

Port Shutdown Threatens New Orleans Economy

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The shutdown of the nation's second-largest port here in a longshoremen's strike is threatening steel shipments to the Midwest and grain exports to foreign countries. But the impact is greatest on the city of New Orleans itself.

area is related to the waterfront," H.G. Joffray, director of port operations, said Monday. "So if you shut two-thirds of it off, the dollars aren't coming in."

"People start socking that buck away and keeping it for red beans and rice," he said.

The strike, part of a work stoppage that began Oct. 1 at East and Gulf Coast ports by the International Longshoremen's Association, is cutting an estimated $2 million a day from the area economy. Unlike workers elsewhere who are refusing to handle only containerized cargo, the New Orleans longshoremen are striking all cargo.

Containerized shipments account for about 60 per cent of the cargo at the Port of New York, but only about 25 per cent here.

"You've not only got the longshore wages, but you've got the money that the crews off the ships spend here," says Edward Reed, port director. "You've got the bunkers (of fuel oil), the supplies that the ships buy. You've got the normal fees that the ships pay to the port authority."

"You've got the wages of people involved indirectly, ship chandlers, freight forwarders, custom house brokers. You know the whole smear. They're all static."

Reed said the bulk of the cargo coming into the port is destined for somewhere else, so supply shortages caused by an extended strike "would occur all the way up the Mississippi Valley."

Because the walkout is limited in other ports, supplies of critical goods can be diverted from New Orleans.

Meanwhile, talks aimed at settling the I.L.A. walkout are at a standstill. Federal mediators last met with representatives of shipping organizations late last week in Washington and no progress was reported.

The union's chief concern is job security. Key areas include demands for compensation for dockworkers who are left jobless by the increase in container shipping, which requires fewer people to load and unload vessels since goods are put aboard in containers lifted from trucks. The New Orleans port handles 43 per cent of the nation's grain exports and is the nation's major port for steel imports.

"You don't have enough rolling stock in the United States to handle the grain exports. They have to come down by river," Reed said. "So if you have a lengthy strike here, you're going to back up the export grain shipments."

And steel shipped in from abroad and destined for mills in the Midwest already is being held up by the strike.

"A lot of that steel is tied up here right now. It was ordered months ago in anticipation of needs, probably at the present time, so I imagine they'll start to feel it," Joffray said. "Of course they can always go to domestic supplies."

Paul Wegener of M.G. Maher, Inc., one of the large customs house brokerage companies in New Orleans which handles imports and exports, said, "It's hard for us to say right at this moment just what is happening."

"We still have a paperwork backlog — but we effectively don't have any revenue coming in."

Amtrak Asks For $4.5 Billion Facelift

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amtrak on Monday unveiled a five-year plan calling for purchase of new railroad passenger cars and locomotives and modernization of key stations and facilities at a cost of more than $4.5 billion.

It also proposed a complete restudy of Amtrak's national route system, the first major review since the government-subsidized rail passenger corporation was formed in 1971.

The package was submitted to the White House and Congress, both of which must give approval.

In the 177-page document, Amtrak projected a 28.8 per cent growth in passengers it will carry — from 18.6 million in 1976 to 26 million in 1982. In the same period, revenue is expected to increase from $287.5 million to $482 million.

New equipment to be purchased under the plan includes 353 new passenger cars, 15 diesel locomotives, 53 high-speed electric locomotives for use on the Northeast corridor between Boston and Washington and six electric switching locomotives for New York City rail yard operations. Improvements would be made to scores of existing units.

Amtrak also proposed to establish a mothball fleet of up to 200 cars and 30 locomotives for use in periods like the 1974 energy crisis when there was a sudden surge of passengers that taxed Amtrak facilities.

The plan examines the possibility of expanding routes and recommends an increase from three to six daily roundtrips between Chicago and Detroit and an increase from five to seven daily roundtrips between Los Angeles and San Diego.

It also considers added frequency on these currently operated routes: Los Angeles-San Francisco Bay area; Chicago-Memphis-Jackson, Miss., and Chicago-Fort Wayne, Canton, Ohio-Pittsburgh.

Of 24 possible new routes studied, Amtrak found six with a high potential for success: Atlanta-Montgomery-Mobile-New Orleans; Kansas City-Denver; Pittsburgh-Youngstown-Cleveland; Cincinnati-Dayton-Columbus, Ohio; Boston-Springfield, Mass.-New Haven; and Grand Forks, N.D.-Winnipeg, Alberta, Canada.

Under the plan, new stations would be built at Altoona, Pa.; Auburn, Wash.; Baltimore-Washington International Airport, Md.; Buffalo, N.Y.; Charlottesville, Va.; Dearborn, Mich.; El Paso, Tex.; Hampton Roads, Va.; Jackson, Miss.; Memphis, Tenn.; Niagara Falls, N.Y.; San Antonio, Tex. and Tampa, Fla.

Improvements would be made to several other stations, and Amtrak is considering building suburban stations in Buffalo and Syracuse, N.Y.; Pittsburgh, Los Angeles and in an area east of Chicago.

By 1982, Amtrak proposes spending $215 million on track improvement projects in the Northeast corridor and in Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, New York and Pennsylvania.

The corporation has asked for $7 million for grade crossing work in several areas. The top priority is between Jacksonville and Tampa, Fla., where there has been a high number of crossing accidents.

The cost of implementing the five-year plan would require an operating subsidy to Amtrak of $3.477 billion and capital improvement grants of $1.053 billion.

Union Claims Picket Line Five Miles Long

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thousands of Lockheed workers stayed off the job Monday at three of the giant aerospace firm's California plants, reducing or halting production of commercial jets and defense missiles there.

"There's nobody to man those rivet guns right now, believe me," said Neil Van der Cooke, spokesman for the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers (IAM), which voted to strike on Sunday. "We have picket lines five miles long. The only people in the plants are supervisors and engineers."

The union represents about 14,500 workers at three Lockheed California plants, located in Burbank, Sunnyvale and Palmdale. The Sunnyvale plant is involved entirely in defense construction and the Burbank and Palmdale plants make Lockheed's L-1011 commercial jetliners as well as Navy patrol planes.

"We're not sure what the effect will be on our ability to produce airplanes," said Lockheed spokesman Jim Ragsdale in Los Angeles. "We won't know until we know how many workers are staying off the job."

At Sunnyvale, George Mulhearn, spokesman for Lockheed Missiles and Space Co., said, "We are open. We expect to continue normal operations as much as is possible." Salaried personnel, he said, would "carry on most activities at a reduced level."

The striking workers represent about one-third of the employees at the three plants — machinists, janitors, secretaries and production workers. The dispute centers on wage and seniority considerations.

IAM membership in Lockheed's Marietta, Ga., plant, voted Sunday not to strike immediately, taking another crack at the bargaining tables.

"We're a long way apart at the bargaining table," IAM's Van der Cooke said Monday. "But it has to be settled and I think the company realizes that."

The workers' contract in Georgia and California expired at midnight Sunday, and they are asking for a new pact that would give them pay hikes of 8 per cent in the first year of the contract, then 5 per cent and 4 per cent in the following years. Lockheed has offered increases of 3.5 per cent, and 3 per cent the following two years.

The average machinist "now earns something over $7 an hour," said Lockheed spokesman Ragsdale.

Dayan Sets Forth Israeli Text For Peace; Ready To Negotiate

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan Monday set forth a four-point plan for peace with the Arabs.

Speaking at a news conference here before addressing the U.N. General Assembly, Dayan outlined proposals that envision continued Israeli control of the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, captured in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

The plan also proposes security for the Jordan River's headwaters in the mountains of Lebanon and Syria. The Jordan is a key water source for Israel and the demand for security of its headwaters was believed to be a new Israeli proposal.

Israeli journalists said it was the first time an Israeli official had put the four points on the record.

Dayan said that on Sept. 2, at the suggestion of U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, "we provided a draft text for a full peace treaty and we outlined some of our main ideas for the settlement of the issues involved."

"The peace between us and the Arab states," he said, "must be based on the following principles:

1. Israel's security must be ensured.
2. There should be freedom of navigation in all international waterways in the area.
3. The main water sources of Israel, such as the Jordan River sources in the North, should be secured.

"4. Equal rights and full co-existence between Israel and Palestinian Arabs in the Gaza Strip and in Judea and Samaria should be achieved."

Judea and Samaria are the Old Testament names for the West Bank.

Dayan said the Israeli document indicated that "we shall enter into the negotiations without any preconditions and we consider all issues as being subject to negotiation."

"We are ready to discuss open-mindedly all proposals that might be submitted by the Arab states in the framework of Security Council resolutions 242 and 338," he added, citing the 1967 resolution and a 1973 decision that reaffirmed it.

Security and freedom of navigation are set out as principles for peace in resolution 242.

The West Bank, formerly controlled by Jordan, and the Gaza Strip, administered by Egypt, have been proposed as a potential site for a "Palestinian entity."

Dayan rejected the idea of a Palestinian entity or state, and noted that such a state was not mentioned in resolution 242, which speaks only of "a solution to the refugee problem."

He said that a U.S. working paper on procedure for a new Geneva conference, shown to the Egyptians, called for participation of the PLO, but he said the one shown him did not.

Economists Predict Inflation

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — America's business economists predicted on Monday that economic expansion that began early in 1975 will continue, but said Americans can expect to see high inflation and unemployment.

The forecast also said a proposed tax reform package could provide new stimulus to business spending in 1979.

Meantime, inflation will remain over six per cent next year and unemployment will average 6.7 per cent, while corporate profits before taxes will sag to 6.3 per cent, compared to 9.3 per cent in 1977 and 27 per cent in 1976.

The forecast was reported at the 19th annual meeting of the National Association of Business Economists here. It was the consensus of the views of 425 of the organization's 2,700 members who participated in the survey.

Francis H. Schott, the association vice president who analyzed the forecast said, "Inflation was again judged to be the nation's most important problem for next year and the next five years ahead."

But he reported that more and more economists are becoming concerned about the increasing number of government controls on business and industry.

"Inflation drew a 36 per cent priority two years ago as against this year's 39 per cent, while excessive government controls has advanced from an eight per cent priority two years ago to 28 per cent in the current survey," Schott added.

Lawrence Klein, a University of Pennsylvania economics professor who was Jimmy Carter's economic advisor during last year's presidential campaign, said the NABE survey closely resembled his own Wharton forecast.

"There will be no recession in 1978 or 1979, and I believe that corporate profits will continue to climb," said Klein, who is now head of the American Economics Association.

Klein said he anticipates food prices rising next year, reversing a current trend and increasing inflation.

He added that also affecting that trend would be higher prices for autos and mortgages.

Calculators Invade Classrooms Despite Debates on Usefulness

(EDITOR'S NOTE — In less than a decade, electronic calculators have swept the country. How they are on the way to becoming fixtures in many schools. What will that do to the mastery of subtraction or long division? Some see the calculator as a threat, others as a boon, and many believe it's inevitable either way.)

By The Associated Press
The pocket calculator has invaded the classroom, overcoming opposition from some parents and educators who fear that electronic wizardry will replace simple mathematical skill.

"I don't think you can keep calculators out of the school," says Marilyn N. Suydam, director of a federally funded Calculator Information Center at Ohio State University.

Retailers advertise — and parents buy — "Back to School" specials, not only for the college student, but for his younger brothers and sisters. Prices for the simpler models are under $10.

Estimates of the number of teachers and schools using calculators in teaching are sketchy. "There are no real data," says Miss Suydam, "but the numbers are increasing." In a 1976 study for the National Science Foundation, Miss Suydam estimated that between 25 and 50 per cent of U.S. schools used calculators to some degree.

Math Test Planned
The National Assessment of Educational Progress, a project of the Education Commission of the States, will include a calculator section next year in its second, full-scale test of students' math skill at ages 9, 13 and 17.

"We have a whole test booklet using the calculator throughout," says Jane Armstrong, math coordinator for the testing group.

Using calculators was never even discussed when the group first tested math ability in a 1972-73 survey. But this year, math educators around the country said that calculators were a must.

There is continuing debate about how to use the calculator and when to introduce it. No one contends calculators should replace things like the multiplication table or long division. "Parents are concerned that we're going to stop teaching any kind of computation," says Miss Suydam. "I don't think that fear is founded in reality."

Wins Endorsement
The National Council of Teachers of Mathematics has endorsed the use of calculators in class. At what age level? Council President John C. Eggsgard says, "We're only going to know by trying. My personal belief is that it is possible to let the child use the calculator at an early age and still insist that he learn the basic facts."

Eggsgard and other teachers say children will need to learn fundamentals — addition, subtraction, multiplication, division — so they understand the principles involved. You need the basics to make the calculator do what you want it to.

A typical problem: You want to visit friends 460 miles away. You plan to drive at 55 miles an hour. How long will the trip take? You need only seconds to figure the answer with a calculator (8.36 hours). But unless you know the principles of division, you won't know which buttons to push and in which order. You won't even know that you have to divide. And unless you have learned decimals and what they mean and how to multiply, you won't know how to convert the fraction — .36 hours — into minutes — just over 21½.

Square Root Concept
At a higher level, says Eggsgard, who teaches grades nine through 12, he still wants his students to learn how to find the square root of a number, using paper and pencil, so they understand the concept. Once they have mastered the idea, they can use a calculator, just as students used to turn to printed tables.

Youngsters who were turned off by the boredom of dozens of repetition problems may gain new interest in mathematical concepts and the uses of numbers.

'We're only going to know by trying...My personal belief is that it is possible to let the child use the calculator at an early age and still insist that he learn the basic facts...'

"People are going to enjoy math because the drudgery is gone," says one teacher.

Both the National Institute of Education and the National Science Foundation are considering proposals for research projects into new ways of using calculators. Such projects might include an exploration of whether a calculator can be used to help a child learn to count. Or whether computation of decimals can be introduced at an early age.

Effects On Children
Miss Suydam says there have been about 20 studies of varying quality into the effects of calculators on children.

Most have centered on whether use of the calculator impairs the child's ability to understand such things as multiplication and addition, and Miss Suydam says most of the data "looks positive. The achievement level is at least as good or better" as among children who have not been exposed to calculators.

The positive effect of calculators — whether they help children learn more — is unmeasured because their use in the classroom is too new for long-range studies. But, Miss Suydam says, "Some evidence is beginning to surface that ... you can use the calculator as the first step and then develop the meaning."

Kindergarten Use
Some educators believe hand-held calculators can be used as early as kindergarten to introduce children to numbers. Others would wait until junior high or high school. Still others would allow the use of a calculator only to check problems and eliminate routine computation; they would ban them from tests.

Almost all agree, however, that like it or not, there's no way to stop the calculators. "Even though you tell the kids not to use the calculator at school, they've got the things at home," says Eggsgard.

A survey last year by a market research firm showed that 43 per cent of American homes had a calculator and that the number is growing. Many families have more than one.

Industry sources estimate that 1977 sales of four-function personal calculators — the kind you use to balance your checkbook, figure your income tax or add up the grocery bill — will top $300 million. They say that by the end of this year, almost 73 million hand-held calculators will have been sold. If they all were still in use, that would come to about one calculator for every three Americans.

Reluctance To Diminish
In her study, Miss Suydam wrote: "Factors which might tend to control the use (of calculators) are parent and teacher reluctance to allow calculators in the classroom. As teachers and parents use calculators themselves, their reluctance is likely to diminish." She predicted that by 1979 there will be widespread use of calculators in schools.

Will children unfamiliar with calculators be at a disadvantage?
No, says Miss Armstrong of the National Assessment of Educational Progress. In preliminary trials this year for the agency's full-scale test in 1978, educators found that even students who had never used calculators before could handle them successfully after about five minutes of instruction.

Old Method Loses
Helen Masterson, director of public information for NAEP, says the trials, even though unscientific, produced some interesting results. "The same question was asked twice in the assessment. One question required a pencil and paper, or old method answer. The same question was used in the calculator exercise.

NAACP To Probe Houston Branch

HOUSTON (AP) — Three trustees appointed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People are to arrive here Oct. 24 to investigate and reorganize the Houston branches of the NAACP.

Control of the 11 NAACP branches has been in contention since last February when the Rev. C. Anderson Davis and national board members clashed over the authority of the Metropolitan Council which oversees local NAACP activities and is headed by Davis.

The NAACP board of directors voted Sept. 12 to strip Davis of all elective or appointive power in the civil rights group for the next five years.

The board directed Davis to turn over all books, records and office keys of the local NAACP operation. It also asked for the charters of all Houston branches by last Sunday so four new charters for reorganized branches could be issued.

System Sends Lectures By Satellite

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Spoken and illustrated lectures transmitted by satellite will be received and stored at rural colleges and learning centers throughout the nation within three years, inventor Peter C. Goldmark said Monday.

"It will be like having a huge library in the sky that can provide tremendous menus of courses nationwide," Goldmark, who lives in Stamford, told an international communications meeting in Atlanta. His remarks were released by his office here.

Goldmark, inventor of the long-playing record, said he has developed an electronic system that can transmit color pictures and sound at extremely high speed via satellite. As many as 120 half-hour lessons can be displayed at the same time, he said.

Under the system, a consortium of community colleges will rent transmission time on a commercial communications satellite to broadcast lesson plans to subscribers in all 50 states.

Community colleges will be the first users of the system, Goldmark said. By 1980 it will be expanded to other rural centers, including correctional institutions and facilities for the elderly, he said.

The consortium, which includes the American Association of Community Colleges and a North Carolina organization called the Rural Renaissance Program, will begin providing satellite-transmitted lectures this year to select subscribers, Goldmark said. Community colleges in North Carolina will be the first receivers.

A group of seven community college districts already has developed 100 lectures, and the North Carolina group plans to develop 500 additional lessons by the end of this year, he said.

COMPLETE STOCKS AND BONDS MARKET BYSE AMEX

Mart Slips Listlessly

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market spent a listless Columbus Day meandering lower in the slowest New York Stock Exchange trading in more than a year and a half.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which had fallen 6.76 points last week, eased off another .09 to 840.26.

Losers outpaced gainers by about a 4-3 margin on the NYSE, and the exchange's composite index slipped .09 to $2.50.

Big Board volume dwindled to 10.58 million shares, down from 16.25 million Friday and the lightest total since a 10.30 million share day on Jan. 2, 1976.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, came to 12.23 million shares.

A sluggish session had been expected with many investors, including a lot of the large banks and other institutions, observing a holiday.

In the absence of many usual market participants, analysts said it was difficult to draw many conclusions from the day's stock price fluctuations. But they noted that concern over rising interest rates still seemed to be setting the mood in the market.

There was some speculation that the Federal Reserve's weekly report this Thursday might show a jump in the basic measure of the money supply after two weeks of declines.

World Panel Studies Ambiguities Of Diabetes

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Diabetes knows no national boundaries, but a worldwide study about its effects from country to country. The logical question the World Health Organization study hopes to answer is "why.")

By GIL BROYLES
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Why is there a higher incidence of diabetes among Oklahoma Indians than among remote villagers in East Pakistan?

Why are Japanese spared some tragic complications of the disease? To what extent does diet and environment affect one's chances of contracting the diabetes? How large a part does heredity play?

Pursuing answers to these questions, and raising others, is the aim of a worldwide study which culminates its first phase Oct. 1 with a meeting in Geneva. The multi-national endeavor is coordinated by the World Health Organization of the United Nations. For the past three years, each cooperating country has been studying and gathering information on 500 diabetics, aged 35 to 54. Now, scientists will gather to review the results and plan further studies on the disease which knows no national boundaries.

Dr. Kelly West, clinical professor of medicine at the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center, is a member of the planning panel of the study and planning chairman of the International Diabetes Federation, which first conceived the long-range program. He predicts that the findings will affect treatment of diabetics around the world.

"It could be that the standard diet of diabetics is not well conceived," he says. "Carbohydrates may not be bad for diabetes. But the study suggests that certain old truths will hold up well. For instance, fat diabetics should reduce their calories."

Dr. West also says results of the study may "lend strength to the new view that the reduction of starchy foods is probably not an important part of the dietary strategy in diabetes."

Diabetes, characterized by insulin deficiency and excess sugar in the blood, affects 10 million Americans and causes 300,000 deaths in this country each year, according to the American Diabetes Association (ADA).

But the only U.S. group in the study is Oklahoma Indians, selected because of their high incidence of diabetes and because tribal rolls are available. Dr. West says using other U.S. groups would be of little value since race is seldom catalogued.

West says the project's goal is to learn "the extent to which various factors determine marked differences among societies, among the frequency of diabetes and in particular the frequency of the complications."

The study is focusing on diabetes' susceptibility to blindness, heart attack and other coronary disorders, kidney failure and gangrene of the foot leading to amputation.

"We are finding that differences among societies are greater than had been thought," West says.

For instance, studies show that the incidence of diabetes among some American Indian tribes is 20 times greater than that of the population in East Pakistan.

One goal of the multi-national effort is to resolve the old scientific argument of how much "genetic and environmental" influences lead to frequency of diabetes. Some of the complications are thought to be genetically related, West says.

Thus far, the study shows that the incidence of diabetes and its side effects are similar in all developed countries. "Switzerland is very similar to New York, California or Oklahoma," West says.

"There is 10 times as much diabetes in the United States than in certain rural communities of Asia and Latin America," he says.

And comparative studies in Japan have shown that, among diabetics, "nerve and kidney damage is similar, irrespective of the kind of diet and way of life."

But certain other complications associated with diabetes, including gangrene and heart attacks, show a markedly less frequent incidence in Japan than in many other areas.

"Japanese diabetics who live in Hawaii have the same incidence of heart attacks as the general population in Hawaii and more than the Japanese in Japan. That suggests the race factor is not a key."

The study's aim, then, he says, is to "get clues to why it's different."

"Is it diet, less smoking, lower blood sugar, type of treatment?"

The answers, West believes, may help diabetics everywhere, including those in the United States who spend about $5 billion annually, mostly to treat complications.

"If we could reduce amputations because of diabetes from 30,000 to 20,000 a year, that's 10,000 people who wouldn't have to have a leg cut off."

West says that international studies such as this usually are "bureaucratically cumbersome" and almost impossible to include both capitalistic and communist countries. But he says the WHO study is a "happy exception."

Among places where studies are underway are Havana, Moscow, Poland, East Berlin, New Delhi, London and Hong Kong.

When scientists meet in Geneva to contribute their findings of three years' work, West says researchers may find a need to do detailed studies of diet in their areas.

He also expects other findings to show differences among countries in the rate of gangrene and heart attack, while kidney failure will be somewhat more similar as a complication.

But no matter what the early results are, he says, he expects the study to be just a beginning.

College Honors Wife Of Shah

TEHRAN (UPI) — Empress Farah Pahlavi, the 39-year-old wife of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, Monday received an honorary doctorate of humane letters from the Pepperdine University, Malibu, Calif., at her palace in Northern Tehran.

Dr. Norwell Young, chancellor of the university, said the doctorate was in recognition of Empress Farah's "significant contribution of both head and heart."

"When we look around among the nations of the world to select a woman who is aggressively using her leadership to lift the level of female education, we are struck by your admirable record," said Dr. Young at a palace ceremony.

Donal Sime, dean of the university's school of business and management, told Farah the doctorate was a "salute to your role as a talented woman who has lifted an entire generation of women and become a symbol of responsible trusteeship of wealth and power."

Pepperdine has recently opened an Iranology section for studies related to this ancient, oil-rich nation.

Empress Farah, who accepted the award "as an honor not only to myself but to the Iranian people," is scheduled to visit the United States along with the Shah in mid-November.

United Way Passes Half Way Mark Toward Goal

The 1977 version of the United Way campaign jumped off to a fast start Monday, as the first report meeting showed $843,848 collected for 58 per cent of the 1.4 million goal.

The luncheon meeting in the banquet hall of Memorial Civic Center was attended by hundreds of volunteer workers apparently eager to see the results of their campaigning. Report tables, set up in the hall of the civic center, were crowded with campaigners turning in the results of their solicitations.

Three divisions completed their quotas on the first report. They were the Pacesetter group headed by Gene Alderson and W.F. Collier, the Professional division led by Dr. Lowell Snyder and Mike Irish and the Federal Employees headed by Col. Charles Bishop, Phil O'Jibway and Maj. R. L. Woods.

Several employe groups qualified for Good Citizenship Awards presented to units who qualify under the 90 per cent participation and 75 fair share giving guidelines.

"Speaking for all of the campaign cabinet, it's most gratifying to see a turnout such as this and to see this good percentage of the goal turned in," campaign chairman Owen Gilbreath said.

Gilbreath said the campaign cabinet will meet at 7 a.m. today to plan the next report meeting scheduled at the civic center on Oct. 19.

Betty Tolley, who provided luncheon music for Monday's meeting, was honored for her 10th year in that role. Additional entertainment was provided by Roberta Silvano, star of the forthcoming "South Pacific" production at the civic center Oct. 21-22. Director Rick Brame also was introduced.

The Five Flames, Lubbock high school representatives, presented awards and viewed the report board.

GOP Dissidents Considering Organizational Reform Move

A group of dissatisfied Republicans will meet Oct. 20 to consider future plans including the possibility of forming a new county GOP organization.

Spokesmen Dean Krueger and Mike Van Horn said the meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. at the Melonie Park South clubhouse.

The two, both members of the Lubbock County Republican executive committee, have recently openly criticized both the committee and county chairman Mike Stevens.

"We want to set the record straight that the actions of the executive committee do not always reflect the views of the conservative, grass-roots Republican," said Krueger, GOP Pct. 47 chairman.

The Oct. 20 meeting will be to consider future plans "and the direction that conservative, grassroots Republicans should take," he said.

Krueger and Van Horn said the discontent group includes 40 to 50 or more persons, and said it will split from the county GOP organization if necessary.

"We would much rather work through the executive committee for the benefit of all Republicans. But if a few people insist on speaking under the guise of representing the Republicans as a whole, then we will have to take some alternative action," Krueger said.

Van Horn, GOP Pct. 27, said he feels the current county executive committee is dominated by a "small vocal group" who only want to "argue."

He said he and others feel new leaders are needed who will work hard against Democratic policies, can elect Republicans from this area next year and speak out on the state and national level for West Texans.

At last week's county GOP executive committee meeting, Krueger and Van Horn criticized Stevens and the GOP leadership for a recent disavowal vote of Rep. Joe Robbins.

Krueger and Van Horn indicated that they do not agree with certain of Robbins' stances on issues, but said they did not feel the executive committee treated Robbins fairly when it voted to disown him without meeting with him privately first to discuss problems.

And they indicated they did not approve of the disavowal vote being released to news media before Robbins was informed of it.

Van Horn also recently criticized Stevens for some comments made when he announced he would seek re-election to his post as county chairman. Stevens said then he would run again in 1978 seeking to hold together "elements in the party that would factionalize us."

There has been longstanding differences of opinion between Van Horn, a staunch Ronald Reagan supporter, and other party members.

Stevens Monday said he would be "delighted" to attend the Oct. 20 or any other meeting to work toward "party unity."

Lubbock Fire Chief Urges Use Of Alarms

By PAULA TILKER

Avalanche-Journal Staff

Fire Chief Tom Foster Monday kicked off National Fire Prevention Week, which lasts through Saturday, with an entreaty that Lubbockites install smoke and heat detectors in their residences.

Coincidentally, the Lubbock City Council Thursday will consider adopting a revised building code that would make smoke detectors mandatory in newly built hotels, motels, apartment houses and residential houses.

The provision, recommended by the Building Code Study Committee, would require a smoke detector on a ceiling or wall at a point centrally located in the corridor or area giving access to bedrooms. Where bedrooms are on a second floor, a smoke detector would be required on the ceiling above the stairway.

The fire department supports the provision, which would bring the city in line with FHA-loan rules, he said. "But we would like to see smoke or heat detectors in existing residences as well."

Of Lubbock's eight fire-related deaths last year, four were from smoke inhalation and two were from burns, he said. And 57 per cent of all residential fires occur at night, he added.

According to a Tech study of fire detection systems last year, smoke detectors could eliminate half of the residential fire fatalities and 15 per cent of residential fire injuries in Lubbock, a city spokesman said.

Fire Marshal A.C. Black said he knows of five cases in Lubbock in which smoke detectors alerted families to fires early enough to avoid calls to the fire department.

Cost of the detectors ranges from about $25 to $40, Foster said. About 60 smoke detectors, both battery and electrically operated types, that will meet proposed building code standards are available, he said.

Anyone with questions about smoke or heat detectors can call the fire marshal for information, Foster said.

Also in connection with Fire Prevention Week, fire fighters will make special fire inspections of all Lubbock schools, make simulated fire calls to elementary schools and request "help to remove fire hazards from the home," Foster said.

Elementary students will be given questionnaires to complete to make families aware of potential fire hazards in the home, he added.

Antenna Safety Labels Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government reports that outdoor antennas for televisions and citizens band base stations can pose a hazard and it wants them to carry warning labels. The labels would warn consumers about the danger of electrical shock during installation and removal of the antennas, primarily from contact with overhead wires. The labels would also have to include instructions for proper installation of the devices. Last year, the Consumer Product Commission says, 122 persons were killed and 156 were hurt in accidents involving these products. In most instances, officials said, the antenna or its supporting structure came into contact with power lines while being installed or taken down. The commission proposed the rules at the request of Lawrence H. Chapman of Harvey, La., who had urged warning labels on all communications antennas sold to the public.

The commission reported that it "believes that consumers, if adequately informed about the potential hazard and if properly instructed in installation and removal techniques, will take reasonable precautions for their safety." Persons interested in commenting on the proposed requirement or making suggestions can write to the Office of the Secretary, Consumer Product Safety Commission, 1111 18th St. NW, Washington, 20207.

Larger Wine Bottles Viewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you have suggestions or comments on allowing larger wine bottles you have 10 days left to tell the government. Under current rules the largest bottles of wine allowed after Jan. 1, 1979 will be three liters (101 ounces). But the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms is considering two proposals to allow larger sizes: —Add either a four-liter or five-liter size. —Permit any container larger than three liters as long as it is in an even liter amount. The deadline for comments is Oct. 21. Write to the Director, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, Washington, 20226.

Government Offers Tax Credit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has issued a reminder that businessmen who hire more workers this year may be eligible for an income tax credit. The credit is based on the amount of federal unemployment insurance paid by the employer. Officials said this credit may be especially helpful to small businessmen and requires no extra bookkeeping. The credit is explained in IRS publication 902 "Tax Information on Jobs Tax Credit," available at IRS offices across the country.

Man Eliminates Gobbledygook

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI) — Joel Panzer has a rare job — eliminating the puffed-up doubletalk from government reports so people can really know what's going on. "If the Lord wrote reports like a bureaucrat, those would have suffered a terrible hernia lug,ing those tablets down from the mountain," said Panzer, 35, a communications specialist for San Mateo County. Panzer, a new-breed bureaucrat who gets paid $16,300 a year to eliminate gobbledygook, calls himself a "language ombudsman" who puts the heat on other bureaucrats to write simply. "We're always hearing the complaint that people are apathetic about government. But when that government sounds like it's negotiating in a foreign language, maybe people are turned off because they just don't understand it," said Panzer, a former Army newspaper editor. Panzer tries to get his point across in writing seminars and individual editing sessions with county employees. In his "fog index" rating of bureaucrats, he applies pressure to have them substitute plain words like "planting trees" for such high-blown expressions as "institutionally motivated reforestation." The result of his pressure is that the county now has a policy that all major new environmental, planning and engineering studies include simple summaries about what officials hope to accomplish. Furthermore, the county now mails out easily understood, illustrated tabloid newspapers to taxpayers before important hearings.

Thieves Pass Up Ostrich

KENNETT, Mo. (AP) — Thieves stole his monkey and his skunk but didn't bother his valuable African ostrich, said Jack Baker, and it's a good thing. Baker, 26, who raises birds, told Dunklin County authorities that he was in Indianapolis on an ostrich-buying trip over the weekend when thieves took a spider monkey named Tracy and a 13-pound skunk named Pierre from a pen near his home. The thieves were apparently afraid of the ostrich, which was valued at about $5,000, Baker said. "He would be extremely hard to steal because he could kill any person who got hold of him wrong." The home was unguarded "because I don't like dogs," he said. "Maybe I'll get a couple of guinea hens. At least they'd yell."

School Teacher Wins Auto

COCHITUATE, Mass. (AP) — An unemployed substitute school teacher won a new automobile Monday by standing with one hand touching the car for 96 hours and 25 minutes. Kim Pendergrass, 23, of Wayland in Boston's western suburbs, won when the other remaining competitor, Paul Franchi of Wayland, developed a cramp in his leg and removed his hand from the car. The unusual competition at an automobile agency began Thursday morning at 9:23 with 26 persons ranging in age from 19 to 69 standing around a 1978 Chevette, with one hand touching the automobile. Rules permitted competitors to leave the automobile for one hour during each 24 hours. While in place, one hand had to remain in contact with the vehicle. Competitors had dropped out until only Mrs. Pendergrass and Franchi remained on Sunday afternoon.

Rare Photos Show Mark Twain

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A collection of photographs showing author Samuel L. Clemens and his family at their suburban London home in 1900 has been acquired by the Mark Twain Memorial. The 13 original glass negatives fill an important gap in the museum's extensive photographic record of the life of the man known to millions as Mark Twain, said memorial curator Wilson Faude. Clemens was shown in the photographs as exhausted and worn out from a world lecture tour he was on at the time and worried over his wife's failing health, Faude said. The museum acquired the collection from Mr. and Mrs. John Arnold of Sussex, England, who recently discovered the photographs while going through the belongings of a deceased relative.

Columbus Sailed 'River Muddy'

QUINCY, Ill. (UPI) — In 14-hundred and 92, Columbus sailed a little more than the ocean blue, to hear first grade students at the Franklin Elementary School tell the story. Some, for instance, are convinced Columbus sailed up the Mississippi — "The River Muddy" — to Quincy. Others think he went to China, looking for gold. The replies were part of a Columbus Day class project directed by their teacher, Norma Barnwell. "I frequently wonder if they listen at all," she said after seeing the responses. "He brought some Indians back to where he lived," said Lee Dunlap, 6. "All the people of his home town, Columbus, Ohio, wanted to see Indians because they never seen them before." "Columbus gets in his boat, goes up the Mississippi and lands down by the banks near the (Quincy) bridge," Lee explained. "He was a man and he worked on a boat," said 5-year-old Matthew Lord. "He scrubbed and washed and scrubbed and washed decks up and down the Mississippi." Paul Edmonson, 6, said Columbus sailed the "River Muddy." Paul also joined what appears to be a raging controversy about Columbus' age at the time of his exploration. He said Columbus was 14 "when he went to find the Chinese gold." According to 7-year-old Carol Stinson, "He was a little boy." Carol Russell, 6, said he was "grewed-up." Regardless how much or how little they know about Christopher Columbus, the students agreed he must have been a pretty good guy because he got them a day off school.

Lawmen Get Orders To Shape Up

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — "All you have to do is look around and you know we need some sort of fitness program," Thomas Sheets said as he surveyed the group of men slumped in folding metal chairs. "All these young men with great big guts." He wasn't referring to desk-bound, out-of-shape executives. He was talking about Orange County sheriff's deputies. Sheets, a captain in charge of the uniformed patrol division, has given deputies six months to shape up or face disciplinary action — possibly even suspension. He has developed a fitness program for the entire 230-person department under which local YMCA instructors will weigh the deputies, check their blood pressure and attach wires to monitor their heart-beat while they pedal a stationary bicycle. Officers' flexibility, hand grip strength, balance and lung capacity also will be tested. "We've never had any sort of yearly physical requirement," Sheets said. "We have no written weight requirements when they first joined the department." After undergoing testing, each deputy will be given a series of exercises for the cardiovascular system and a recommended body weight. Each will be tested again in six months. "I'm not worried about this," said Deputy Stone Tweten. "Whatever weight they tell me I have to get down to, well, I'll get down to it. I'll lose just whatever I have to during the six months."

Firm To Determine Feasibility Of Credit-Card Rationing Plan

NEW YORK (AP) — A New York public accounting firm said Monday it has received a federal contract to determine the feasibility of a gasoline-rationing plan that would involve the use of credit cards rather than coupon books.

"The definition of our effort is a contingency plan," said Paul Goodstat of Price Waterhouse Co. "I have no idea whether the government envisions gasoline rationing. I would assume this is to be prepared just in case."

He said Price Waterhouse was awarded the contract for "about a half million dollars" to "look at the feasibility of such a system and if feasible to design such a system. We're not the only contractors involved.

"The system would be based upon a motorist having a rationing credit card rather than coupons," Goodstat said. "The ration card would be used such as an oil company card is used.

"Our contract is to address a number of issues related to the possibility of using a credit card-based system for gas rationing." Goodstat said. "It hasn't been a secret. No government agency normally publicizes contracts.

Officials of the Department of Energy in Washington could not be reached immediately for comment because of the Columbus Day holiday.

Goodstat said Price Waterhouse would study "what systems would be necessary to support" such a rationing plan but declined to be more specific, referring further questions to federal energy officials.

"We're still at the concept paper stage," Goodstat said. "I don't know what the specific intents of the administration are."

He commented after Lundberg Survey Inc., a California-based oil and gasoline industry research firm, reported in its latest statistical Lundberg Letter that it had been contacted by a Price Waterhouse researcher who tried "to obtain massive information as to credit cards and imprinter and gasoline volume by categories and transactions.

"A PW man advised us that PW was designing a fuel-rationing system. His role was to find out how credit cards and imprinters ... could become the instrumentality of such a plan, the Lundberg Letter says.

Dan Lundberg, president of the research firm, said the PW researcher telephoned last week and wanted to know, among other things, how many motorists have credit cards, how many service stations have imprinters, what volume of gasoline flows through credit and what volume flows through cash.

"The first day this data gathering effort was made, we thought it was the federal government doing the querying," Lundberg said. "Then he tipped his hat that he was with PW."

He said, "I'm with Price Waterhouse. We're consultants to (the federal government) and we are designing a rationing program," Lundberg said.

"I told him this information is massive and monumental and a new demand upon the research industry," Lundberg said. "My answer to him was not only did we not have it, but I doubted that any conglomeration of research agencies or anybody would have the immediate resources, short of government-mandated assistance, to develop such information."

Arresting Officer Testifies At Cullen Davis Murder Trial

AMARILLO (AP) — Millionaire murder defendant Cullen Davis emerged calmly from the home of his girlfriend last year and quietly surrendered to police, an arresting officer testified Monday.

Rookie policeman Sam Van Vleck, 25, said it was about 4 a.m. on Aug. 3, 1976, that officers with spotlights and loudspeakers, flushed Davis from the home of his girlfriend Karen Master.

"The defendant Cullen Davis walked very calmly out the front door and up the sidewalk to the street," Van Vleck told the jury in Davis' capital murder trial.

He said Davis, 44, was "frisked" at the scene, ushered into a patrol car and taken to police headquarters where he was charged in the midnight shooting spree at the $6 million mansion.

Two died and two were wounded in the carnage and Davis is on trial for the slaying of his 12-year-old stepdaughter Andrea Wilborn.

The defendant's estranged wife Priscilla, 36, was wounded, her lover Stan Farr, 30, was slain and a chance mansion visitor, Gus Gavrel, 22, was crippled in the gun fire.

Mrs. Davis and Gavrel and the young man's girlfriend, Beverly Bass, 19, all have testified that Davis was "the man in black" who triggered the murder spree.

Officer Van Vleck's account of Davis' arrest was the first provided jurors since testimony began in this Panhandle city some seven weeks ago.

Defense lawyers blocked him from recounting what if anything Davis said after he stepped from Mrs. Master's suburban Edgecliff Village home that morning.

Mrs. Master, 28, has taken an apartment in Amarillo and is present almost daily for the luncheons Davis hosts on the third floor of the courthouse.

She is expected to testify for the defense.

She has provided a sworn affidavit in which she recalled awakening at 12:40 a.m. the morning of Aug. 3 and seeing Davis in bed beside her at that time.

Yarbrough's Lawyer Eyes Venue Change

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough's lawyer said Monday a decision will have to be made soon on whether to seek a change of venue in Yarbrough's forgery and perjury trial.

The date of the trial was pushed back Monday until Oct. 31 at the request of both the prosecution and the defense.

Yarbrough's attorney, former Atty. Gen. Waggoner Carr, told reporters the defense is leaning toward asking the court to move the trial to another city.

The question is whether prospective jurors in Austin are prejudiced against Yarbrough because of extensive local news coverage of his case, Carr said.

"It does not look good to me," Carr said.

"I think we are leaning to that (requesting a venue change), but no decision has been made."

In answer to a question, Carr said, "Judge Yarbrough has not given authority to me or anyone for plea bargaining."

Neither the state nor the defense had heard the original tape recordings secretly made by a former Yarbrough business associate, Bill Rothkopf. The defense won the right at a pre-trial hearing Sept.

Police Chief Defends Torres Couple Arrest

HOUSTON (UPI) — Police Chief Harry Caldwell Monday defended officers who arrested the parents of Joe Torres, whose death led to homicide convictions for two former policemen, on a weekend disturbance call.

Joe and Margarita Torres, free on bond, charged they were arrested Saturday without justification. Percy Foreman, Torres' attorney in a civil suit against the city, said his client told him police beat him.

The Mexican-American community has been feething since two fired Houston policemen — charged with murdering the couple's 23-year-old son during a drunk arrest — received misdemeanor homicide convictions and probated sentences Friday.

Caldwell said officers RS Quintano and JA Middleton jailed the elder Torres, 47, and his wife, 42, on resisting arrest charges after a scuffle outside a nightclub Saturday.

Caldwell said the Houston Police Department's internal affairs division will make a full report, but that it appeared Quintano and Middleton acted sensibly in the face of a hostile, tense crowd situation.

According to the police report, Quintano and Middleton responded to a drunk complaint at Zippy's Game Room late Saturday.

They moved to arrest Alex Garza, 19, and drew their weapons when he reached in his back pocket. He subsequently withdrew his hand holding a wallet and laughed at police, who then took him into custody.

While officers were arresting Garza, the police report said, Torres and his wife came out of the nightclub, Torres carrying a pool cue, yelled, "He's just a kid, you ... You've got no right to kill him."

Then, according to police, a crowd gathered as Torres grabbed an officer and a struggle ensued in which Torres was slightly injured. He and his wife were taken to jail.

The Torres account differed.

The lowest retail price on record for a pound of bacon was 12.5 cents in 1980, reports the U.S. Census Bureau.

IN EXILE—This statue of Christopher Columbus and a scantily clad Indian maiden decorated the east front of the U.S. Capitol for 114 years until it was removed during a building expansion in 1958. The controversial statue titled "The Discovery" has been languishing in a warehouse ever since. (AP Laserphoto)

Columbus Statue Much Ridiculed

WASHINGTON (AP) — After decorating the East Front of the Capitol for 114 years, a marble Christopher Columbus lies in exile 12 miles away, unwept and unsung.
And 19 years after the controversial statue of the famous explorer was removed from the East Front steps, the government still hasn't decided what to do with it.

Unveiled Amid Furor
The statue caused a furor when it was unveiled in 1844.
"Is Columbus getting ready to play a game of ninjaps?" demanded Sen. Charles Sumner.
And the furor sputtered for 114 more years.

Banned From View
After the statue was removed from the Capitol to make way for the East Front's remodeling in 1958, former Sen. Mike Monroney, D-Okla., said he would introduce legislation, if necessary, to block its return.
But the statue has had defenders, too. They said the head of Columbus was taken from an original bust in Spain and could be the best likeness of the explorer in Washington.

Tech Workshop Helps Personalize Teaching

Learning about themselves in order to improve their classroom teaching is the major purpose of a workshop which helps Texas Tech University professors "personalize the learning climate."
The workshop was formulated because numerous studies have shown students from coast to coast consistently look for an instructor's personality when entering a class for the first time, according to Dr. Dayton Young Roberts, professor of higher education.
Roberts has conducted more than 200 "Personalizing the Learning Climate" workshops in colleges through the United States and the Caribbean. More than 2,100 pre-service and in-service teachers and administrators have participated in the workshops.

THE LONG TREK — Gary Moore, 27, of Boston tells of his walk from Boston to Lubbock, the two-thirds point of a 3,600 mile trek that will eventually take him to San Diego, Calif. Moore, wearing a red T-shirt emblazoned with "The Big Walk" in white letters, said he embarked on the trip to see the country and test his endurance. (Staff Photos by Gary Davis)

Young Man Makes Way Across United States By Walking

By ESTHER LONGORIA
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A young Bostonian is making his way across the United States using a mode of transportation not chosen by most people.

He's walking.

Gary Moore, a 27-year-old journalist, was in Lubbock Monday, the two-thirds point of a 3,600 mile trek that eventually will take him to San Diego, Calif.

"I'm hoping to plunge into the Pacific sometime around January," Moore said.

Moore, a lanky, tanned man with a full, reddish-brown beard, sported a red T-shirt, blue jeans and a pair of hiking boots. The boots, worn clear through the toes, are his third pair since he began the trip May 14.

"I've had some hard times, and my main problems have been getting blisters and loosing toenails, but through all of that, I've never thought of quitting," he said.

The journalist said he embarked on the trip for the sheer challenge and enjoyment of travel and to expand his writing.

"Somehow, walking across the United States just makes me feel closer to the country and its people. It's a feeling I couldn't get being cooped up in a car," he said.

"Basically, I just dig the hell out of meeting people and seeing new things."

Moore said he had contemplated such a journey for the past two years and "finally, I just decided to do it."

He had worried about the financing of such a trip, but the newspaper he works for, the Boston Herald American, solved his problem when they decided to pay for his expenses.

"Competition between the Boston papers is fierce. I'm a novelty for my paper; my articles about my adventures are something the other paper doesn't have," he said.

Normally, the journalist turns in an article each week to the Herald-American about his travels.

He carries a 36-pound pack, which includes a sleeping bag, pup tent, an old Nikon camera and some food and clothing.

During the first part of the trip, Moore had walked up to 36 miles in a single day. But now that he has passed his halfway mark, he has slowed down to about 20 miles a day.

"Right now, I feel that the hardest part of my trip lies ahead since I'll have the desert and mountains of the Southwest to contend with," he said. "I figure that, at times, it will be 50 miles between towns. So, I'm planning to carry lots of water."

He also is proud that he has walked every inch of the way, accepting no rides. "I've been a purist about this one; I even crossed a Mississippi River bridge on foot," he said.

After Boston, the walker crossed the mountains of Pennsylvania, angled across Ohio, Illinois and Indiana, went into Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma and reached Texas at Quantah.

"I've seen a good cross-section of the country, and basically, I've found the people friendly," he said. "In fact, I've had lots of good, home-cooked meals."

Concerning this part of the country, Moore said he never really had seen the plains and was intrigued by them.

"They're exotic to me," he said.

The journalist says there's no way that he's not going to complete the trek, and his plans include writing a book about his trip and possibly taking another "walk" through Mexico and Central America.

District Court Upholds Vote On $26 Million Bond Issue

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Dist. Judge Thomas L. Clinton Monday denied a motion for a new trial on the issue of whether the City of Lubbock's recent May 21 general obligation bond election was legally valid.

The 99th District judge had earlier upheld the validity of the election, in which local voters approved a $26.4 million package for firefighting, street, sewer plant and water pressure improvements.

Clinton reaffirmed his earlier decision after a hearing in which City Council member Carolyn Jordan appeared as a witness.

The validity of the bond election is being contested by city hall critic James G. Marshall, and indications are that Marshall now will appeal the decision to the 7th Court of Civil Appeals in Amarillo.

According to city officials, any bond sales approved by voters May 21 is being blocked because of a state law that no municipality may sell bonds if they or the election are the subject of litigation.

Marshall, representing the Taxpayers Association of Lubbock, had indicated there might be new evidence raised at Monday's hearing.

Most of the questioning of Jordan, conducted by Marshall attorney Robert Garner, had to do with the city's failure to build an electrical interconnect system, a step okayed by voters in an $18.8 million bond election in 1973.

It became clear during the hearing that Marshall's chief complaint is that, in his opinion, ordinances by the city establishing bond elections are too vague.

The plaintiff used the interconnect issue as an example, with his attorney arguing that voters think they are approving certain specific steps, steps which the city council may later decide not to take.

"We have proved that we have a council that takes positions, then changes those positions totally of their own will," Garner argued.

The example of the interconnect idea, Garner said, demonstrates Lubbock's city council does not carry out either "to the letter or the spirit" what it represents it will do with taxpayers' money.

In urging Clinton to grant a new trial, Garner said the court had the opportunity to make sure that a "fair submission of issues" is made to the public and to see that expenditures are made specific.

Asst. City Atty. Jim Brewster said the main question is whether the language of the ordinance, declaring the May 21 election, was adequate, and said the plaintiff was raising a collateral issue.

"I think what we've heard is not so much new evidence, but a new cause of action in a case that was decided last year," Brewster stated.

Citing case law to argue the validity of the ordinance, Brewster said Marshall was "premature" in raising the issue of expenditures.

"We can't go into expenditures, because there haven't been any (from the May 21 election) made yet," he said.

After hearing the arguments, Clinton announced he was denying the bid for a new trial.

Earlier, Mrs. Jordan detailed her position that the city was obligated to use bond revenues for the general purposes specified, but said the city needed to retain a certain degree of flexibility in attaining the overall objectives.

For instance, she said, one of the general purposes of the 1973 bond election was to provide funds to improve city electrical service, but that the interconnect proposal was only one of a number of steps contemplated to reach the goal.

She said other goals, such as improvement of the Holly Street electrical facility, had greater priority. "One thing we were not definite about was the interconnect, and I think the language in the brochure (publicizing needs) shows that," Mrs. Jordan said.

She indicated that a study subsequent to the 1973 election showed the cost of hooking the city up with Texas Electric would have been $10 million, a prohibitive figure.

Basically, Mrs. Jordan said, specific goals cited in publicizing bond elections represented the council's best estimate at that time of how revenues would be spent. She said that, if further study showed more effective spending alternatives to reach the basic objectives, then the council might change plans.

"I think the public would expect us to," she said.

Final Juror Sought For Mabra Trial

One juror was still needed this morning to round out the panel for the David Mabra capital murder trial, being conducted in Judge John McFall's 237th Dist. Court.

An 11th juror was chosen Monday morning. Jury selection began Oct. 3.

Mabra, 20, of Amarillo, is accused of the Oct. 21, 1975, shotgun slaying of convenience store clerk Edith Whitfield. Mabra's trial was moved here from Amarillo on a change of venue after a co-defendant received the death penalty.

If Mabra is convicted of the capital charge, jurors will assess either life imprisonment or the death penalty, the only punishment options for capital murder.

Attorneys were to resume individual examination of prospective jurors at 9 a.m. today. If the jury panel is completed this morning, testimony could begin later in the day.

Occupied Settlement Question Compromised By Israel, U.S.

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israel and the United States appear to have reached a quiet understanding over the divisive issue of Jewish settlements in Arab territory occupied during the 1967 Middle East war.

Israeli officials said Monday that Israel has agreed to build only military and not civilian settlements in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and in return Washington apparently has indicated it will temper its harsh criticisms of the camps in occupied lands.

Deputy Defense Minister Mordecai Zippori released details Monday of a previously announced plan to build 10 new military camps on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

Although some civilians would reside in the camps, Zippori said they would probably fill noncombatant jobs like cooks and construction workers.

A general outline of the settlement plan was released two weeks ago when Prime Minister Menahem Begin proposed it as a compromise to right-wing supporters who wanted to build new civilian towns throughout the occupied area. Although the right-wing supporters were promised the camps would eventually be turned into civilians posts, Zippori indicated that for the time being they would remain strictly military in nature.

There was no immediate comment from Washington on the latest settlement plans or on Israeli reports that a quiet understanding had been reached to cool the sometimes angry controversy.

The Carter administration has reacted sharply to Jerusalem's past announcements of new outposts in the occupied West Bank, calling such settlements "illegal" and "obstacles to peace."

The White House has remained silent so far on a weekend report that Israel has established a new civilian agricultural village on the border of the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

Israeli state radio reported Sunday that 12 families had moved into the village of Kfar Ruth.

There was no official announcement of the settlement. Officials said the outpost extends only one yard across the frontier into occupied territory. They said it was one of the holdover settlements approved by the previous government.

Nor was there any White House criticism last week when Prime Minister

Menahem Begin's government allowed nationalist settlers of the Gush Emunim — Bloc of the Faithful — to send pioneer groups to live in army camps in the occupied areas.

The idea of allowing settlers to live in the camps and others to join existing communities on the West Bank was a compromise Begin worked out with Gush Emunim, a group that provided strong support during Begin's election campaign last spring.

Before the compromise was reached, Begin ordered Israeli troops to block a bid by Gush Emunim members to set up a West Bank settlement.

Israeli officials say the Begin plan was designed to mollify nationalists pressing for more settlements and to ease international criticism during delicate negotiations now underway to arrange a resumption of the Arab-Israeli peace conference in Geneva.

The compromise represented a reversal of Begin's campaign pledge to open the West Bank to Jewish Settlement. The leader of the conservative Likud party, he sees the West Bank as part of Israel's historic domain, and refers to it by the biblical designation of Judea and Samaria.

The Begin government has outlined a long-range program of extensive settlement of the occupied territories, but details and the timetable are a closely kept secret.

In addition to 51 settlements set up since 1967, officials say they are now working on establishing 25 more, approved by former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's Labor government in April 1976. The officials say the 25 should be completed by 1980. The Rabin government located those settlements along the edge of the West Bank, in areas Israel hopes to keep in a peace settlement.

Begin has approved three other settlements set up illegally during the Rabin administration, and authorized one completely new village south of the Arab town of Hebron.

Exposure To TV Violence Can Lead To Imitation

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — The psychologist who would have been the "heart" of Ronny Zamora's "television intoxication" defense said Monday TV violence can cause some children to imitate what they see.

Dr. Margaret Hanratty Thomas, an associate professor of psychology at Florida Technological University, said studies have shown that "exposure to television violence can cause some children to imitate what they see."

"It certainly seems likely that television violence could cause aggressive behavior on the part of children," Dr. Thomas said.

"Mary, many studies do show a trend for people who watch a lot of violent material on television also to be more aggressive in real life," she said. "When you couple that with experimental evidence, it kind of lends more credence to television causing aggressive behavior."

Although she had not interviewed Zamora, Dr. Thomas had been prepared to testify about the general effects of television violence last week in the 15-year-old boy's Miami murder trial.

But Judge Paul Baker refused to let her testify because he limited testimony to television's effect on Zamora, not on all children.

Defense attorney Ellis Ruben, who called Dr. Thomas the "heart of my defense," sought to prove Zamora was under the influence of "involuntary subliminal television intoxication" and momentarily insane when he killed an elderly neighbor.

Zamora was convicted of first degree murder, robbery, burglary and possession of firearms and will be sentenced Nov. 7. Ruben, who will appeal, said Baker's refusal to let Dr. Thomas testify was the "death blow" to his case.

Dr. Thomas said "hundreds and hundreds" of studies have led to similar conclusions — that it is likely television can cause aggressive behavior in children.

"When you have so many different studies done by so many different people, it seems to me to be very clear that excessive violence on television can have a harmful effect and is something we should really be worried about," she said.

Yanks Host Dodgers In Series Opener

NEW YORK (AP) — A baseball rivalry dormant for 14 years will be resumed tonight when the Los Angeles Dodgers meet the New York Yankees in the opening game of the 1977 World Series.

The Dodgers will start Don Sutton, the curve-balling right-hander who was 14-8 during the season. He'll oppose fragile left-hander Don Gullett, who was 14-4 during the year but was hurt in the opening game of the playoffs. His shoulder remains questionable.

For Sutton, the game will mark the fulfillment of a dream.

"I have been dreaming about pitching in Yankee Stadium all my life," said Sutton. "I've pitched a lot of mental shut-outs against the Yankees here."

When they played in Brooklyn, the Dodgers won eight National League pen-nants. Seven times their October opponents were their fierce intracity rivals, the Yankees. Five of those World Series went the full seven-game limit and left New York baseball fans limp from the excitement.

Only once since the Dodgers moved to Los Angeles in 1957 have the two teams met in the Series. That was in 1963 when Los Angeles swept New York in four straight games.

Both teams go into this year's Series after improbable playoff victories. The Dodgers eliminated Philadelphia in four games, winning the last two in Veterans Stadium where the Phillies had baseball's best home record.

The Yankees went the five-game limit to beat Kansas City, also capturing the last two games on the road and overcoming a Royals' streak of 38 victories in 45 games at home at the end of the season.

Momentum should not be a factor because, right now, both clubs have an ample supply of that intangible working for them.

The Dodger triumph was fueled by a two-out, ninth-inning rally that wiped out a two-run Phillies lead in the third game. The heroes were a pair of senior citizens, Vic Davalillo, rescued from the Mexican League in midsummer, and Manny Mota, a professional pinch-hitter.

Davalillo's bunt single touched off the Los Angeles rally. Mota doubled and Davalillo came home on a throwing error. Then Mota scored the Dodgers' tying run on a controversial call at first base by umpire Bruce Froemming when Davey Lopes beat out an infield single.

Dazed by that Dodger rally, the Phillies succumbed meekly to left-hander Tommy John, who beat them in a rainstorm Saturday night to clinch the flag.

The Yankees also used late-inning lightning to beat Kansas City. Trailing 3-1 going into the eighth inning of the fifth game, New York got a run, driven in on a pinch-single by Reggie Jackson, who had been benched before the game by Manager Billy Martin because of a 1-for-14 play-off slump.

In the ninth, New York struck again, using Mickey Rivers' RBI single to tie the score and a sacrifice fly by Willie Randolph to deliver the winning run.

The World Series will match two old friends in the opposing dugouts, managers Tom Lasorda of the Dodgers and Martin.

"The Series between the Dodgers and Yanks has been a great part of baseball tradition," said Lasorda, "and I think it's going to be a very exciting Series."

Martin, still worn out after his team's dramatic comeback victory, was asked what kind of encore the Yankees could supply for the Series. "We're planning to show up," he said.

A year ago, under similar circumstances following a dramatic fifth-game, ninth-inning home run by Chris Chambliss which won the pennant, New York was swept in the World Series by Cincinnati.

That was the second consecutive world championship for the Reds, who were dethroned this year in the National League West by the Dodgers.

Lasorda said he will start rookie Glenn Burke in center field if the Yanks go with Gullett. Rick Monday, the Dodgers' regular center fielder who has been slowed by a back injury, will start against right-handers.

The first two games of the Series will be played in Yankee Stadium Tuesday and Wednesday nights. The teams move to Los Angeles for the third, fourth and, if needed, fifth game over the weekend, returning to New York for the sixth and seventh games, if necessary, next Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Don Henry Everything's Coming Up Roses

THUNDER AND LIGHTNING played its own little game over Houston Saturday night. Even, as one listened to the radio play-by-play report of the Rice-TCU scrap, the thunder rolls could be heard. Even in Houston—clear across the state from Big D, had one been listening carefully, he might have heard, through the roar, a rumbling of "Hook 'em Horns!"

It was a weekend when the Yankees showed the baseball world again that they're the Yankees. . . when Alabama and the Bear convinced some football folks in the land of the roses. . . when TCU actually had a chance to ease up on somebody. . . when another Heisman hopeful (BYU's Gifford Nielsen) went out with surgery, but when another appeared — for sure.

But, mainly, it was the week when Texas came of age. Beat Boston College, Virginia and Rice, and you can't say too much about your talent total. But, O.U. . . why, I-35 north of Dallas claimed more broken-down autos Saturday night than ever cluttered the highways to California during the Dust Bowl Days.

USUALLY, BY THIS time in the season, the Heisman list is fairly well defined. But, this fall, there is no Archie Griffin, no Tony Dorsett, no Johnny Rodgers who stands helmet and pads above the rest of the collegiate cast.

BYU was pumping Nielsen until his injury. Oklahoma Staters are boosting Terry Miller. Tech submitted Rodney Allison's credentials until he was sidelined two weeks ago, and for the first time in several years, a lineman (Ross Browner of Notre Dame) is getting some attention.

But, now, if one game can propel a young giant into the Heisman race, then the Texas-OU game will serve as Earl Campbell's nominating platform. He had been mentioned for Heisman honors before the season began, but coming off an injury year, it was rather difficult to get him on the launching pad. No more.

Same with Texas, as a unit. Scores were impressive earlier, but not to the extent that the 13 points against OU shouted "Power." And the defense against the rush — evidently pass is a four-letter word in the Sooner language — was enough to stamp the Longhorns as in the class with steel-belted steaks and wet saddles.

EVEN WITH A third-string quarterback, the Longhorns were able to move against a first-class club. Remember, this is the same OU team which, when it had to produce in the final minutes against Ohio State, drove to within field-goal range to pull one out.

So, the Sooners had been to the testing block before. But, Texas used a group of guys seldom mentioned too prominently to stop the well regarded Sooners' best shots.

Brad Shearer, a senior, had been around, sure, but Dwight Jefferson, Mark Martignoni, Steve McMichael — youngsters such as these — weren't that well known. As it worked out, O.U. finally gave up on running to the side where Jefferson was playing defensive end, and the play of these young players and the preparation for the blood-letter. . . it's all a credit to Fred Akers and his new staff.

With Lance Taylor, who came out of El Paso as a blue-chipper, Martignoni and McMichael formed the type of linebacking corps UT has used so successfully for the past couple of decades. But, frankly, none of the three came in with the credentials of previous UT linebackers, such as Nobis, Halsell, Gaspard, Scott Henderson, Bill Hamilton or Braband.

BUT THE THUNDER up the middle came from Campbell, who rattled the Sooners for 128 yards rushing. Even while going through three quarterbackbacks, the basic UT strategy was holding the football within reach of Earl's fingers.

Some who have been watching Campbell run for four years say his performances are better than ever. It wasn't against OU, but coaches — opposing coaches, especially — and spectators are talking still about one play against Rice. The play could be indicative of the year he's having.

Earl was in the process of barging in for a score, and about the 5-yard line, this Rice halfback hit him head-on. This was at the 5, remember. Campbell never broke stride, and the Rice back hit the ground 5 yards into the end zone. He had not been knocked down, run over or brushed aside, he bounced — in the air — 10 yards backward.

It's of such plays that legends are made, but this one is on film for all to see and admire.

If the Longhorns can keep someone healthy to hand off the ball, orange may again be the predominant color in the fall. Randy McEachern took over and triggered Saturday's win, and Ted Constanzo, the blue-chipper of a couple of years back, returned this week from summer knee surgery.

Now, it's down to another Shootout with Arkansas. And now again, when the Longhorns play, there is national significance. Even No. 1 talk.

After that horrendous whipping (44-0) of Boston College a few weeks back, a Boston sports writer ranked Texas first in the nation on his AP ballot, at a time when the rest were picking it 18th or 19th — if at all.

That guy may possess the best foresight in the country.

Italian Buddies Recall Old Days

NEW YORK (AP) — On the eve of the biggest confrontation of their lives, rival World Series Managers Billy Martin and Tom Lasorda hoisted a few in a grog shop just below the baseball commissioner's office Monday night.

"It's Columbus Day and us Italians have to stick together," said Martin, born Alfred Manuel Pesano.

"We're like brothers," crowed Lasorda. "The best of pals," echoed Martin.

New York's Martin and Los Angeles' Lasorda had attended a pre-Series meeting in Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's midtown Manhattan office Monday evening and then sauntered downstairs, just the two of them, to the far end of the nearest bar while startled bystanders looked on in disbelief . . . until they got up enough courage to go over and ask for autographs.

One of the cocktail waitresses came over while Martin was reliving a story from the past.

"Can I have your autographs, please?" she asked. "Would you please sign it 'To Richie and Scuffy's. Richie's my brother and that's the garage where he works.'"

"Sure," Martin replied with a smile, "but only if you let me finish this story first."

The Martin-Lasorda friendship began ironically with a near-brawl some 21 years ago during a game between the Yankees and the Kansas City A's, the team with which Lasorda wound up his 26-game major league career after several cups of coffee with the Brooklyn — remember them? — Dodgers.

"We were beating Kansas City regularly in those days," recalled Martin, who hasn't abandoned that habit in post-season play. "Tom came in to pitch in relief and he decked Hank Bauer twice . . ."

"Ah, let me tell it, Billy. I remember it like it was yesterday," Lasorda interrupted.

"Tom Sturdivant had us beat 5-0. I was in the dugout and our manager, Lou Boudreau, was pacing back and forth. You know, in those days, when the Yankees walked out on the field our team just went . . ."

Here Lasorda's eyes went wide and his face took on a look of shock and awe.

"He said, 'You guys are afraid of the Yankees.' I grabbed him," continued Lasorda, who pitched in the Dodgers' chain for 11 years, mostly in the minors, "and I told him, 'In the organization I came from we're not afraid of anybody.'"

"He sent me to the bullpen to warm up and I got in the game in the eighth inning. Joe Collins was the first batter and I threw two balls behind him. Sturdivant was next and I threw behind him. Billy was the third batter and he stepped up in the box to hit my curve — I had a pretty good curve ball — and I said, 'Don't you do that.' Then I struck him out."

"In the ninth, Bauer was the first batter and I threw two pitches behind him. Billy was really getting on me from their dugout and I said, 'Come on out and fight.'"

Martin, a scrapper of note, didn't need much coaxing.

"Bauer said, 'Why don't you go out and get him,'" Martin recalled, "and I said, 'I think I will,' but Hank Soar, the umpire, grabbed me before I even got to the foul line."

"We became the best of pals after that," Lasorda said. "Later, when Billy was managing the (Minnesota) Twins and I was scouting and managing for the Dodgers, we really got together at the winter meetings in San Diego."

HINT OF RAIN

NEW YORK (AP) — The weather forecast for tonight's opening game of the World Series between the Los Angeles Dodgers and the New York Yankees calls for increasing cloudiness with a 20 per cent chance of rain. Temperatures are expected to be in the mid-60s by game time.

Steers Prove Worth In Red River Grid War

A MEMORABLE AFTERNOON FOR LONGHORNS — Texas ended a seven-year slump without a win over Oklahoma when the Longhorns upset OU 13-6 Saturday in the Cotton Bowl. Kicking star Russell Erxleben (left) gets a lift from teammate Earl

Campbell after booting a 64-yard field goal. Campbell (top) carried 23 times for 124 yards and one touchdown and eluded Sooner tacklers on this run. Rival coaches Barry Switzer of OU (left) and Fred Akers of UT (right) embraced after the game. The two played together at Arkansas in the late fifties. But the day's biggest surprise probably was third-team quarterback Randy McEachern (far right) who replaced a pair of injured quarterbacks and directed his offense. (AP Laserphoto)

Switzer Credits Texas Fullback

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma head coach Barry Switzer said Monday that his team's 13-6 loss to Texas boiled down to one man—Earl Campbell. "Both offenses were inept, both defenses played great," Switzer said. "(But) they had the best player, Earl Campbell. He is a super, super player." Switzer also said another thing that actually hurt the Sooners, although it seemed like a break, was the early loss of the top two Texas quarterbacks. "That forced them out of the veer and into the I-formation. That put Campbell at tailback and he began to run through people," Switzer said. "When Texas was in the veer, we held them to a total yardage of 52 yards." Switzer said the Longhorns will probably be forced into the "I" for the rest of the year. "I figure they will go into the I and hammer Campbell at the line 30 times a game," he said. "They'll have to." Other than Campbell, Switzer said the Sooners completely shut down the high-scoring Longhorn offense. "I felt going into the game that we would stop the Texas offense. I knew it, our coaches knew it and I told people close to me that we would do it. And we did," he said. "Texas gained 152 yards rushing and only nine first downs. They crossed our 40-yard line once in the entire game." "If you had told Texas going into the game that they would get 150 yards, only nine first downs and cross the 40 only once and still win, they'd have laughed at you." "And if you had told me we would do that to them and lose, I'd have said 'no way.' But that's football." Switzer said the defense played "its best game all year." "George Cumbly (linebacker) played outstanding," he said. "He's the type of player I thought he would become." The coach said three of Oklahoma's offensive possessions were critical to the outcome.

Bears Stun LA 24-23

CHICAGO (AP) — Bob Avellini hurled three touchdown passes, bombs of 70 and 72 yards to James Scott and a 29-yard strike to Greg Latta, to give the Chicago Bears a 24-23 victory over the Los Angeles Rams Monday night. Avellini's passes to Scott both came in the first half, but the Rams led 16-14 at intermission on three field goals by Rafael Septien and a 2-yard touchdown run by ex-Plainviewite Lawrence McCutcheon. Early in the fourth quarter, Bob Thomas put the Bears ahead with a 33-yard field goal. Then Walter Payton's 51-yard run from scrimmage set up Avellini's TD pass to Latta that clinched the National Football League game with 6:08 left. The Rams held their 16-14 lead through the third quarter, but on the next-to-last play of the period, Doug Plank picked off the third of four interceptions thrown by Joe Namath. Plank returned it 20 yards to the Chicago 28 and Avellini completed three passes for 36 yards to set up Thomas' field goal that gave the Bears a 17-16 lead. Late in the third quarter the Rams pulled off a double reverse with Billy Waddy gaining 30 yards to the Chicago 5-yard line. The Rams pounded to the 1 on three running plays and instead of going for an easy field goal, tried for a touchdown. Rod Phillips smashed into the line and the Bears held. Chicago eventually had to punt and it was on the next Rams' series that Plank intercepted to set the stage for the Bears' go-ahead field goal. In the closing minutes, linebacker Raymond Bryant of the Bears gave Namath a late hit and guard Dennis Harrah of the Rams slugged Bryant. The Bears were penalized for roughing the passer and the Rams got a personal foul. Namath, knocked woozy on the play, left the game and was replaced by Pat Haden, who completed the scoring with a 26-yard touchdown pass to Dwight Scales with 27 seconds to play in the game. The game began in a steady drizzle that turned into a driving rain in the second quarter but stopped during halftime. The Rams took advantage of Bear mistakes to take 13-0 and 16-14 leads. Septien hit on a 22-yard field goal the first time the Rams gained possession and then made it 6-0 with a 29-yarder after Isiah Robertson had intercepted an Avellini pass. Robertson then recovered a Payton fumble and the Rams marched 54 yards in six plays to take a 13-point lead with McCutcheon bullying over from the 2. The big play in the drive was a 37-yard pass from Namath to Harold Jackson. Then Avellini and Scott electrified the rain-soaked crowd with two touchdown passes to give the Bears a 14-13 lead. With 52 seconds left in the first quarter, Avellini connected on a 70-yard pass play to Scott, who worked his way behind cornerback Rod Perry and then outran him to the goal. The next time the Bears got the ball, Scott again burned Perry and hauled in an Avellini pass that covered 72 yards. Thomas' conversion gave the Bears their first lead. Payton gained 132 yards in 24 carries, the twelfth 100-yard game of his career and his third this season.

Walton Absent In Warmups

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Most of the exhibition season has been uncomfortably familiar to the Portland Trail Blazers. Bill Walton has been missing. The most valuable player in last season's National Basketball Association championship series has been in the hospital since Saturday. He's been in traction — the result of a back injury he suffered while chopping wood prior to the start of training camp two weeks ago. But, team officials insist, the injury is not serious and the Blazer team captain is expected to be in the lineup when the National Basketball Association championship begins their title defense Oct. 21. "We're a long way from panic," Blazer trainer Ron Culp said after a team workout Monday. "At this time of the year, it's just foolish to push anything." Walton's reasonably good health last season was a big reason for the team's success. He missed most of his first two pro seasons due to injuries. The team is 3-3 in pre-season play, but only 1-3 in games Walton missed. The Blazers were without four players during much of their loss to the Lakers here last Saturday night. Walton and Maurice Lucas didn't play and the team lost Lloyd Neal and Wally Walker during the game.

CHS Grabs Win In Volleyball

Coronado successfully began defense of its District 4-AAAA volleyball championship by dropping Hereford Monday night, as three city teams tasted district action. Coronado won 15-7, 15-3, as Teresa Moya scored 10 points. Tony Blackwell and Anna Wilson paced Hereford with 3 points each. The win upped Coronado's season record to 7-10. It was Hereford's first district game also. Next game for CHS will be against Plainview next Monday. Snyder defeated Dunbar 15-6, 15-6 in a District 3-AAA girls volleyball game Monday night at Snyder. High-pointer for Snyder was Shana Smith with 7 points while Lucy Lara paced DHS with 4. Snyder now stands 4-0 in district and 22-3 overall while Dunbar falls to 0-4 and 2-16 overall. Snyder won the JV game 15-6, 15-3. Monterey opened 4-AAAA play with a 15-4, 15-7 victory over Plainview. Kenna Cantrell scored 10 points for the winners who brought their season record to 8-10. MHS won the junior varsity contest 15-8, 15-12. Monterey's next competition is next Tuesday night against Levelland in nondistrict.

Tech Spikers To Battle ACU

ABILENE (Special) — After finishing sixth in the University of Houston Tournament last weekend, the Texas Tech women's volleyball team faces West Zone foe Abilene Christian University at 6:30 p.m. today. In two previous matches this season, the Red Raiders have triumphed twice. Leading scorers for Tech against ACU have been Christy Cotton with 10 points and Lisa Love with 7. Tech coach Janice Hudson announced starters as Miss Love, Connie Pittman, Lisa Pipes, Lisa Burgher, Miss Cotton and Barbara Lueke. The coach hopes to be able to use most of her players in tonight's game. The Raiders' record to date is 5-0 in zone play and 19-8 for the season.

'Clyde' Unhappy To Leave NY

NEW YORK (AP) — "I'll be very nervous when I get to Cleveland," said Walt Frazier. "It's a new situation, a new team, a new city. I'm 'Cool Clyde,' but I'm not that cool."

Frazier, who has scored more points, handed out more assists and played in more games for the New York Knicks than any other player, spoke in measured but emotion-filled words Monday about the weekend trade that sent him to the Cleveland Cavaliers as compensation for the Knicks' signing of free agent guard Jim Clemons, a former Cavalier.

"I'm not happy to be leaving," he said at a news conference at the offices of W.F. Enterprises, his principal business outlet. "After playing 10 years here, I had hoped to finish my career in New York."

"When it (the trade) first happened, I was dejected. I felt I had a good pre-season, we had some good young players, we were building. I wanted to be a part of that—to bring a winner back to New York."

"It's a business, I guess. They did what they felt they had to do. And when I sit back and look at it, I have to say that if I were the Knicks I would have done the same thing."

Frazier said he planned to join the Cavaliers Wednesday and hoped to be adjusted to his new teammates by the time the National Basketball Association season opens Oct. 18.

The 32-year-old Frazier, a seven-time all-star and mainstay of the Knicks' 1970 and 1973 championship teams, said he never thought seriously about retiring.

"I still enjoy the game," he emphasized. "I'm in great shape. I want to play. The game is fun for me. I intend to play for the remainder of my contract, which is three years."

Frazier, who earns more than $400,000 a year, said he bore no hard feelings against the Knicks.

"They've been great to me," he said. "It's a first-class organization. I'm not bitter."

"This is a great move for both teams. They're building for the future, and in Clemons they're getting a good guard who's four years younger than me. They had a great draft—I think Ray Williams (the No. 1 pick from Minnesota) will break all my assist records. They can afford to wait for Clemons and Williams to develop."

"Cleveland's future is now. They have young guys who need guidance, and I feel I can do that. The more I think of it, the more I realize that this will be an ideal situation for me."

But moving from New York to Richfield, Ohio, where the Cavs play, will take some adjusting. Can he become a suburban Clyde?

"I'll have to be," he said. "I think I can handle it. Remember, I've changed. I don't like to go out every night, like I did when I was 25. I think I can adjust."

Frazier and the Cavs come to New York the second week of the season, and he's hoping for a warm reception at Madison Square Garden.

"I know I'll miss those fans," he said. "They were always great for me."

"My time here was a perfect marriage. They got two championships, I got fame and fortune. Now it's my time to move on."

WALT FRAZIER

Dorsett Grateful For Playing Time

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboy million-dollar rookie running back Tony Dorsett says he has finally mastered Coach Tom Landry's complex offense and feels grateful for being left in the game in a pressure situation against St. Louis Sunday.

"It showed the coaches have confidence in me to leave me in a tight situation," said Dorsett Monday, who is running with the same authority he showed as the Heisman Trophy winner at Pittsburgh.

"I know the system now and I can turn loose instead of thinking," said Dorsett, who scored two touchdowns in a wild 30-24 victory over St. Louis.

Will Dorsett start over veteran Preston Pearson next Sunday against the Washington Redskins?

Landry said Monday "He could but I don't want to speculate right now."

Cowboy wide receiver Drew Pearson said "I feel coach Landry has got to make a decision on a starter and stick with him. Preston is doing a good job and it's hard to keep him out."

"But can you imagine what Tony would do if he got to play a whole game? He only played half the time against St. Louis."

Drew Pearson said "I feel better when Tony is in there because the defense really has to guard against the run. That means the cornerbacks have to come up a little and it opens up the secondary more for the pass."

Pearson added "It's a pleasant problem for coach Landry. I've been on this team when we had a solid running game with Calvin Hill and when we didn't. There's nothing like having the threat of the run — particularly with somebody like Tony who can go all the way any play."

Dorsett's 77-yard touchdown dash against St. Louis was a club record.

"You can just feel the pressure relieved on the offense when Tony is in there," said Pearson. "And you can feel the pressure build on the defense."

Dorsett rushed for 141 yards, averaging 10 yards per carry against the Cardinals.

"I really feel like I'm a pro now," said Dorsett. "You noticed I spiked the ball after my first two pro touchdowns (against the New York Giants) but now all I plan to do is like I did it Sunday — just hand the ball to the referee."

"The St. Louis game was a real morale builder for me."

Dorsett said that late in the game against St. Louis he kept looking to the sideline because he feared Coach Landry might give him the hook.

"It felt good for him to leave me in there in such an important game," said collegiate football's all-time grounder gainer. "It felt real good."

Landry, Coryell Bitter About Pro Officiating

DALLAS (UPI) — In the minds of many who played in or watched the Dallas Cowboys and St. Louis Cardinals game Sunday, the worst team on the field was the one that wore the stripes.

"It was an exciting game," said Cowboys coach Tom Landry. "It's just too bad a lot of calls marred it to a certain extent."

"But every call in this type of game would have affected it to a certain extent one way or the other because both sides were moving so well."

Dallas' 30-24 comeback victory over St. Louis was a particularly bitter blow for the Cardinals since they now are three games out of the lead in the NFC East.

And the Cardinals were also bitter about the officiating.

"I can't say what I think of the officials," St. Louis coach Don Coryell said afterwards. "I can't afford to pay the fines."

The most controversial of the calls against St. Louis was the second of two interference penalties called in the final quarter. Even Cowboys receiver Drew Pearson questioned whether St. Louis defensive back Lee Nelson bumped him before the pass arrived inside the Cardinals' 20.

That set up the winning touchdown pass from Roger Staubach to Golden Richards.

"There were a lot of tough calls on both sides," said Staubach. "But Drew said HOLE IN ONE."

Gus Freeland sank a hole in one Monday on the 125-yard 16th at Treasure Island golf course. The 68-year-old Freeland used a 5-iron for his fourth lifetime ace while his wife, Peggy, watched the shot.

Nelson definitely pushed him on the first call (which set up Tony Dorsett's second touchdown run of the day).

"On the second one, I laid the ball up too long and it was a questionable call. We were lucky there."

Staubach said, however, there was no question about the roughing the passer call late in the game which allowed the Cowboys to keep the ball a little longer deep in their own end of the field.

"That was a great call," the quarterback said. "He punched me. I got a knot on my chin where he hit me. It was dumb on his part."

"I mean, there was no reason for him to do that. They had us in a hole and that let us get out of it."

But Staubach felt the officials blew it when they ruled he fumbled the ball in the third quarter, allowing tackle Charlie Davis to run for a score.

"There was no way that was a fumble," he said. "I was in the middle of trying to throw a pass. I brought the ball down. It was an incomplete pass. I never imagined that would be called a fumble."

Rough Road Ahead For Post

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

When a team is unbeaten more than halfway through its schedule and already owns two loop scalps, things couldn't be finer, right?

Please don't tell that to Post mentor Jackie Brown. Yes, Post is 6-0 on the season and 2-0 in 5-AA action but... But that "but" is a big one.

The Antelopes must face unbeaten (5-0 for the year, 1-0 in district) Frenship this week and state-ranked Slaton — which is also unbeaten at 5-0, 1-0 — in two weeks.

"We feel kinda fortunate to be where we are now," explained Brown, a man of few words. "The kids have been giving good effort and have been playing together well."

Post represented the district in the playoffs last year, and Brown feels the squad is executing the offense better now than it did a year ago. "Of course, the kids have had a year to get more accustomed to what we're trying to do."

By the same token, the Antelopes carry 27 on the varsity and "we've played them all in every game. They've all been giving a good effort and working hard. We have several individuals who are about equal and we've been playing them all."

Brown said the Antelopes haven't thrown much but feels the passing game is there if they need it. "We've had several teams put eight and nine men on the line and just dared us to pass. When that happens, we'll pass because we feel we've got to loosen them up a little."

"We've played a real competitive schedule (Lockney, Coahoma, Floydada and Colorado City in nondistrict) and we haven't been that far out on front (the 24-0 win over Coahoma was the only game decided by more than a TD until last week) and we've found we can play under pressure."

"We've also been able to play a lot of kids and we just hope that's made us a stronger team.

"This (5-AA) is the toughest district around and all the teams (Post, Slaton, Frenship) appear pretty equal with the exception of Slaton... they may be out in front of everyone."

Baseball Commissioner Denies Yanks' Request

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn refused the New York Yankees' application to add a 25th man to their World Series roster Monday night.

In a letter to Yankee President Gabe Paul, Kuhn said the Yankee request to add outfielder Dell Alton to their list of Series eligibles could not be approved without the consent of the National League. NL President Chub Feeney would not agree to the addition, the commissioner said.

"We feel it is an unjust decision," said Paul. "We'll abide by it, but it's wrong — dead wrong."

The Yankee roster vacancy was created when New York sent utilityman Carlos May on waivers to the California Angels in mid-September. Before the American League playoffs, New York requested permission to add either Alton or Dave Kingman, who had been claimed on waivers from the Angels the day before the May transaction, to their roster for the series against Kansas City. But permission for that move was refused by AL President Lee MacPhail.

The Yankees were angered by Mac-

Phail's stand and charged that the AL president had been pressured to withhold approval of their 25th player.

Baseball rules stipulate that players eligible for post-season action must be on the 25-man major league roster Aug. 31. Alton was with Syracuse of the International League on that date.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. I own two public utility bonds paying high coupons. Have they called? Are they going to be called? If they are, where can I put the money, because I have to have it working for me?

A. I've seen nothing about a redemption. High coupons always render a bond issue vulnerable to refunding—when permitted. But don't forget there is usually at least a five-year no-call period after issuance.

Secondly, since these bonds were issued only in registered form (which means they carry your name and that you receive your semi-annual interest check in the mail) the issuing corporation knows who and where you are and therefore will notify you personally of a refunding, or of a redemption of your specific bonds for sinking fund purposes.

Thirdly, if and when you get your money back via a call you will just have to reinvest for whatever rate the money market is then offering.

Q. I purchased mutual fund shares for $2,400. I reinvested $3,100 in capital gains distributions over the years and have just redeemed all my shares for $4,700. Do I have a gain, or an $800 loss?

A. An $800 loss.
You invested $2,400 plus $3,100, or $5,500, and sold out for $4,700.

Q. I intend to remain overseas for three more years. I can invest about $1,000 a month but feel that I am at a disadvantage because I am so far away.

A. You can get a "helluva" argument that you enjoy an advantage by being far away. One thing is certain: You certainly benefit by being separated from all the emotionalism which tends to accumulate at the center of the financial world. You can get all the literature and advisory letters you want from U.S. brokerage branches overseas.

If you're smart you won't even attempt to trade, so what difference does the distance make?

Q. We inherited a substantial amount of Eastman Kodak stock and borrowed well into five figures against it at 8 1/4 per cent in order to pay the inheritance taxes. Now we're anxious to pay off the loan and have some stock left. Or should we wait until it doubles? We are senior citizens. Some advice would help us feel better.

A. I wish I could guarantee that. But I can't promise to make you feel better because, basically, what you are asking me is: Should elderly folks borrow money on the hopes a veteran growth stock, which has sold off in recent months, will resume its long-time growth curve? And I can't enter into a discussion about the future of Kodak.

If you had asked me when you first inherited the stock I would have had to give the "book answer": An elderly couple stressing income should not keep a large holding of Kodak as its major investment. And I would have suggested that you sell enough of the stock to pay the tax. In other words, I would have cautioned against going into debt at your age to retain a low-yield growth stock.

(It's lucky you didn't ask me, because by now my advice would cost you a couple thousand dollars in market values.)
All I can do is repeat it now...because I refuse to predict market movements, because I am conservation and from all you tell me you ought to be, too. (Of course, if you have a comfortable fortune from other sources backing you up, you may do as you please, assume any risk you like. I wish you had indicated how important this big block of stock is in your total financial picture.)

But I have to wind up in the same spot: Under ordinary financial circumstances, elderly folk have no business carrying a large block of growth stock (or any stock) on margin

VICTIMS OF MT. PELEE

Mt. Pelee, the biggest killer volcano in the Western Hemisphere, claimed the lives of about 30,000 residents of the French Caribbean island of Martinique when it erupted in 1902.

The World's Greatest Athlete is proud to have been a Newspaper Carrier

"It takes steadiness to be a decathlon man," Bruce Jenner says. "And that's what Newspaper Carriers give you—steady performance every day."
Bruce delivered newspapers through his 5th, 6th and 7th-grade years in Tarrytown, N.Y.
"Being a Newspaper Carrier helped me to acquire the discipline I needed for training." And his training paid off.
Grimacing with pain and tension, Bruce Jenner crossed the 1,500-meter finish at the Montreal Olympics to win the most grueling of all competitions. The 1976 decathlon champion also won the only Olympic honor more precious than gold—the title of The World's Greatest Athlete.
Now he's asking you to join the Treasury Department in saying "thank you" to your local Newspaper Carrier. It's their day—Newspaper Carrier Day, 1977.
Newspaper Carriers have steadily supported the U.S. Savings Bond program, buying Bonds regularly with their earnings. Through their Newspaper Carrier Thrift Clubs, many have set aside money for their college educations.
Like Bruce Jenner, they believe in goals for the future. And that's what U.S. Savings Bonds are all about.

Born in Ossining, New York, on October 28, 1949, Bruce spent his youth in Tarrytown and Mt. Kisco, N.Y. and Newtown, Connecticut, where he competed in football, basketball and track. He was All-State pole vaulter champion in high school, but only Graceland College in Iowa offered a sports scholarship to the man who was to become the world's greatest athlete.
Bruce Jenner made the NAIA All-American Team and the Olympic qualifying standard in the Drake Relays, which he won in 1972. He finished 10th in his first Olympics, prompting him to move to San Jose, California, with his wife, Christine, for four years of decathlon training. In August 1975, he set a world record, scoring 8,524 points in a Triangular meet in Eugene, Oregon.
Bruce Jenner is the only man ever to score over 8,500 points, and currently holds the world's record with 8,615 points. He also holds the Olympic and World Record for the greatest second-day score and the greatest 10-meet average score.
A natural athlete and outdoorsman, the 6 ft., 2 in., 195-pound Jenner bicycles, plays tennis, sails, skis and was three-time Eastern water-skiing champion.
