

Their rallying cry was the stirring ultimatum of Patrick Henry: "Give me liberty or give me death!" . . . their signal, "the shot heard 'round the world." They were the times that nurtured it, and the nation that gave it birth. It is a spirit that is timeless and universal, the essence of man's need to be free and the master of his destiny. This spirit of 1776 won independence for the American colonies and forged them into a great Nation; it lives on in 1964, in the hearts of all men who love freedom, everywhere.

Wheat Complete; Potato Crop Is Due

Bailey County's wheat harvest is completed with the exception of a very few stands, and local farmer's emotions are mixed.

They are happy because yields were considered "good" and quality was fairly high. They are unhappy because dryland wheat

What there is of the onion crop was a flop due to a Spring marked by a lack of moisture and plenty of high, dry winds.

Another reason for disappointment was the falling wheat prices. Last year wheat's market price was about $1.92. This year local farmers received between $1.50 and a $1.40 per bushel.

The drop in price will not affect the area's economy too adversely however, because only about 11,000 acres were planted here by about 220 farmers.

The yield was "good" according to reports, which state the area harvest averaged between 40 and 50 bushels per acre.

Another reason for a lack of concern in the falling wheat price is that supports and other aids given the farmer by the government will push the final price much higher than the $1.40 - $1.50 average.

In the meantime other local crops are making progress toward harvesting. The area potato crop is just beginning to be harvested, and the outlook for the about 700 acres planted is quite good. New potato prices have been pegged at 7 to 8 cents and $3.50 per cwt. (See WHEAT, Page 4)

Approximately 100 attended the annual affair.

Russell Haberer Now Ranks With Top Panhandle Golfers

Russell Haberer is today Muleshoe's new champion golfer as the result of his winning the annual Muleshoe Country Club Invitational Golf Tournament. He nosed out Max Hickey, Pampa, and consolation winner Jack Williams, Plainview, to take first place.

Winner of the first flight was Leonard Hudson. Consolation went to Herb Griffiths. Runner-up was Carl McDorald. Top man in the second flight was Max Manloy, who nosed out consolation winner Hoyett McClelland and runner-up Stan Fox for the honors.

Dean Fashee won the third flight against runner-up Sam Fox and consolation winner Martin Oliver.

Gilbert Wollard headed the fourth flight as winner. Cecil Maddox took second place and Jess Winn won consolation. With the latest win Haberer has accomplished winning a title which has eluded him by only a few strokes for three years.

Last year the local golfer hit a 63 on the first 18 holes and carried a seven stroke lead. However, in the final 18 holes he blew and climbed to an 83. He finished third.

Haberer snapped the title out of the hands of Claude Farrells. (See HABERER, Page 4)

Goldwater Has 2 Senate Seats Courtesy Texas

This interesting and factual feature was written by the editor of the Littlefield County Wide News, one of the area's better writing papers. The Journal is reprinting it with permission because its facts should be of interest to Bailey County residents — Editor.

Whether Barry Goldwater wins his party nomination for President or not the Arizona can claim one accomplishment that Texans should note.

He has largely occupied two places in the U. S. Senate, through the courtesy of Texas voters.

Since he went to Washington in 1961, Sen. John Tower of Texas has been the tail to Goldwater's up-and-down kite. He has echoed the Arizona senator's stands consistently and has fitted his votes in the Senate to Goldwater's convenience.

On critical issues, Tower several times has "paired" with the Arizona senator to let Goldwater take a position without damaging his place in the running for President. One of these was on the farm program bill several months ago.

In Littlefield a few weeks back Tower was outpoken against the farm bill but admitted, somewhat reluctantly, that he "paired" with Sen. Goldwater on the bill. Tower's vote going for it, Goldwater's against.

He "paired" the other day on a critical civil rights vote, again to ease the pressure on Goldwater. In effect, the Arizona senator goes on record in opposition to a measure but protects himself with Senate colleagues by providing an offset for his vote. The offset invariably is Sen. Tower.

Except when it is convenient to "pair" with Goldwater, Tower goes right down the far right line with the Arizona senator. This, unquestionably, is his right and Tower was forthright in stating his far right position when he was elected.

But he did not say also that he would take the important representation that he owes the people of Texas and trade it lock, stock and barrel to advance Goldwater's political fortunes. Texas has a right to expect him to look out for Texas in keeping with his own convictions, as the other 99 U. S. senators are doing for their states, as Barry Goldwater especially is doing for Arizona.

Georgia Inn Setting Above Vein Of Gold

By JACK STILLMAN

DAHLONEGA, Ga. (AP) — Although Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Fry live in a barn, they own a hotel which stands over a vein of gold. No one, however, knows how rich the gold deposit is because it has never been mined. Workmen discovered the vein while excavating for a basement in the middle 19th Century. But the former owner of the hotel sealed up the basement because he was ready to retire and had no use for his gold holdings. This inn — now known as the Smith House — is a 14-room hotel with a reputation for its good food rather than for its gold.

Mr. and Mrs. Fry live next door in a four-bedroom, two-story house which was the barn. Fry, who bought the hotel in 1927, is now dining in the hotel's dining room. An 1899 issue of The Dahlonega Nugget, a weekly newspaper, reported the gold vein to be six feet wide but of unknown depth. The hotel's guests sleep above the headwaters of one of the richest streams in gold deposit in Lumpkin County — Tanyard Branch.

Early in the last century the stream was called Amazon Branch after a huge Indian squaw. The white men called her Amazon because she wore war paint and leaped into a shaft and thrashed white men who stole her gold.

Dahlonega, which once was the site of a U. S. mint, is famed for gold panning as a tourist attraction. Any resident will gladly show a visitor where to pan for gold. And most of the time flecks of the yellow metal can be found. The sleepy north Georgia town was the scene of the first major gold strike in this country more than 130 years ago.

Dahlonega also was chosen as the seat of Lumpkin County, this infuriated the town's older sister, Auraria, which was established more than Dahlonega was nothing more than a pasture. Aurarians called it heresy, and at their first Fourth of July celebration, they raised their glasses to toast: "Our county seat conceived in iniquity, cradled in corruption. They predicted that it would be impossible to build a passable road from Auraria to Dahlonega. The road was built more than 100 years later.

A few blocks from the Smith House is Mt. Hope Cemetery, where many former gold miners are buried. Some have golden tombs.

An 1882 newspaper account says: "In the village cemetery there are several rich little veins that show and freely, and often when digging graves, specimens of quartz sprinkled over with gold ore are thrown out to view; and the miner has the assurance that when he has laid down his pick and shovel, and panned out his last 'clean up' his weary bones will be laid to rest within a tomb, the walls of which are glittering metal for which he toiled his life away."

Many still dream of finding a parent vein from which the bits and pieces and pockets which three entree items on the list, and these can be prepared in a number of ways. Turkey and beef can go in the oven, over the barbecue or be served cold. Salmon, too, has many possibilities — either cold or hot, in a casserole or a salad. Or, of course, it can be used in sandwiches.

EIGHT BRANDS — Mrs. Tom Adamson is pictured before a display of eight brands of English peas, four of which were products of the same company each bearing a different label and each of different quality. Only one of the eight brands was found to contain sub-standard food.

Food Comparison Made On Spending The Food Dollar Wisely

Housewives go grocery shopping and see food items bearing colorful labels. But, what's under the label. This question was answered at the Monday afternoon meeting of the "Spending the Food Dollar Wisely" Workshop.

Mrs. Tom Adamson conducted a demonstration with eight brands of English peas, two cans of pink salmon and five cans of tomatoes. Cards bearing the words "Fancy," "Extra Standard," "Standard" and "Sub-standard" were used, along with the explanation of what was required of the product to be rated in each category, to determine the price value and quality of it.

Through the demonstration, it was determined that the most expensive food was not necessarily the best. Another thing that was pointed out was that a manufacturer is not required to state what part of the contents of a can was liquid and what part actual food, the entire content of the can is the only requirement. Studying different brands, is the only means to determine which can contains the most product and less liquid.

Mrs. Wayne Gilliland spoke to the group on food fallacies and facts stressing that many food substitutes such as certain type of vitamins are not important to health. The workshop was conducted by Laura Hickey, Southwestern Public Service Home Economist. Mrs. Adamson and Mrs. Gilliland, local Home Economics teachers and Jean Martin, Bailey County Home Demonstration Agent.

this year is also looking good. Prices are $1.15 for yellows and $1.50 for whites. The price is down somewhat from last year. However, very few onions will be harvested here this year because most farmers decided not to plant the crop. A shortage of labor was the deciding factor. Most of the county's cotton crop is looking good, but farmers are running into trouble with hoeing. Many planters state that although there are enough hands available for the job, the calibre of hoeing being done leaves much to be desired. On the other side of the picture, the local state employment office says that we have most of the same crews in here this year that we've had every year and that complaints have been "very few".

The recent rains and lack of heavy hails here have been a boon to farmers. Grain Sorghum is off to a flying start and is knee - high or better in most fields.

Scientists Grow Farm Crop In California City's Sewage

By WILLIAM C. HARRISON
Associated Press Science Writer
RICHMOND, Calif. (AP) — Algae "hay" grown in city sewage is being fed to sheep by University of California researchers who have tried it themselves.

"Makes pretty good cookies," says Dr. Clarence C. Golueke. He and Dr. William J. Oswald are farming a two-third acre sewage pond at the university's Richmond Field Station, harvesting 40 to 50 pounds (dry weight) of the single-celled green plant organisms each day.

from under heavy competition this year. David Bonner who was the defending champ is one of the foremost golfers on the High Plains. Jack Williams, winner of the champion consolation has won more golfing crowns than one can count. Max Hickey is considered one of the top golfers on the Panhandle.

The material is packed with vitamins, smells like new - mown hay. The Richmond scientist hip it to the agricultural campus at Davis for test feeding. The research is supported by grants from the National Institute of Health.

The algae, like their pond cum cousins, grow with astonishing speed. They use the sun's energy in photosynthesis — food production — more than 50 times as efficiently as the average soil farm grows conventional crops, the researchers have calculated.

Since algae farming also produces oxygen and cleans up the sewage water, Golueke and Oswald predicts a far-out future for it. A moon colony farm may supply food, oxygen and water while disposing of organic waste products. Astronauts on long space voyage may be sustained by algae culture sustained in turn by wastes.

But newly developing nations in tropical areas on earth should reap earlier benefits, Dr. Oswald says. Many of those nations, he points out, have abundant sunlight, poor soil, inadequate protein resources and booming populations.

Areas like the Mojave Desert of California may become food producing centers, he believes, with algae paying for long - distance pumping of sewage from cities. Or man may learn to algae farm the sea.

The scientists say their asphalt - lined pond provides the first full - scale test of algae farming in raw sewage.

They draw some 72,000 gallons a day from Richmond sewer lines, keeping the pond filled to a depth of 10 to 12 inches. Natural bacteria swiftly decompose and deodorize organic material while algae thrive in the rich effluent.

Baffles in the pond form channels through which pumps slowly circulate the bright green mixture.

Harvesting is accomplished by drawing liquid through centrifuges and finally over a steam-heated drum dryer.

Residual solids and water free from organic contaminants are returned to the city sewer.

The water compares in purity to average river water suitable for re-use by industry or agriculture, say the researchers. Further processing would be required to make it fit for drinking.

Dr. Oswald and Golueke estimate that an algae farm can produce some 20 tons per pond acre per year at a cost of 1 to 10 cents per pound. And they figure approximately 1 million gallons of water can be reclaimed for every ton of algae.

Or, calculated another way, a million gallons of sewage can produce one ton of algae. City sewage averages 100 gallons a day per person.

Since present sewage treatment are largely dead costs to communities, any process returning a part of the investment would be economically attractive, the men point out.

Dean James H. Meyer of the College of Agriculture, who is supervising the extensive animal testing program at Davis, believe the algae will have to be produced at 4 to 5 cent a pound to be competitive with present stock feed supplements.

Fed to Sheep, Chickens, Mice
How do his sheep like to eat the dark green material? They accept it readily for up to about 30 per cent of their diet but begin to eject it above that.

Palatability is no real problem, however, since the algae can be mixed with hay or barley in pellets or flavored with other materials such as molasses, say the investigator.

The algae feed, containing over 50 per cent protein and rich in carotene, an important vitamin source, is equivalent in food value to cotton seed meal with carotene added, Dr. Meyer says. Digestibility tests and chemical analysis are now under way.

Trial feeding to chickens — 30 per cent of their diets — showed no effects on egg production or meat flavor although egg yolks were deeper yellow than usual due to the carotene content of the algae.

In research funded by the Air Force, the Richmond experimenters have kept mice in a sealed glass cylinder for six hours, 30 per cent of their food, and purified water. The only addition to the closed system was other food reduced to toothpaste consistency and fed into the cylinder by a grease gun gadget.

The mice thrived but showed a total lack of interest in eating, an unexpected turn the investigators haven't figured out yet.

What SCS Will Do For You

By RONALD HOOD

Are you taking advantage of the services provided by your local SCS work unit? If not, you should read the following.

The landowners of the Blackwater Valley Soil Conservation District requested the presence of the SCS office at Muleshoe. If they do not make full use of it, the work unit is not serving its right purpose. This purpose is to work with each landowner or operator in planning and carrying out the conservation of his natural resources and the efficient use of his land.

What will the SCS do for you? Trained personnel will assist you in developing a plan for your farming, ranching, recreational, and-or wildlife operations. You make the decisions yourself, while an SCS man provides the technical knowledge needed as a basis for sound planning. A good plan will provide for maximum benefit from the land while using it within its capabilities. La used within its capabilities will remain useful for many years; land used beyond its capabilities will suffer — either from loss of fertility, poor soil structure, on wind and water erosion. The plan has a purpose. It is a record of the decisions made by you. It also contains other useful information, such as, map of the soil types and capabilities found on your unit.

The SCS also provides technical assistance in carrying out conservation practices on your land, such as establishing grass, planning and using irrigation systems, terracing, constructing diversions and waterways, laying out ponds, land leveling, etc. All of these services are provided entirely free of charge.

The Soil Conservation Service Conservation Program. This is cal assistance in carrying out practices on your land, such as establishing grass, planning and using irrigation systems, terracing, constructing diversions and waterways, laying out ponds, land leveling, etc. All of these services are provided entirely free of charge.

Percentages On Service Released

In 1963 Americans paid $783 for the average regular adult funeral services — are considered the amount was $633.

These figures are contained in the recently released annual study of Funeral Service Facts and Figures compiled for the National Funeral Directors Association by Business Counsellor Eugene F. Foran. Neither figure includes vault, clothing, cemetery expense, honorarium for the clergyman, flowers or additional transportation charges.

Foran states that this study of 1963 funeral services is based on a representative sample totalling 161,653 funerals conducted by funeral directors in all regions of the United States. It is the most made of funeral costs, and is generally recognized as the most reliable source for these statistics because of its scope and method.

Of all funeral services selected, 21 percent were priced between $0 and $199 (mostly children, charity, welfare and service calls); 13 percent between $200 and $499; 35 percent between $500 and $799; 20 percent between $800 and $999; and only 11 percent were over $1,000.

Seventy-nine per cent of all services held were regular adult funerals. The survey shows they produced 96 percent of the funeral home fee income. Children's, charity and welfare funerals and service and shipment calls constituted 21 percent of the total services, but produced only 4 percent of the fee income.

Of the funeral homes participating, 56 percent conducted less than 100 services; 39 percent between 100-199 funerals; 8 percent between 200-299; and 6 percent had more than 300 funerals in 1963. The average per participating firm was 124 services. Salaries are the largest item of funeral home expense, the survey points out. Other major expenses are maintenance of building and furnishings, merchandise cost, automotive equipment, accommodation items and taxes.

The study reveals that the average "profit margin" per funeral of all services conducted, even including vault and clothing sales, was 58 of approximately 7 per cent of total charges.

The average funeral home owner's salary was $9,511. The investment range per establishment is from $76,258 for funeral homes conducting less than 100 services per year — to $419,662 for those that had 300 or more in 1963 with an average of 536 services.

Mr. Foran has wide experience in the funeral service field. He maintains his office in Decatur, Illinois.

The National Funeral Directors Association — an affiliation of state associations — is the largest association of funeral directors in the United States. Its membership has 14,600 members annually conduct about 75 percent of all the funeral services held in America.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:
May I say a most warm thank you; and congratulations to the University women, in their noble effort to make books available to our Muleshoe children.

This will indeed relieve much of the intellectual urge for information.

And, no doubt, spur others to renew their efforts to help.

AUSTIN — Have you ever heard of phenylketonuria? It's not nearly as well known as, say, mumps — a disease that almost everyone will have at one time or another. Phenylketonuria isn't catching, and only about one in 8,000 to 9,000 is born with it.

What is this disease with the long name? It is an inborn metabolic error, called PKU for short. It occurs because of the body's inability to metabolize an amino tyrosine for the body to utilize.

Instead, the phenylalanine floods the body. Large amounts are excreted in the urine — providing a simple way to detect the disease. Still other large amounts are sent to the brain, causing mental retardation.

Color pigmentation and other growth processes may be interfered with in a phenylketonuric child. Another peculiar characteristic is the musty smell emitted by a phenylketonuric.

A rare combination of genes from ordinarily unsuspecting parents results in a phenylketonuric child. Chance are that not every child of such parents will be affected, but about one out of four will have PKU and two out of four will be carrier.

The gratifying picture today is that PKU can be detected early enough, the effects of the disease — mental retardation for example — can be avoided to a large extent.

Your local health department and the Texas State Department of Health are working with physicians and hospital staffs across Texas to make PKU test available in the hospital where affected babies might be born. To be effective, the test must be administered several days after birth. The metabolic error does not show itself until the infant has been on protein (milk) long enough for excesses to show up.

The Texas State Department of Health recommends that all newborn babies be tested for PKU. True, chance are only one in 8,000 against a life-time of sorrow?

IT'S THE LAW in Texas
A public service feature of the State Bar of Texas

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE EXPRESSES BASIC BELIEF

What do we mean when we say that in the United States we have a "government of law" and not a "government men"? Basically, we mean that we have certain individual rights guaranteed by our federal and state constitutions and laws which may not be denied by any governing body.

The early American colonists had their fill of government by men, and the Declaration of Independence, signed 188 years ago, set out their complaints against that type of government and revealed their belief in a principle which we now accept as basic to our American way of life.

The indictments set out in the document against King George III of Great Britain charged him with numerous violations of that principle. Among the complaints enumerated are the following:

"He has obstructed the administration of justice, by refusing his assent for law for establishing judiciary powers."

"He has made judges dependent upon his will alone for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries."

"He has refused his assent to laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good."

"He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation: For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of trial by jury; For transporting us beyond seas to be tried for pretended offences; For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering fundamentally the forms of our government; . . . For suspending our own legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever."

Our forefathers who subscribed to the principles of the Declaration of Independence were willing to fight for their beliefs. The Revolutionary War followed, dragging through weary years of suffering and suspense. Each of us takes pride in their eventual triumph over gigantic obstacles.

In 1787, when the framers of our Constitution met at Independence Hall in Philadelphia, where the Declaration of Independence had been signed 11 years previously, they set to work to create a system of checks and balances in government which was to perpetuate the fundamental theory mentioned in the preamble of the earlier document:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident; That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

"That to secure these rights, government is instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."

Some five years later, the first ten amendments to our Constitution were adopted at one time specifically detailing various basic civil rights stemming from the underlying theory of the Declaration of Independence.

Our courts day by day guard these rights for us.

(This newsfeature, prepared by the State Bar of Texas is written to inform not to advise. No person should ever apply or interpret any law without the aid of an attorney who is fully advised concerning the facts involved, because a slight variance in facts may change the application of the law.)

Campfire Magic

It's no longer true that you can't make an omelet without breaking an egg. A new line of four Instant Omelet Mixes has been developed. All the ingredients for making a quick omelet or a variety of scrambled eggs are packed in a box.

Utilizing the new freeze-drying process, and a new method for making dehydrated eggs, the Borden Company has preserved the flavor and texture of fresh eggs in a light, easy-to-prepare package that requires no refrigeration. This makes the new line of Instant Omelet Mixes excellent for boating, camping or fishing trips, as well as for family picnics.

Available in four varieties—Ham, Mushroom, Western and Cheese—the omelet mixes are easy to prepare. And you don't have the work of shredding cheese, or slicing and cutting ham, onions or peppers. Each package contains two envelopes—one with dried whole egg solids, the other with freeze-dried foods used as flavoring. Both are combined with water just before cooking. Cooking takes about 8 to 10 minutes. Each package makes three servings.

While great for outdoor eating, the omelet mixes are excellent as luncheon or supper main dishes at home, too. A supply on the pantry shelf will assure you of a variety of quick, tasty late evening snacks.

FRANKLY SPEAKING

By J. Frank Peery

Your Political Responsibility:
I had said to me while in Europe by a college-age Italian youth, "American youth are political imbeciles." Claude was in Geneva working as a hotel clerk for the summer and a member of the Socialist Youth Party. Did you know that only about 60 percent of all eligible voters participate usually in U. S. presidential elections? When elections are held at the town, county, or city level (not in conjunction with a national election), the percentage of voters sometimes drops to as low as 15 per cent. It is not at all unusual for national elections in the democracies of Western Europe to draw between 70 and 90 per cent of the voters to the polls. In the U. S. S. R., the average vote runs 97.4 to 99.3 per cent—the people are compelled to vote. Maybe, this is what Claude meant by his statement? Why the contrast? Could it be that American youth have not at the proper time been drawn into the drama of responsible and meaningful politics. The old conception that politics is a rather sordid affair which holds an unnatural attraction for the corrupt and tends to corrupt the innocent once they become involved may cause a sense of aloofness. Plato said, "The penalty that good people pay for not being interested in politics is to be governed by people worse than themselves."

I don't agree with the statement made by the Italian youth; however, I do feel that we need to encourage our older youth to prepare themselves better for more effective citizenship.

How easy it is to criticize these peoples outside the free world and, yet, allow our own liberties to rust in disuse. Perhaps, the most fundamental requirement is to be intelligently informed on public issues. The informed person must have compassion and understanding. A good youthful citizen should use his abilities and influence to fulfill his highest ideals.

We live in a dynamic society where decisions are constantly being made whether we have any influence on them or not. I believe, under democracy, political participation is a sacred right.

Frankly Speaking — Christianity confirms that rights are God-given. Therefore, they are not to be taken lightly but assumed with serious obligation. The responsible citizen, youth or adult, sees within the framework of democracy an unlimited opportunity for exercising ennobling influence.

As for salads, there's a choice of vegetables, oils and dressings. For dessert? Plums or watermelon.

And look for lots of locally produced summer vegetables, especially tomatoes, sweetcorn, green beans and lettuce.
