

St. Clair To Steer Relations

Irvin St. Clair, Muleshoe, Littlefield, retail merchant, has been named to head a new committee of the Chamber of Commerce, the Area Relations Committee.

This committee will set out to establish and maintain the best possible relations with rural residents and communities of the area surrounding Muleshoe, a concept which is not new. But it will go further than that; it will seek the opinion and participation of rural residents in community affairs in all matters of mutual interest.

"These people are an integral part of our community life. We want this recognized, and we want them to have a voice in everything. Our goal is the active participation of farmers and rural residents in all chamber and other activities," Roger Albertson said as he assumed the presidency of the organization last January.

In line with this policy, the new committee will draw heavily on rural residents for its membership.

The local chamber's image has been changing as it assumes more of the characteristics of an "area" chamber or chamber of recent months many farmers have been recruited as new members, and the four new 1964 directors are all engaged in agriculture production or servicing. At least one rural resident is being asked to serve on each of the many committees of the organization.

Library Response

After two completed weeks of scheduled stops the Bookmobile has been met with wonderful response in most communities. One thousand books were checked out the first week and close to 700 books were checked out the second week.

The Bookmobile makes 44 stops in Bailey, Cochran, Lamb and Parmer Counties. Thirty-one of these stops have been completed with 13 to be served this week. The Texas State Library recently sent a set of reference books that are available to be used in libraries in the four-county area served by the Bookmobile. This set of books consists of 50 books of general reference material plus an entirely new Americana.

These books are not for circulation, but your Librarian will use them in attempting to answer your questions which are brought to the Bookmobile.

Jaycees

Jim Reese, son-in-law of Joe Damron and long-time active Jaycee, has been elected state president of the Texas Jaycees, according to recent reports.

With legislation on the books which provides Payment-In-Kind certificates to make cotton available for domestic use at the same price as export, the industry is now turning its attention to a new controversy over an old, old question — the question of who is to receive the price-equalizing PI-Ks.

This is the same question which for years was one of the big stumbling blocks to legislation of this kind, and only in the face of dire emergency was the issue temporarily put in moth balls pending final passage of one-price legislation. Now that the cotton bill is a fact, the "to whom" issue is again very much in evidence.

The bill itself specifies only that PI-Ks will go "to someone other than the producer," leaving the Department of Agriculture with a choice between the manufacturer, the first buyer, and the last handler. For the interim period from now until July 31 of this year the Department has ruled that the PI-Ks will go to the domestic mill user of the cotton upon bale opening, and the question is "to whom" from that time until the bill expires in 1966.

Mills have voiced their official position through the American Textile Manufacturers Institute in the statement that the payment "should go into the channels of trade, away from the manufacturer." In short, they have said: "Anyone but us."

And, since shippers in earlier discussions agreed to accept the payment, arguments in general have centered around the first buyer and the last handler.

Ever since the domestic PI-K's were first suggested two years ago producer groups across the cotton belt have consistently ad-

The group was installed in ceremonies conducted by Mrs. Horace Blackburn.

Second highlight of the yearly affair was the awarding of service pins to 12 local teachers. They are Dorothy Beddingfield, 15-years; Dorothy Brock, 5-years; Estelle Fox, 10-years; Clarence Hawkins, 5-years; Ruby Lambert, 10-years; Inez Middlebrook, 10-years; Lucille Shelby, 15-years; Louis Powers, 5-years; Bill Taylor, 10-years; Betty Jennings, 5-year; Leona Patterson, 10-years; Milton Oyler, 5-years.

The invocation was given by Rev. J. Frank Peery. Dinner music was provided by Monica Grit-th and special music by the Baker Quartet.

Yarborough - McLendon Infighting Heavy

"I seek re-election to the United States Senate on a record of accomplishment," Senator Ralph Yarborough said this week.

"I have been your Democratic United States Senator for seven years. In those seven years — working with and for the people of Texas — we have made major steps forward in education, agriculture, conservation, and many other areas."

Listed as major accomplishments by Sen. Yarborough are: TAX CUT: Senator Yarborough has fought for the just-enacted tax cut — to stimulate the economic progress of this country — since he was first elected to the Senate in 1957. He helped slash on and a half billion dollars of fat from foreign aid last year.

EDUCATION: Sen. Yarborough co-authored the 1958 National Defense Education Act which provides loans for thousands of Texas students in 77 State colleges and universities. He co-authored bills expanding Federal aid to school districts burdened by heavy inflow of children of Federal personnel, affecting 250 Texas school districts, and co-authored the 1963 law for expanded vocational education. He is a leading sponsor of the Health Professions Educational Assistance Act, 1963.

civil rights of all citizens. Those provisions would deny everyone, regardless of race or national origin, the right of trial by jury and deprive us all of control over our property — including our very homes.

"Some of the people who are demanding the passage of this bill, without changing a word or a punctuation mark, evidently are misled. But I am convinced that the leaders who are mapping the strategy of this high-power campaign know exactly what they are doing. They see in this bill, with its disregard of fundamental civil liberties, another instrument of power over the lives of the American people."

McLendon emphasized that the only way of registering majority opinion on the principles involved in the campaign is to vote in the Democratic primary.

McLendon
Gordon McLendon concentrated his fire on the pending civil rights bill in the waning days of his campaign for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senator and dropped a blockbuster in accusing Ralph Yarborough of taking 50,000 from Billie Sol Estes.

He followed a schedule designed to reach, through personal contact and communications media, the greatest possible number of voters before the May 2 primary. His itinerary calls for thousands of miles of travel into all sections of the state by plane and helicopter.

"My opposition to the bill being debated in the Senate actually is a crusade for civil rights", he declared. "I'm not in favor of denying any of our citizens the rights granted them by the Constitution, but I am against the passage of this bill because certain sections of it threaten the

FBI Head Qualifies Stories

Last week and early this week some area news media made much of a story which stated that J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI, had "Definitely" stated that the "so called" NAACP and other organizations active in the current civil rights program were "Communist Controlled".

As a matter of public interest, the Journal requested that a telegram be sent immediately to the FBI head requesting clarification of the statement.

Hoover's immediate reply, dated April 24th, qualifies the statement.

In his letter Hoover states, "My comments included a statement about the Communist Party's AT-TEMP to use the Negro movement, as it does everything else, to promote its own interest."

Hoover's letter is as follows: Your telegram of April 22nd has been received.

The news media have recently carried stories regarding my testimony before the House Subcommittee on April 29, 1964. My comments included a statement about the Communist Party's attempt to use the Negro movement, as it does everything else, to promote its own interest.

Although the FBI does not have a copy of my testimony available for distribution at the present time, I am enclosing a copy of a speech I delivered on December 4, 1963. My remarks beginning on page 5 pertain to the same subject.

Sincerely yours,
J. Edgar Hoover

'M' Band To Enter Festival

The Muleshoe Mighty "M" Concert Band left at 9 o'clock Monday night for Corpus Christi where it will compete in the Buccaneer Music Festival at Del Mar College.

The Buccaneer Contest is renowned for being one of the most difficult contests in the country, and the judges are always from among the top ten colleges and professional band men in the country.

There, the Band has been working very hard to prepare for it, particularly since we will be classified as an AAA Band in the contest.

All funds to finance the trip were earned by the Band students. They will be traveling by two charter buses, and were scheduled to arrive in San Antonio early this morning, where they will visit the Alamo and San Jose Mission, and then hold a rehearsal at one of the High schools there in San Antonio. Following lunch, the Band will travel on to Corpus Christi, arriving late this afternoon.

Our Band is scheduled for their concert performance and sight-reading contests early Friday morning, then they will stay to

Oh, Momma, What Are All These Red Spots

As is usual in these things — where it started and how it started will remain an eternal mystery — but those sporty red spots appearing suddenly on the faces and bodies of Muleshoe small fry are a sign that the annual measles and mumps epidemic has arrived in force.

Last week Richland Hills School averaged 100 cases a day — mostly in the fifth and sixth grades. Last Friday's total was 105 cases.

Mary DeShazo School has not yet felt the full impact of the epidemic, but is expected to be hit in force either this or next week, according to school and Local Church Chapel Scene Of Wedding.

Karen Sue Willman became the bride of Travis Lewis Bessire in an afternoon ceremony read in First Methodist Church Sunday, April 26.

Rev. J. Frank Peery read the double ring services before an altar arrangement of white gladiolas, stock and candelabras. Identical flowers formed a bank on either side of the archway entwined with lemon leaves, Huckleberry leaves and plumes of peacock feathers. Greenery marked the commodore rail and pews were marked with peacock blue and white accents.

The bride was escorted and presented in marriage by a family friend, Jack Lenderson, on behalf of her father who is recuperating from a knee injury.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Dick Willman and Mr. and Mrs. Omar Bessire.

She wore a formal gown fashioned from silk organza over bridal tulle, featuring a fitted bodice and long petal point sleeves. A floral motif panel of imported Chantilly lace was applied from the neckline onto the sheath skirt and accented with pearls. The back of the gown featured tiny covered buttons and was enhanced by a full bouffant chapel train. Her veil of French illusion cascaded from a bow trimmed, open crown pillbox of silk organza. "Responsibility of Citizenship" Discussed By Guest Speaker

Muleshoe Study Club met Thursday, April 23, with Mrs. Rufus Gilbreath as hostess.

"Responsibility of Citizenship" was the study topic for the day. Mrs. Glenn Dunn, Mrs. O. E. Lumsden, Miss Magann Lamb and Bill McDonald presented new thoughts and interpretations to the different subjects which created more constructive thinking toward the relationship between responsibility and citizenship.

Mrs. Dunn expressed pertinent facts on the subject of "What Can I Do To Save Freedom."

"Freedom", she said, is not simply doing as one pleases. It carries a responsibility of respecting the rights of others. Mrs. Lumsden encouraged each person to take an intelligent interest in local, state and national affairs as she spoke on "Why Get Into Politics."

Miss Lamb's talk on "Relationship between Politics and Government" reflected a deep study on the subject, a spokesman said. Her definition of politics was "the process of electing and selecting persons who manage public affairs and government... the actual management of public affairs." She added "Liberty will not descend to a people. A people must raise themselves to Liberty. It is a blessing that must be earned before it can be employed."

McDonald told of his quest for knowledge covering not only politics and government, but of the Communist Party while living in New York City. "His first hand knowledge inspired each one for a desire to know more," Mrs. O. N. Jennings said. Mrs. L. B. Hall explained the new projects in connection with the library.

The club voted to buy needed furniture for the Library building. Refreshments were served to five visitors. Mr. and Mrs. Bill McDonald, Mrs. L. B. Hall, Mrs. M. Mathis, Portales, N. M. and Magann Lamb.

Members attending were Mrs. Glenn Dunn, Mrs. O. E. Lumsden, Mrs. Les Bruns, Mrs. Louis Henderson, Mrs. R. O. Gregory, Mrs. O. N. Jennings and the hostess, Mrs. Gilbreath.

What Irrigation System Do You Need?

BIG ADVANTAGE — Here is an example of one of the big advantages of sprinkler system irrigation. Note that the land can be kept flat and residue left on the surface.

COMPARE — Here is a level irrigation system achieved through "bench leveling".

By RONALD HOOD
Each farm in Bailey County is a unique situation. It requires an irrigation system tailored to fit its own particular needs. What may be best for the farm across the road may not work at all on your place. Needs often vary from field to field, particularly on larger farms. The only way to be sure of having the best possible system for each field on a farm is to take all necessary factors into account. These factors include soil type, land slope, cropping system, water present and available for the future, and the finances of the individual installing the system.

There are several different major methods of irrigation. These are furrow and border, both level and graded, and sprinkler. All of these types have a number of advantages and disadvantages. Also, each has specific situations in which they are recommended, as well as situations in which they may be of little use. If a system which was not well planned is installed, the result can easily be a waste of time and money with only poor results to show for it.

The level method of irrigation utilizes application of water to a level or nearly level area at a predetermined rate in excess of the soil's intake rate. The water is spread to a uniform depth and retained in place by levees, borders, or beds. This type of irrigation is largely used on hardlands, such as some of the areas near Plainview and Lubbock.

To use level irrigation, either border or furrow, certain conditions must be met. The soil must be deep enough to permit leveling without reducing the depth too much at any one place.

The water intake should be less than two inches per hour and more than one half inch, unless the areas to be watered are small. The soil should be able to hold at least three inches of water in the root zone. Topography should be uniform and smooth, with a slope of less than one per cent preferable. On slopes of 0.25 or less, whole fields may be leveled. For .25 to .50 slopes, the land can be leveled in broad benches and on slopes above 0.5 per cent, benches should be only one border wide. Also, enough water should be available to meet peak use requirements, generally from nine to eighteen hundred gallons per minute to make efficient use of labor.

Crops that may be damaged by flooding should be planted on beds. Borders should be used to control water for flat planted or drilled crops. Where the land is leveled by fields, borders are not necessary for row crops, but proper furrow depth is important. For row crops on bench leveled land, the down slope of each bench must be protected by a border levee and maintenance of adequate furrow depth. In pastures, contour borders may be used.

There are several advantages to level irrigation. Uniform water distribution can be obtained on the irrigated area. Erosion from irrigation water and rain is controlled, and maximum use is made of rainfall. One irrigator can handle large volumes of water. Operating the system is easy and simple, and only simple adjustments need be made when changing from one crop to another.

There are also, however, a number of disadvantages. For example, installation usually requires major and fine grade leveling, and trained technicians are needed to design and supervise construction of most such systems. Relatively large irrigation streams are generally required.

Tillage operations must be arranged to fit the design and maintenance of the system, and expensive permanent structures are often required to control the large irrigation streams. It cannot be used on soils with rapid water intake rates. Also, wind erosion is a hazard to fine grade leveling.

A second type of irrigation is the graded system. In graded irrigation, the water applied is guided over the land surface by borders, furrows, or corrugations until the required amounts are taken into the soil.

This type of irrigation is not recommended unless the soil is deep enough to permit any needed smoothing or leveling without seriously reducing the root zone. The soil's water intake rate should not be less than .02 inches per hour or more than four inches per hour, preferably between one and two inches. Also, the soil should be able to hold more than one inch of water per foot of depth.

For the best results, the topography of the land should be smooth and uniform, as the method is not recommended on slopes which would allow excess erosion. Where only row crops are to be grown, a graded system can be used on slopes of up to 0.5 per cent, if the furrow grade is not excessive and adequate furrow depth is maintained. If only alfalfa, small grain, or pasture are to be grown, slopes of up to two per cent can be utilized, if the borders or corrugations are run down the slope. Side fall in borders should not be more than 0.1 foot, and cross slopes on corrugation should not be more than .5 per cent. Depth of any corrugations should be at least four inches, and the grade in direction of water flow must be fairly uniform.

Here again, water must be adequate for peak periods of use. Most crops can be irrigated by this method, but many changes in row direction may be necessary if the slope is not uniform, or if it exceeds 0.25 per cent. Control measures to prevent excessive erosion from rain or irrigation water must be used if necessary.

The graded method has several advantages which may more than offset the disadvantages. For instance, minor leveling or smoothing is usually all that is required, and few expensive water control structures are needed. It can usually be adapted to areas with established crops. Layout and construction of the system are usually simple, and light water applications can be easily made. In many instances where it is practical to install a graded system, it may be the least expensive alternative.

Open ditches are often used to conduct irrigation water from the well to the furrows, borders, etc., but from a conservation standpoint, this is not a recommended practice. In soils found in Bailey County, a considerable amount of water may be lost due to its sinking into the ground, there is a certain amount of water evaporation, particularly in hot weather, and open ditches must be maintained every season.

For graded systems, low pressure concrete pipelines should be used whenever possible in place of ditches. Although there is a certain amount of initial installation expense, there is very little subsequent maintenance, water flow can be controlled more easily and precisely, and no water is lost before it reaches the point of application.

On the negative side of graded irrigation, rainfall cannot be completely utilized. A high degree of skill is required to apply irrigation water properly, and variable water control devices are needed to insure efficient use of water. It is difficult to handle large streams, and erosion from rain may be a problem. Also, design of the system may be difficult.

Good examples of graded irrigation systems in actual operation in this county can be seen on farms owned by L. O. Shanks, L. V. Kolar, and B. D. Garland. Although a number of farms in this area use graded irrigation, only a few are actual designed systems.

In the sprinkler method of irrigation, water is sprayed into the air and falls on the land surface in a relatively uniform pattern at a rate less than the soil's intake rate.

This method is used only where the soil is deep enough to accommodate the plant root system. The intake rate of the soil should be more than one half inch per hour, generally, and the moisture holding capacity should be more than one half inch per foot of soil depth. Topography is usually not a major factor, although uniform slope is preferable. On slopes where rainfall erosion is a problem, structures should be established to prevent this. In a sprinkler irrigation system, as in all forms of irrigation, there should be enough water available to supply any peak period use.

Although most crops can be watered with sprinklers, certain tall growing crops may require also interfere with the moving of portable systems. Sprinklers should not be used during pollination periods of air pollinated crops, such as grain sorghum, and some few crops may be damaged by direct contact with water. A sprinkler system can be used under most climatic conditions, but it is not as useful when wind velocities exceed fifteen miles per hour.

Sprinkler irrigation has a number of advantages. It requires little or no land leveling or smoothing. Very light applications of water can be made. No drainage facilities are necessary for the irrigation water, though drainage systems may be necessary to carry off excess rain water. The systems are portable and can be removed from fields if they would tend to obstruct tillage operations. Most sprinkler equipment has resale value, and it can be moved from one field or farm to another. It is also adapted to rapidly permeable soils, where surface flow methods are not useful, and relatively uniform applications can be made on uneven land surfaces. A sprinkler system generally makes more efficient use of available water in this area than do surface irrigation systems.

As for its disadvantages, a sprinkler system may require a large initial investment. Operating costs may be high, and the portable pipe may be difficult to move on some cultivated, fine textured soils. Some of the difficulties of moving laterals may be overcome, however, by use of tow or wheel move systems under certain conditions. Sprinklers are not useful on soils which are very slowly permeable, especially on fine-textured surface soils, but these soil types are not often found in this area.

good sprinkler systems can be seen on farms belonging to Jessie Ray Carter, Jack Schuster, Douglas Bales, and John Coe. Sprinkler irrigation is becoming more popular in the Blackwater Valley Soil Conservation District, and good systems may be found in any of the irrigated areas.

Factors
As can easily be seen, there are not only a number of systems for irrigation, but there are also many factors to be considered with each. These articles have not included all of the advantages, disadvantages, and other things to consider in choosing a system, but many of the most important are listed. Trained personnel of the Soil Conservation Service can be of assistance in planning and laying out all types of irrigation systems, and under certain conditions, cost-share may be available for installation or improvement.

Irrigation, where water is available, is an excellent method for improving crop and pasture yields. However, it must be remembered that each field should have a system designed especially to best fit its needs, as a poorly designed or operated system may be worse than none at all.

STATE CAPITAL Highlights AND Sidelights

by Vern Sanford
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN, Tex. — Texans will have ample opportunity to give their views on how the state should be divided into 23 congressional districts of equal population.

A seven-member study group of Texas Legislative Council (research arm of the Legislature) plans to begin extensive hearings over the state soon after the May 2 primaries.

Congressmen and party officers already have been invited to make suggestions as to how districts should be drawn with ap each.

U. S. Supreme Court has supported a Houston federal court ruling that the districts must be formed to provide "equal representation for equal number of people" as nearly as possible. The Houston court on April 1 agreed that the Legislature should have a chance to do the job in regular session of 1965.

Sen. George Moffett of Chillicothe, senior member of the Legislature in point of service, heads the study committee which will conduct the hearings. Other members are Sen. Abraham Kazer Jr. of Larcjo, and Rep. Paul Floyd of Houston. Tommy Shannon of Fort Worth, Wayne Gibbons of Breckenridge, Richard C. Slack of Pecos, and G. F. Mutscher of Brenham.

Gov. John Connally praised Atty. Gen. Waggoner Carr for his representation of the state during the redistricting case. He said work of Carr and his assistants made it possible for the state to "hold our 1964 congressional elections without the requirement of a special session or at-large (statewide congressional) races."

COURT REFORMS — U. S. Supreme Court Justice Tom Clark came to Austin for the Texas Conference on Judicial Selection, Tenure and Administration, sponsored by the State Bar of Texas. Two hundred and fifty lawyers, judges and laymen talked about how to improve the Texas judicial system.

Court organization and administration, and judicial selection, tenure, retirement, discipline and removal were discussed. Lawyers and judges from a dozen other states where court reforms have been enacted participated.

AGING — Governor Connally revealed that 1,40 of the 3,50 senile patients in state mental hospitals have been moved to private nursing homes in the last year.

He told his Committee on Aging that this is one method being used to better the lot of older, ill persons. Many have been sent to mental hospitals because there was no place else for them to go. But under the new Federal-state program of paying nursing home costs of the ailing aged, those not really mentally ill can be taken out of the state hospitals.

He urged the committee, headed by Sen. Walter Richter of Gonzales, to find further ways of bettering the lot of older Texans.

HIGHER EDUCATION — Texas Commission on Higher Education allocated $3,980,000 in appropriations to meet student enrollment increases in the 2 state-supported senior colleges for the coming school year.

At the same time, the Commission took a step toward higher standards in the state colleges when it moved to abolish state financial support for "questionable" or "frill" college courses, including:

1. Courses not counted toward graduation requirements;
2. Tour or travel courses;
3. Certain "work experience" courses;
4. Dramatic and forensic activities not in regularly organized classes;

5. Courses devoted exclusively to learning operation of one or two simple business machines;
6. Social or self-improvement courses;
7. Remedial courses on the high school level not carrying college credit;
8. Orientation courses aimed at counseling or guidance of freshmen students.

Commission approved recommendations to strengthen graduate and research programs in the North Texas area and authorized new third and fourth-year courses for Angelo State College, San Angelo.

COURTS SPEAK — Fifty-third District Judge Herman Jones granted the first injunction sought by he state to enforce the new small loan act.

Action was against E. L. Parker, operator of an Austin liquor store, whom Regulatory Loan Commissioner Frank Miskell alleged was lending money at rates in excess of 10 per cent without obtaining the required state license.

State Supreme Court knocked out a state law granting a landowner, whose property is surrounded by another's, right of way across the neighbor's land. Its decision, overturning lower courts, denied Baylor County rancher Wilmer Cleghorn authority to a road through the W. T. Waggoner Ranch.

An El Paso army sergeant convinced the Supreme Court it should hear arguments on April 29 in his suit for Texas voting rights. Many servicemen have complained about state regulations which permit them to vote only in the county where they reside on entering service.

Texas Court of Criminal Appeals rejected the third appeal of Billie Sol Estes from an eight-year prison sentence for swindling. However, the court made technical corrections in its earlier opinion which enables Estes to file another motion for rehearing.

Court of Criminal Appeals ordered a new trial for a Bandera County man convicted of sheep theft. He was sentenced to life imprisonment for the theft of one sheep after the jury learned he had two prior convictions for passing bad checks.

Court ruled that state's attorney's had failed to prove the man's guilt, since the sheep-theft charge was filed by one rancher but testimony centered around "suspicious activities" of the convicted man in the pasture of another rancher who had notified charges.

APPOINTMENTS — John P. Thompson and R. L. Thornton, Jr., both of Dallas, were named by Governor Connally to Texas Turnpike Authority.

Thornton succeeds his late father for a term expiring February 15, 1967. Thompson succeeds the late Bert Fields for a term expiring February 15, 1969.

Charles H. King Jr., also of Dallas, was sworn in on April 15 as Commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

WATER — Oil operators in the New and Old Batson and Sour Lake Fields of Hardin County were given a warning by Texas Railroad Commission to dispose of their salt water "in satisfactory manner". However, the commission decided not to issue an order banning the use of open disposal pits.

Lower Neches Valley Authority asked for the hearings on the ground that oilfield salt water was polluting streams from which Beaumont and its industries get water.

VETERANS LAND SALE SET — Land tracts in seven counties will be offered for sale on May 12, Land Commissioner Jerry Sadler has announced.

Bids on the tracts in Guadalupe, Hidalgo, Maverick, Uvalde, Wilson, Zavala and Culberson Counties must be received at Sadler's office by 1 a.m. on date of sale.

OIL ALLOWABLE SET — Texas Railroad Commission set May oil production allowable at 2,800,000 barrels daily for prorated wells, based on production at 28.5 per cent of potential. That's a decrease from the 29 per cent formula of the last three months and Figure still is the highest for April.

Figure still is the highest for May in the last five years.

OPINIONS — The attorney general held in opinions:

That the new Ector County detention facilities for juveniles and adult women do not properly separate the boys from the girls and juveniles from grown-ups;

That county court misdemeanors or defendants do not have absolute right to see the prospective juror list before trial; And that prison inmates are

New Bidrin Insecticide lies in wait inside cotton—knocks out thrips, fleahoppers, aphids, mites, lygus wherever they attack tender foliage

Above: magnified cross sections of cotton leaves. In left picture, Bidrin (dark strip, top) kills cotton insect with contact action, covers and protects leaf surface. 24 hours later, Bidrin has entered leaf tissue (picture right). Insect attacking from below where spray didn't reach—sucks up Bidrin with juices. This systemic action keeps protecting 7 to 14 days.

Magnified cross sections of cotton leaves (above) show how one application of new Bidrin keeps working 7 to 14 days, rain or shine.

Bidrin is the new phosphate insecticide that kills cotton pests with both contact and systemic actions.

It kills all major cotton insects on contact, at time of spraying—even weevils and worms.

It enters and spreads through plant tissue, makes cotton deadly to thrips, aphids, fleahoppers, mites, lygus.

When insects attack, they die—even if they pierce bottom of leaves where spray doesn't reach. This is systemic action. It keeps working 7 to 14 days.

Proven by growers

New Bidrin's amazing two way action paid off for thousands of cotton growers in '63. They grew more cotton. And, thanks to early insect control with Bidrin, a higher percent of their crop was early, high quality, bottom cotton.

Weather resistant—economical

Soon after spraying, Bidrin enters your cotton plants. Once inside, rain can't wash it off. Sun can't break it down. Bidrin has practically eliminated weather as a cause for re-spraying.

Bidrin costs little compared to insecticides that can't begin to do the same kind of job. Bidrin's long-lasting effectiveness means fewer sprays. With Bidrin you avoid buying early insect control at seeding before you know whether or not insects will come. Bidrin gives you systemic control, yet it lets you wait and see. Result: maximum insect control at minimum cost.

Get Bidrin from your pesticide supplier. Many brands available.

Always read and follow label directions. For more information write: Shell Chemical Company, Agrcultural Chemicals Division, Post Office Box 2099, Houston 1, Texas.

Maintain control with endrin-methyl parathion

During squaring and fruiting, stay ahead of insects with endrin-methyl parathion. It knocks out bollworms and weevils plus many other insects—quickly and surely. Gives you maximum length of control per spray, minimum number of sprays to do the job. Send for free, full color booklet.

FOR THE INFORMATION OF THE PRESS: Following is a transcript of remarks by Senator Tower concerning Title VII of the Administration's Civil Rights Bill. It was taped for airing over Texas Radio stations this weekend.

I have talked with you before about the Employment Section of the Civil Rights Bill, that is the Section called Title VII, which purports to provide that there be no discrimination in employment on the basis of race, religion, national origin or sex. During this past week I participated intensively in the debate on this Section of the bill, and I think we may see some attempt to modify it. Certainly in its present form it is, I believe, unacceptable. I believe that this section is highly unwise as a constitutional invasion of the rights reserved by our Constitution, and I think all of us ought to do this regularly. We find that no place in the Constitution is there mention of a right of employment. Indeed how could there be a right of employment unless the Federal Government is to guarantee full employment under a completely socialize deconomy. In fact my friends, this employment section, Title VII, would operate to increase unemployment, I believe, not to curtail it. This provision would place massive new harrassments in the path of private business and local unions. It would require record keeping of a magnitude far beyond the financial capabilities of many small businesses or small union locals. More miraculous, this Title VII requires what amounts to "mind-reading," which as we all know, is a very inexact science. The bill authorizes mind-reading on the part of some newly created Federal bureaucrat, who is going to figure out what the Congress means by discrimination. Discrimination is nowhere defined in the bill. And then this bureaucrat is going to read your mind if you are a local businessman or a union leader. He is going to read your mind and see why you hire or sign one man rather than another. He is going to read your mind to see why you hire or sign a man rather than a woman, or a person of one religion rather than a person of another religion. And if he reads discrimination into your mind you are going to have to prove him wrong; in other words, the burden of proof is going to fall on the employer. But you are not allowed to read his mind, you will have to have proof. What kind of proof will be acceptable, that will be up to the same mind reading bureaucrat.

In other words, if this Title VII of the Civil Rights Bill becomes law you as a businessman or union leader will lose control of your operations. You will be forced to bend beyond the breaking point to avoid discrimination, whatever that is, and it isn't adequately defined. All the rest of us who are only employees in this world will suffer because our employers won't know whether or not they can hire us and our unions won't know whether or not they can place us on a job.

Thus, all Americans will lose their individual right, guaranteed in the Constitution, to the "pursuit of happiness," which comes from employment of our choice on the basis of the God-given talent that we develop. And may I illustrate the unconstitutional character of Title VII on employment by quoting from a case decided by the Supreme Court of the United States in Adair vs. the United States which states the case beautifully and distinctly, with any person, whatsoever, rights is that he be left at liberty to refuse business relations with any person, whatever, whether the refusal rest upon race or as a result of whim, caprice, prejudice or malice; which his reasons neither the public nor the persons have any legal concern."

I think it is morally wrong to discriminate in employment, and I think it is often bad business to do so. But as I read our Constitution the Federal Government has no right to legislate in this field and I believe it will require a virtual police state to enforce this provision if it is enacted. Certainly it would mean the Federal government would dictate employment practices to management.

This past week in the Senate I introduced a Resolution which would call for compiling the speeches of General Douglas MacArthur and make them a public document. We were all deeply touched by the passing of General MacArthur. He was not only a brilliant military leader, he was a great patriot, a cour-

Great Cotton Breakthrough Excepted To Increase Market

A remarkable research breakthrough in the 100 per cent cotton mens and boys pants market was announced at the quarterly meeting of the Texas Farm Bureau board of directors recently are members of the Founders' Committee of the Cotton Producers Institute.

TFB President C. H. DeVaney of Waco and Directors H. L. King of Brownfield and J. B. West of Bishop told the board of developments through the rower-financed research program that led to the new process which eliminates ironing.

The commercial application of the process that retains a permanent crease while shedding wrinkles has been made by a California firm and licensed to one of the nation's leading pants manufacturers, Levi Strauss Company.

The manufacturer guarantees them to have permanent creases and to require no ironing.

A leading department store executive stated, "The new development is a major advance over competing wash and wear fabrics now on the market and we are highly pleased on both the sales potential of these trousers as well as its significance to our cotton based economy. In our own quality tests before purchasing these slacks, we were unable to remove the crease, even by holding it under a steam press."

H. L. King, Chairman of TFB Field Crops Committee said "The men and boys pants market is cotton's largest in volume: Yet it has been under severe threat from synthetic fibers and losses have occurred in recent years. This gives us a new competitive advantage and means that we will be producing and selling many bales of cotton that would not have been possible otherwise."

The research project which led to the new development was financed by cotton growers who voluntarily invested $1.00 per bale in the self-help program, and was conducted at the Harris Research Laboratory in Washington. According to J. H. West, Corpus Area chairman of the Institute, projects along this line are being continued in order to further improve the process and apply it to the 230,000 bales men's dress suit market.

A total of $800,000.00 is being invested by cotton producers in twenty-one institute research projects. Warm cotton fabrics suitable for the winter clothing market and fabrics with improved luster for the women's dress, drapery and upholstery markets, all large cotton market potentials, are also targets of CPI research.

An additional $1,800,000 form the 2.6 million dollar program, now in its second year, is being tising for cotton.

President DeVaney emphasized that the breakthrough in the trouser market is just one example of what growers can do to help themselves through their own research and promotion efforts.

Viridon Latches Onto The Pirate Captains

By FRANK ECK . . . AP Newsfeatures Sports Editor.

"They say stick with the team captain," says bespectacled Bill Viridon of the Pittsburgh Pirates, "and that's just what I'm doing." When Manager Danny Murtaugh's team is on the road, Viridon, a center fielder for nine National League seasons, rooms with Bill Mazerowski, second baseman and tea captain. Before shortstop Dick Groat was traded to St. Louis Viridon roomed with Groat, also a Pirate captain.

"Why shouldn't I room with the best?" asks Viridon. "Groat led the National League in hitting in 1960 and if you recall Mazerowski's home run beat the Yankees in the final World Series game that fall.

"This is my second season rooming with Maz and we're both optimists when we start a new season, I'd like to hit .300 again

(he hit .319 in 1956) and get into another World Series."

Viridon made his fame in the '60 Series and naturally this brought up his first inning steal, catching the Yankees by surprise.

Viridon led off the bottom of the inning in Pittsburgh with a walk and on Art Ditmar's first pitch he dashed for second base. For a long time everybody called it a delayed steal, which means the runner wasn't off promptly on the pitcher's motion.

"That was not a delayed steal but we let people think it was," admits Viridon. "The hit and run play went wrong. Dick was the greatest hit and run man since Al Dark's playing days. We had our own signs because he could work the play better than anybody.

"Dick unconsciously put the sign on for the hit and run — rubbing his hands across his letters, I think it was. He also took the sign off, only I wasn't watching him so I didn't catch it.

"So I'm heading down for second and when I see he doesn't even swing at the ball it looks like I'm hung up but then I see nobody is covering the bag and I keep right on going. I never stopped until I got to third base because Yogi Berra's perfect throw went into center field. We got three runs that inning.

"We didn't come right out and admit it wasn't a delayed steal because the play worked so well. They (Yankees) has scouted us for weeks. Everytime I ran Dick hit the ball. We felt their shortstop (Tony Kubek) and second baseman (Bobby Richardson) stayed in position rather than leave a hole. Groat could drive a ball through the smallest holes. "I played with Dick almost seven years and I'll bet in all that time Dick didn't fail to send me from first to third but five times. I don't care who was pitching. He'd get the job done. He got so much out of his limited ability."

Groat was the team leader in Pittsburgh and last year he almost led the Cardinals to a pennant. Groat admits that 1960 play was a bit fouled up. "I also know this," says Groat, now the Cardinal captain. "Bill Skiff and Mayo Smith of the Yankees had us well scouted for about a month before the Series. Viridon had a bad leg and they knew he wouldn't steal any bases. The Yankees decided — I was told by Mayo Smith — to keep Kubek and Richardson in position to protect against a batted ball going through a vacated hole. "We missed the sign but the operation was a success."

Viridon and Groat will be talking about this play when they are much older and coaching or managing major league teams. Both have patience and ability to get along with all types of players. "Someday I'd like to manage," admits Viridon. "Of course, I'd be glad to start out as a coach when my playing days end because there are only 2 managing jobs. That makes them scarce. However, I like to think I'm preparing for one of those jobs."

Groat, a great athlete at Duke University, feels the same way but would rather talk about his team's pennant chances. "We could do it this year," ays Groat, "if everything jells. Wouldn't it be something to pull Series again?"

that hit and run play in the World Series again? "I got a good man ahead of me, too, in second baseman Julian Javier, who really can fly on the bases. And sometimes Curt Flood hits ahead of me. He can run. Only one thing bothers me. Yogi Berra won't be catching."

FRANKLY SPEAKING

Honor Where Honor Is Due
The commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee," is found in the Old Testament book of Exodus. Exo-odus, chapter twenty, verse twelve to be exact. This Fifth Commandment says far more than it appears to say. Perhaps it is saying also, "Honor your parents lest your children dishonor you." Or, in other words, a society that destroys the family destroys itself.

We must, by necessity, pay attention to this ancient God-given commandment. One can interpret this commandment as simply one of self interest. I'll honor my parents so my children will honor their parents. Yet, when one sees this commandment couched in the context of God's commands to mankind, he cannot help but see the religious and moral implications that are something far more than mere self-interest.

The family of 1984 bears little resemblance to the family of tradition. What's more — and to many, the fact is ominous — the family of tomorrow will look far different from the way it looks today. Some wonder whether it will exist at all. In spite of all change, whether it be in a tribal-pioneer society or in our modern day society, the fifth commandment must be honored. The whole answer if founded in faithful children and honorable parents. Do we have either, on the average in today's society. In other words, who's delinquent, parent or child?

On one side of the fence are parents, on the other side are children. I wonder if we, as parents, know where our children are? Do they have too much freedom? Do we, as parents, tend to blame someone else for what our children do? Have we, as parents, been wrong in giving or allowing cars, money and free time to flow into life with many other material things without giving love and proper guidance? Most parents hear tens of times over the statement, "The other kid's don't have to . . . or, Susie Q and Johnnie O can, why can't I?"

I have had some parents in the past say to me, "Sure, I drink and smoke; and, frankly, I don't blame the kids for trying everything early. This is a fast society we live in and they are just adjusting to it." "Discipline? We try, but they always come up with an excuse or back-talk and they just wear me down. We've just quit trying!"

The family, however, is not destined to be dropped as a unit force in society unless we forget the fifth commandment.

Frankly Speaking — Today's family is not in total decay; but it is in disarray. Out of this disarray hopeful patters must emerge. The family still develops character and personality; it is concerned in all the crises of life; it must be involved in the church and religious living; and it is the seed-bed of individuality — perhaps, the most important factor in life. "Honor thy father and thy mother."

Today's Meditation

Peace, in the strict sense, can never be had if human beings fail to grasp the very fundamental principles of peace. Today we often hear and read of numerous proposals for disarmament, as if the basic cause of war is rooted in the fact that nations are armed. Granting that disarmament would help, it is not a practical means to peace as long as nations distrust one another. Much more meaningful it would be if only the leaders of the powerful nations of the world today could be made to realize how foolish are their attempts to draw up blueprints for world peace while refusing to study and put into operation those infallible plans set down from the beginning of time by God, who made the world and peopled it with beings formed to His own image and likeness. How ridiculous it is that man, who is dependent on God for every life-giving breath he draws should strive to live and rebuild the world as if God, the very source of his being, never existed. Having banished God from their plans, certain not today's rulers seek to maintain peace with other nations solely by the energetic development of their countries economic and military power. Other leaders falsely insist that world peace will be furthered by denying the rights of individuals and by the establishment of totalitarian forms of government. Still others have gone to far greater extremes by making secret agreements between by deceit and treachery under the guise of helping weaker nations. How diabolical men's actions become when they exclude God and religion from their lives. How contradictory any concept of true peace when God has been abandoned. The abandonment of God by many people has been the occasion for the rise of many false ways of thinking leading man to think he is self sufficient. The present unrest in the world cannot be traced to the lack of skill, or economic proficiency, but rather to the lack of mutual trust. Only since the coming of Christ has the world witnessed times of true peace. When examined carefully, it becomes evident to God-fearing people that the conditions which brought peace in past centuries were rooted in the truth that men accepted the sublime teaching of Christ, that He was asking, but that his kingdom was not of this world. As the Roman Missal reads for Christ the King Sunday: A Kingdom of truth and of life, a Kingdom of holiness and grace; a Kingdom of justice love and peace.
