourists will find it

The book can be purchased by phone at (800) 431-1579, the Internet www.bookch.com, or ask for it in your local bookstore.

The book is also available in large quantities with customized covers for use as a sales premium or incentive gift. For bulk sales, inquiries may be directly to the publisher, Triple Seven Press at (702) 737-8637 or at 777press@lasvegas.com.

Vaccine helps protect at-risk people

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

It kills 40,000 people in the United States each year — more than all other vaccine-preventable diseases — and, combined with influenza, is the seventh leading cause of death for Tex-

But many potential victims of pneumococcal disease don't get the one shot that could protect them from a possibly deadly infection of the lungs, the blood or the coverings of the brain, Texas Department of Health officials report.

Anyone can get pneumococcal disease, says Lisa Davis, the Health Department's adult immunization coordinator. But hose most vulnerable are over 65 and anyone 2 or older who has diabetes, heart or lung disease or other long-term health problems or lowered resistance to infection.

"Those are the people who need the protection of the pneumococcal polysaccharide vaccine," Davis said.

The culprit is the bacteria Streptococcus pneumoniae, one common cause of pneumonia, bacteremia and meningitis.

Drugs such as penicillin once were effective in treating infections such as these, Davis said. But the disease has become more resistant to antibiotics, making treatment of pneumococcal infections more difficult and preventions through vaccination even more important.

Those who should get the vaccine include:

· All adults 65 or older.

 Anyone 2 and older who has a long-term health problem such as heart disease, lung disease (not including asthma), sickle-cell disease, diabetes, alcoholism, cirrhosis or leaks of the cerebrospinal fluid.

 Anyone 2 and older who has a disease or condition that can lower the body's resistance to infection. These include Hodgkin's disease, lymphoma and leukemia kidney failure, multiple myeloma, nephrotic syndrome, HIV infection or AIDS, damaged spleen or no spleen or organ transplant.

· Anyone 2 and older who takes long-term steroids or certain cancer drugs or receives radiation therapy.

· Alaskan natives and certain Native American populations.

Davis said people 65 and older especially those living in group settings such as nursing homes and long-term care facilities — and those identified as being at risk for pneumococcal illness are more vulnerable to infection. "The idea is to prevent the infection from happening in the first place, and PPV is an effective and easy way to do that."

The vaccine is in adequate supply, she says, and one dose is all most people need — although there are a few exceptions to the one-dose rule. "If you were vaccinated before 65, and it's been at least five years since you received your PPV shot, you should ask your doctor if you need a booster," Davis said.

Others who may be candidates for a booster shot after five years include those with functional or anatomic asplenia, transplant patients, patients with chronic kidney disease and those who are immunosuppressed or immunodeficient, she added

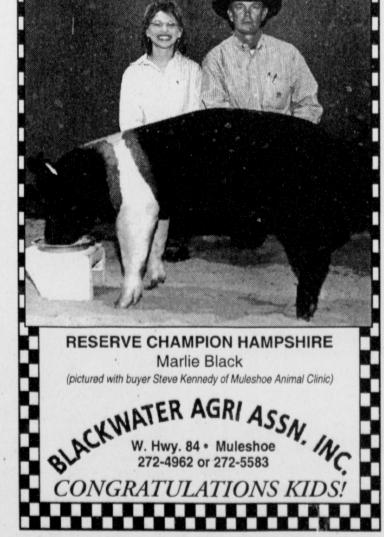

Pneumococcal disease doesn't have a season, Davis said, although some infections seem to be more common in the winter and spring. "When you get the vaccination is not as important as that you do get it. A lot of people choose to get their PPV shot when they get their influenza vaccine because it is convenient to do both at the same time."

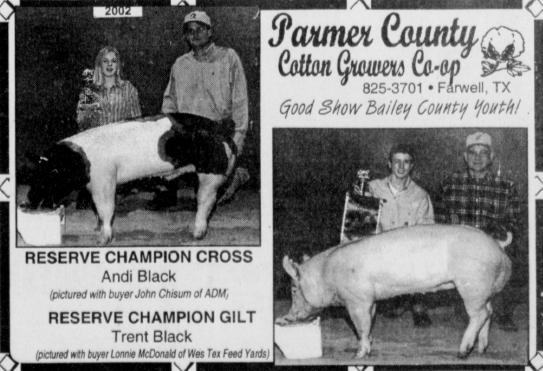

More than 55 percent of Texans 65 or older have received at least one dose of PPV. Health officials are aiming for a 90 percent vaccination rate for those 65 or older by 2010.
