Valley Visitors Learn R.R. History Emergency Landing In Mexico

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The first part of this story concerning four Muleshoe men's trip to Los Mochis, Mexico and their tour of nearby El Fuerte Valley appeared in last Sunday's issue of the Bailey County Journal. The men were: Donald Harrison, Morgan Locker, Roger Wilson and Herbert Ramage, Dan Cordan joined them at Juarez for the trip.)

At Topolobampo, they stayed at the intriguing Yatch Motel, the restaurant was a decked affair with a large dining area and Continental Cuisine fore-and-aft with the top deck for entertainment, orchestra and dancing.

They spent the afternoon fishing and Wilson caught the only fish. The other 3 drew a blank, which was credited to their boatman being a youngster, much more interested in operating the boat than in fishing. Other fishermen talked to had brought in quite a catch, including a commercial shrimp, who offered to take them out again for 30 pesos per hour.

The restaurant owner and employees were most gracious hosts," the group said. At dinner that night, they had just ordered when the lights went out due to power failure. The waiters became very excited, flustered and were very apologetic for the inconvenience. They hastily gathered candles to light their table and served the first course of the meal, Turtle Soup followed by steaming platters of Red Snapper, with little delay.

Of the ever-famous Chihuahua al Pacifico Railroad, they learned that it had as its inceptor, Albert Kinsey Owen, disciple of Robert Owen, a Utopian Socialist founder of the Cooperative Colony of New Harmony, Indiana.

Owen arrived in Mexico in 1871 and traveled up and down the Pacific Coast seeking a location for the city.

Morrison Inc. Moves For City Annexation

Billy Morrison, an officer of Morrison Improvement and Development Inc., developers of the Country Club addition, this week discussed the future of the addition with the Muleshoe Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors. Morrison voiced considerable concern over the water situation in the 500 lot addition which is considered by many to be the logical future growth area of the city. According to Morrison there are currently 33 families in the addition which are currently being served by two small pressure pumped wells.

Recently Morrison has approached the city with a request that it bring the entire area into the city limits. "The city will do this our company will pay half the expense of the city bringing city water to the residents and remainder of the area," he stated. The entire cost will amount to about $10,000, according to

Owen arrived in Mexico in 1871 and traveled up and down the Pacific Coast seeking a location for the city.

Morrison believes the city has taken the stand that residents of the area should carry the cost of piping and other necessary installations, and further believes that they should carry this cost, they will actually be paying for it twice "because when the city does take us into the city limits these people will have to pay taxes and also water service charges on their own system."

Rumors that two recent wells dug on the property by the investment company are "gyp" are denied as "completely untrue" by Morrison.

The possibility exists that the area might incorporate within itself and remain outside the city entirely, and thus split the growth of the community. The city council has no comment at the present time other than that the matter is under study.

and chose Topolobampo. He planned to found a colony which was to be named Pacific City. He formed a Mexican-American Company that had a project, the building of a railroad the would unite Midwestern United States with his newly discovered place. Owen was successful in this and the first colonists arrived in 1886. Soon sickness, misery, the characteristics of their organization and lack of communication reduced the number from 600 to 150. Progress was slow and in 1890 internal strife began. Members of the original colony disbanded and three different colonies antagonistic among themselves were formed. By 1889 the colonists had returned to their original homes and Owen accepted his failure. He later described his project in an essay entitled "East and West" which was published that year.

The franchise he had obtained for the building of the railroad was cancelled in 1899 with not one yard of rail put down. The stormy history of the railroad lasted from that time until its completion in 1952. Many men, many franchises, and many mergers were involved, each ending in failure and each giving the section of their disjointed lines a different name. The final connecting length was planned in 1940 and construction was begun in 1943. It was the difficult stretch of mountainous country from Creel to Hornillos. The mountain stretch has 72 tunnels and 39 bridges. Among the longest tunnels are "El Descanso", almost two kilometers and "La Pera", one kilometer, built on a curve. The longest bridge is "El Fuerte" which is 45 meters high. "Chinipas", the second longest bridge is 30 meters and is 90 meters high.

The almost impossible task brought about the bankruptcy of a number of wealthy men, not to mention the tribulations of the task itself. Being delayed on take off, due to involvement in Cordan's business transactions, Locker was dubious of leaving Los Mochis at 3:30 p.m. with the treacherous Sierra Madra range to cross. (See Visitors Page 7)

Originaly conceived in the Retail Activities Committee of the Muleshoe Chamber of Commerce, this group is seeking to ascertain if there are real benefits to be obtained from such a program and if there is an area-wide interest in it.

Cotton is the number one cash crop throughout this area, and many industry people feel that something must be done to protect it from the inroads of synthetic fibers. It is believed that one thing that can certainly be done is for area residents to buy and use cotton products and encourage others to do the same. This belief has led many communities to have a cotton week or other special campaign or event.

Local interest was aroused recently when Coot Arnold, Levelland department store operator, described last year's cotton week in Hockley county at the monthly meeting of the Retail Activities Committee. Arnold assessed the event as the finest promotion of any kind ever held in Levelland. After the meeting, Douglas Haynes, chairman of the group appointed Bill McDonald to head a special subcommittee to look into the possibilities of such activity for this area. Meeting with McDonald's group last night were Ed Little Bobby Airhart, Harmon Elliott, Leon Smith Jr., Earl Richards, Horand Roy Davis. McDonald stressed that they are anxious to hear opinions of the projects and asked interested groups, organizations, and individuals to contact the group.

School Board Officers Named At Meeting

W. E. Myers Board President; Football Field Lighting Approved

Muleshoe Independent School District's hard fought $900,000 bond issue passed by a more than two-to-one margin in a vote of confidence election this week.

Joe Embry and Horace Edwards were elected to the board. Embry received 459 votes and Horace Edwards received 482 votes. Other candidates for the two vacant posts were Roy Wrinkle, James Warren and R. L. Scott.

Warren received 457 votes, only two votes less than Embry. Roy Wrinkle received 206 votes, and R. L. Scott, 343.

Total vote in favor of the bond issue was 729 for and 356 against, according to official counts.

At a special meeting of the new board Monday night W. E. Myers was elected board president, C. V. Riley, vice-president and Horace Edwards, secretary.

It is expected that contracts between the school board and Rittenberry and Rittenberry & Assocs. will be signed at Monday's meeting of the board.

Representatives of the Texas Municipal Bond Co. of Dallas and Lubbock will meet with the school board Monday to work out final details and sign a contract for the sale of the $900,000 worth of bonds.

Even today the board is working out final details of plans for the school expansion with members of Rittenberry and Rittenberry, Amarillo architects who will execute the boards plans for the contractor.

According to Dillman, actual construction is expected to start on the new facilities in 90 to 12 days. The board and architects are studying construction problems now and have not yet decided whether or not the contract will be let as a whole or whether or not it will be divided into smaller contracts with different companies handling each segment.

Dillman and the board are of the opinion now that it would be less expensive to let the entire contract to one company but may change their minds after further study and discussion.

Priority will be given to the early start and completion of the new Mary DeShazo School and the addition of eight classrooms to the Junior High School building, according to the board. Its reasons for this are the safety overcrowding factors which will come to the fore here next year.

The new board's first action after being sworn in Monday was to approve a $15,750 contract to completely relight the Muleshoe Football Field.

Quartz lighting guaranteed to deliver 14 candle foot of light over the entire field will replace the present old lighting system. (See Officers Page 7)

Le Veque, 171
Gilbreath, 148
Holt, 107
Total Vote: 426

Wilbur Le Veque is Muleshoe's new mayor.

He won over Rufus Gilbreath by a narrow margin of 31 votes in light voting Tuesday. The third candidate, Horace Holt, came up with 107 votes.

Le Veque who stated Wednesday morning that he went into office "with no beef, other than to provide good government and treat everybody fairly, has been a resident here for about 15 years.

He has been with the Plainview Production Credit Association all that time. Presently he is manager of the association. Le Veque is married and the father of one married son, Martell. The son lives in Littlefield and is the father of two children.

He is a Democrat. His wife is the former Oberietta Millican. They make their home at 510 Chicago, here.

The total vote was 426. Although the vote was large in comparison with past years, it is against the city's total population base.

Basing the current population on a solid 5,000 persons, about half of which are of voting age or over would place the total possible vote at roughly 2,500. The 426 votes cast amount to less than 17 percent of the possible (See Demos Page 7)

New Board Appointed As Library's Leaders

Stinson And Howard Join Life Members Roster

The entire board of directors of the Muleshoe Area Public Library resigned voluntarily this week in order to make way for a new board which will be legally constituted under state law.

The old board which had between 15 and twenty members — no one seems quite sure how many there were, was begun by the Muleshoe Study Club many years ago to administer the old courthouse library.

Members of the board and members of the Friends of the Library both felt that the old board was both unwieldy and partially inactive.

These feelings coupled with the unavoidable fact that in order to receive both state and national library associations' recognition and assistance, the board would have to be constituted on legal lines, led to the reconstitution.

The resigning board voted full approval of a slate presented by the F.L.A. The new board consists of Lester Howard, J. Frank Peery, Tom Hunke, Carl White, Mrs. Vic Benedict, Mrs. Horace Blackburn, Mrs. Roald Johnson. The city council will be asked to appoint the new library board as the official city recognized board in order to comply with state law.

The first official action of the group was to approve the closing of the old Muleshoe Library currently located in the courthouse. The library's books and equipment will be transferred to the new library at 114 Ash at the end of the month.

Thus checkout library services, other than the bookmobile, will cease here for an undetermined time. The length of time before checkout services again begin, here is dependent upon finances. The F.L.A. is currently making plans to obtain the necessary monies in various ways.

In other library news, two additional local men have joined the ranks of life members of the Muleshoe Area Public Library by contributing $100 each to the library fund. They are Commissioner Ike Stinson, who had consistently backed better library services in Muleshoe from the first and Lester Howard, well known Bailey County farmer and cattle feeder. The addition of these two brings the number of life members here to seven.

Rev. J. Frank Peery, chairman of the Muleshoe Public Library's memorial committee has announced that the memorial book fund has topped $2,100.

To date memorials have been given in the names of Willard Heathington, Mrs. Holly Bucy, Jack Cox, S. C. Caldwell, Al Cassidy, Mrs. A. H. Douglas, Al Mrs. E. E. Dyer, Dr. L. T. Green Jr. A. J. Gardner, Mrs. Byron Griffiths, Mrs. Pearl Gayle, A. D. Hallford, Mrs. Lilly Hunke, Mrs. Elmer Jones, Mrs. Gil Lamb, Paul Langford, Fred Millican, Mrs. A. H. Owen, Mrs. Beulah B. Perkins, Dr. T. M. Slemmons, H. E. Schuster, John Tate, and William Taylor.

In other library action, the bookmobile is definitely to make its first four county swing on April 15th, according to Georgia Pena, Librarian. The schedule is (See Library Page 7) election, according to Eli Douglas superintendent.

SPRINGLAKE

A slate of farmers was elected in Saturday's school board election at Springlake. Two incumbents and a new candidate topped the ballot for the three trustee posts.

C Of C Points Way Cotton Promotion

A special committee met Friday night to investigate the possibility of an all-out promotion of cotton products in the Muleshoe Area. Because of cotton's vital importance to the economy, a comprehensive campaign to emphasize that importance and increase the use of cotton manufactured goods has been proposed.

Originaly conceived in the Retail Activities Committee of the Muleshoe Chamber of Commerce, this group is seeking to ascertain if there are real benefits to be obtained from such a program and if there is an area-wide interest in it.

Cotton is the number one cash crop throughout this area, and many industry people feel that something must be done to protect it from the inroads of synthetic fibers. It is believed that one thing that can certainly be done is for area residents to buy and use cotton products and encourage others to do the same. This belief has led many communities to have a cotton week or other special campaign or event.

Local interest was aroused recently when Coot Arnold, Levelland department store operator, described last year's cotton week in Hockley county at the monthly meeting of the Retail Activities Committee. Arnold assessed the event as the finest promotion of any kind ever held in Levelland. After the meeting, Douglas Haynes, chairman of the group appointed Bill McDonald to head a special subcommittee to look into the possibilities of such activity for this area. Meeting with McDonald's group last night were Ed Little Bobby Airhart, Harmon Elliott, Leon Smith Jr., Earl Richards, Horand Roy Davis. McDonald stressed that they are anxious to hear opinions of the projects and asked interested groups, organizations, and individuals to contact the group.

Three members of the group visited Levelland Tuesday, and the entire group met Friday night at the First National Bank for discussion. Some of the possible features of such a program discussed were parades, electing a cotton queen, cotton fashion shows, cotton sewing contests, window display contests, cotton poster contests, cotton essay contests, advertising tie-ins and blanketing the area with signs, posters, and bumper stickers urging everyone to ask for cotton, buy cotton, and use cotton.

McDonald and Haynes approached the Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors at its regular meeting Monday night to seek their reaction. The board expressed considerable interest and went on record approving the proposal.

Local Ginners Attend National Convention

More than twenty persons attended the National Ginners and the Texas Cotton Ginners Association annual meeting in Dallas Sunday through Tuesday. Also meeting were the Plains Cotton Growers, representing 23 counties, numbering 25,000 growers from the High Plains.

Attending the Dallas conventions were Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Sweatman, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Nickels, Guy Nickels, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Richards, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Grey, Mr. and Mrs. Wilcy Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Little, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Millen, Calvin Meissner, and others were among the 5,000 attending the 3 day meetings.

United States markets for cotton were termed "almost out of control" by the principal speaker Monday at the 51st annual meeting of the T. C. G. A. at the State Fair Auto Building, Dallas. Joe Moss, director of cotton policy for the U. S. Department of Agriculture, said if new cotton legislation isn't passed the surplus may grow to more than $13,000,000 bales by the first of August this year.

A combination cotton and wheat bill is due for a vote in the House of Representatives Wednesday or Thursday of this week.

Moss said the cotton section of the bill would cost less than the present cotton program.

predicts a $700,000,000 saving to "The Commerce Department American consumers with lower cotton textile prices," he said.

The new bill would make U. S. cotton available to U. S. textile mills at about the same price foreign mills buy American cotton. The export cotton is subsidized out of the U. S. treasury to the tune of 8½¢ a pound.

Moss said American mills are buying U. S. cotton at about the same rate they did in 1956 though the population has risen more (See Ginners Page 7)

Former Resident Writes Of Earthquake

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the experience of Mrs. John Herring, the former Jackie Loller of Muleshoe, during the recent Anchorage earthquake.

Mrs. Herring is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Glasscock to whom she wrote the following letter. Mrs. Glasscock also has two brothers in Anchorage who are alright. The Herring family lives at Spenard, an Anchorage suburb.)

Dear folks, Good Friday started out well in our family. The kids usually sleep a little later on school holidays, but were up early to get started coloring the boiled eggs for Easter, and Eileen and I wanted to get to town early to get her a pair of shoes before the crowds got too big. We got to town shortly after the stores opened, did our shopping, and got on home. It is one of the few times I have been able to get downtown early - usually I get bogged down with phone calls or dirty dishes and such and dash down at the last minute. After lunch I put the finishing touches on a suit and blouse I was making to wear the next day to the annual conference of Professional Land Surveyors, and also for Easter Sunday. I am not an accomplished seamstress but I was very pleased with this pretty, pink wool suit. I had used some of the print I made the blouse from to put a new bank on an old black hat, and had a very pretty picture in my mind of how nice I would look in my new outfit. With the suit all finished I went on to mopping floors, and was working in the front hallway, mentally ticking off what remained to be done - "Bake a cake and make a jello salad and everything will be done for tomorrow and Sunday". It isn't often I have everything so well organized and I had a very good feeling of well being. About then I heard a rumbling noise and felt a slight tremor. Our place is on a highway used by the military to move heavy vehicles, and such rumblings and tremors are not at all unusual in our area. I went on mopping, but the noise was getting louder and the tremors a bit heavier, and curious about what sort of vehicle was big enough to start all this, I opened the door to take a look. I kept my car parked in the front yard and saw it swaying from side to side, like a cradle being rocked. The rumbling noise was now becoming a roar and the house was shaking considerably, but we weren't the least concerned because we have many tremors here and have been shaken up before. By then the children, who were all in the house, were realizing that we were having an earthquake, but remained where they were, unworried. I heard one of them remark from the living room "Hey! We're getting a pretty good one today, aren't we?" I was still in the doorway, almost mesmerized by the swaying motion of the car, and became aware of the trees across the road, swaying in a precise, rhythmic motion, like dancers in a chorus line. By now I was having to hang on to the door sill to stay on my feet and the house was rocking and swaying like a boat caught in a swell. The children had begun to gather around me, whimpering a bit, and I told them not to be afraid. Years before I had heard that a safe place during an earthquake was the door frames, and told them to stand in the doors and hang on. I was only vaguely aware of things falling inside the house and continued to stare out at the car and trees, like someone in a trance. At one point I thought of trying to get everyone outside but was afraid of being hit by falling trees. There were no trees falling, but I thought perhaps they might. They say the tremor lasted some 5 minutes - certainly long enough for my thoughts to have run through my mind, but once I was satisfied that the children were all right, I had no thought other than the one about getting outside. I was not scared because I simply did not believe what was happening. As the tremor was subsiding the neighbor's boy, Larry, ran up to see if we were all right. He was also in the house and was nearly caught under the refrigerator when it fell, and that their numerous flower boxes and pots were strewn all over, the TV and radios busted and dishes broken all over, but the house was O. K. Satisfied that we were safe he went on home to start mopping up. I was still standing in the doorway, quite limp now, and as I turned around limp now, and as I turned around to go back into the house I had difficulty standing and felt nauseous, like someone just coming off a giant roller coaster ride. We have a storage cabinet in our front entryway where we keep a little bit of everything, and I was surprised to see a goodly portion of the contents spilled out into the floor. It was piled all around my feet and I hadn't even been aware of its falling. The kids had run to other parts of the house and kept calling for me to come look! One of the first things we noticed was that the large mirror on the living room wall was still in place, in one piece. This was because the shock waves were moving in a west to east motion, and the mirror was on a north wall. If it had been on an East or West wall it would have been pitched off. A bucket of mop water I had left in the living room was sloshed all over, but the TV was still on its table. We have many books on shelves in the small hallway, and they were scattered everywhere, but a pair of carved, totem pole book-ends remained on the shelf. In the kitchen the coffee pot had fallen into the floor, the trash had tipped and was scattered all about, a lot of things had fallen into the sink, but there was only one broken glass. A large container of colored, boiled eggs remained intact on the cabinet, with one slightly cracked where a spice can had fallen on it. In the children's room there were more books strewn all over and my sewing machine had fallen from its table and the plastic casing on the plug-in was busted. The bathroom was a mess - bottles were thrown around everywhere - in the sink and on top of the stool - but the only thing broken was the plastic cap on a bottle of mouthwash, and the red liquid had merged with the spilled contents of a box of body powder, making a red paste over a good portion of the floor. Back out in the entryway a bottle of dog shampoo which long ago had lost its cap was leaking in the cabinet, a large jar of popcorn had broken and spilled its large jar of pickles, on which the lid hadn't been put so securely, was leaking its juice amongst the cans and old magazines and assorted paraphernalia. After this preliminary survey upstairs I went about turning off the electrical outlets and gas and oil lines, then checked on the basement. The pipes around the boiler were leaking pretty steadily, but all the sewage pipes seemed intact. Everything was pretty well scrambled around down there too - one table was not only tipped over but upside down.

We were still a bit shaken, but much heartened by the minimal damage we found. A boy who lives on the other side of us stopped by to say they were all O. K. and that most of their loss was broken dishes, so I was beginning to feel that perhaps this thing wasn't too bad after all. Our neighbors were safe, and what's a few pieces of broken crockery. Then Faye, Larry's mother, came home from her work at the postal annex, just adjacent to the International Airport and told us that the tower out there had collapsed, killing at least one man. This was our first knowledge that things were not so well in other parts of town. One of Faye's boys works at the Anchorage-Westward Hotel downtown and she was concerned about him and left immediately to check on him. About then John came home. I had not been worried about John because his work keeps him outside and I didn't feel he was in any real danger. Actually, I had lost track of time or I would have realized that he would be at the office downtown checking in for the day. He didn't say too much - just went about the business of checking things over for himself. By this time, about an hour after the initial onset, I had then fairly well cleared away in the house. Faye came home and said they hadn't been able to locate Kenny. She told us a little about the terrible mess downtown, and only then did fear and anxiety begin to creep in. Then John told me that he had been at the office when it happened, and that as the employees got themselves outside, the secretary, Nona Overby, who has been a friend for a long time, had wandered off in a daze to the front of the building and was caught there as the whole front had collapsed into the street. They dug her out and put her into a police car, still alive, but they didn't even know where she had been taken. Everyone had gone their separate ways then, all the rest of them safe, to check on their own families. The office is on the East end of 4th Ave. away from where the main damage occurred, and John was unaware of the extent of damages downtown. My emotions had been pretty well in check until John told me about Nona, then I started to cry. He spoke to me very sharply and told me this was no time to lose control. About then Kenny came home and said everyone had gotten out of the hotel all right, and they had witnessed a whole block shearing off and sinking some 20 feet. Only then did we begin to comprehend just a little of what had happened. Now our greatest concern was - will there be another damaging jolt? All of us dressed warmly, with slacks for Eileen and Les and I, and we put on heavy jackets, boots and even gloves. I packed a bag with extra clothing and gathered some food. John got out the tent and camp stove, and we put these things in the truck in case we needed them. It was now about 8 p.m., and with everything pretty well under control we remembered the transistor radio and tuned in to the civil Defense Station. Mostly they were telling us to stay home, not use the telephones except for a dire emergency, and stay alert for the possibility of another major shock. Our stove was working, so I heated up a bit of supper - no one was particularly hungry. We spent the rest of the night huddled in the living room listening to the reports of damages, not only to Anchorage but to the other communities as well. A tidal wave was expected to hit that night, but it didn't materialize. We prayed for Nona, as well as for all of us. We were having minor jolts off and on all through the night and each time we felt one we were ready to dash for the door. These are terribly hard on the nerves. We have always been able to take them for granted before, but I don't suppose we will ever be able to do it again. The kids would jump even if they heard a car go by, remembering the similar rumbling noise just prior to the quake. That sound will haunt me forever, but no one else I have spoken to remembers hearing it. All the next day we stayed home - still warmly dressed and not far from the radio. They continued to ask us to stay home and off the phones, but this is hard to do when you are worried sick about your friends around town. We made one quick call, and had a couple of calls. One friend, who lives at the end of 8th Ave. on the bluff said they had just left their apartment to take a friend out to Spenard when the thing hit. They weren't able to get back to check and see if they had anything left or not. The Wilkinsons stopped by and said they had sustained goodly damage to their basement foundations. They live out in the Rabbit Creek area, right close to the shoreline of

Turnagain Arm, and it appears that the fault line followed the shore along there, causing considerably more property damage out there than we had in our section here.

John fixed the boiler and we had heat again, but we kept on the jackets and boots. We stayed close to the radio, trying to comprehend each new report as it came in. We alternately prayed for those whose suffering and loss was so great and thanked God for our own fortunate circumstances. Every once in awhile John or I would wonder aloud if there wasn't something, somewhere, that we could be going, but once again we would hear the admonition from the radio to stay home unless called for. And so we sat. I was very keenly aware of the many times one of the children as come to me when I was busy, wondering if they couldn't help, and I couldn't hear myself reply "If you really want to help, sit down and be quiet." For the first time in many years I felt the frustrations of just sitting and being quiet. Later that day John went to the store to get a few grocery supplies, some extra flashlight and radio batteries, and get some gas for my car, which was almost empty. Since a goodly portion of Alaska's oil and gas storage tanks were destroyed by the tidal waves and fires at Valdez, Whittier, and Seward, our main port cities, these 2 commodities will be in short supply around here for awhile and are being rationed out. I remembered the vexation I had felt last week when the fuel delivery man had put 4 instead of the usual 20 gallons of furnace oil into our tank, and was grateful for that mistake. I briefly thought of the luncheon and banquet we were to have attended that day, and thought that I would never be able to wear that pink suit without remembering many terrible things.

By Saturday evening the electricity was on again, though hve still use it sparingly, and things were beginning to return to normal. The digging out and assessment of damages had already begun. Hospital and the old Providence residents (elderly people) had been evacuated to the New Providence, they seemed to be doing all right out there. It has been a miracle that there have been so few fatalities and casualties here. I understand some of the early figures released to the lower 48 were grossly exaggerated, which must have been hard on the families back home. The latest list is only about 10, I believe and although there may be others found later, that's a pretty low figure considering how badly hit the downtown area was at the peak going home time.

One thing that has been very evident was a lack of panic or weeping and wailing among the people. The thing that saved us from that was the almost unanimous lack of concern at the initial onset of the quake. By the time people realized what was happening they only had time to hang on or get out of a building, and when it was over their first concern was for the people around them. Bobbie said they were eating supper at the time, and even though dishes were bouncing around and they were rocking to and fro they went right on eating. Then Bob told Bobbie to get the kids outside. She said she look at him like he was crazy and asked why should they do that, and he gave her a queer look and said "Bobbie, do it NOW!". And so they went on outside, where they were promptly knocked to the ground, but they weren't particularly scared. A nurse at the hospital told me she had been at church downtown, waiting for mass to begin, and even though the candles were falling all around and didn't go home for another hour. An off duty policeman, asleep at home, woke up and asked his wife to "See if you can get those kids quieted down". The maintenance Engineer at the hospital said he was on 4th Ave. when it happened, and his was no doubt a typical reaction, too. He thought to himself, "This is it! This is the end, sure enough. But God, you don't have to prove a thing to me, I know you are here." I'm not saying there was no panic or hysteria. Of course there was, especially in some of the buildings where people could not get outside and out in the Turnagain area where all those homes were torn and twisted and the ground was disappearing right under peoples feet. The terror out there must have been great, indeed.

I saw the evidence of some of that terror on the face of a woman at the hospital last night, where I working in the gift shop. I noticed her in the lobby, talking with another woman, and was immediately struck by what I saw in her face. Despair, horror, disbelief, even perhaps a bit of hope, were all there. I saw that she was wearing a pair of jeans, a sweater, and a pair of bathroom scuffs, and from snatches of the conversation and her gesures surmised that she must have been in the Turnagain area and just gotten out by the skin of her teeth. Later on she came into the shop and said "Maam, I'm Mrs. Mead, Doctor Mead's wife, and I don't have a penny. Could you let me have 3 toothbrushes?" She also said they were living in the basement of the hospital for awhile. As she selected the 3 brushes, she said "Here's one for me, one for — and one for —", naming 2 of the children. I knew that she had at least 4 children, and I wondered why she hadn't taken brushes for all of them and felt concerned that perhaps some of them were now hurt or injured. I have since learned that 2 of her children are still in that rubble somewhere in Turnagain. It is entirely possible that they are still alive, but it is impossible to get to those homes because the ground there is so incredibly torn apart, with huge crevasses all about. That fearless face of Mrs. Meads is one more memory which will stay with me for a lifetime.

Saturday night was spent the same as Friday night. We still had on our heavy clothing and once again we huddled in the living room or lay on the floor to sleep. We slept a bit more soundly that night but still were aware of the little jolts which continue to jar us. I had a scary dream that we actually had a second major quake, but everyone was so soundly asleep that I couldn't get them awake to go outside. And so we passed the night, woke the next morning and prepared for church.

There were no Easter baskets at our house, or eggs hidden about as usual. Les and Dan, whom you would imagine would be the most concerned about these things, made no mention whatever of their omission. Kevin asked if he could hide a few eggs around for them and I said no. Neil became peeved at my attitude and said "Where is your Easter Spirit?" And I answered him "Son, perhaps for the first time in my life I can honestly say I have the Easter Spirit. Today I don't give a hoot about cute bunnies or colored eggs. All I can think of is Thank God for a Risen Christ and the promise of a newer, better, life." We joined our neighbors at church — our own Methodist Church was unhurt — a few in their Easter finery, some in slacks, skirts and sweaters, or what ever they had on their backs on Friday, but most of us in our usual Sunday attire, leaving the pink wool suits and flowery hats for less important events. We prayed and thanked God for his mercy and for the courage and stamina we will need to get this town back on its feet. And today we go out and start in earnest to accomplish this gargantuan task.

As I sat writing this I listened to the radio and heard a broadcast from the states. The announcer was talking about racial strife in the south. I was shocked, and thought, Dear God, how could such a thing exist after last Friday? I feel certain within my own heart that there isn't a soul in Alaska today who was here at 5:30 on Good Friday, who could ever again harbor a prejudice against another person because of color or creed. For one thing we're too darn busy working together for a common goal, but it's much more than that, too!

You might be interested to know that Nona is doing reasonably well at Providence now.

I have 2 requests to make of everyone. One is that you save some of the newspaper clippings of this story for me, and the other is that if you have any spare money, please send it to the Red Cross or Salvation Army here. There are many communities in Alaska which may need it worse than we do, and if you want your money to go to one of these communities, designate it so. But the office here is in better shape for getting it distributed to the right place. Tell your friends, too.

Love,
Mrs. John Herring

The 70 year old clergyman, ordained in Grace Lutheran Church, Cisco, Texas, July 5, 1925, comes to Lariat from Borger, where he pastored Trinity Lutheran church for sixteen and one half years. Under his leadership the church grew from a small mission with 67 members to a self supporting congregation of 225 members. Giving his reason for coming to Lariat, St. John's new pastor stated, "It was either that, or retiring in another year or two, I feel that I will be better satisfied and of greater service to the Kingdom by continuing in a smaller church than in retirement. If God continues to give me the good health that I have enjoyed in the past, I am looking forward to serving St. John for 12 more years, so that I can celebrate my 50th anniversary in the ministry with my boots on".

Follow the Chemagro Practical Cotton Program The Chemagro Practical Cotton Insect Control Program combines Di-Syston Systemic Insecticide with careful field checks to give you effective and low-cost control of cotton insect pests.

Plant your cotton with protection Di-Syston GRANULAR INSECTICIDE Good Early Growth with Di-Syston Di-Syston is a granular systemic insecticide that is applied in the furrow with seed at planting time. It protects cotton from damage caused by thrips, aphids and mites from the time it emerges, but it does not harm beneficial insects. Di-Syston kills harmful pests as soon as they pierce any part of the plant to suck plant juices. It gives your crop an early, vigorous start. Cotton sets fruit earlier to make high quality bottom bolls. Di-Syston works from inside the plant where it is unaffected by weather. It can't wash off or blow away. Control lasts from 6 to 8 weeks and more. And many growers report season-long suppression of red spider mite because of the excellent early-season control. For good early growth and more uniform stands, protect your cotton at planting time with Di-Syston. CHEMAGRO CORPORATION KANSAS CITY 20 • MISSOURI

Today's Meditation
SCRIPTURE: Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved. (Acts 4:12)

What a glorious pronouncement is given here by the Apostle Peter. These words echo and re-echo throughout the pages of time. They are a direct witness against the lifting up of any other person or philosophy as the means of obtaining salvation. In the realm of salvation it must be Jesus Christ, the Son of God. There is no other way open to man. It has to be Jesus or none at all. He has said, "I am the door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture."

Man will try anything except the way of the Cross. Man will try good works, reformation or any other method in his attempt to find salvation but he will not do what Jesus says in the Gospel of John. "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, ye must be born again." Because of his pride, man is not willing to surrender to God. The Bible teaches that if we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, he alternative of this is just as true. If we will not confess, he will not forgive. Let us then in the words of the publican cry out from the depth of our soul, "Lord be merciful to me a sinner" and He will hear and answer. Then we can know that we have passed from death to life because we believe on His name.

Crop Rotation Can Spell Success Or Failure

By RONALD HOOD

Conservation crop rotation is a necessary factor in the farming operations of this area. It can often spell the difference between success and failure, particularly in soils which are easily eroded. With a good rotation program, many fields can be kept productive indefinitely; without it, a field can be virtually ruined in a few short seasons.

What is conservation crop rotation? Basically, it is the planned use of crop rotation in order to sequence, plus the necessary management measures. It can be applied to any cropland.

Conservation crop rotation is necessary for several reasons. For instance, it helps to maintain or improve the physical condition of the soil. It protects the soil during the times when it is most subject to erosion. It aids in control of weeds, insects, and diseases. It also is designed to provide the necessary economic returns to the farmer.

In order to be a good system, it must meet certain qualifications. At least the minimum amount of soil improving crops, high residue crops and cover crops must be grown in the rotation. The necessary amounts are largely determined by the soil type and slope of the field. The crops, residues, cover, tillage, and fertility must be properly managed in an integrated program.

The Soil Conservation Service can supply recommendations as to both the amount and frequency of high residue or soil improving crops required on a given field. Often, the same crop may be considered both a high residue crop and a soil improving crop under proper use. Also, cotton burs and barnyard manure can fit into the program. In years of low residue production, residue can be supplemented with tillage so designed as to roughen the soil.

parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ves Patterson.

Frances Wiseman, student at West Texas State University, was home to spend the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wiseman.

Mrs. Don Dykes and daughter visited Friday afternoon with her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Horne in Clovis.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bellamy and daughter of Lubbock visited during the weekend in the homes of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Price, and Mrs. Edna Bellamy.

Under a typical conservation crop rotation program, a low residue, soil depleting crop, such as cotton, is followed by a high residue, soil improving crop, such as small grain or grain sorghum. The high residue crop must be planted, grown, and harvested in such a way as to leave at least the minimum amount of residue necessary to protect the soil and maintain a good level of organic matter. If, for some reason, a sufficiently high residue is not produced, the soil may be listed or chiseled. However, such a measure has no lasting benefit, and is only an emergency measure to protect against wind erosion. Fertilization and irrigation, when practical and necessary, should be used along with all of these measures in a conservation crop rotation.

Conservation crop rotation, as is the case with other programs for improving the use of our soil has been proven over a number of years to be both necessary and practical. Properly done, it will give good results. What you get out of it depends on what you are willing to put into it. It is no magical cure, but combined with all the other proven conservation methods, it can do its part to benefit this area's farming.

AUSTIN — Whom does cancer hit hardest — men or women? What part of the body is most vulnerable? Can cancer be cured?

Medical scientists know the answers to these most frequently asked questions about cancer, but do you? Does cancer hit men or women hardest? The race is close, but records show that younger women fall victim to the disease more often than men. In 1963, over 11,500 people died of cancer, the number two killer in Texas.

More older men than older women die of cancer, but between the ages 30 to 50, there are more cancer deaths among women than among men. Between the ages of 35 and 45, more women are killed by cancer than by an other disease. About 17 percent of all women's deaths are attributable to cancer; about 14 percent of all men's. What part of the body is most vulnerable? At the top of the fatality list is cancer of the digestive organs, which alone accounts for about 35 percent of cancer deaths.

Among women who die of cancer, the breast and the uterus are the most frequent sites, while cancer of the lung and of the stomach take the greatest toll among men. More than twice as many men die from lung cancer as from all forms of tuberculosis.

Can cancer be cured? There is no cancer cure-all, but early diagnosis and treatment saves lives. The rule that saves countless cancer victims and that could save countless more is "find it early." Yet without periodic examinations this is hard to do in cancer, since first symptoms usually come some time after the disease has gotten a start.

Pain and fever, those two armists of most other illnesses, do not appear until much later in most cancer cases. The only way to be on the safe side is to go at regular intervals — at least once a year — for a complete checkup.

McCLELLAN AND RIGHTS Senator McClellan (D., Ark.) has warned his colleagues of "confusion, instability and chaos" if they refuse to send the civil rights bill to the Senate Judiciary Committee. The Senate is so far considering only the motion to take up the bill. The Dixie forces, it is believed, will let this come to a vote.

Mall Combats Downtown Decay; Ups Values

POMONA, Calif. (AP) — Is your town's downtown feeling rundown? Are businesses shabby looking, poorly patronized or folding? Are they losing out to suburban shopping centers that offer acres of free parking?

Downtown decay is a common problem. Pomona has come up with an answer — spear-headed by private enterprise — that delegations from 15 U. S. and foreign cities have come to see.

It's a shoppers' mall — nine beautifully landscaped blocks where pedestrian is king. It's in the heart of the 76-year-old community's downtown section.

Autos are banished to nearby parking areas. Every other cross-wise street is closed to traffic. Kids play in safety on the mall while parents shop. Music floats from loudspeakers. Stone — and concrete planters are green with shrubs and tall, overhanging tree. Waters whispers in six ornamental fountain pools. Shoppers rest on long stone benches.

The mall cost $69,718. Merchants say business is up "substantially" or "phenomenally."

About $8 million in new investment capital has been attracted. That includes a $4 million Buffums' high-fashion department store development in 1 year. It replaced three blocks of sub-standard buildings, some of them 7 years old.

There's a gleaming, new six-story savings-and-loan building nearby. And 13 mall stores have been remodeled at a cost of $80,000.

Appealed to Millard Sheets

Business leaders had been talking mall for several years.

They asked Millard Sheets, internationally famed artist and designer, perhaps Pomona's most creative native, to design a mall.

"I told them, 'No, you're not in the proper frame of mind,'" he says. "You've got to decide what you're trying to accomplish. The mall idea is all right, but you've got to become dedicated to really revitalizing the area, not just garnishing it."

Sheets, 56, an eminently successful artist who talks big-business men's language, explains: "You can't belong to a collection of shopping areas that has no sense of centrality. A mall is only a symptom, a promise of good things to come, a means of showing the dedication to making this place alive and good."

Finally the mall proponents convinced Sheets they had developed what he calls "this wonderful sense of we'll-sink-or-swim-together."

Twelve or 15 men held mall-planning meetings for three years, Sheets says, and "it was a thrill the way these people gave of themselves."

At a long meeting one night, one leaders said what the mall idea needed was for some big, outstandingly successful firm to announce it was moving into the mall.

One Bold Move

"A pump-priming job," he called it, "something to catch the imagination. A big-business man to say, 'I'll do it.' We've got so many skeptics who don't have the nerve."

Sheets said he thought he knew just man. When he got home at 2:30 a.m. he decided his hunch couldn't wait until morning. He telephoned his friend, Howard F. Ahmanson, chairman of the board of Home Savings and Loan Association, "America's Largest." Sheets had designed buildings for the company.

"I knew Howard's habits," he says. "He suffers from insomnia and doesn't get to sleep until about 3 a.m."

"I told him, 'I want you to buy the best block in the center of town and develop it in the way an old, broken-down lock ought to be developed. It will cost about $1 million. I know you do not have any special reason to come to Pomona — except you are my friend and I need your help.'"

A luncheon was arranged at which Ahmanson told the Pomonans: "I like what you guys are trying to do. Let's go."

About 15 town leaders chartered a plane, flew to Sacramento, pounded desks and got a Pomona franchise for Home Savings. The delegation included officials of two rival savings-and-loan associations in Pomona.

"These men realized that everything is better if you work together," Sheets said. "The moment they did this every kind of small, selfish interest in Pomona seemed to break down."

Sheets designed a mall and it was built between April and October 1962.

Harold B. Pomeroy, Home Savings' Pomona manager, sitting beneath an enormous lobby mural done by Sheets, his friend since boyhood, who designed the six-story building, said: "Whether this will save downtown Pomona, only time can tell. If this can't, I don't know what can."

More Redevelopment

Pomona's redevelopment includes a police-and-fire headquarters building near completion and civic structures being planned — library, city hall, health building, civic auditorium, etc.

The rejuvenation began as far back as 195 with a street-improvement program. Three underpasses have been completed beneath railroad tracks where in 1926-6 there were 235 auto-train collisions, with 18 deaths. Union Pacific has moved its tracks 4 feet north to tie in with a downtown transportation terminal.

The parking problem has been another target in recent years. Parking districts, financed by businessmen, have developed 18 lots with about 2,000 parking spaces.

The removal of old structures for parking room goes on. Soon to fall will be the city's 61-year-old Fraternal Aid Opera House, once the scene of Schumann-Heink triumphs but in recent years a brasserie factory.

There still are six empty buildings on the mall, and Pomona doesn't claim the mall is the whole answer to its problem.

Some shoppers complain about the mall's straight-line layout. Park at one end, they say, and, unless you repark, you have to walk a round trip of 18 blocks to shop at both ends.

Charles McCrea, controller of the Orange Belt Emporium, a 63-year-old department store, says: "You still have to work hard — by advertising, customer services, giving values."

But there's an exciting civic fever of progress in Pomona today.

The city's administrative officer, Frederick W. Sharp, says of the mall:

"This is only the birth, the beginning, the renaissance, the awakening, the core of the core."

Mr. and Mrs. S. K. Flatt, Irene and Collin, attended a family reunion of Mrs. Flatt's family in Levelland Sunday in the home of her twin sister and her family, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Thompson. Others attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Berry, Keith and Renay, Olton; Mr. and Mrs. Loman Jones and Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Berry, Brownfield; and Mrs. T. A. Cowan, Levelland.

Mrs. Frank Duckworth and children, were in Dodson over the holidays visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Hunt. Mrs. Duckworth also attended an ex-student banquet at Dodson High School Saturday night.

Crim bases his forecast on an old Indian legend. The wind was from the southwest on the Sunday morning compass reading and according Crim this is a sign of the worst forecast for the farmers. He said it had been many years since the wind had been out of the S.W. on the 22 for many years.

Many friends and neighbors gathered at the Crim this year as usual for the sunrise forecast. Last year on the 22 the wind was from the northwest. So Crim says, "Look out farmers it is gonna be rough this year."
