Carter Claimed Retreating on Budget Pledge

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's economic advisers are telling him that his twin goals of a balanced budget and low unemployment by 1981 probably cannot both be achieved, administration sources say.

Faced with making a choice, these sources say, Carter has decided to work for a low unemployment rate of below 5 per cent, while sacrificing his oft-repeated campaign pledge to balance the budget by the end of his current term.

One very tentative estimate projects the 1981 budget deficit at between $20 billion to $25 billion under the low unemployment option. Inflation would be about 4.5 per cent, also short of Carter's goal.

Both during his campaign and since taking office, Carter has pledged to have a balanced budget, low unemployment and low inflation, all by the end of his current term in the White House.

However, the continued sluggishness of the economy and the failure of the nation's industry to increase sharply job-creating investments are pulling the rug from under the Carter plan.

The retreat from a balanced budget may not be acknowledged outright, but will be couched in references to the need for a high or a full employment budget, a source said.

"The President bought the idea of a high employment budget," said the source, who had knowledge of a meeting Carter held in August with top economic advisers.

Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, for one, already speaks in terms of an administration commitment to "a balanced budget in a high employment economy."

Former OMB Director Bert Lance was the staunchest advocate of a balanced budget in 1981, and he has resigned. However, the source said even Lance was tempering his public comments in favor of a balanced budget just before his resignation.

Sources say Carter was presented at the meeting in August with a joint analysis, and his advisers agreed his goals may not be achievable. The analysis was the work of the Treasury Department, the Council of Economic Advisers and the Office of Management and Budget.

The analysis said that if Carter wanted a low unemployment rate of below 5 per cent by 1981, the budget probably would need to be in deficit by as much as $20 billion to $25 billion. But if he decided to push for a balanced budget at all costs, the jobless rate would still be at least 6 per cent. It was 7.1 per cent in August.

The analysis projects the nation's inflation rate at 4.5 per cent by 1981, with a deficit in the $20 billion to $25 billion range, up only slightly from the 4.4 per cent annual inflation rate under a balanced budget.

Either way, Carter would miss badly the target of an inflation rate of 4 per cent by the end of 1979, which he announced as his goal in his April 15 anti-inflation program. Inflation has been running the past three months at an annual rate of about 5 per cent, down from earlier in the year.

Ex-Police Officers Convicted

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Two former Houston policemen, charged with murder in the slaying of a Mexican-American prisoner in their custody, were found guilty of negligent criminal homicide today by a state court jury.

Terry Denson, 27, and Stephen Orlando, 21, stood neatly dressed and displayed no emotion as Judge James Warren read the verdict returned after more than 16 hours of deliberation by the jurors. The two had been charged with murder in the May 5 drowning of Joe Campos Torres, a Houston laborer whose body was found in the Buffalo Bayou three days after his arrest by Denson and other officers during a bar disturbance.

Testimony showed that Campos Torres had been beaten severely before his body ended up in the bayou. Defense attorneys argued Campos Torres willingly jumped into the bayou, when officers tried to release him from custody while taunting him about throwing him in the water.

Most of the testimony came from three of the officers who accompanied Denson and Orlando the night of the arrest and who provided state evidence in exchange for immunity.

Immediately after the verdict was read in the Criminal Justice Center of Sam Houston State University, Orlando and Denson turned and walked toward the back entrance accompanied by their attorneys.

Judge Warren had warned the more than 200 spectators against any outbursts of emotion upon the reading of the verdict. There were no disturbances.

Mrs. Jose Campos Torres, mother of the victim, talked to newsmen after the verdict was announced and said in quiet anger:

"I am glad they were found guilty of something. But we want Orlando and Denson convicted of murder. If Jose (Joe) had killed one of those cops or if five Mexican-Americans had killed one cop, they would all be on death row."

The two had been charged with murder. The guilty verdict as to criminal negligent homicide was one of the lesser charges the seven-woman, five-man jury could have returned.

Jurors began deliberations Tuesday afternoon.

Jurors stopped deliberations about 10 p.m. Wednesday and resumed them today at 9 a.m.

The jury sent two notes Wednesday night to Judge Warren, one asking about a typographical error in his charge to the panel, and the other asking if the testimony of two other former policemen had been presented as evidence.

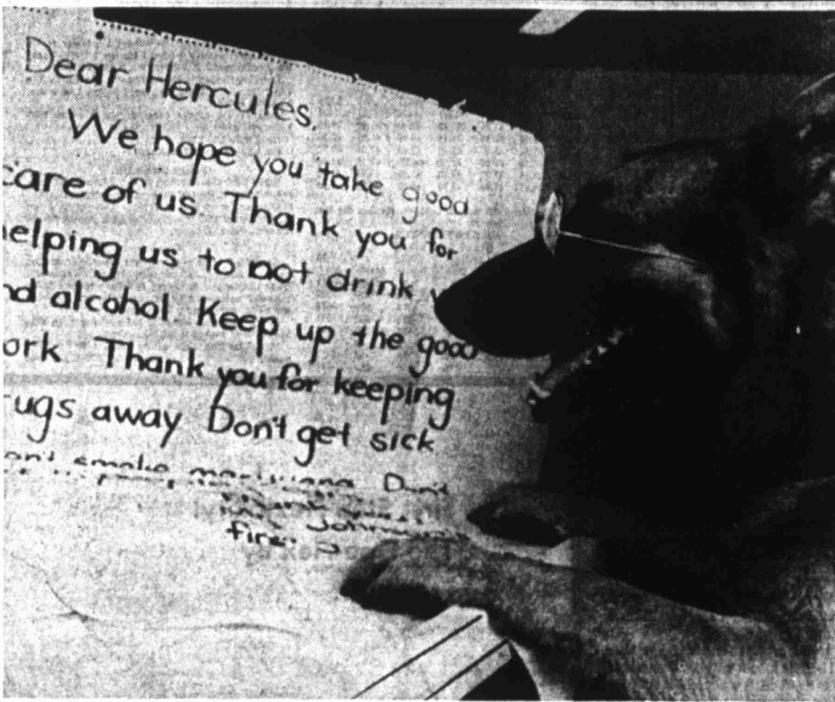

The judge said there was a typographical mistake in his charge, and that was quickly corrected. He also said the testimony of two other former officers had not been admitted as evidence.

Testimony in the month-long trial had revealed that Torres, 23, was arrested at a Houston bar for creating a disturbance three days before his body was found.

In his explosive final arguments, prosecutor Ted Poe stormed, "It makes me mad. It makes me angry and it makes me sad that those two men have tarnished the badge of every good policeman. They are wolves behind a badge. Joe Torres had his trial and it lasted only 58 minutes and these policemen were the judge, jury and executioners."

"Denson executed him. Joe Torres died only because he was a public drunk. Most policemen are good, but those two have made it harder for every other officer to do their job."

Defense attorneys Mike Ramsey and Bob Bennett finally argued along the lines of the defense they presented — that Torres either jumped from a 18-foot wall into the bayou or slipped and fell.

SNIFFER HAS FRIENDS — Hercules, the marijuana-sniffing dog used by the Fort Bend County schools, has one of the biggest fan clubs of any police dog around. He has received about 2,000 letters from youngsters in the school district since he showed off his skill at sniffing out dope in elementary and kindergarten classes. The district is trying a new program to stop drug abuse, and the kids were told to write Hercules for a reply that would include his pawprint. (AP Laserphoto)

Senate Committee Kills Oil, Gas Levy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee today completed its rout of President Carter's proposed energy taxes, voting 13 to 4 to kill the biggest proposed energy-saver in the President's plan.

That vote rejected a House-passed provision designed to save up to 1.25 million barrels of oil a day by levying a stiff tax on industries and utilities that use oil and natural gas.

However, the committee then began considering a proposal by Sen. Russell B. Long, chairman of the panel, that could result in all the President's proposed energy taxes being revived by a Senate-House conference committee.

The effect of that plan, if approved by the full Senate, would be for conferees to negotiate between the taxes passed by the House and the no-tax action of the Senate.

The Finance Committee earlier had rejected Carter's proposals to levy taxes on gas-guzzling cars and a tax on crude oil aimed at forcing conservation by raising domestic oil prices to world levels.

Long said his plan was the only way Congress could complete action on energy taxes before Christmas. "I see no alternative...It's going to have to be written in conference," he said.

The Senate was working on Carter's energy plan when talks opened today between negotiators for the coal industry and the United Mine Workers on a new contract to replace the pact expiring Dec. 6. An industry-wide strike is likely when the current pact expires but it is expected to be brief.

The full Senate was hoping to complete action today on the electric utility provisions of Carter's energy proposals. The Senate was expected to go along with an energy committee recommendation to ditch Carter's plan to force utilities to revise their rate structures.

They added a provision to the bill Wednesday night requiring utilities to offer cheaper rates to senior citizens, a step sponsors said would mean a reduction of about 40 per cent in the electric bills of persons over 62.

Floor action was also planned on an effort by Sen. Bennett Johnson, D-La., to bypass the Finance Committee altogether on the issue of crude oil taxes.

His proposal would lift federal price controls on some oil, while putting a higher price ceiling on the remainder. Johnston said he may offer the proposal today

Area May Get Deluges

A-J News Services

Freezing weather nipped the northern Rockies and upper Great Plains this morning, while heavy clouds and fog cloaked much of the Southwest region of the nation. Heavy downpours are possible in the West Texas region tonight, forecasters warned.

Thunderstorms may dump up to two inches of rain on portions of the Texas Panhandle and South Plains, according to the weathermen.

Fog which held visibility at the Lubbock International Airport down to one-half mile at times, prevented the arrival or departure of any aircraft until nearly noon. The cloudy atmosphere allowed only a 200-foot ceiling most of the morning, with a 500-foot level set as the minimum need for traffic at the airport.

At the Amarillo airport, visibility dropped to one-quarter of a mile at 7:40 a.m. and one-half mile at Borger about the same time.

Showers in the area are expected to result from a low pressure system moving into the Central Rockies.

A weak stationary front extending from Central Arkansas west to New Mexico yielded patchy fog and drizzle north of it in the Panhandle.

Measurable amounts of precipitation received during the night included .02 of an inch at Matador and .01 of an inch at Snyder, with traces reported in Crosbyton, Dimmitt, Friona, Hereford and Lubbock.

The extended forecast for West Texas includes considerable cloudiness through Friday, with scattered showers and thunderstorms and locally heavy rains possible tonight in the Panhandle and South Plains.

The pattern is expected to remain the same through Sunday, with a cooling trend through the period. Probability of rain is 30 per cent today and Friday, 40 per cent tonight.

Rising Prices Hike Threat Of Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose one-half of one per cent last month, the biggest increase since April, as the big drop in food prices began leveling off, the Labor Department said today.

After declines averaging nearly four per cent in the last four months, farm products declined in price by only two-tenths of one per cent in September.

Contributing most to the increase last month were industrial commodities, which rose eight-tenths of one per cent, the biggest jump in a year.

The biggest contributors were lumber and wood, which rose 4.4 per cent in September alone amid continuing demand for new houses.

Also increasing were fuels and power, non-metallic minerals and transportation equipment.

The over-all increase of five-tenths of a per cent for September would average out to just over six per cent for an entire year, close to levels the administration considers an acceptable inflation rate.

Wholesale prices are paid by retailers and manufacturers before they reach the consumer, but the prices often show up later at retail stores.

Finished consumer goods, which are the farthest along the stage of production, rose four-tenths of one per cent in September after being virtually unchanged in the previous three months.

The September wholesale price increase was the largest since a 1.1 per cent rise in April, at a time when inflation was near the 10 per cent level.

As food prices began to decline, wholesale prices rose only four-tenths of a per cent in May and then dropped by seven-tenths of a per cent in June and by one-tenth of a per cent in July before going up by one-tenth of a per cent last month.

Among farm products, prices fell less than in August for hogs, oil seeds and plant and animal fibers. Prices turned up for green coffee, cocoa beans, wheat and live poultry after sharp declines in the previous month.

However, prices for cattle and fresh fruit dropped last month after increasing in August. Egg prices declined by 6.4 per cent, the same as in August.

Among processed foods, wholesale prices fell by six-tenths of a per cent, somewhat less than in the preceding three months. Prices fell at a slower rate for manufactured animal feeds, crude vegetable oils, animal fats, processed poultry and pork. Prices turned up for fish and vegetable oil end products after declining in August.

Prices declined for sugar and confectionary, and beef and veal.

Contributing most to the four-tenths of a per cent increase in consumer finished goods were higher prices for cigarettes, apparel, textile house furnishings, gasoline and home heating oil.

The figures were adjusted for seasonal variations. Before adjustment, the See WHOLESALE Page 14

Jury Finds Man Guilty Of Robbery

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A jury here today deliberated about an hour before finding Victor Briones guilty of robbery.

The seven-man, five-woman panel convicted Briones of a lesser offense than the aggravated robbery charge alleged in the indictment.

At 1:45 p.m., the panel had retired once more to determine punishment.

The range of punishment on a robbery conviction is from two to 20 years.

The case went to the jury this morning after emotional final arguments in which attorneys debated the merits of a prosecution witness who admitted he had lied to jurors and investigators.

What makes the case unique is that Stone, a former medical technologist at a local hospital, has not been seen by friends or relatives since Dec. 30.

Investigators and those close to him presume he is dead.

Along with circumstantial evidence, the state is basing its case upon testimony from Briones' alleged accomplice, Felix Ybarra, 22, who has been promised a 10-year probation sentence by the Criminal District Attorney's Office for turning state's evidence.

During the trial, Ybarra painted a lurid picture of what he implied were Stone's final hours.

The witness claimed he saw Briones stab Stone "two or three" times with a switchblade knife and watched as the defendant took Stone's wallet and a gold watch.

The scene of the stabbing, Ybarra told jurors, was a lonely dirt road south of town.

Ybarra later said on direct examination that he acted as if he were driving home but returned and observed Briones at the side of a pond, washing blood off Stone and from the interior of Stone's vehicle.

He said that he watched from 100 to 200 feet away, unobserved by the defendant. During cross-examination, however, under the brunt of a relentless barrage of questions from defense attorney Tomas Garza, Ybarra admitted he had lied on several occasions.

Using previous statements made by Ybarra during a pre-trial hearing Monday and earlier to investigators, Garza forced the witness to recant on several points.

Ybarra had told an investigator originally the alleged crime took place near some horse pens by a paved road, not on a dirt road. Ybarra said he lied to the investigator.

Ybarra had said Monday he was present See JURY Page 14

City Youth Charged

Attempted murder charges were filed today against a Roosevelt High School student who allegedly cut teacher and basketball coach Dean Minor with a razor blade.

Named in the charge was Gerald Keith Simpson, 17, of 4116 E. Auburn St. The Criminal District Attorney's Office recommended a $2,500 bond.

Simpson allegedly cut Minor while the two were inside Principal Leland Willis' office about 1:15 p.m. Tuesday. The coach said he had sustained cuts on See CHARGES Page 14

Plan Allows Some Bone In Meats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bits of bone the size of ground pepper and odd scraps of meat may soon find their way into bologna, sausages and hot dogs.

The Agriculture Department wants to allow bony material from ribs, backbones and other parts of slaughtered animals to make up 20 per cent of the meat portion of processed meats.

But the plan, which will take effect after the public is allowed to comment, will require labels that tell consumers just what they're eating.

The regulations will allow bones and the hard-to-remove meat clinging to them to be ground up and forced through sieves with tiny openings.

Large pieces of bone will remain behind, but the meat, marrow and "connective tissue" plus small bits of bone will survive the sieve.

It would allow nearly one half ounce of bone in each one-pound of salami.

Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman, who announced the plan Wednesday, said she expects it will be controversial.

"But if people are adequately informed as to the nature of the product, they can make a rational choice on whether or not to buy it."

Assistant Secretary Foreman said the government feels the material is safe to eat.

The Agriculture Department says the process will probably add "some what pork" than one billion pounds of beef and pork to the American food supply.

A year ago, the department had proposed a similar regulation, which would have referred to the additives as "mechanically deboned meat."

The new plan calls, instead, for the labels to read "tissue from ground bone."

"Mechanically deboned meat" is not an acceptable title, the assistant secretary said. "It is not meat. We have redefined it as a meat food product."

Richard Lyng, president of the industry-supported American Meat Institute, called the labels inaccurate and said it "seems to be a deliberate attempt to make the product unattractive."

The Agriculture Department cancelled its earlier proposal after a federal judge issued a preliminary injunction against it.

U.S. District Judge William B. Bryant said then-Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz failed to consider "the possible gastroenterological side effects which may result from frequent ingestion of bone particles."

He also cited high levels of Strontium 90 that could be contained in bone particles and possible long-range effects of the fat content of the mechanically deboned meat.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fourteen agencies in the Agriculture Department will be eliminated by folding them into new or larger existing units under a reorganization plan announced by Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland.

But Bergland told a news conference Wednesday that while the affected agencies involve more than one-fourth of USDA's 82,000 full-time employees, none will be dismissed as a result of the reorganization and "no mission of the department will be downgraded."

There are 40 separate units or agencies in the department now. Those will be reduced to 26 as the reorganization plan is carried out, he said.

Bergland said that, while "it may not save any large amounts of money," it will "improve the efficiency and delivery system of the department."

A part of the plan is the re-creation of the Office of the Inspector General, a post abolished some years ago by then-Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz. The office was divided into two agencies, the Office of Audit and the Office of Investigation.

Bergland said he has chosen Thomas F. McBride, 48, a former associate Watergate prosecutor, as the department's new inspector general. McBride since October 1975 has been director of the Civil Aeronautics Board's bureau of enforcement.

McBride's job will be to oversee USDA investigations and audits which range over many programs such as food stamps, meat and grain inspection, and others.

Bergland said that Butz's idea of dividing the office had not worked out and that problems had arisen in part because those in charge of the two agencies had to report to different higher-ups.

All of the changes except one involving the Farmer's Home Administration are being carried out administratively, Bergland said.

The FmHA, which handles loan and grant programs for low-income farmers and rural communities, is to be combined with a much smaller agency, the Rural Development Service, into a new one called the Farm and Rural Development Administration.

Bergland said this action will require congressional approval. But he said that he had talked it over with key farm leaders in Congress and had not run into serious objection.

Some major agencies are not involved in the reorganization. Those include the Forest Service, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Soil Conservation Service, Food and Nutrition Service, Food Safety and Quality Service, and Rural Electrification Administration.

Bergland said that rural development, as embodied in the proposed new Farm and Rural Development Administration, will be "a major mission of this department."

Also, Bergland said a new Food and Agriculture Science and Education Administration will be set up to coordinate what he called the fragmented research and education activities of USDA and to carry out the mandate of new farm legislation signed by President Carter a week ago to improve the efficiency of agricultural research.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Uncertainty over a strike that has halted grain shipments at New Orleans, combined with harvest pressure, depressed soybean and grain futures prices Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Soybeans lost an average of five cents a bushel and corn was nearly three cents lower. Wheat declined a two cents, but oats were narrowly mixed.

Coronado Paper Given All-American Rating

An All-American rating, with five marks of distinction, has been awarded Coronado High School's newspaper, The Crest.

National Scholastic Press Association made the award. NSPA rates high school and college yearbooks and newspapers throughout the United States.

"The Coronado Crest is better than ever, adding youthful personality to its solid coverage, writing and layout," said the judges. "It's a growing paper, not one resting on its distinguished laurels."

Judges noted the numerous

"Letters to the Editor" and remarked that "the amount of letters you're getting indicates the paper is reaching the school."

Particular praise was given the layout of pages, story content, sports coverage, editorials and photography.

"How a staff of 10 got this paper out on time is a mystery, but all 10—and the adviser—deserve high praise for both the size and quality of the product," the judge commented.

"The year must have been exhausting, but one which paid off in top notch results. Congratulations."

Burglars Take Jewelry, Clothing In Break-Ins

A $3,000 pair of ruby earrings was among the more costly items lifted by burglars in recent Lubbock break-ins.

Robert Lynn Sanders of 2205 15th St. told police he heard — but did not see — the intruders as he returned home about midnight Wednesday. The break-in artists, who reportedly got inside by smashing a back door window pane, made their getaway with a television set and a box containing $500 worth of old coins and currency, in addition to the jewelry.

According to Phil Bryant Davis, someone made off with $1,185 worth of goods from his 2204 Louisville Ave. residence recently. Intruders forced a window and reportedly got away with jewelry, clothing, albums and a CB radio.

Helen Ruth Jones of 2710 E. Colgate St. told officers her house was ransacked and burglarized Wednesday. Reports indicated her back door was forced, and a stereo, .22-caliber pistol and assorted household goods and clothing were taken.

Mattie McKinney said her house also was ransacked by burglars Wednesday. Reportedly taken from the 1920 E. 1st St. residence were a television set and a watch.

According to Vanita Greer Hill, two rifles and a shotgun were stolen from a 5502 Erskine St. house Wednesday morning. Entry apparently was made through the front door.

Roger Brasel of Milford, Ill., complained that someone broke a window on his vehicle parked in the 1800-block of Clovis Road Wednesday and stole $525 worth of assorted clothing.

John W. Mullins said $600 worth of electronic parts was stolen from a Mullins TV Lab truck in the 2700-block of E. 2nd Street Monday.

An early morning, gang-like assault Wednesday left a half dozen Plainview men nursing minor injuries and Lubbock police cleaning up debris from a parking lot at a North Lubbock club.

The Plainview victims told police they were sitting in a car in the lot at a club at 2211 4th St. when they were approached by a group of men.

The victims said the men began beating the car with chains and belts just before 3 a.m. and knocked out windows on one side of the vehicle.

Four of the Plainview men said they jumped from the car to square off with their attackers and a melee ensued.

Police said one man was struck on the face and head and kicked in the left eye, another had been hit on the chest and back with a belt, a third had been struck on the arm with the belt, while a fourth suffered a slight cut on his left hand and blows to his face and body. Still another man complained of being struck on the back and chest with a chain and a final victim said he had been cut on the left forearm when he was struck by a chain.

All six victims refused treatment and told police they did not intend to file charges, but 22-year-old Jessie Ruiz said he wanted to prosecute for the $400 damage done to his vehicle.

Things weren't going so well for Gary Don Nash of 3511 Ute Ave. Wednesday after someone stole his $105 leather coat, when he removed the garment to play pool at a club at 407 Quirt Ave.

A West Lubbock pharmacy owner told police a man called his business Tuesday and ordered 100 tablets of the drug Seconal. The pharmacist said the young man had called in as a Lubbock physician, but had given an incorrect identification number.

When the young man appeared to pick up the drug, police indicated, the pharmacist advised him that the store was out and would have to get the Seconal on loan from another store.

The suspect fled the building when officers arrived.

Police later questioned a suspected accomplice and have the name of a suspect.

Christopher Hooper said thieves took $600 worth of jewelry at his home Tuesday night, by lifting a television, bike, sewing machine and clock radio. Hooper said burglars entered his home through a west side window, while he was away.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

It's A Great World!

ALL IT TAKES to jolt most of us back to reality—and by "reality" we mean how good the world is—is an optimistic headline now and then.

Such an example is this week's headline which trumpeted, "Local Banks Show Hike In Deposits." As it turns out, that was something of an understatement.

Deposits, in fact, have climbed by a healthy $121 million in the last year, to a new fall record of $990 million.

It hasn't been many years since the first bank in town crossed over that "magic figure" of $100 million in deposits. Now we have one with more than three times that amount—and a great deal of that is real growth, not a reflection of inflation.

FULL EMPLOYMENT has been enjoyed by Lubbock throughout the entire "recession" of recent years, as reflected by the latest figures showing a 3 per cent jobless rate here, a percentage below which it is almost impossible to sink in these days of high job mobility.

In the fields throughout the South Plains area—from which, make no mistake, all of us who work for a living here ultimately draw our pay—the fall harvest is underway.

We are blessed again this year with a bumper cotton crop that will sustain our economy all through 1978.

Industrial growth, epitomized by the constant expansion of the Texas Instruments plant, and the city's development as a medical and educational center around Texas Tech and the School of Medicine, are other key elements in our well-being.

BECAUSE OF the energy crisis, runaway inflation, deficit federal spending, a growing menace from the Soviet Union, problems in the Mideast and Africa, etc., etc., it is easy to become downcast and despondent.

The majority of us, though, enjoy a higher standard of living than almost anyone else in the world—and all of us still have the rights and freedoms as Americans that no one else in the history of the world ever has enjoyed.

So, cheer up, forget your troubles, and have a good day! It's a wonderful world!

'Ah! Almost Ripe Again!'

John D. Lofton:

FANS Is Behind You, Ralph

WASHINGTON—Down in Charleston, S.C. according to the Associated Press, the city council is reconsidering a proposal to put diapers on the horses that pull carriages through the historic downtown area. Two years ago, such a law was passed, but it was repealed.

Meanwhile, here in our country's capital, Ralph Nader has announced the formation of a new group called Fight to Advance the Nation's Sports (F-A-N-S, get it?), which he says is needed to protect us spectators from "the rising crescent of fraud and fast-buck artistry."

(Speaking of fraud and fast-buck artistry, it will cost a sports fan nine bucks a year to join FANS.)

EXPLAINING the role of FANS, which he says will go to court, engage in boycotts, and lobby Congress to publicly protest such outrages as unpopular player trades, cold hot dogs and warm beer, Nader says:

"The arrogance of the owners and their lack of sensitivity toward their fans is accelerating. They never ask fans what they think of the policies and rules these owners set."

Right No. 1 in Nader's 10-point Fans' Bill of Rights declares:

"Fans have the right to participate in the formation of the rules and procedures that govern the play and operation of professional and amateur sports organizations."

WELL, NOW, WHEN I first heard of Nader's new organization, my reaction was that the whole thing sounds a little—actually a lot—screwy.

But, now that I've thought about it a while longer, and had my consciousness raised, I've become a real FANS fan.

Because when you think about it, among all our institutions, nothing rips us off like organized sports. Consider first the lack of competition.

If ever two businesses deserved horizontal, vertical and diagonal divestiture, they are professional baseball and football. Talk about monopolies. Think about it for just a minute.

Here in Washington, we have just one professional football team; the Redskins. Imagine, in a city this size, there is just one professional football team, and the Redskins have 100 per cent—all of it.

This is obviously a classic trust situation, which clearly violates Federal anti-trust laws.

THE SAME IS TRUE in numerous other cities such as Dallas, Houston, New Orleans, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Los Angeles, etc., etc.

In all these cities, there is only one pro football team and that team constitutes 100 per cent of the pro football teams in that city.

Incredible. The Justice Dept. should break up these teams immediately if the average sports consumer is to have any meaningful choice at all. FANS, take note, please. I might add that as regards to pro baseball, this absolutely unacceptable situation also exists. Unbelievable.

Now, to compound this disastrous situation, there is the additional problem of monopolies within the existing monopolies. Again, think about it for just a minute.

If you watch your average pro football game closely, you'll notice that at no time is any fan allowed to play in the game. Alas, you'll notice that all the plays are called by either the quarterback or the coach.

Talk about "elitism!"

FANS SPEND A LOT of hard-earned money to see these games. Why shouldn't they be allowed to actually participate in them, or at least call a few plays?

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Kenneth May

'Give Back My Vote'

THE DEBATE over the Panama Canal is, of course, a "last ditch" battle.

My Neighbor Twice Removed says the man who robbed a friend of his is suffering from an identity crisis. He was picked out of the police lineup.

One of life's little mysteries is why a businessman, who depends on the public's goodwill for survival and prosperity, will deliberately irritate a great many people by flaunting the law with illegal signs around his business.

The U.S. Civil Service Commission says it will quit asking applicants for high-security federal jobs if they are Communists. I hope that doesn't mean they're going to quit trying to find out. But it probably does.

DESPITE A study showing that "military officers earn about 70 per cent more and enlisted personnel about 30 per cent more than comparably aged and educated civilian workers," the overpaid military personnel have just received a fat pay raise.

Federal civilian employees also got a 7.05 per cent pay raise on Oct. 1, even though the Commerce Department says they already were averaging $4,111 more per year than people in private jobs.

From 1966 to 1976, the average pay for civilian federal workers jumped from $7,642 per year to $15,738. In the private sector, the increase was from $6,179 per year to $11,627.

IN ADDITION, federal employees—military and civilian—get better fringe benefits and far better pensions than do the rest of us.

The latest federal pay increase will cost $3.4 billion. That money will have to be borrowed, since we're already going into debt by more than $1 billion every week.

Overpaying employees while piling up an enormous debt is madness, but the politicians know what they're doing. The six million-plus votes represented by federal employees and their spouses are enough to swing any national election.

After the latest "cost of living" pay boost, an experienced secretary working for the federal government averages $15,824, according to U.S. News & World Report. A GS-7, which might be a mid-level job analyst (whatever that is) can make as much as $16,035.

With the 1978 elections coming up, the safest bet in Washington is that the administration will propose a quickie tax cut to take effect by mid-year or before.

U.S. Rep. Sam Hall of Marshall has come up with a way to block, in perpetuity, the give-away of the Panama Canal: Require an environmental impact statement before the deal is completed.

MRS. CLARENCE SOLNICK has about decided, apparently, that her husband was right when he cancelled out her vote for President last November.

She has written President Carter: "I am distressed and betrayed by your irresponsible stance on deregulation of natural gas, kowtowing to the maritime and labor unions and your perfidious treachery toward Israel. "Give me back my vote!"

THAT SHOULD BE quite a program the Lubbock and Texas Tech chapters of Young Americans for Freedom put on Saturday at the Memorial Civic Center.

They're sponsoring a National Defense Symposium. Five speakers will discuss "the present danger to America's national security."

Dean Krueger tells me the purpose of the conference is to "alarm and educate" West Texans about our weakening defense posture.

The conservatively oriented YAF is concerned that a growing centralization of power in the U.S. has focused too much attention on social welfare while letting individualism, free enterprise and national security slide.

It's not stretching a point to say that national defense, the subject of the symposium starting at 9 a.m. Saturday, is the most important social welfare program in the country.

Marxist OK In Africa—Young

WASHINGTON—The visit to the White House next week of Nigeria's head of state, Lt. General Olusegun Obasanjo, is closely linked to the U.S.-British proposal for setting up a United Nations military force for use in Rhodesia.

Secret discussions between the U.S. and Nigeria have been underway for several months to clear the way for the use of Nigerian troops as the key element in the UN force.

With one of the largest and best equipped military forces (200,000 men) in Africa, Nigeria is in a position to supply a sizeable force and has the means to pay for them and their operations from their vast oil revenues.

Lt. General Obasanjo and his Marxist government demonstrated their deep interest in southern Africa last year by sending 5,000 troops to Algeria to bolster that Marxist regime.

Most of these troops are still in Angola, fighting rebel forces opposed to the government of President Agostinho Neto.

THE NIGERIAN military strongman's visit to the U.S. and President Carter's proposed return trip to Nigeria next month was worked out by Ambassador Andrew Young, U.S. Representative to the United Nations, during a trip he made to Africa earlier this year.

The free-wheeling Young is one of the chief pushers for a UN force to supervise and control the ousting of the white-ruled government of Rhodesia as a precedent for taking similar action against South Africa.

High on the agenda at the coming White House meeting will be a discussion of the type of military support the U.S. will provide to the over-all Nigerian military force in exchange for the dispatching of upward 5,000 Nigerian troops to Rhodesia under the UN.

Obasanjo, 39, former chief of staff of the armed forces, became Nigerian's leader 20 months ago following an abortive coup in which the former leader, Murtala Mohammed, was killed. Murtala had seized power from General Yakubu Gowon in July, 1975.

AIDES OF OBASANJO say their leader has been greatly impressed with the position of Carter and Young on Africa and their decision to work actively to oust the white-ruled governments in Rhodesia and South Africa.

These African diplomats privately report that the Nigerian leader has received assurances from Young that President Carter has no objection to the installation of Marxist governments in southern Africa.

The President's decision to open up the White House to the Nigerian Marxist strong-man fits in to his new policy of open collaboration and support for Marxist governments in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

This policy includes the lifting of the U.S. embargo against Cuba and the establishing of diplomatic relations with the Castro government, which now has more than 30,000 troops and military advisers in Angola, Ethiopia, and other states bordering Rhodesia and South West Africa, administered by South Africa.

The still secret part of the plan provides for using Rhodesia, Angola, and Mozambique as advice bases for such a UN force, which will include Cuban and Nigerian troops, and will receive logistical support from the U.S.

In a recent meeting with reporters covering the State Department, Richard M. Moose Jr., an assistant Secretary of State who deals with African problems, reported that "the presence of increased numbers of Cuban troops in Angola no longer is a primary issue for the Carter administration."

"More important," he said, "is finding a way to stop the continuing violence in Angola."

Pastel Pink Portends 'Easy' 1040A Form

The new income tax Form 1040A—which more than one-third of all the millions of you who pay taxes will file by next Apr. 15—is now on the printing presses and is slated to go into the mails to you starting in December.

It will be colored a pastel pink to soothe you as you struggle through the many changes that again have been made in the form with the commendable goals of "simplification" and "reform."

It will indeed be easier to read than last year's 1040A which, also with the commendable goals of simplification and reform, was changed in such ways that the form became far more complex and caused horrendous numbers of conscientious taxpayers to make errors in arithmetic.

FURTHERMORE IT encouraged many to invite an IRS audit and, worst of all, resulted in widespread overpayment of taxes.

This year's pastel pink Form 1040A still will make countless numbers of you turn the red, white and green colors that decorated the simple one-page form in the past.

To help soften your anger or anxiety, here's a preview of the changes in the '77 version and hints on how to handle the form when it reaches you.

(1) YOU WILL NOT have to compute your own standard deductions, your general credit or your dollar total of exemptions, as you had to do on the '76 version.

They are now incorporated automatically into the tax table from which you will simply pick out your tax.

All you will need to get your '77 tax from the IRS tax table are (a) the total of your salary, dividends, and interest (your adjusted gross income) and (b) the number of your exemptions.

(2) NO LONGER WILL you find confusing boxes requiring you to supply information to support your claims for dependents other than a dependent child.

On the 1976 Form 1040A, you had to answer whether such a dependent had less than $750 in income and how much support was furnished by you, the taxpayer, and the dependent you claimed.

This alone sent millions of you to outside tax "experts" to get assistance—which may or may not have been good assistance and which certainly cost you money and time.

(3) THE '77 FORM reverses the old arrangement, showing the tax due followed by the credits for tax withheld, earned income credit and contributions to candidates.

These credits are now shown first and the tax last.

This may be, suggests the Research Institute of America, because the IRS expects most of you who file this form will claim refunds on your '77 version of 1040A

(4) YOU'LL FIND the tax due for 1977 in tax tables which run a full 12 pages instead of the three pages in '76.

While this may appear another complication, the additional tables are required in order to eliminate the computations you had to make on your '76 Form 1040A on gross income, not taxable income.

In comparison, the additional pages are a "simplification."

(5) IF THOUGH, YOU are among the estimated 35,000 widows or widowers with dependent children, you won't find your filing status on the 1977 Form 1040A.

If you're among these qualifying individuals, you'll have to use Form 1040.

While the many new changes from '76's Form 1040A to '77's may scare you into requesting someone else to do the job for you and into paying whatever fee the tax preparer charges, this form has been sufficiently "re-simplified" so that you should be able to complete it on your own.

CLIP THIS COLUMN and save it for reference when you get the new form. Then study the form, before even trying to fill it out.

Don't forget to get your essential papers together before you begin (Form W-2, for instance).

Don't forget to sign it.

Don't forget to fill out all required boxes.

FPC Order Puzzles Companies

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — The Federal Power Commission should learn to use plain language, Cities Service Gas Co. officials said this week.

Officials said they were puzzled by the FPC's latest order in a dispute over adding customers to the company's pipelines. "We are vexed by the obliqueness used by FPC in this latest order," company president John W. Morton said. "We would all be served better if the FPC used straight-forward language in their directives."

The company serves 502 communities in Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas. It said the FPC, which issued its first order in the controversy in June, has continually tried to halt addition of new residential and small business customers to the pipeline system.

"We are sympathetic with the dilemma confronting our distributor customers and the hundreds of developers and homebuilders in trying to make sense out of the latest in a series of seemingly contradictory orders issued by the FPC in this matter," Morton said. "We are even more sympathetic with the countless potential homeowners who would prefer to use natural gas rather than more expensive alternates."

The first order limited the firm's future deliveries to a level sufficient to serve customers connected as of Jan. 1, 1978, and was appealed by Cities Service and others. This resulted in a modifying order on Aug. 2 and a rehearing was set for Oct. 6, 1977, with rebuttal April 4, 1978.

Galloway said that in a Sept. 20 order denying an application by Cities Service Gas Co., seeking restoration of the Jan. 1, 1978, but against new buildings, the FPC used "language which is causing great consternation."

"Any increase in the requirements of Cities distributors, instead of Jan. 1, 1978, date, may be at the risk of those distributors, pending further action of the commission based on the record submitted in the hearing already scheduled," he said. The FPC is saying.

PICKETING AT HIRING HALL — Longshoremen raise their picket signs outside the entrance of a hiring hall in New Orleans this week as they refused to go back to work during a strike. The longshoremen ignored an earlier order by union officials which called for them to end their general strike, which began Saturday. (AP Laserphoto)

Centenarian Placed On Probation

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — A Moslem religious court has released a 117-year-old Malaysian man on probation after he pleaded guilty to living out of wedlock with a 40-year-old woman. It was his third conviction on the same charge with the same woman, court officials said.

The court fined Lebai Omar Bin Datuk Panglima Garang $80 at the hearing this week.

Lebai Omar described himself as a teacher of "Silat," the Malay art of self-defense. He has been married 17 times previously and divorced all his wives.

He committed the offense at his house near Alor Setar, 280 miles northwest of here, between June 26 and Aug. 13 of this year, the court in his hometown was told.

The woman, Doyah Binti Dan, was fined $80 by the same court Sept. 20, and is serving a two-month jail term because she could not pay the fine.

Under Malaysia's strict Moslem laws, living out of wedlock is illegal and Moslem religious courts are entitled to arrest and try offenders. More than half Malaysia's 12 million inhabitants are Moslem.

The prosecutor, Ustaz Saad bin Saidin, said Lebai Omar's first offense with Doyah was two years ago when they were both fined $264 and paid the penalties. After the second offense they were jailed for a month with no fines.

This time, the prosecutor appealed for leniency and said the couple now plans to marry, since Doyah has divorced her husband of 15 years.

Lebai Omar told reporters he met Doyah about three years ago when they were working in a sugar-cane plantation. "We like each other's company and get along very well."

Alert and quick with his replies, Lebai Omar told reporters he pedaled a bicycle to court during his trial from his house, five miles away.

Residents Form Many Parties

PUTNAM STATION, N.Y. (AP) — Forming a political party in this town near the northern tip of Lake George is as easy as getting up a sandlot baseball team. All that's needed under law are nine registered voters.

Some years it's more and other years less, depending on the number who voted in the previous election.

This year, the law is being put to use. The Republican caucus said "no Moore" to Frank Moore, town supervisor for 32 years, so Moore formed the People's party to back his candidacy in the Nov. 8 election.

Kevin Hart, who already had formed the Independent party to run for supervisor, also got Moore's spot on the Republican ticket.

Lloyd Slater had formed the Sunshine party to run for supervisor, too, but decided to drop out. Slater's wife, Margaret, picked up the party's nomination for supervisor.

Norman Nadesu heads the Democratic ticket in this heavily Republican town of 579 residents, but he's also the candidate of the Citizen Rights party, which he formed "to appeal to Republicans."

The ballot won't be as crowded as it could be, though. The town's two Conservatives and one Liberal decided to sit out the election.

Rising Costs Having Little Effect On Homebuyers

By JOHN CUNNEFF
NEW YORK (AP) — Little seems to stand in the way of the homebuyer's desire for a single-family house on its own plot — not money or energy prices or attempts by builders to change America's living habits.

The typical new house is still the conventional one-story, three-bedroom plan, but it now has two baths and is growing larger in other ways too. It is likely to have a fireplace and central air conditioning, and almost certainly a dishwasher.

All this despite an energy shortage that causes operating costs to be higher, and soaring purchase prices that preclude ownership by some families unless they borrow from parents to meet the down payment.

It isn't the first time that homebuyers have asserted themselves against what might be considered the better judgment of others. Planners and builders have tried cluster housing (small plots, shared green areas), co-ops and condominiums, modular units, no-frill housing and more.

As real estate agents note, young couples supposedly more attuned to change, often seek conventional homes similar to those in which they grew up or to which their parents aspired ... only bigger and better.

A study of Census Bureau material by the National Association of Realtors shows that the average size of the speculatively built house in 1976 was 1,690 square feet, compared with 1,535 feet in 1971.

Fifty-nine per cent of the units had at least one fireplace, versus 34 per cent five years earlier, even though the detailed hand labor involved added greatly to the total cost.

Fifty-three per cent of the speculative homes (those built on expectation of sale rather than to order) contained central air conditioning, compared with only 38 per cent in 1971, when energy costs were much lower.

More than 70 per cent of the houses had two bathrooms, against about 50 per cent five years ago. And 78 per cent were equipped with dishwashers against only 48 per cent in 1971.

Despite the strong market for new and better homes, a rate that now seems to assure some 1.9 million starts for the year, an even stronger market exists in sales of existing or used homes.

For the second year in a row, sales of such units will pass the three-million mark, and might even reach 3.5 million units, an unprecedented figure.

It is this trend that perhaps suggests some change in the attitude of homebuyers, in that a good deal of existing housing is urban, whereas new single-family homes are usually built on suburban or semisuburban lots.

Urban buyers apparently have heeded nobody's advice but their own, recognizing that such units, even if abandoned, often represent better buys than new housing. Accommodations often are large er, construction sturdier. Sewers and water connections exist, as do transportation and other amenities.

Recognizing the absurdity of abandoning such housing — and sensitive to criticisms that money is being transferred from such areas to suburbia — savings and loan associations this week urged a new national urban housing policy.

The U.S. League of Savings Associations, whose 4,461 member savings and loan associations are the primary source of mortgage money, said more emphasis on rehabilitation and less on new construction is needed.

Despite their affinity for what is termed the conventional new home, a good many young buyers already seem to have that idea, and they are asserting themselves in rehabilitation projects, whenever they can get mortgages.

Such housing, of course, was the conventional housing long before the suburbs and the "conventional new home."

The Almanac TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International
Today is Thursday, Oct. 6, the 279th day of 1977 with 86 to follow.

The moon is moving toward its new phase.

The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

There are no evening stars.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Libra.

American inventor and manufacturer George Westinghouse was born Oct. 6, 1866.

On this day in history:
In 1853, Antioch College opened in Yellow Springs, Ohio. It was the first non-sectarian school to grant equal opportunities for both men and women.

In 1921, sports writer Grantland Rice was at the microphone as the World Series was broadcast for the first time.

In 1972, a Mexican train derailment killed 150 persons.

In 1973, heavy fighting broke out between Israel on the one side and Egypt and Syria on the other. Both sides claimed the other started the war.

A thought for the day:

Museum Gets Art On Anniversary

FORT WORTH (AP) — The acquisition of a 300-year-old Rembrandt painting coincides with Tuesday's fifth anniversary at the Kimball Art Museum here.

The painting, entitled "Portrait of a Young Jew," is signed by the master and dated 1663. Coincidentally, the painting's first showing here falls on the 308th anniversary of Rembrandt's death.

According to museum policy, the price paid was not disclosed.

The painting was last owned, however, by the family of the late Canadian railroad tycoon, Sir William Van Horne, himself an avid art collector.

National Boundaries Forgotten When It Comes To Television

By LARRY THORSON

JERUSALEM (AP) — Addicts of the American television show "Rich Man, Poor Man" would find this part of the Middle East a homey place to live.

Point the rabbit ears toward Amman on Tuesday night, and Jordan TV presents the program. Then on Thursday "Rich Man, Poor Man" is shown on television in Israel, providing a quick fix for people who might have despaired at waiting a full week for the saga of Sen. Rudy Jordache, his search for love, power, justice and family harmony.

Jordan TV recently stopped broadcasting "Kojak," disappointing Israeli fans who had taken to wearing T-shirts with a likeness of Telly Savalas' bald head. Israel, to the rescue, has taken up the program, transmitting it with subtitles in Hebrew and Arabic so people on both sides of the Jordan River can follow as Kojak fights crime in New York City.

When an Israeli moves, his friends ask, "Can you get Jordan in your new place?" Although there is a state of war between the two countries, Israelis often turn to Jordan TV for entertainment when Israel TV is running one of its serious talk programs. Several Israeli newspapers publish "unofficial" program listings to Amman's broadcasts.

Foreign diplomats who have been posted in Amman report Jordanians return the favor by switching to Israel TV when their own country's station is running an inferior program. Neither country has a locally produced series of the type that runs in prime time in the United States, so almost every night there is an American program or two available.

Israel currently is running "Rich Man, Poor Man," "Kojak," "The Money Changers" and "All In The Family." Several months ago, "Starsky and Hutch" was discarded in favor of the "Charlie's Angels."

But the Angels, regarded as "insipid" by newspaper critics, are being canned and "Starsky and Hutch" returns, but not to its planned Friday night time slot. Religious Jews who don't watch TV on the Sabbath reportedly objected that they were blocked from watching the program, and it will be shown Sunday nights.

Jordan seems to favor American chestnut programs, running "Gunsmoke."

"The Partridge Family," "I Dream Of Jeannie," "The Big Valley," "The Waltons," "Laverne And Shirley," "The Rockford Files" and "Happy Days." Arabic subtitles are used, so an Israeli would have to know spoken English or written Arabic to understand.

Jordan's broadcast causes some envy in Israel because it's in color while Israel is stuck in black and white. Israel TV has color broadcasting equipment but the government fears a big loss of foreign currency if everybody buys an imported color set, so it prohibits color broadcasts.

The two countries' news operations apparently watch each other closely. Dan Shilon, director of Israel TV news, said Jordan is monitored nearly every day for political developments, King Hussein's activities and foreign visitors to Jordan.

Jordan has news programs in both Hebrew and English every night. A few Israelis claim to enjoy watching them because they have more international news than Israel TV has.

Pollster Says Health Plan Popular

CHICAGO (AP) — A slight majority of the American public is willing to pay higher taxes for some kind of national health care system, says a former campaign pollster for President Carter.

Fifty-one per cent of a 2,500 persons polled recently expressed a willingness to pay more taxes even "in view of the anti-Washington, anti-government, anti-tax mood," Patrick H. Caddell said in a speech this week at a symposium on National Health Care sponsored by Blue Cross and Blue Shield.

Caddell, now president of Cambridge Survey Research, Inc., and an unofficial Carter adviser, said he expects the President will use data from the survey to develop a plan to expand the government's role in health care and insurance.

He said that 16 per cent of those polled wanted to keep the current health care system, 26 per cent wanted the federal government to pay insurance premiums for the poor, 34 per cent wanted a national health care program that guarantees medical treatment for all and 18 per cent favored a totally nationalized medical system. Another six per cent was undecided.

LAFF-A-DAY

"Happy birthday plus a couple of days!"

Carter's Aid Rejected By Senator

By FRANK CORMIER
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has discovered, perhaps to his embarrassment, that not every Democratic politician wants to grab hold of his coat-tails.

A case in point is Floyd K. Haskell, a first-term senator from Colorado who already is raising money for a 1978 re-election bid.

When the White House announced last week that Carter would be visiting Denver on Oct. 22, as part of a two-day, five-state tour, it said the President would "make remarks at a fundraiser for Sen. Haskell."

Within two hours, a second announcement came forth. It began, "There has been an alteration in the President's schedule." Lo, there will be no appearance on Haskell's behalf.

According to an aide, Haskell's reaction when informed about the prospective fundraiser was, "Absolutely and positively no!"

It seems that Carter's much-publicized efforts to crack down on federal water projects have met with something less than universal approval in Colorado's irrigated farm sections. The Haskell aide would not deny this was an important factor in the senator's rejection of the President's proffered embrace.

Haskell's office had suggested that Carter visit an irrigated farm while in Colorado. The trip's fast pace made that impossible. However, water will top Carter's Colorado agenda. While in Denver, he will take part in a round-table discussion of western water policy.

Carter's campaign coattails are in demand elsewhere, of course. Gov. Brendan Byrne of New Jersey, in a tough race for re-election, welcomed him to Newark and Trenton last month. And Henry Howell, the Democratic candidate for governor of Virginia, was equally enthusiastic about Carter's appearances on his behalf more than a week ago.

More on water: Without fanfare or announcement, Carter passed up an opportunity last week to try anew to derail federal funding for the proposed Richard B. Russell Dam in his native Georgia.

Back in April, Carter announced his opposition to the $246 million project, along with more than a dozen others. But Congress stuck $21 million for the Russell Dam into a catch-all appropriations bill. The President signed the appropriation, but made known his displeasure at the inclusion of the $21 million.

Last Friday, the final day of the 1977 fiscal year, Carter passed up his last chance to seek deletion or deferral of the Russell money from the fiscal 1978 budget. He could have sent Congress a message proposing either action. The fact that he did not do so suggests he felt he lacked the votes necessary for approval of such a move.

The President will have another chance to call for a halt to the Russell Dam when he presents his fiscal 1979 budget in January. Meanwhile, an official of the Army's Corps of Engineers, which is in charge of the project, said the $21 million will be spent to continue work begun in 1974.

Remember when Carter ordered aides to cancel their reservations at Claridge's Hotel during the London economic summit because it was too posh for his tastes?

When Carter went to New York this week to address the United Nations and meet with foreign diplomats, he and his party checked into the new and convenient United Nations Plaza.

Members of the travel party were forewarned that if they wanted to use the hotel tennis courts, advance reservations would be necessary — at $75 an hour. Carter left his racket at home.

Trouble Brews On Show's Set

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — What's happening on the set of the television series "What's Happening!" is a quarrel between producer Bud Yorkin and actors Ernest Thomas, who plays "Raj," and Fred Berry, "Tatum."

Thomas and Berry walked off the set recently, complaining that Yorkin ignored continued complaints that their dressing rooms were dirty, cockroach-infested and furnished with "unsheeted, stained smelly mattresses."

They said when they returned, they were told they could not resume work until they signed promissory notes for $25,000 each — Yorkin's estimate of what the without cost the production — which Yorkin could collect if they ever walked out again.

They refused, saying in a joint statement that just because they grew up in poverty, "that's no reason the company should offer it to us now."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Wealth for you tomorrow will lie in warm camaraderie with friends. It will be far more important than money in the bank.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Focus your sights on the bullseye tomorrow. Your fortune lies in hewing to the most direct line. Don't be sidetracked into less productive regions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be realistic. Deal with friends who can deliver what they promise tomorrow. Avoid those famed for snatching defeat from the jaws of victory.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Should you be looking to make some changes tomorrow, you could be well advised. But you must implement them so as not to shake everyone up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Someone close to you may make a promise tomorrow that they can't possibly keep. You'll be a better person if you recognize their frailties and forgive them.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't fritter away time tomorrow on things that can't contribute to your growth or position. You will be in an expansive cycle. Minutes will be precious.

AIRES (March 21-April 19) You can be generally successful in business dealings tomorrow, with the exception of those that are speculative. Just apply yourself diligently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If your expectations exceed reasonable bounds tomorrow, look for some disappointment. However, you'll do well with things within the realm of reason.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try not to count your chickens before they're hatched tomorrow, or spend profits from something still in the formative stage. Your plans need time to develop.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be wise enough tomorrow to distinguish between optimism and false hopes. See things in their true colors — don't try to create a rosier hue.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Deal only in logic and fact tomorrow and the results should be as you anticipate. Conjecture can only get you into trouble.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your first inclination tomorrow will be to seek people with clout to champion your cause. However, you'll get the best results if you fend for yourself.

Nevada Restaurant Uses Solar Power

WASHOE CITY, Nev. (AP) — The first restaurant in Nevada to be heated entirely by solar power will open its doors soon, but owners say the conversion wasn't made to attract attention.

The switch to solar was made for a simple reason — to save money, according to the owners of Cattlemens Restaurant.

Pete Gillham of Santa Rosa, Calif., one of five owners of the restaurant, said he and his partners studied a proposal for solar heating, found they could pay for the system in five years and show a profit, and decided to give it a try.

Cattlemens here is similar to six other dinner houses by the same name in neighboring California.

This one sits just off Highway 395 in this sprawling and beautiful area of northern Nevada, midway between Reno and Carson City. It looks like a restaurant in every respect, with one exception.

It has three large solar panels at the back, tilted on the roof in a southerly direction facing the sun.

Gillham said the solar system will provide cooling, space heating and hot water for dishwashing.

Nevada building codes require a conventional heating-cooling system for such structures, and one was put in at the restaurant here as a backup. But the owners say solar power is the mainstay.

"We could have just put in a conventional unit for $15,000 or $20,000. With both we have maybe $70,000 in it. That's a lot of money. But the engineers predicted a 20 per cent return on our money. That means in five years the unit will have paid for itself in fuel savings, and after five years, the rest is profit," Gillham said.

He emphasized that the decision to go to solar was a business decision and not an experiment.

"We did some studies first. There were a couple of deciding factors. First, there is no natural gas available. We would have had to use propane. Secondly, electricity costs about one and one-half times as much here as in California.

"This setup shows us a major savings. We know energy bills will be rising each year, so this looked like a good deal to us," he said.

The 20 per cent savings, Gillham said, amounts to a projected savings each year of about $6,700 in fuel costs.

Announcing the new managed Merrill Lynch Municipal Bond Fund

For investors who seek income free from Federal taxes—and the answers to many questions

For many upper-income investors, some of the most attractive take-home returns available are often to be found among high-quality tax-exempt municipal bonds. But many questions arise.

- For example:
- Which bonds should you choose? (Selection)
- Is there a practical way to diversify your investment? (Diversification)
- How can you arrange to buy in convenient amounts—$100 units, after the initial $1,000 investment? (Convenience)
- How can you buy when you're ready — instead of waiting for an "offering"? (Timing)
- How can you arrange to have your return automatically reinvested in more?

tax-free bonds—to help your holdings grow? (Automatic Reinvestment)

- Or, if you prefer, how can you get regular tax-free checks? (Regular Income)
- How can you insure both principal and income? (Insurance)*
- How can you cash in your holdings—should you wish to? (Liquidity)
- How can you get qualified professionals to manage your holdings? (Professional Management)

The new managed Merrill Lynch Municipal Bond Fund is designed to help meet these needs.

Places Beauty Found On Fiji Visit

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Travel Editor

Take some 300 South Pacific islands, cover each with tall palm trees and lush vegetation, encircle each island with unspoiled beautiful beaches and blue waters, caress the days and nights with gentle trade winds, and then populate small villages with charming people of many races — what do you have? You have the Fiji Islands!

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lee of Lubbock may be the best goodwill ambassadors for the Fiji Islands since the first grass skirt or sarong was seen by a non-islander. After a 10-day visit to the Fijis, the Lubbock couple are very enthusiastic about the islands and hope to go back for a longer visit.

"All of the South Pacific islands are wonderful, but Fiji has its own special charm and beauty," said Mrs. (Maxine) Lee.

"The country, the many different islands, and the friendly people make for a perfect vacation," noted Frank Lee. Associated with World Wide Travel, he and his wife have found over the years that they prefer the Pacific for their personal travels. "On the islands," the Lubbockite noted, "You can be as busy as you want to be, or as lazy as you want to be."

But, taking it easy isn't the world travelers' style. "You can't possibly see and do all that you want to in 10 days," noted Mrs. Lee. "We had no idea how much there was to do on the Fiji Islands."

The Lubbock couple found the islands' many lagoons to be perfect for water skiing. The gentle sea breezes made a day on one of the many golf courses or tennis courts quite comfortable, and the coral reefs always proved interesting.

"We accompanied some friends who went out to a reef for some scuba diving and snorkeling," recalled Lee. "The fish around the reefs are always exotic tropical things. They're the most colorful in the world and many of them are fantastically bright; there's a neon glow about them."

Many new underwater caves, reefs and shells have recently been discovered, and each area is systematically opened for diving after a period of study and inspection for safety purposes. The new areas are said to be some of the most interesting for underwater enthusiasts in the world.

It's the surface of the water that interests Mrs. Lee, an ardent water skier. "I water skied in three different areas and found each area perfect," stated the Lubbock woman. She also noted that the islands offer excellent fishing, and the hotels can arrange for charter fishing boats or sailing boats.

The Fijian hotels are excellent resort hotels with all of the services and activities you would expect. The Lubbockites stated that the Regent, the Fijian, and the Beachcomber are three hotels that will compare with resort hotels anywhere in the world.

At the Beachcomber, island visitors can enjoy entertainment featuring island musicians and the unusual sight of natives walking on hot coals. Many of the hotels have dance bands that play music in the style of Tommy Dorsey and Benny Goodman. Cuisine ranges from Chinese dishes to a native feast called magiti.

Most of the hotels are air-conditioned but many visitors prefer to turn off the man-made convenience and enjoy the trade winds and comfortable evenings that are usually in the 60's. Accommodations vary from single rooms and small bungalows to beautiful homes; the fully furnished homes may be leased for a month or longer. Some of the home owners leave their personal cars for the temporary occupant's convenience. An outer road, about 350 miles long, that encircles the main island of Viti Levu is perfect for sightseeing.

Fiji is made up of several large islands plus many outlying islands. Transportation is available to even the smaller islands. Some of the smaller islands, Castaway and Treasure Island for instance, have full service resorts.

When Mrs. Lee first saw one of the smaller islands with its quiet beach, tall palm trees and thatched roof accommodations, she said, "I wasn't for sure I was seeing it. The island was like a picture post card. I didn't believe it was real."

The Lubbock couple was impressed with the fact that the Fijians are concentrating on quality for tourists. "It's a delicate balance to try and not over-commercialize such a beautiful area," noted Lee, and he added, "I think they are doing a marvelous job."

Some of the areas on the larger islands are so undeveloped that the areas can only be reached by four-wheel vehicles. On the other hand, visitors to the islands find it easy to walk to nearby beaches that remain as they have for hundreds of years.

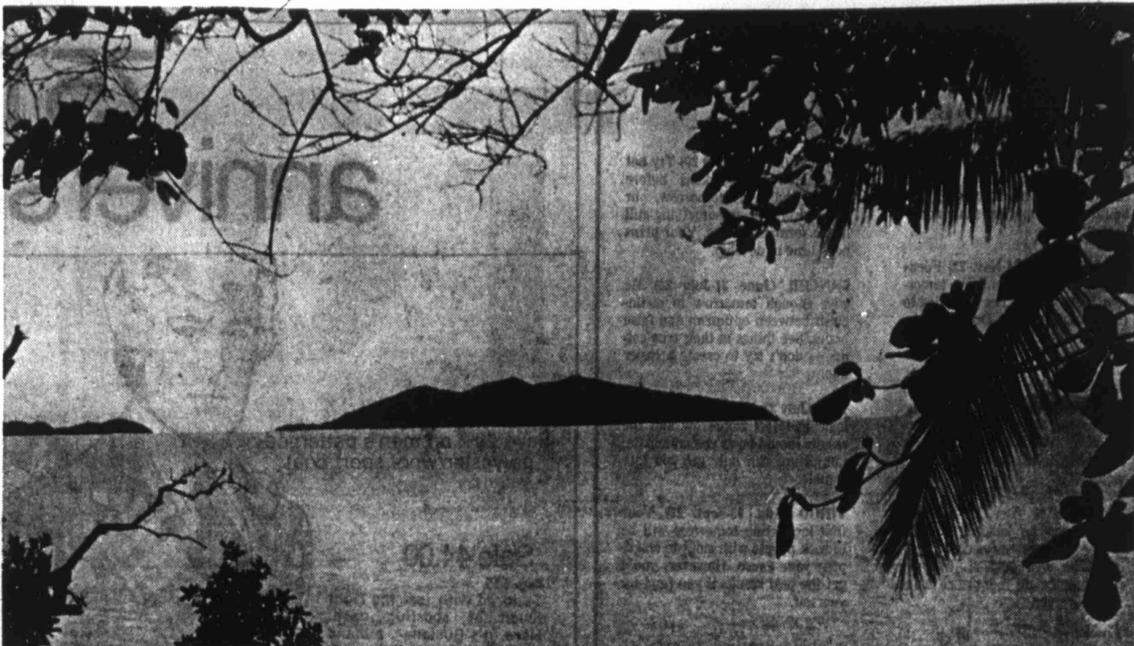

The beaches are totally free so a visitor can roam at his or her pleasure. "I walked along a beach for a mile and a half and never saw another soul," recalled Mrs. Lee. "The beaches were just endless ribbons of white sand, and they looked as though not more than two people had ever walked on them before you."

"Because coral reefs surround most of the islands," noted Lee, "the beaches are some of the best in the world." He explained, "The reefs prevent the ocean from washing the sand away from the beach."

Peoples from all corners of the world (more than half of the native population's ancestors originated in India) have made the beautiful islands their home. Consequently, many cultures may be observed in dress, crafts and foods.

The Lubbock couple observed that all of the islanders, be they European, Australian, Chinese, Indian or Fijian, work and live together in a happy and unified manner.

All too soon it was time to leave the Fiji Islands, and the beauty of the final night's stay made the departure even more difficult. Mrs. Lee remembered, "I went out to stand on the patio to look at the beach. Right between some palm fronds was a full moon in a clear sky. Just off the beach some sailboats were anchored in the moonlit waters. All of it was so beautiful — so very beautiful."

TREASURE ISLAND — A small offshore isle, one of the Fiji Islands and developed by Treasure Island Resort, features 66 tile and thatched-roof bungalows. One of many such island resorts, the accommodations emphasize informal but comfortable living in the South Pacific. (Photos by Frank Lee)

THE GOOD LIFE — Beautiful gardens, terraced grounds and swimming pools complete the full services offered by the luxury hotels in Fiji. The islands are one place where tales of South Pacific paradise come true.

SING-ALONG — Entertainers at the Regent of Fiji, a hotel in the Fiji Islands, present traditional dances and music. The bamboo poles are tuned and sounded by striking them against the ground.

U.S. Citizens Will Find Fiji 'Like Home'

Fiji, consisting of more than 300 islands, is an independent British Commonwealth nation just west of the International Date Line in the south-central Pacific. Year-round temperatures average 70 to 85 degrees from beach to mountain top.

A passport is required for entrance, but U.S. citizens will feel right at home in the islands where English is the official language. The international airport at Nadi is served from the United States by Pan Am and Quantas.

Duty-free shops afford savings on cameras, binoculars and tape recorders. Island made items include shell jewelry, wood carvings, tapa cloth, and grass skirts. Travelers should ask their travel agent about the Generalized System of Preferences. The GSP list can be a bonanza for overseas shoppers.

Complete information regarding air fares, accommodations and package tours for the Fiji Islands is available from World Wide Travel.

Toughest Point In Clean Air Act Due In 1981

By EDWARD S. LECHTZN
 DETROIT (UPI) — The nation's air still may not be pure, but it's cleaner than a decade ago when Congress forced the auto industry to begin cleaning up tailpipe exhausts.

The auto still is a major polluter. However, even the industry's harshest critics are looking for new targets in their fight against air pollution.

In California — the state where smog became part of our vocabulary — the emphasis is shifting away from the automobile.

"In past years, California's anti-smog program has been aimed primarily at the automobile industry," said Tom Quinn, chairman of the California Air Resources Board. "While we have been slowly cleaning up our cars, other pollution sources, particularly the oil companies, have been expanding operations and increasing their pollution."

Quinn said 25 per cent of all hydrocarbon pollution in the Los Angeles basin comes from the petroleum industry.

A quarter of a century ago, the late Dr. Arie Jan Haagen-Smit of California Institute of Technology published a controversial paper labeling the auto as the chief cause of Los Angeles' smog. It was met with ridicule, but Haagen-Smit finally prevailed.

Hydrocarbons from unburned gasoline and nitrogen oxides formed in the hot auto engines were escaping into the hot, stagnant air, where it reacted with sunlight to form smog — an eye-irritating pollutant that, along with carbon monoxide, made life difficult for the elderly and chronically ill.

After a decade of battling between Washington and Detroit, clean air standards will reach their toughest point in 1981.

They will cut emissions of hydrocarbons from pre-1960 levels of 15 grams per mile to 0.41 gpm (a 97 per cent reduction); carbon monoxide from 90 gpm to 3.4 gpm (a 96 per cent drop); and nitrogen oxides from 5 gpm to 1 gpm (an 80 per cent reduction).

In California, where air pollution is a greater problem, nitrogen oxides will drop even further to 0.4 gpm (a 92 per cent reduction) but carbon monoxide will be lowered only to 9 gpm instead of the 3.4 gpm in the other 49 states.

Automakers claim the lower nitrogen oxides level could not be achieved if carbon monoxide also was dropped to its lowest level.

But even though it will take at least another 10 years after 1981 to have the entire 110 million-plus car population equipped with the most modern antipollution devices, government tests showed the early work already is paying off.

"Over the past five years, considerable progress has been made toward achieving the national ambient air quality standards," the Environmental Protection Agency said in a 1977 report based on measurements taken in 1974 and 1975.

Carbon monoxide, primarily an auto-related emission, was reported improved in 80 per cent of locations where it was measured. EPA particularly observed that the rate of improvement in California was more pronounced than in other parts of the country.

With California demanding stronger emission controls on autos, carbon monoxide levels there decreased at a rate of about 7 per cent a year. For the rest of the nation, the annual decline was 5 per cent.

Photochemical smog also showed improvement.

"Over a 10-year period, people in the Los Angeles basin experienced a dramatic decline in the number of days they were exposed to oxidant levels above the health standard," the EPA said.

In the 1965-66 period, smog hit the area 176 days a year, by 1970, it dropped to 144 days and was down to 105 days in 1974.

The EPA said reduction of hydrocarbon emissions from automobiles was significant, but added the over-all total was only slightly lower because of increases in industrial and other sources.

Revealing the interaction between controls and pollutants was the report that oxides of nitrogen emissions between 1974 and 1976 in the Los Angeles area actually increased 50 per cent because of the changes made in auto engines to reduce hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide.

That problem will be solved in part when automakers begin equipping cars with "three-way" catalytic converters, muffler-like devices in the exhaust system that use the relatively rare platinum, palladium and rhodium to control all three pollutants.

General Motors now estimates the three-way catalysts will add between $100 to $140 to the price of a car and cut fuel economy by about 5 per cent.

GM President E.M. "Pete" Estes said the world's largest auto company will meet the clean air standards now set for 1981 and beyond, but still is not convinced that current evidence requires such strict requirements. His is a view backed partially by the scientific community.

A recent editorial in Science, publication of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, said the handling of auto emissions was an example of weaknesses in the nation's pollution abatement efforts.

"Laws have been enacted and regulations have been issued in the absence of solid scientific basis," a Science magazine editorial said. "The burden of attaining and maintaining low emissions has been placed on the automobile industry."

"In most states, the owner of a high-polluting jalopy is untouchable."

Science said much of the billions of dollars spent on pollution abatement in the next decade will be wasted "unless there is better scientific understanding of the problems, a better analysis of costs and benefits and an enforcement system applicable to all polluters."

In the process of cleaning up the nation's autos, and at the same time make them safer and more fuel efficient, government has become a vocal partner in the industry.

Former General Motors Chairman Richard C. Gerstenberg put it this way:

"Government today has something to say about how we design our products, how we build them, how we test them, how we warrant them, how we repair them, the compensation we pay our employees and even the prices we may charge our customers."

Detroit also claimed it is being buried in an avalanche of red tape, spending almost as much time describing how they meet federal standards as they do in devising the methods to accomplish the task.

"In 1972, the federal regulations covering certification of our cars for federal emission took 140 pages," said Sydney L. Terry, Chrysler Corp. vice president-public responsibility and consumer affairs. "You would think that would be enough to cover the subject for a few years, at least. But it wasn't."

"In 1975, the regulations took 242 pages. Since then, the number has jumped to 500 pages. In addition, it takes 167 more pages for the government to explain what they want us to do."

"In 1972, it took 774 pages for us to respond to those guidelines in our applications. In 1975, it took 8,758 pages."

GM estimated it spent $1.3 billion to meet all government requirements in 1974, excluding the actual cost of necessary new hardware, which amounted to $270 a car.

There are now two dozen federal agencies regulating motor vehicle manufacturing and use, and nearly 20 congressional subcommittees considering legislation that has a direct effect on the automobile industry. Congress has enacted 50 regulatory laws governing the auto industry — the clean air standards the most obvious.

With all the paperwork and laws, Detroit has fared poorly in Washington. Its image, after a decade of battling Congress over clean air standards, is more blemished than the paint on a '72 Vega.

Even the United Auto Workers union has seen its credibility suffer because it has lobbied jointly with the auto industry on federal fuel economy and clean air laws. That won't happen again, said UAW President Douglas A. Fraser.

"The auto companies don't have good credentials in Washington," he said. "It's sad to hear lawmakers get up on the floor and say they can't believe the auto industry — that the industry lies. The closer we get to the industry, the more we get contaminated."

Official Says Firm Not Near Collapse

SEATTLE (AP) — The head of the Northern Tier Pipeline Co., which proposes to build an oil superport to feed a pipeline to the Midwest, disputes a congressman's opinion that the firm is near collapse.

J. Michael Curran, president of the pipeline company, said this week that the congressman, Rep. Don Bonker, D-Wash., "is just flat wrong. We're still in business and hard at it and plan to be in the years ahead."

Northern Tier is proposing an oil superport at Port Angeles, on Washington's Olympic Peninsula. It would feed a pipeline stretching across Northern Tier states to the Midwest.

Curran said in a telephone interview that the Montana-based firm is financially healthy and continuing its pipeline campaign.

Bonker, a Democrat whose district includes Port Angeles, said in a newspaper interview this week, "Northern Tier right now is near collapse because of a lack of financial support."

Bonker said he senses "overwhelming support" in Washington, D.C., for a Kitimat, British Columbia, oil superport, rather than one from Port Angeles.

He said he expects "within the next couple of weeks" a decision will be made on where to build one or two major West Coast oil ports to handle Alaskan crude and other countries' oil for shipment to the Midwest.

Bonker anticipates those two lines will be Kitimat and a pipeline planned to start at Long Beach, Calif.

Bonker said the Kitimat proposal is favored over Northern Tier's because it has firm financial backing and considerable Canadian support and because Washington congressmen oppose oil shipment through Puget Sound to the Midwest.

"Our investment to date is more than $3.5 million and that is just for permits. We have not bought a pipe or dug a ditch," Curran said. The company's bank account was about $500,000 this week, he added.

Curran said the seven Northern Tier partners "up to this point are still in. I think it's a more solid project by far now than it was 18 months ago."

The partners are Mapco, Inc., of Tulsa, Okla.; Western Crude, Inc., of Denver; Burlington Northern Railroad; the Milwaukee Road; Butler Associates of Tulsa; Pat McDonough, an independent oil and gas operator in Billings, Mont.; and Curran.

Curran was in Washington, D.C., to testify before a Congressional committee on legislation that would expedite the environmental permits required by the Department of Interior and limit environmental lawsuits.

Carter Statement Scares Rich Jewish Democrats

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — President Carter's reference to "legitimate rights of the Palestinian people" has so angered many Jewish supporters that they are not buying tickets to a $1,000-a-plate fund raising appearance by the President later this month, a dinner organizer says.

"I have never seen them as upset by anything as they are now," Hershey Gold said this week.

Gold, a member of the executive council of the Democratic National Finance Council and veteran Democratic fund raiser, particularly among Jewish groups, is co-chairman of the fund raising dinner scheduled for Oct. 22.

Wealthy Jewish Democrats who were Carter backers "have had the bejibbers scared out of them by this U.S.-Russian statement," Gold said.

He referred to Carter's announcement last weekend that he had reached agreement with the Soviet Union on reconvening the Geneva peace talks and urging a role for the Palestinians in the talks, including respect for the "legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

The statement was "frightening" to many Jewish Americans, Gold said, because it appears to open the door for the Palestine Liberation Organization in its campaign against Israel.

"As a result of what the President has done, I am totally useless in this event," Gold told the Los Angeles Times.

The Times quoted a highly placed California Democratic source as saying the Jewish community was "absolutely horrified" by Carter's statement.

Dinner chairman Lew Wasserman, head of the entertainment industry conglomerate MCA, Inc., said more than 500 tickets have been sold so far. He did not say how many the committee hopes to sell, but a similar dinner in New York earlier this year drew more than 1,100.

Wasserman said those who object to the Carter's statement "are not going to make any points with the President by staying away."

"The best way (to protest) would be to come to the dinner and tell your concerns to the President directly."

Charles T. Manatt, Democratic national committeeman from California, and Bert Coffey, Democratic state chairman, both had appointments in Washington this week with White House staff members and party leaders, and said they planned to relay the dinner committee's experience to Carter aides.

Evidence Indicates Growth In Economic Activity

By JOHN CUNIFF
 NEW YORK (AP) — Just when a lot of people were getting accustomed to the notion that the nation's economy was sinking into a quagmire, a few reports were issued that tend to riddle the notion:
 —Machine tool orders, or orders for equipment that will be used in making other goods, spurted in August after declining in June.
 —The level of orders at the nation's factories rose in August for the first time since May.
 —The Index of Leading Economic Indicators also rose in the same months after having declined for two months earlier this year — and three straight until the July figures were revised from a minus to a plus.

 What all these indicators share in common is the future; they are all indicators of further economic activity. They represent commitments to that activity.
 There is additional evidence of some underlying strength in some of the other individual indicators. Capital spending plans are moving up. So are building permits. Again, these are signs of activity to come.
 It doesn't take much to change the kaleidoscopic pattern of the economy, just a one-month shakeup of the indicators. The change can develop with remarkable speed.

 The stock market, for instance, is one of those leading economic indicators.

For months, their gloomy voices have been telling a tale of woe to come, of an international economy mired in recession, of inflation raging throughout the world, of problems beyond our ability to deal with.

In this context, every percentage point rise in joblessness or inflation is interpreted as verification. And so is every labor-management hassle, congressional argument, federal Reserve action and presidential decision.

To deny there are serious problems is to close the eyes to reality.
 To name a few: teenage unemployment, the plight of the debt-ridden poorer nations, the difficulty of maintaining free trade when jobs are lost to unfair competition, over-regulation, underutilization capacity.
 The stock market, which is supposed to represent the investment community's attitude toward the future, is a special case of its own, depressed for reasons that many experts are at a loss to explain.

Analysis

When other components of the leading index show strength the stock market is inclined to rise as a consequence. And in rising, it contributes further to a rise in the index, of which it is a component.

A one-month rise after three months of weakness might not be enough to dispel the fog and drizzle that has been dampening Wall Street's outlook, but it should quiet for the time being some of the fog horns of disaster.

There are serious social and economic problems that seldom catch the headlines. The difficulties involved in starting a small business, for example. The lack of training programs to facilitate the employment of youngsters.

But to gather all the problems into a patchwork quilt and then try to spread it over the entire economy is just as unrealistic.

There are serious social and economic problems that seldom catch the headlines. The difficulties involved in starting a small business, for example. The lack of training programs to facilitate the employment of youngsters.

Canadians Get Bad News

EDMONTON, Canada (AP) — Because of steel industry problems, Japan probably won't invest in large-scale coal projects in Canada in the next two or three years, a Japanese steel executive says.

"The world economy has been shadowed by the oil crisis and this has had a tremendous impact on our steel industry," Hajime Tsubouchi, executive vice-president of Nippon Kokan K. K. of Tokyo, said this week at the 29th Canadian Conference on Coal.

He said current Japanese steel production is at 70 per cent of installed capacity, and production this fiscal year will amount to about 100 million tons, down from the peak level of 120 million tons in 1973.

As a result, Japan's demand for coking coal from Western Canada and other supply areas won't be as great as anticipated, the executive said.

"I well understand that Canada's coal industry has been ambitiously anticipating great expansion of production," Tsubouchi said.

But "it will not be possible for us to make any substantial contribution to any new, large-scale coking coal development projects in the coming two or three years which, four or five years ago, were planned or considered practical in various parts of the world."

Tsubouchi also pointed out that the Canadian coal industry has several disadvantages in international competition, including less-favorable mining conditions, high production and freight costs, and "a relatively heavy tax and royalty burden."

Dole Raps Canal Cover-Up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., who has released a secret cable on the Panama Canal treaty negotiations, accused the administration today of trying to intimidate him.

Dole, who made public a secret State Department cable Tuesday that called in question the U.S. interpretation of its intervention rights in case of a canal emergency, took the Senate floor today to criticize what he said was the administration's response to his actions.

He said the State Department was trying to find out through the Senate Ethics Committee if it could file a complaint against him.

"I resent and reject that clear effort at intimidation," Dole said. "It is obvious the release would in no way endanger our national security... This cable is classified for narrow, short-term political advantage."

At issue is whether, as the administration insists, the treaties guarantee the U.S. right to intervene militarily to protect the neutrality of the canal and whether U.S. Navy ships have what Secretary of State Cyrus Vance termed "head of the line" priority to use the canal in emergencies.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said it is "imperative that the administration give us full access" to documents relating to the negotiations for the new treaties with Panama.

Baker said he had tried repeatedly to get transcripts, minutes and review documents related to the treaties, without success.

Dole, a foe of the treaties, said the failure to get full disclosure of documents is a "cover-up" and "cover-ups have no place in the American system."

He said the calls to the Ethics Committee make him wonder "just how far this administration is prepared to go to protect itself from embarrassment."

The ethics panel confirmed that a State Department caller had asked how to proceed if the department wished to file a complaint against Dole.

Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., who has spoken on the Senate floor daily for weeks on the canal treaties, said the disclosure by Dole reveals a "grievous wound to the treaties" that can only be healed by amending their actual language.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee took today off from its canal hearings to await a clarification of the intervention issue.

On Wednesday, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, sitting in for chairman John Sparkman, D-Ala., said the Senate may reject the treaties unless it gets answers to troubling questions raised by the cable.

The cable quoted negotiator Carlos Lopez Guevara as telling an embassy official that Panama "cannot agree to the right of the United States to intervene" and U.S. ships would get no preferential treatment.

"There isn't any question that the report in the cable covering both neutrality and expeditious passage is at variance with the position given to us by our secretary of state and secretary of defense," Church said.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown and Gen. George Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, testified last week that the treaties would allow the United States to defend the canal even against Panama.

On Wednesday, the State Department admitted the cable was authentic, but it castigated Dole for a "total breach of a process which is intended to be confidential."

Dole commented, "This is a great open administration we're dealing with," adding he had been informed that the State Department had asked the Senate Ethics Committee to see if any action could be taken against him.

"It appears that the Panamanian officials are trying to sell one version of the canal treaties to their people, and the President is presenting a totally different picture," he said.

"This may be good strategy for gaining ratification, but where does it leave us in years to come during a period of crisis?"

Both the Carter administration and the Panamanian government reject any suggestion of treaty amendments.

State Department officials hastened Wednesday to reaffirm their view that the treaty would allow the United States to intervene militarily after the year 2000 if the neutrality of the canal were threatened.

But Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher also told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the United States is in "continuing contact" with Panama "to clarify any points of interpretation" regarding the treaty.

The question of whether the United States would be allowed to defend the canal with military force after Panama takes control is one of the sharpest points of conflict between proponents and foes of the treaty.

The Senate is likely to wait until next year to vote on ratification, but President Carter already is trying to line up support for the pact while conservative organizations are hoping to defeat it.

In a letter to the committee, Christopher said the treaty guarantees the permanent neutrality of the Panama Canal and that the United States and Panama "each will have the right to take any appropriate measures to defend the canal against any threat" to that neutrality.

There actually are two treaties, covering relinquishing the Canal Zone to Panama at the turn of the century and future security of the waterway, but the pacts are considered indivisible.

Meanwhile, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III criticized Dole for disclosing the cable's contents, calling it "regrettable" and saying it had "impaired the confidence of the (diplomatic) process."

Attorney Traps State Witness

AMARILLO (AP) — State witness Beverly Bass admitted today she previously lied under oath about a "personal problem" and tearfully shouted at a defense attorney.

"It was not true! It was something I wanted to forget! And I had forgotten about it!"

The 19-year-old blond then asked the judge in the Cullen Davis murder case, "may I please have a break?"

After a bench conference with attorneys, the trial judge ordered a 10-minute recess to permit her to regain her composure.

The emotional interlude occurred after a defense lawyer confronted the Fort Worth coed with a sworn deposition she gave in a civil suit related to the millionaire defendant's murder case.

Richard "Racehorse" Haynes brought out that Miss Bass swore in December 1976 she had had no consultation with a medical person other than a dentist.

"That statement was not accurate, was it?" Haynes then asked the visibly shaken witness.

It was at that point she admitted she had lied previously about the incident, the nature of which has not been disclosed in testimony here.

Miss Bass was making her fourth appearance on the stand and undergoing her second day of cross-examination by Haynes.

The Fort Worth coed has named Davis as the gunman who wounded her boyfriend, Gus Gavrel Jr., 22, but the crafty Haynes rooted out two contradictions Wednesday in testimony by the prosecution's key witnesses, Miss Bass and the defendant's estranged wife Priscilla, 36.

Davis is on trial for the Aug. 2, 1976, slaying of his stepdaughter Andrea Wilborn, 12. Mrs. Davis was wounded and her 30-year-old lover, Stan Farr, was slain in the midnight gunfire.

Haynes took the blond Miss Bass on a grueling review Wednesday of her earlier testimony, scoring tactical coups as he sought to establish the "personal" relationship between her and Mrs. Davis.

Miss Bass said the ice blond socialite, whose teen-age daughter, Dee Davis, is among her best friends, assisted her with a "personal problem" two years ago and loaned her money to resolve that problem.

The nature of the "problem" was not disclosed, although prosecution attorneys earlier moved to block the defense from alluding to records subpoenaed from a Fort Worth clinic, Pregnancy Control Inc.

Those records have not been introduced into evidence.

Miss Bass also said Wednesday that Mrs. Davis mentioned her divorce action against Davis when she and Gavrel saw Mrs. Davis and Farr at a Fort Worth nightclub about two hours before the shootings.

Mrs. Davis had testified she never mentioned the divorce to Miss Bass.

Mrs. Davis testified previously that she accompanied Miss Bass to a clinic in August 1975, but denied providing her financial assistance.

Miss Bass, her eyes cast downward, said she also was accompanied to the clinic Aug. 26, 1975, by Dee Davis, who was adopted by Davis.

U.S. Judge Target Of Charges

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department is seeking to bar the nation's oldest chief federal judge from hearing its cases.

The department accused Judge Willis W. Ritter, 78, of U.S. District Court, with ignoring correct judicial procedure, rendering decisions with "arbitrary and erratic authority," insulting U.S. attorneys and bringing the federal courts into disrespect.

In a writ filed Wednesday, the government accused Ritter, among other things, of referring to a U.S. Appeals Court as "those fellows up there that sit around and chew their fingernails and fiddle around about some damn thing."

Because of Ritter's alleged abuses, the writ said, there is no functioning federal court in Utah for civil cases, tax summons enforcement, misdemeanors and "in a very real sense, no functioning court for felony cases."

Utah officials said they would file similar action seeking to exclude cases involving the state from the jurisdiction of Ritter, who has been criticized by the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and the U.S. Supreme Court.

The judge also is unpopular with the Utah Bar, which has tried unsuccessfully to have him censured and stripped of his title as chief judge.

The writ of mandamus was filed in the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver by U.S. Atty. Ramon Child. The action was approved by the U.S. solicitor general.

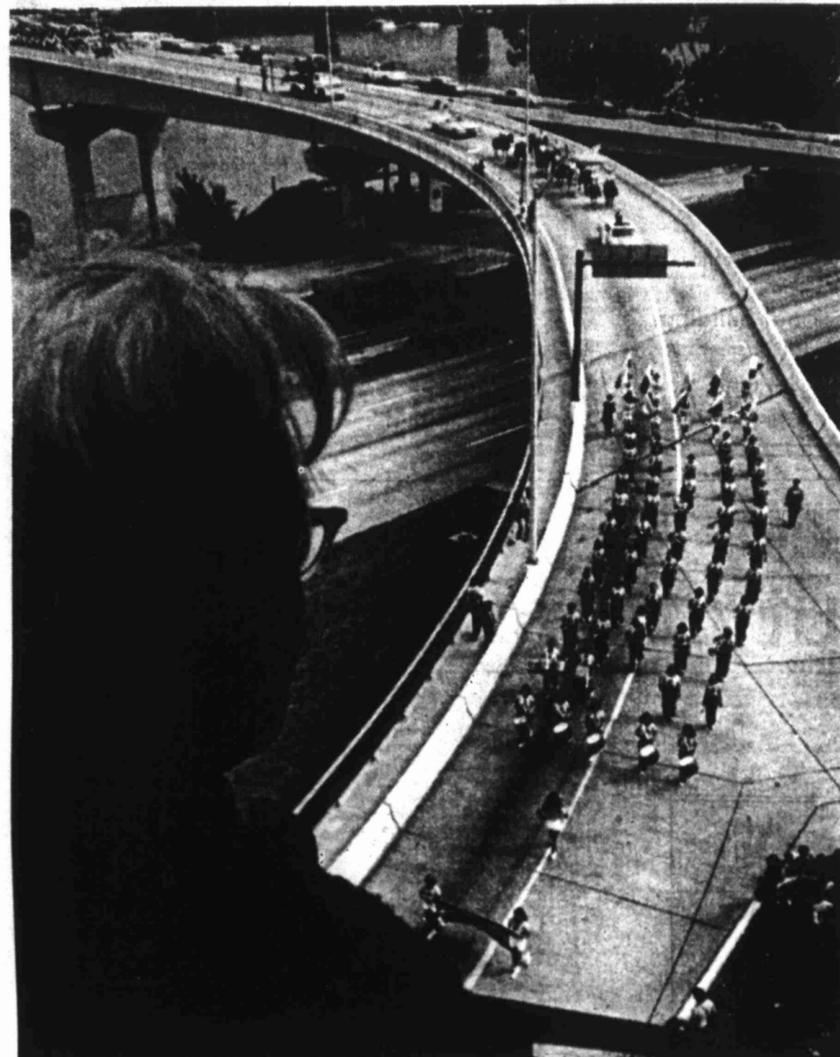

The writ seeks to prevent Ritter from hearing pending or future criminal cases involving the federal government and to bar him from future civil cases in which the government is a party.

Child, one of Ritter's bitterest critics in his 2½ years as a federal attorney for Utah, was once characterized by the judge as "the worst United States district attorney they ever had in this courtroom," the writ said.

Among the writ's allegations were that Ritter:

- Effectively avoids appellate review of his decisions by waiting until after trial has begun to rule on defense motions, to suppress evidence or to dismiss charges. Should a higher court overrule him on such points, the case cannot be retried because of the Constitution's stricture against double jeopardy.
- Is "hostile toward the trial of misdemeanors and petty offenses in the district court." His refusal to delegate petty offenses to a magistrate results in an estimated 2,500 minor violations of federal law going unpunished each year for want of a forum.

sent with Briones at the pond when Briones allegedly cleaned up Stone and the car. Ybarra admitted his testimony on direct examination was a lie.

— Ybarra had told an investigator he saw Briones beating Stone over the head with a jack. Again, he admitted he had lied.

In final arguments, Garza, pounding the jury box rail for emphasis, concentrated most of his attack on the issue of Ybarra's credibility.

"I'm not trying to show the correct story. I don't know the correct story. I'm just trying to show that he lied," the court-appointed attorney said.

Garza said Ybarra's testimony is the crux of the case, because, without it, prosecutors have no evidence that an aggravated robbery was committed.

Discounting the fact that Briones was found drunk inside Stone's car a couple of hours after the alleged incident and the fact that Stone's watch was in the defendant's possession on Dec. 31, Garza argued that evidence, even if true,

Carter Loses Popularity

NEW YORK (AP) — For the first time, less than half the American people approve of President Carter's performance in the White House, according to an NBC poll.

Poll analysts said the people questioned found nothing specific Carter had done that they could praise, while they cited inflation, the Panama Canal treaties and the resignation of budget director Bert Lance as areas they disapproved of.

The network said only 46 per cent of the 1,600 persons polled said they approved of Carter's performance, down from 56 per cent in June and 60 per cent in February.

In addition, NBC said its poll showed the same decline in the South, where Carter's approval rate went from 66 per cent in August to 47 per cent this week.

An Associated Press poll, reported on Sept. 20, showed about a quarter of those questioned said that questions about Lance's business dealings and his subsequent resignation had undermined their confidence that Carter would keep his promise to maintain high standards.

Wholesale Prices Up

wholesale price index increased four-tenths of a per cent to 195.3. That means the average product that sold for $100 in 1967 now sells for $195.30.

The index is 5.7 per cent higher than it was a year ago.

The Carter administration predicted during the summer that improvements in food prices would reduce inflation to about five per cent in the last half of the year. Government economists expect inflation to be about six per cent next year.

Wholesale prices moderated during the summer, declining seven-tenths of one per cent in June and one-tenth of one per cent in July before rising one-tenth of one per cent in August.

The decline had been led by falling wholesale food prices, which dropped 11.9 per cent during the same period.

The Agriculture Department said last week that prices received by farmers declined one per cent from Aug. 15 to September 15, the fourth consecutive monthly decline.

The declining food prices, while showing up on supermarket shelves, are worrying farm officials who say farmers may stop growing some of their crops.

his neck and chest. He reportedly was treated by a school doctor, but apparently did not require hospital attention.

Reports indicate the alleged incident took place after Minor ordered Simpson and another student to leave the school cafeteria, where they were allegedly causing a disturbance.

Minor said Simpson, instead of leaving, loitered near the cafeteria. The coach said that when he took Simpson's arm to take him to the principal's office, the student became belligerent and cursed him, threatening to beat up the coach.

Minor told authorities that, once inside the office, the student began waving a finger in his face and flicking his nose.

The teacher said he told the student not to touch him again. According to Minor, Simpson ignored the order.

Minor said he then knocked Simpson's arm away, and that Simpson retaliated by attacking him with the razor blade.

Oil-Importing Nations Agree To Slash Purchases By 1985

PARIS (AP) — The United States and 18 other nations agreed today to limit their total imports of OPEC oil to 26 million barrels a day in 1985, about 20 per cent less than previous forecasts.

The agreement, reached at the end of a two-day meeting of the International Energy Agency, called for greater reliance on nuclear power, coal and other alternate energy sources.

"Unless present energy policies are strengthened, there is a serious risk that as early as the 1980s the world will not have sufficient oil and other forms of energy available," energy officials of the 19 nations said in a communique.

That would mean "severe economic, social and political consequences in all IEA countries and throughout the world," they said.

The 19 countries now import 22 million barrels of oil daily from members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — about two-thirds of world consumption. The agency forecast their imports would rise to 31 to 32 million barrels daily in 1985.

Under the plan, the United States would reduce its imports to 5.8 million barrels daily in 1985 from the present 8.2 million barrels and the other nations would hold their demand at roughly current levels.

European representatives at the meeting were skeptical, however, that the United States could uphold its part of the deal, which is based on President Carter's energy guidelines. They expressed fear that Congress would scuttle Carter's energy plan.

U.S. Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger endorsed the 26-million-barrel limit Wednesday and told other delegates here they might have no choice but to adhere to it. "There may be no more than 26 million barrels available to the IEA nations in 1985," he said.

The communique said nuclear power will be "a main and indispensable element in reducing oil imports, but added that nuclear development should be "consistent with the need to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons."

The communique said "many member countries" were determined to expand nuclear power but others "reserved their position."

The agency was set up on U.S. initiative after the 1973 oil embargo and subsequent price hikes that have quintupled the cost of petroleum. Members are Austria, Belgium, Britain, Canada, Denmark, West Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey and the United States.

Canadian energy minister Alastair Gillespie, chairman of the IEA governing board, said while all the ministers agreed on the need for developing nuclear energy, five of them raised questions as to whether they could fully support this notion. They said the reason was that the question of nuclear power was still under discussion in their nations and that no concrete policy had been set thus far.

The ministers were from Sweden, Denmark, the Netherlands, Norway and New Zealand.

Gillespie said that if the U.S. Congress scuttled President Carter's energy plan "it would have the gravest consequences. It would undermine the political will in other countries to deal with the energy crisis. It would be very difficult for other countries to adopt the stringent energy policies that are needed. They would ask if the U.S. doesn't do it, why should we?"

Graham Blames Mail For Woes

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Graham said Wednesday that "a sort of comedy of errors" — including a postal mixup — was responsible for his organization's lack of compliance with a Minnesota law involving financial disclosure.

He conceded that there was "an oversight on our part," but repeated earlier statements that the problem was being cleared up.

Authorities in Minnesota, headquarters of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, said last week that the group had not complied with a law requiring registration and annual reports of annuity plans sold in the state.

Dr. Graham, appearing on a television show, also said that religious organizations, which generally are not required by law to provide detailed information to the Internal Revenue Service on how they spend their money, will have to start giving public accountings of their finances.

"I think we're going to have to (have complete financial disclosure)," he said. "I think the mood of the country has changed." He also said that because of the recent growth of evangelical movements "there are some charlatans coming along" and the public has the right to be protected and warned.

Graham said his organization started selling annuities about four years ago in several states. He said Minnesota revised its law covering annuities in 1975. Authorities sent a letter to the law firm that handles the association's affairs, Graham said, but the letter went to an old address; the law firm had moved a year earlier.

"It was a sort of a comedy of errors," Graham said. "It was an oversight on our part and yet it was a postal problem as well..." He said the change in the law "was a little known thing. Our people should have been on top of it, but they weren't."

Graham said the organization voluntarily stopped selling annuities "the moment we learned about the law," adding that officials of the evangelistic association are meeting with Minnesota authorities this week to clear up the trouble.

The evangelist, whose association raises between $20 million and $25 million annually, also repeated earlier pledges to start providing a breakdown of the group's income and expenditures. He said the association "will certainly meet" Better Business Bureau standards for financial disclosure by charities "by the end of this year."

The bureau, on its "Give But Give Wisely" list of charities, has listed the Graham organization as failing to comply with standards on disclosure. The current BBB list includes 382 of the nation's approximately 250,000 tax-exempt organizations. One hundred thirteen are listed as complying with BBB standards.

Graham repeated earlier statements that there was nothing secret about the World Evangelism and Christian Education Fund, a Graham-affiliated group which is financing a world evangelism center at Wheaton College in Illinois. He said information on the $23 million fund was on file with the Internal Revenue Service. "You can go to Washington and find out the whole thing," Graham said.

Marine Captain To Visit Reese

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

He flew the "beans and bullets" transport route, dropped scouts in enemy territory and retrieved them under fire, and sat medic-alert to rush the wounded to hospitals.

Monday, Capt. Charlie Rodenberg of the Marine Corps will be on the Reese Air Force Base flight line to explain the capabilities of a Marine helicopter in modern warfare.

The CH53 will add its name, Sea Stallion, to other unusual names by which planes flying in for Reese's open house are known — planes such as the Thunderchief, Voodoo, Dragonfly, Hercules and Phantom.

Air Force, Navy, Marine, National Guard and Civil Air Patrol planes will be on the Reese flight line for visitors to examine.

The Sea Stallion, Rodenberg explained, is capable of unloading 38 fully armed marines anywhere in the world.

Fully armed, he added, means all the equipment needed on the ground with a single load limit of 14 tons. The aircraft loads from the rear, like the CH46 Sea Knight he flew in Vietnam.

And, like the Sea Knight, the Sea Stallion has three major missions in conflicts.

Resupply duty is the routine "beans and bullets" cargo which also brings in and takes out the mail for those in ground positions.

Med-evac means standing by just in case marines in known positions need air ambulances.

"If we have to launch, we can get medical aid in 15 minutes," Rodenberg said. Helicopter crews know all locations of marines in the combat zone, know exactly where to go for the wounded when called.

Reconnaissance duty entails dropping a scout team of about six marines into "an insecure area" and pulling them out when the scouting mission is completed.

Anytime a team is dropped, there is an alternate plan, briefed and ready, for extracting the team immediately should it be discovered by the enemy.

Rodenberg, a native of Old Ocean on the Gulf Coast and a graduate of Texas A & M, trained in the Army helicopter schools because that was all there was in 1968. He had a split tour of Vietnam "with the same gunship."

He spent most of his time on the base because there were "no liberty spots in Da Nang," a base that was "a pretty secure area" most of the time he spent there. He got plenty of sleep, despite rocket attacks, unless he flew night missions.

In 1972 he went to the Mediterranean to be part of the amphibious force, "a ready force just in case anything flares." It is there "to secure Americans," as in the case of the evacuation from Cyprus.

In 1974, the helicopter pilot transferred to jets, a "super way to fly."

He calls Lubbock Falls now while serving as recruiting officer for a district west from Wichita Falls and including the Oklahoma panhandle. Except for special times like the Monday open house at Reese, Rodenberg is in Lubbock only on Fridays and weekends.

Other times he is out in the district, set up with table and projector on some college campus, ready to answer any questions of a student wondering about employment after graduation.

A main problem with Marine recruiting in West Texas, he said, is that wherever there is a recruiting station there also is an Air Force base.

There is no problem, though, once a person begins talking seriously with Rodenberg.

The program — signing up as a freshman and starting longevity while continuing complete civilian status at school — sells itself, he said.

Besides, he added, "being a Marine is something you have to want to be."

That's the way it was with Rodenberg and the way it is with future officers attracted to the table where he sits with his "blue trousers with the red stripe down the side" ready to tell how it is with the 202-year-old U.S. Marines.

After the Reese open house, he will be getting busy to assist with the Marine Birthday Ball in Lubbock, which this year will include former as well as active area Marines.

Pancreas Transplanted

DALLAS (UPI) — A blind 22-year-old diabetic, who is the first person to undergo a pancreas transplant at Parkland Memorial Hospital, was doing well and his blood sugar level was lower Wednesday, doctors said.

Surgeons from the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School Wednesday performed the transplant on Dennis Hammer of Hubbard. Hammer, who already has a transplanted kidney, received a pancreas taken from a 37-year-old stroke victim who died early Wednesday.

Dr. Richard Dickerman said Hammer was doing well. He said the blind diabetic was considered a good candidate for the pancreas transplant because his system tolerated the previously transplanted kidney. Medical evidence has indicated pancreas transplants would correct the improper metabolism characteristic of diabetes.

Prior to 1976, however, only one patient survived as long as 47 months after a whole-organ pancreas transplant.

Dickerman said he and his associates have been experimenting with a new surgical technique which involves transplanting only half the donor organ onto an artificially created cul-de-sac on the recipient's intestine.

SEARCHING FOR CLUES — Dallas Fire Department divers search a water-filled gravel pit for clues about the body of Suzie Magee, a 12-year-old Denton student, was found there Tuesday. The girl had been missing since Sept. 25. (AP Laserphoto)

No Leads Reported In Death Of Girl

DALLAS (AP) — Authorities say they have no leads in the apparent abduction-slaying of 12-year-old Suzie Magee, who had written an essay about a kidnapping and slaying of a young girl.

The body of the Denton seventh grade honor student, who had been missing since Sept. 25, was found Tuesday floating in a water-filled gravel pit in a remote section of South Dallas.

Using dental records, officials identified the body Wednesday.

Authorities, awaiting results on further tests to determine how the girl died, declined to call the case officially a homicide. But detectives from Dallas and Denton, FBI agents and a Texas Ranger met Wednesday to exchange files and establish procedures for the case.

Suzie's father, Del Magee, said Wednesday that he was "very numb, but somewhat relieved at the confirmation."

The decomposed body was found Tuesday afternoon by two women fishing at the pit. The body was clad in blue jeans and a Dallas Cowboy T-shirt — the outfit Suzie was wearing when she was seen talking to a long-haired man at a Denton fast food restaurant Sept. 25.

Fire department divers searched Wednesday for almost three hours in the muddy water of the pit, but found no clues, police said.

Several days before the apparent abduction Suzie wrote an essay about the kidnapping-slaying of a girl she called Shelly.

Police and family members discounted the essay as coincidental and recalled that the girl also had written an essay called "Hello, I'm Suzie" in which she told of her happy, peaceful home life.

Suzie's parents own a health food restaurant in Denton near North Texas State University, about 45 miles north of Dallas. Students who frequent the restaurant joined the search for Suzie, and art students helped compile drawings of the missing girl.

Posters bearing the headline "Abducted" and Suzie's picture were posted throughout the town.

Suzie was doing the family washing at an automatic laundry near the fast food restaurant on the day she disappeared.

Rally Slated In Amarillo

SPRINGFIELD, Colo. (AP) — An American Agriculture tractor caravan is to converge on Amarillo Oct. 16 to demonstrate the militant farm organization's solidarity — and to show that farmers mean business when they say they will strike for better economic conditions.

Don Self, a spokesman for the organization formed about three weeks ago in this southeastern Colorado farm community, said the movement wants between 13,000 and 15,000 farmers on hand for a rally at the Amarillo Tri-State Fairgrounds.

Farmers from the Lamar, Springfield and Walsh areas in Colorado will drive tractors to the meeting, and the movement's 30 branch offices across the nation will be urged to send representatives, he said.

Amarillo is about 165 miles away, "a-bout like going from here to Pueblo," Self said.

He was one of more than 50 farmers who drove tractors from Springfield to Pueblo two weeks ago to a meeting with Agriculture Secretary Robert Bergland.

A similar caravan is scheduled for Denver Oct. 22 when President Carter is to stop over for several hours en route to California.

"We've gotten clearance from the Texas Highway Patrol and the City of Amarillo to do it," he said.

"We're just trying to get a big group together to show that we can get a mass movement going."

Self said the rally should eliminate "any remaining skeptics that feel farmers and ranchers cannot unite."

A program is scheduled to begin at the Fairgrounds Coliseum at 2 p.m. on Oct. 14, Self said. He said a schedule of speakers will be released later.

Self was critical of remarks made by the president of the American Farm Bureau Wednesday in Wichita, Kan.

Allan Grant said he believes the farmers' strike proposal would have "little effect," and if demands for parity prices for farm products were met, the U.S. would "price itself out of foreign markets."

American Agriculture wants to force Congress to raise farm support prices and insure stability in foreign and domestic markets. The strike would stop all planting and selling of crops, and halting purchases of all but essential items.

While the movement's motives were sincere, Grant said, "I don't think it will be very effective."

Self said Farm Bureau officials have been asked for support, but has received very little.

"The Farm Bureau never did stand up for 100 per cent of parity anyway," Self said. "But we're after them. I am a member and I told them they have until Dec 14. If they don't back us by then we will

Bowl Policy Slated For Discussion

The Texas Tech Board of Regents will meet in regular session Friday to discuss, among other things, the policy governing Tech's participation in bowl games and increasing the budget for construction at the School of Medicine.

According to Athletic Director J T King, no major changes are expected in the procedure for Tech's acceptance of football bowl bids. However, other details such as who would travel in the official party to a bowl game will be discussed.

The regents also will discuss increasing the project budget for the basement and fifth floors of Pod B in the medical school. Construction estimates originally were placed at $3.66 million, but lowest bids have reached almost $4.8 million.

Officials say the increase is due to the increased cost of construction, inflation, the increased complexity of the area to be constructed and cost estimates which were too low.

In other medical school business, the board will consider affiliation with the Sierra Medical Center Hospital in El Paso for training of undergraduate and postgraduate medical students; continuation of concession contracts with Texas Tech Specialties; procedures for advertising for bids on certain construction contracts; amendment of the contract with El Paso County Hospital District to provide additional space; and continuation of an agreement for administration of a grant for the family medicine residency training program.

Under university affairs, regents will hear an analysis of investment alternatives for university funds, as well as consider acceptance dates for the Texas Tech Bookstore renovation, Indiana Avenue curb, gutter and paving work, and Jones Stadium seating and Astroturf.

Acceptance of bids and the awarding of a contract for a storage warehouse will be considered, as will installation of a receiving antenna for satellite telecasting to KTXU and granting of an easement for roadway lighting for Indiana Avenue from 4th Street to Clovis Road.

The board is expected to meet in executive session before beginning regular business.

—Women And Health—

BY DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, M.D.
ARLINGTON, Va. — (NEA) — A revolution is taking place in the American family. The time is now past when it can be assumed that the husband is the only breadwinner, and the wife stays at home, keeps the house and rears the children.

The latest figures show that 60 per cent of mothers with children under 18 are working, and that 40 per cent of these mothers have children under six years of age. This adds up to a total of 27 million children under 18, including six million children under six, who live in families where both mother and father go out to work every day.

American women have always worked. But in the past the chores at home were the essential job, and only those women at the bottom of the economic ladder went out to work.

Now women at all economic levels have jobs outside the home. In fact, to enjoy the standard of living a family might like today, a wife often needs to replace no-longer-existing home duties with a paid job. As one little girl put it: "In our house Daddy makes the bread and butter and Mommy makes the jelly."

The problems of women at work increase dramatically when there are children involved. Despite the wonders of technology, disposable diapers and prepared foods, caring for a young child cannot be automated. It is a human job — 24 hours a day.

Even if a young mother decides to stay at home to care for her child, she may find herself ill-equipped for the sudden change of pace in the home job. She finds herself isolated in her own home with an enormous amount of work and without the freedom and added income of her before-children job. Loneliness, as well as the 24-hour vigil, may get many a young mother down.

To cope adequately with an infant and a young toddler, a woman needs inner peace. Without it she is apt to take out her frustrations in irritation with her child, which makes matter worse. A jumpy, nervous woman creates a jumpy, irritable child.

A woman who finds herself in this state of mind should take the problem seriously. It is advisable for her to talk the matter over with her husband, with the pediatrician, with her own physician or with a trusted friend, in order to find a solution that will fit her needs.

This might entail some regular babysitting that would give her regular free time, or perhaps sharing more of the child care responsibilities with her husband, or an earlier return to part or full-time employment, or, if necessary, personal counseling to allay her own anxieties about being a mother. Life with a young child can be a beautiful experience, one that ought to be fully enjoyed, not simply endured.

Probably the most important question facing a mother who decides to work is adequate child care. Public day care centers exist in many areas of the country. There are approximately 21,000 such centers with places for about three-quarter million children. There are, however, six million children under the age of six in need of care, and many millions of older children as well.

Some of these centers are excellent, but many are hardly more than parking places for children. It is the responsibility of each mother and father to find adequate care for their child. This may be done in many different ways. Once in a while, a grandmother or other family member is available. More often it is a woman with children of her own who will take on an extra child or two.

When good care can be found, children thrive. A child can accept care from someone besides its own parents if that person is warm, loving and competent. We know that children accepted the care of various members of the extended family — including grandmothers, aunts, cousins — that was typical in households before modern times. In fact, children are probably better off with horizons and emotional attachments that extend beyond their own homes.

Although the vast majority of working mothers still carry the major responsibility for home and children, a small but growing number of men now share in this job.

To successfully handle both work and family chores, there are three requirements:

1. A strong constitution. A working mother and father need vim and vigor in the evenings to enjoy their children, to feed them, talk to them, play with them. It is the quality, not quantity, of time spent with a child that is important.

2. Extra income. Hopefully, with two working parents, a family can afford to hire some housekeeping help, so that parents do not use previous time and energy cleaning or doing laundry.

3. Mutual understanding. The husband of a working woman needs to respect his wife's job. A man who feels denigrated because "his wife works" is likely to belittle her efforts and undermine her self-esteem. Both husband and wife must support each other's efforts in this mutual endeavor, keeping in mind that theirs is something of a pioneering effort.

Looking forward to the future, it is clear that women will continue to expect full professional lives as well as a home life.

Yet, men and women have children together. Fortunately, we are beginning to see changes in attitudes that are allowing men and women to share fully the essential task of child rearing. More changes are needed — changes in public attitude, in the availability of child care and in regulation of the work force — to allow and encourage men and women to have both satisfying jobs and a warm, loving, family life.

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
(c) 1977 by Chicago Tribune

In his Bols Bridge Tips, Pedro Paulo Assumpcao of Brazil alerted us to the overwhelming importance of timing. Judging by his play of this hand, declarer never read that sage advice.

Despite his weak doubleton, North elected to open one no trump to save himself rebid problems. When his partner forced with three spades, North was close to a cue-bid to show a maximum hand with support. However, he felt he had too much in clubs for that action, so he contented himself with a simple raise. But when South showed slam interest by cue-bidding, North took all the strain off his partner by jumping to slam — a move justified by the fact that he had first- or second-round control of the other side suits.

Declarer won the club lead in dummy, then cashed the queen and ace of spades. When West showed up with a trump trick, declarer was in trouble. He cashed two high diamonds and ruffed a diamond, but the queen did not drop. Declarer played off his high clubs, discarding all his hearts. West ruffed the last club and, in the fullness of time, declarer lost a trick to the queen of diamonds for down one.

The contract is cold if trumps break 3-2, so declarer should see what he can do if they split 4-1. Correct technique is to lead a trump to the ace at trick two and then a trump back to the queen. If trumps break, declarer can draw the last trump and concede a heart, for he can get two diamond discards on the high clubs.

When East shows out on the second trump, declarer has a second string to his bow — the diamond finesse. When a diamond to the jack wins, declarer cashes the ace of diamonds and ruffs a diamond in dummy. Now he takes the high clubs, discarding his hearts.

West can ruff the fourth club, but by now declarer has gotten rid of all of his side-suit losers. He loses only a trump trick to make his contract.

PICADILLO

1 pound ground chuck beef
1 large onion, finely chopped
14-ounce can plum tomatoes with juice added
3 tbsps. chili powder
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. ground cinnamon
¼ tsp. ground cumin
½ cup raisins plumped in ¼ cup dry red wine
Diced, roasted unblanched almonds

In a large, heavy, hot skillet cook the beef and onion, crumbling with a fork, until meat loses its red color. Stir in the remaining ingredients, except the almonds; cover and simmer until the flavors blend and the consistency is one you like. Serve over rice and pass the almonds. (The large amount of chili powder used gives really hot, spicy flavor and counteracts the sweetness of the raisins.) Makes 4 generous servings.

Cooking School Prepares Japanese Women

TOKYO (AP) — The heat of dozens of cooking fires in the smoke-filled room brought beads of perspiration to the faces of 150 young women as they stirred a fried rice dish in a Tokyo cooking school.

Teachers in white uniforms at one end of the room gave instructions over microphones and an occasional tinkle of broken glass or screech of dismay could be heard over the general din.

Gradually the noise died down as the tables of six girls each finished cooking and sat down to eat. The smoke filtered out of the room and the heat abated a little, but the aproned figures were too tired for much conversation.

They sipped green tea and quietly ate the meal that most had cooked for the first time.

The scene takes place 24 times a week throughout the year at the Tokyo branch of the Masaru Doi Cooking School, one of the largest in Japan.

Cooking schools here, unlike Cordon Bleu or La Varenne, are not the place for foreign visitors to pick up some of the spice of the Orient.

They are numerous — thousands throughout the country — crowded with mostly young girls, and taught only in Japanese. It takes many weeks of lessons to accumulate enough knowledge to put together a simple Japanese meal.

The intricacies of Japanese cuisine are seldom explored outside Japan. But for women here, it is essential to know how many seconds to leave dried bonito flakes in boiling water to prepare a basic soup stock, how to clean fish or choose an octopus.

A year of weekly cooking lessons is nearly a prerequisite for marriage, like the arts of tea ceremony or flower arrangement.

Doi has one school in Tokyo, one in Kobe and five in Osaka, with a total enrollment of about 20,000. A typical lesson begins with a lecture demonstration of a complete meal, usually soup, entree and salad or side dish.

Television monitors are hung from the ceiling throughout the room. After the lecture, the students divide into groups of six to cook the meal, while a group of instructors wanders about the room to check on their progress. General directions are given over a microphone.

Doi gives two reasons for the popularity of cooking schools in Japan. One is that the Japanese diet is one of the most varied in the world, with Chinese, Japanese and Western dishes equally popular.

"In other countries, when people want to have Chinese food, they go out to a restaurant, but in Japan we want to turn everything into home cooking, so lessons are necessary," he said.

Another reason is that cooking is not being passed on from generation to generation.

"During the war (World War II) there was very little to eat and what there was, wasn't delicious," he said.

"So a whole generation could not pass on their cooking traditions to their daughters. Of course, there still are many homes where this is done, but older people only know how to cook fish and not meat, which is popular among the young today."

And Japanese cooking, he said, is difficult.

"It is the kind of cuisine that requires we be able to taste each ingredient," he said. "Western food is its sauce, Chinese food is its mixture, but Japanese food is simply the thing we are serving."

Japanese food continues to be a combination of the old and new, East and West. Fried bean curd in soy sauce goes back to the beginning of Japanese history. The regular beginners' course at the Doi School offers Chinese, Western and Japanese cuisine, going from a Chinese sweet and sour pork dish one week to spaghetti the next.

much heat that the utensils became too hot to pick up, not to mention wilting the lettuce. Now television technology is much improved, he added. The way Doi sees it, cooking is television's longest-running program.

Although Doi was taught cooking by his mother, he does not think men should cook and does not admit male students to his classes.

"For men, cooking is all right for leisure, but traditionally in Japan men were not even allowed in the kitchen. Even today many women only look after the home while their husbands go out to work. This is an old custom.

"So for the housewife, cooking is her biggest and most important work, the thing that has the most value. Men should not take this away from her. When men cook, they just use a lot of ingredients and don't clean up afterward."

FEMINITY — Femininity appeals to the woman with fashion on her mind in this provocative little dress. Young and fresh as a daisy, there is no age limit to the perfection of femininity in this challis print.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl and I don't care if I ever see my 15th birthday. I am 5 foot 9 and weight 188 pounds.

I hate being taller than all the boys my age. People say, "Wait a few years, they'll grow," but what is a girl suppose to do in the meantime?

I know I am too fat, but I don't care. I'm so tall I haven't a chance with a boy anyway, so I might as well eat and enjoy myself.

I am so mixed up and have made such a mess of myself. I wish I were dead. Is there any hope for me?

Too Tall

Dear Too Tall: A girl who asks, "Is there any hope for me?" hopes with all her heart that there is. You have two of the most precious gifts in the world — youth and health — and you say you wish you were dead. I don't buy that. Your letter tells me you want to live!

Tell your parents you want to see a doctor for a physical checkup and a sensible diet. Go and heed his advice. It won't be easy, but you can do it if you try hard enough.

Once you've taken off that excess weight, you'll have a new respect for yourself and like yourself better. And I promise you that you'll be well on the road to enjoying life and living it more fully.

DEAR ABBY: My cousin (I'll call her "Carol") is being married soon, and because of financial circumstances, she has invited only the members of her immediate family to the wedding. (Since cousins are not considered "immediate family," I am not invited.)

Director Announced By Bankers' Group

WASHINGTON (AP) — Peter M. Williams was recently promoted to the newly-created position of senior director, chief of operations of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America.

Williams will be the MBA's chief operating official, responsible for coordinating and directing staff activities.

Peter E. Kaplan was recently named senior director of the management services department of the MBA.

Carol hinted to me that I should give her a bridal shower and invite all her friends.

Would it be proper to ask girls to a shower that are not invited to the wedding?

Carol's Cousin

Dear Cousin: Nowhere is it written that everyone who participates in a bridal shower is entitled to an invitation to the wedding. Or because someone "hinted," you have to do her bidding.

DEAR ABBY: While vacationing recently, my husband and I stayed at a lovely motor inn. When we left I took some ashtrays and glasses. These things had the name of the inn on them, and I thought they'd make nice souvenirs.

I was under the impression that guests are expected to take such things as souvenirs, and the cost of the items is built into the price of the room. My husband says I am wrong.

Why then would they have their name on everything if not to advertise? Are guests expected to take souvenirs? Thief or Collector?

Dear Thief: I would advise against taking anything. Before checking out, ask the manager for a souvenir and he'll either sell — or give you one.

U.S. Achieves Dominance In Space Technology

By AL ROSSITER JR.
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States enters the third decade of the age of space from a position of primacy it hardly dreamed of attaining 20 years ago. It has sent men to the moon, kept men in orbit for as long as 12 weeks, established still-working observatories on Mars and is alone in exploring the farthest reaches of the solar system. America's civilian scientists and engineers have led the world in the development of communications satellites, weather-watching spacecraft and satellites to survey the Earth's resources. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration, backbone of the nation's space expertise, now is developing a combination airplane and spaceship that promises to revolutionize the way man operates in orbit in the next decade of the space age. That rocket plane is the space shuttle now making test flights from the back of a carrier plane to a gliding landing on a desert runway of Edwards Air Force Base in California. The shuttle, set to make its maiden flight into space from Cape Canaveral in March, 1979, will be a transport hauling men, women and satellites to and from orbit with almost airline regularity. Unlike the space machinery of the past two decades, virtually everything used by the shuttle will be reusable except for a huge exterior fuel tank that will be discarded after every climb to orbit. The shuttle is the key to America's future in space. It also will play an important role in the space programs of other nations. It will carry foreign satellites in orbit, but more importantly, it will provide the orbital platform for a laboratory called Spacelab that is being built by the 10-nation European Space Agency. The first Spacelab is to go up in a shuttle in 1980 and a European scientist will be one of the five people aboard. By the mid-1980s, NASA expects to have five shuttles, flying them to and from orbit at the rate of one every week or two. Not only will the shuttle be carrying satellites in and out of orbit, but it will be lofting automated craft with special rocket units to propel them beyond the grasp of Earth's gravity to the planets. The nation's planetary exploration program received a major boost from the successful landings of two Viking robots on Mars last year. Budget restrictions, however, are likely to delay an attempt to land roving vehicles on the red planet until the second half of the next decade. The United States recently launched two Voyager television craft to explore

Jupiter, Saturn and possibly Uranus and Neptune during the next 12 years. Next year, NASA will send two spacecraft to Venus to orbit the cloud-shrouded planet and examine its dense atmosphere with four instrumented probes. In late 1981 or early 1982, NASA will launch an advanced ship that will orbit flight. President John Kennedy sent a special message to Congress on "urgent national needs." He spoke of space and said:

"Now is the time to take longer strides, time for a great new American enterprise, time for this nation to take a clearly leading role in space achievement, which in many ways may hold the key to our future on Earth ...

"I believe this nation should commit itself to achieving the goal, before this decade is out, of landing a man on the moon and returning him safely to Earth. No single space project in this period will be more impressive to mankind, or more important for the long-range exploration of space; and none will be so difficult or expensive to accomplish."

After John Glenn and Scott Carpenter had carried out orbital missions, Kennedy publicly reaffirmed the nation's desire to "become the world's leading space-faring nation."

The road to the moon was indeed difficult, and required 10 two-man Gemini flights to lay the groundwork for Apollo operations. And then the moon effort was set back by the deaths of three Apollo 1 astronauts in a ground fire at what then was called Cape Kennedy in 1967.

But the problems were corrected. During the week of Christmas in 1968, three Americans circled the moon in the Apollo 8 spaceship. Then on July 20, 1969, Neil Armstrong and Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin landed a four-legged craft called Eagle on the moon's Sea of Tranquility to become the first humans to set foot on the moon.

The Apollo project marked the turning point in the nation's effort to become the best in space. The early years of the space age saw the United States constantly trying to catch up with Soviet space feats. America had failed to orbit the first satellite and it failed to place the first human in space. Finally Alan Shepard rode the little Mercury capsule on a successful up and down flight in May, 1961, that lasted only 15 minutes. The success was tempered by the fact that Russia's Yuri Gagarin had done even better a month earlier when he orbited the Earth in a ship named Vostok.

Twenty days after Shepard's suborbital

NASA followed Apollo with the Skylab space station project that added another dimension to the nation's experience in space.

Nine astronauts in teams of three lived and worked aboard the big orbiting laboratory for a total of 24 weeks — in missions lasting four, eight and 12 weeks in 1973 and early 1974. The longest set a record which still stands.

once again in 1975 when three Americans rendezvoused and linked up in orbit with two Soviets in the Apollo-Soyuz mission that brought the two nations' manned space programs together for the first time.

More cooperative missions are expected in the future with the next likely to come in 1981 or 1982 when an American space shuttle meets a Soviet Salyut space station in orbit.

Analysis

Jupiter and probe its colorful atmosphere.

Despite its successes with planetary exploration, the space agency has no plans to send men to the planets. Officials do not expect to attempt any such mission before the year 2000. The technology to carry out such an expedition is available, but not the money.

There are not even any plans to return Americans to the moon. Lunar exploration has taken a back seat to more practical space missions closer to home and, as a sign of the times, five lunar science stations left behind by Apollo astronauts have just been shut down to save $2 million a year.

Birth Of Space Age Recalled By Texan

By JOSEPH L. GALLOWAY
MOSCOW (UPI) — The two-foot-long metal tube was sunk slightly in the earth and propped up by sticks. Its innards were stuffed with the best souped-up magnesium-based gunpowder two kids could concoct, and its nose was aimed into a darkening South Texas sky. Only weeks before, Oct. 4, 1957, the Soviet Union had launched the world's first satellite into orbit, and now a patriotic American answer was ready to roar out of the Galloway backyard in Refugio, Texas.

There was drama aplenty, but no countdown. Weeks of experiments had taught us that it was impossible to estimate the burn time of the fuse — and anyway running interferes with counting.

I stuck a big kitchen match to the powder trail, and as it sputtered and flared toward the rocket, my pal Mike McGill and I sprinted 20 yards and dived behind an upended wheelbarrow.

The fire reached the tail of the dull metal cylinder and ate its way inside. A moment of silence, just enough to rouse fears of another failure, and then came the muted roar and the rocket began rising slowly into the air on a cloud of choking smoke.

As it climbed, it tilted southward toward the Brummet house next door — still moving at 30 feet of altitude, but now on a horizontal plane.

McGuill just had time to blurt out, "Joe, we're in trouble!" — a totally unnecessary observation — when our erratic rocket exploded in a ball of flame with a window-cracking roar.

The garage door slammed open and my father was peering through the clouds of smoke. "What the — is going on here?" he wondered.

Another scientific career was nipped in the bud in that instant — and another small American town had just undergone its baptism of rocket fire in the wake of the Sputnik.

Sputnik fever gripped us all that fall of 1957. We heard the strange beep-beep broadcast on the radio, and consulted the papers for optimum times to get cricks in our necks peering fruitlessly into midnight skies for a sight of the thing.

At schools across the land, moribund science clubs came to life, sprouting rocket research sections which would incinerate legions of mice, hamsters and lizards.

In Refugio, one such group crowned its career with the launch of a three-stage rocket which blasted an otherwise unsuspecting horned toad to an altitude in excess of 1,500 feet.

A small problem in deployment of the reentry parachute doomed the toad to a very abrupt and fatal landing in the cowpasture launch site, which became popular in the wake of the Great Backyard Disaster.

The Backyard Disaster had brought out dozens of neighbors who thought our hot water heater had exploded. It also brought a visit from a deputy sheriff, who strongly recommended empty cowpastures over city backyards for such idiosyncrasy.

Otherwise normal kids were wearing skidules on their belts at Refugio High and teachers of advanced math, previously scorned, found themselves almost as popular as football coaches. America had found a cause, a purpose, as the 1950s moved toward their close — catching the Russians in space and restoring the national reputation for greatness.

But the search for greatness would move forward without me or Mike McGill.

We turned to girls and beer to drown the shame of the Great Backyard Disaster.

Council Eyes Affirmative Action Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A prestigious academic council has suggested a two-tier process of determining admissions to graduate schools to assure minority applicants are not discriminated against, but unqualified students are rejected.

The plan was proposed by the Carnegie Council on Policy Studies in Higher Education. The council, based in Berkeley, Calif., is made up of 12 professors and specialists in education.

The proposal calls for graduate schools first to screen out all applicants who cannot meet minimum academic standards determined by grades and test scores.

"Minimal standards should be set higher than is necessary" to assure that those in the pool of potential students are able to handle the work, the report said.

YOU COULD BE THE WINNER IN YOUR AREA OF ONE OF THESE SIX FABULOUS TRIPS.

Man Uses Ad In Newspaper To Propose

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — Dennis Taylor didn't ask his girlfriend to marry him. He let her read about it in the newspaper. Taylor, 38, of Albany, Ore., placed a short, two-column display advertisement in two Oregon papers last Thursday for $28. The ads read: "Eda Kay, Will You Marry Me? Den."

Eda Kay Clemons, 32, a high school teacher in Monmouth-Independence kept Taylor waiting almost a day before she found the newspaper proposal, and she found it then only after a friend called. The friend told her to read the paper from cover to cover and she did, discovering the ad.

The surprised Miss Clemons said she didn't say yes to the proposal — "I said when?"

Secretary Takes Tot To Office

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Visitors to California Assemblyman John Vasconcellos' office in the state Capitol are careful not to trip over the toys or gape at the baby crawling over the lawbooks.

The tyke belongs to Susan Lange, Vasconcellos' administrative assistant, who refuses to leave her 13-month-old daughter, Sierra, with a babysitter. So, she brings her to work.

"Some people thought it was unfair to the baby and some said it was inappropriate because this is a place of business, but I'd rather have her with me than with a babysitter," she said.

Ms. Lange, who has worked with Vasconcellos for 5 1/2 years, said she asked her boss about the unusual arrangement and he decided to try it out.

"He really stuck his neck out on this one," she said. "He could have gotten a lot of hassle from his constituents."

Mrs. Lange said she works an extra two hours by arriving at work early and by-passing lunch to compensate for the time she takes to care for Sierra.

"This way, the taxpayers can't say I'm taking their money for babysitting, because skipping lunch adds extra hours to my day," she said.

"Having Sierra here has been a wonderful experience for me," said secretary Dolores Saint. "It's been so long since I've seen a little one grow up, and it's nice to know that one of the fringe benefits of coming to work is getting hugs and kisses."

Mrs. Lange, whose husband is a student, tests parents should include their children more in day-to-day activities.

"Our society has really excluded children from normal life," she said. "They're supposed to be seen and not heard."

She said Sierra is so accustomed to the office it even falls her to sleep. Sierra naps in a baby carrier on her mother's desk.

"The telephone could be ringing off the wall and she'll never wake up," she said.

Besides paving the way for a close mother-daughter relationship, Mrs. Lange thinks outsiders get some good from the arrangement.

DR. LAMB

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I read a column of yours about the reader whose nose turned red. My nose has gradually turned red but it has no enlarged veins. I stopped using cleansing cream, but now I would like to know if it is all right to use Crisco vegetable shortening as a cleansing cream. I use cold creams or baby oil as a night cream and a face lotion under my makeup during the day.

Should I stop using these also? I am 65 with very dry skin and will do what you say.

DEAR READER — One of the things the skin does as it gets older is to stop producing as much oil from the sebaceous glands and it gets dry. Unfortunately the nose and sometimes the forehead may even get more oily.

The red nose with dilated blood vessels is called rosacea or acne rosacea. I am sorry to say that we do not know what causes it, but we do know it can be aggravated by anything that increases flushing of the skin. This includes heat, saunas, some facial packs, medicines that are used for increasing the circulation, alcohol, wines, spices and caffeinated beverages such as coffee, tea and colas.

If you have ever eaten a spicy meal you may have broken out in a sweat later. The spices may cause the face to flush and it is this action that leads to their aggravating acne rosacea. Many people do not realize that coffee, tea, and spices are factors in this disorder, but have only heard that it is caused by drinking alcoholic beverages. I might add it occurs to many people who have never had a drop of alcohol in their lives.

Some dermatologists give a course of tetracycline antibiotics for it. The treatment takes about four weeks before noticeable improvement is seen.

While this is not the same condition that we see with simple acne with blackheads, whiteheads and pimples, it is probably best to avoid greasy substances on the skin. This includes the Crisco, vegetable oils of all types and greasy face lotions. If you have very dry skin why not use a very small amount of baby oil just over the dry areas and be careful not to get it on your nose. After you have applied it, then carefully wipe it off and only a thin film will remain. That should be enough to help the skin stay moisturized.

Also, most cosmetics are really hard on the skin. They look nice but when the show is over carefully clean your entire face with a good soap and water and then use your baby oil on the dry areas only.

Small veins in the nose can often be treated with electrolysis. The small electric current collapses them. You would need to ask a dermatologist about this. If the nose is enlarged from the acne rosacea — and it can become quite disfigured — cosmetic surgery is sometimes necessary to improve the appearance and stop the process.

North Koreans Seek Settlement

By ROBERT CRABBE
TOKYO (UPI) — North Korea, America's unrelenting enemy in Asia for a generation, is openly asking the United States to come to the bargaining table to settle the 1950-53 Korean War.

The campaign for face-to-face talks was carried directly to the U.S. public Sept. 28 by North Korean Foreign Minister Ho Nam, in an interview with United Press International.

Expressing hope that "abnormal and hostile" relations between the two countries could be eased, Ho said North Ko-

Commission Slates Hearing On Request

AUSTIN (UPI) — The Texas Railroad Commission has scheduled a hearing Nov. 9 on a request by Exxon Corp., for permission to utilize two oil fields in Montgomery County.

Exxon requested the approval for the Conroe and Cockfield Upper fields. The Conroe field is one of the largest oil producing fields in the nation, and is the seventh most productive in Texas. By Jan. 1 of this year, it had produced 575 million barrels of oil in its 45-year of production.

rea already had declared its intention to enter into negotiations with the United States for a peace agreement.

"But there was no response from the United States," he added.

The North Korean campaign actually was launched in 1974 in a speech Ho made before the Pyongyang parliament, and was forwarded by the North Korean government to the U.S. Congress in the form of a letter.

However, it was not until the Carter administration that the North Koreans began to push the idea seriously.

There is one catch in Ho's offer that has made it unacceptable to the U.S. State Department, and both the Ford and Carter Administrations.

The 53-year-old North Korean foreign minister insists that only the United States and North Korea do the talking. The Carter Administration responded to Ho by repeating the longstanding U.S. position that South Korea also must be at the bargaining table.

Even on that point Ho showed a little flexibility. Later on Sept. 28 he told Japan's Kyodo news agency that inclusion of the South Koreans was something that could be "studied" after the United States and North Korea began talking.

North Korea's signals to Washington started in January, with the inauguration of Carter, when the official KCNA news agency abruptly dropped the abusive language it had been using against high American officials.

KCNA's attacks on the Ford Administration were cast in words seldom heard in international news broadcasting. Ford himself was called a "wicked and vicious rascal." At various times, KCNA used the epithet "b....." for James Schlesinger and Donald Rumsfeld, Ford's two defense secretaries.

Its attacks on former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger were on a level that made them unreportable in the U.S. news media.

Ford incurred North Korea's special hatred by visiting South Korea shortly after his inauguration, and personally pledging support to South Korean President Park Chung Hee.

The North Korean news outlets criticize Carter for the slow pace of his program to withdraw U.S. ground troops from South Korea. But the personal abuse is gone.

North Korea has used two intermediaries this year to notify the White House of its desire for negotiations.

One was President Omar Bongo of Gabon, chairman of the Organization for African Unity. Bongo visited Pyongyang in May, and later sent Carter a letter on what he heard at the time from North Korea's President Kim Il Sung.

The other was Yugoslav President Tito, who was in Pyongyang in late August. He is reported to have received a letter from Carter before the visit, setting forth the American position on the Korean question.

The content of what Kim said to Tito was relayed to the White House in late September by Yugoslav Vice President Edvard Kardej.

Ho's latest moves have been shrewdly timed to take advantage of South Korea's difficulties with the United States over the alleged bribery of U.S. Congressmen by wealthy South Koreans.

Spanish Poet Awarded Nobel Literature Prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The 1977 Nobel Prize for Literature was awarded today to Vicente Aleixandre, a surrealist poet and for many years a tubercular recluse who survived the civil war to become one of Spain's most respected literary voices.

Aleixandre, 79, was cited by the Swedish Academy of Letters "for a creative poetic writing, which, with roots in the traditions of Spanish lyric verse and in modern currents, illuminates man's condition in the cosmos and in present-day society."

The academy's choice of Aleixandre came as a surprise because he is relatively unknown outside his homeland, though his work has been translated into English, German, French and other languages.

In winning the prize, the elderly Spaniard bettered such noted authors as Britain's Doris Lessing, West Germany's Gunther Grass, Turkey's Yasar Kemal and Colombia's Gabriel Garcia Marquez, all of whom had been mentioned prominently as front-runners.

Academy Secretary Lars Gyllensten admitted that Aleixandre "is not much known in our parts."

But, Gyllensten said, "The purpose of the Nobel prize is not to declare the current literary champion of the world. That would be an impossible task."

"I believe time has been working for him and his outlook should attract modern man, the way he sees man's place in the world as a whole, and his opposition against violence and oppression," he said.

The prize this year carries a cash award of $145,000.

Last year's literature laureate was American novelist Saul Bellow. The last Spaniard to win the literature prize was J.R. Jimenez in 1956, a post-civil war exile residing in Puerto Rico.

Aleixandre, born in Seville and now a resident of Madrid, was a member of Spain's famous "1927 Generation" of authors, a group of about 25 writers whose foremost representative was Federico Garcia Lorca.

They were surrealists who also were influenced by the Spanish "Golden Age" of the 16th and 17th centuries and by popular writing.

Garcia Lorca, one of Spain's leading men of letters of the time, was executed by the right-wing nationalists of Gen. Francisco Franco at the beginning of the civil war in 1936, and other members of the school scattered over Spain and abroad.

Although he, too, considered himself a Franco opponent, Aleixandre remained in Spain through force of circumstance, not least the tuberculosis he had suffered since school days. At times he lived a lonely and isolated life, but gradually he became a key figure for the young post-war poets of Spain. He has been a member of the Spanish Academy since 1949.

Though his work is often characterized as pessimistic, it also is filled with recollections of a happy childhood and the scenic beauty of Spain's southern Sun Coast, where Aleixandre grew up.

He went to school in Madrid and after university taught at commercial college and wrote for financial magazines.

At the same time he began to study literature. Kidney tuberculosis soon forced him into long periods of convalescence in the country, away from Madrid and current events, quietly preparing his poetic debut.

He first gained notice with the poems "Ambito" in 1928, followed by "Espadas como Labios" ("Swords as Lips") in 1932. Two years later he was awarded Spain's top literary prize.

In 1935, shortly before the civil war, Aleixandre's "La Destrucion o el Amor" ("Destruction or Love") was published in Spain, and later the same year "Pasion de la Tierra" ("Passion of the Earth") in Mexico. Both works were carefully censored free verse, the latter changing to prose poems.

His later production includes a 1944 collection "Ombra del Paraiso" ("The Shadow of Paradise"); "Nacimiento Ultimo" ("Final Birth") in 1953; "Historia del Corazon" ("History of the Heart") in 1954; "En un Vasto Dominio" ("In a Vast Dominion") in 1962; "Poemas de la Consumacion" ("Poems about Perfection") in 1968, and, most recently, "Dialogos del Conocimiento" ("Dialogues of Insight") in 1974.

In those works Aleixandre addresses himself more directly to the reader than before and more clearly expresses his humanism, an academy statement noted.

Jorge Luis Borges, Argentina's best-known author and himself considered a possibility for this year's prize, said the selection of Aleixandre was "very good news."

"Aleixandre is an excellent poet. I am very pleased," Borges said.

On Wednesday the 18-member academy had suddenly disclosed that the winner of the literature prize would be the first awarded this year and would be announced within 24 hours, breaking long tradition. The literature prize in the past usually was announced after other Nobel prizes.

Germany Visit Set For 1978

BONN, West Germany (AP) — President Carter, who embarks on a four-continent odyssey next month that does not include Germany, will visit Bonn and West Berlin in 1978, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt said today.

Schmidt made the disclosure in the Bundestag, West Germany's parliament, after an opposition politician asked whether Carter's failure to include Bonn on his itinerary was a sign of U.S.-German tension.

The American president leaves Nov. 22 on an 11-day, 24,000-mile journey to eight countries in South America, Asia, Europe and Africa.

European stops on the schedule include France, Poland and Belgium.

Schmidt also said the visit by British Prime Minister James Callaghan, which was called off last month because of the terrorist kidnaping of industrialist Hans-Martin Schleyer, had been rescheduled for Oct. 18.

CHECKING REHABILITATION — President Carter shook hands with an unidentified tenant of a tenement in the Bronx borough of New York during the President's unscheduled visit to the blighted area Wednesday morning. ## Carter Offers Abraham Beame Chairmanship Of Commission

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter has offered outgoing Mayor Abraham Beame, his first major supporter here, a job as chairman of a federal commission. Beame says he's "thinking very seriously about it."

The job offer, disclosed late Wednesday before the President left for Washington after a two-day visit here, is the chairmanship of the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations. The post carries no salary, but pays $50 a day and expenses when the commission is meeting.

Beame, obviously pleased with the offer, said the post was a "very challenging" one and added: "I told the President I would get back to him shortly."

Carter made the offer at a private early-morning talk with the mayor before the two, along with Housing and Urban Development Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris, set out for a tour of the South Bronx, where crime and arson have turned some sections into rubble or abandoned shells of buildings resembling a war-ravaged city.

"It was a very sobering trip for me," Carter said later, adding that he was "encouraged in some ways," because part of his Bronx tour included a building renovated by a tenant group.

Carter told Mrs. Harris after the tour, "Get a map of the whole area and show me what should be done."

Carter met later with Gov. Hugh Carey in the President's United Nations Plaza Hotel suite and asked the governor to cooperate in the effort to rebuild devastated city areas like the South Bronx.

Carey said Carter told him he would assign White House aide Jack Watson "to work with you and the mayor" on the project.

"The President said that when you fly over New York it's so beautiful," Carey related. "It's an enchanting city. But when you see within the city such devastation, this needs attention. It needs the cooperation of all."

Resorts Primping For New Visitors

CANNES, France, (UPI) — Municipalities in Cannes and in several other French Riviera resorts have undertaken a special effort to spruce up their towns and attract new visitors for the winter tourist season.

These efforts include new flower planting programs in the streets, improved street cleaning, and special encouragement to private efforts to restore the old village. The cities have also set up new sewage systems to stop the flow of garbage into the Mediterranean.

The governor said Carter was impressed with the "stability" of some high-rise projects in the Bronx, and talked about the possibility of putting "recreational resources for children and adults" in some of the rubble-and-garbage-strewn areas the President visited earlier in the day.

Later, Bronx Borough President Robert Abrams said he was greatly heartened by the President's visit to the Bronx, and as soon as he heard about it, he rushed off copies of a recent City Planning Commission report, "A Bronx Housing Strategy," to both the President and Mrs. Harris.

Earlier in the day, at the United Nations, the President signed two covenants — one on civil and political rights and one on economic, social and cultural rights. The covenants grew out of a desire to make legally binding the principles of the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

More than 60 other nations had already signed the covenants.

The President took the occasion to declare that his administration's concern was genuine and not just a political posture.

Center To Spotlight Ranch Presentations

Two ranching documentaries, one a slide-tape presentation and the other an artist's multi-media exhibit, will be offered Saturday as a part of the eighth annual Ranch Day at the Ranching Heritage Center.

Ranch Day begins at 9 a.m. at the 12-acre historic Ranching Heritage Center at the Museum of Texas Tech University. In addition to activities in all of the authentically restored buildings and on the grounds, special events will be taking place in the David M. DeVitt and Mallet

Ranch Building.

Among these will be an exhibit of paintings, etchings and photographs documenting the recent past of the Waggoner Ranch near Vernon. All are the work of Marilyn Todd, instructor of art at Midland College, who is on leave while she works toward the doctoral degree in higher education as a Helen DeVitt Jones Fellow at Texas Tech University.

The slide-tape presentation, which will be shown four times Saturday morning, is the work of William D. Benson, area resource development specialist with the Texas Agriculture Extension Service. Benson completed the work a year ago for the Rolling Plains Economic Program, a 29-county organization of key agricultural leaders.

The presentation looks at the past and present of the Pitchfork Land and Cattle Company, the Swenson Land and Cattle Company, the W.T. Waggoner Estate and the Burnett Ranches. It ends with commentary by the four ranch managers, each discussing the future of ranching.

This is the first time the presentation has been shown in West Texas.

Todd's photographs are both black and white and color. The artist did all of the photographic processing. Her paintings are in oil, acrylic and watercolor. Her etchings are from zinc plates, and she also will be showing three lithographs produced from stone plates.

Todd said she began using the Waggoner Ranch in 1970 as a visual inspiration for her ranching documentation. She was reared about 45 miles from the ranch in Frederick, Okla.

"Gradually the idea took shape to do a documentary using different two-dimensional arts media to express the different facets of ranch life," she said.

She rode roundup several years with her camera in hand, but her works depict all seasons of the year at the Waggoner Ranch.

Todd said the documentary is essentially complete at this time.

For the 1,500 members of the association the cost is $4.50 for adults and $1.75 for children, including the German meal for adults and a chicken box lunch for children. For nonmembers the costs are $5.50 and $2.25.

Attorney Criticizes Tuition Requirement

AUSTIN (UPI) — It would cost the Houston school district at least $5.3 million annually to provide free education for the city's estimated 5,000 illegal alien children, and the district wants the aliens to help defray that cost by paying tuition of $90 a month.

But Peter D. Williamson, attorney for 10 alien children seeking admission to Houston schools, said Wednesday the tuition requirement would create a slave class.

"As long as they're here without an education what you're doing essentially is creating an uneducated slave class," Williamson told the Austin Court of Civil Appeals.

Williamson asked the appeals court to order the 10 Mexican children admitted to Houston schools without paying the tuition.

The class action lawsuit filed by the Houston Legal Foundation on the children's behalf contends it is unfair to bar from public school alien children who are unable to pay tuition.

Williamson said the children's parents could not afford to pay the tuition.

"None of them can afford to pay the $90-a-month tuition charged by the Houston Independent School District," Williamson said. "There's no provision for waiver of the fees for those who can't afford it. The statute does not keep out undocumented (illegal alien) children — it only keeps out poor folk."

In 1975 the legislature amended the Education Code to limit state education funds to schooling of citizens and legally admitted aliens.

Several similar cases are pending across the state. Fifteen illegal aliens are attending school in Tyler tuition-free under a temporary court order while a federal judge considers their case. A state judge has ordered three children admitted to Austin schools tuition-free while the state education commissioner considers their status.

The 10 children involved in the Houston lawsuit are 6 to 14 years old and have been in the country three to four years.

Five are stepchildren of American citizens; their Mexican mothers brought them into the country on tourist passes. Two were sent to Houston to live with a sister married to an American when their mother became ill.

Three came over with their mother in 1973 to join their father, who had been crossing the border illegally for 11 years to work.

Houston school officials estimate it would cost $5.3 million to $10 million a year to provide free education for all of the city's illegal alien children.

The attorney for the Houston school district, Kelly Frels, said it would be disruptive to place the older children in first grade classes and would cost extra money to provide bilingual teachers.

Frels said the tuition requirement is intended to preserve the quality of education and apportion limited public funds to schooling for citizens and legally admitted aliens.

"An illegal alien has no right to attend free public school in Texas," Frels said. "The fact that he enters Texas illegally does not give him any more right to attend free public school in Texas."

Summer Study In Austria

Set By Tech

Living in romantic Vienna and mastering German through first-hand experience awaits students attending the 1978 summer study program in Austria.

Sponsored by the department of Germanic and Slavic languages at Texas Tech, the program is offered in cooperation with the Institute of European Studies.

While living with a Viennese family, students can earn six hours of university credit by attending two courses to be taught in historic Kinsky Palace near the University of Vienna. Participants need not be enrolled at Texas Tech.

One course involves study of Vienna and Austrian life. The second focuses on intermediate or advanced German. Students already fluent in German may elect an independent research project in Austrian or German literature.

Numerous weekend outings into surrounding areas, along with study tours of historical and cultural sites, are part of the itinerary. Included will be an excursion to Prague.

Participants in the summer study program must have completed at least two semesters of German.

Those who wish to travel independently at the course's conclusion may book their return from another European city. Assistance for extended travel may be obtained through the Texas Tech Office of International Programs.

Group leader will be Theodore W. Alexander, associate chairman of Germanic and Slavic Languages. Alexander lived in Vienna prior to his immigration to the United States.

Interested persons should contact the department of Germanic and Slavic languages at Tech.

Supermarket Case To Be Heard Here

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—The Texas Supreme Court Wednesday let stand an appeals court ruling that a lawsuit, involving the alleged injury of a woman in an El Paso supermarket, should be heard in Lubbock.

Martha Leyva had asked the high court to reverse the appeals court ruling allowing her lawsuit against Furr's, Inc., to be moved from El Paso to Lubbock.

Court records indicate that the woman alleges to have received an injury to her toe when she slipped on a puddle of oil and glass in a Furr's supermarket on Carolina Street in El Paso on July 4, 1975.

Furr's attorneys sought, and won, a change of venue to Lubbock from the El Paso Court of Civil Appeals.

Dr. Cook Honored For Work At LCC

Yearbooks were distributed at Lubbock Christian College this week with Dr. Elton Cook receiving the first copy in recognition of his continued service to the college.

In dedicating the book to Cook, a professor of agriculture and LCC instructor since 1960, the El Explorador staff called him an "inspiring example."

Cook, a Lockney native, received his Ph.D. from the University of Nebraska in 1949.

Editor of the 1977 hardback edition was Marilyn Holder of Pampa. Assistant editor was Brenda Ray of Lubbock.

Tech Honors Broadcaster

Wendell Mayes Jr., widely known Texas broadcaster and active member of the Texas Tech Mass Communications Advisory Committee, has been elected to the department's Hall of Fame.

The Austin radio station executive will be formally inducted into the Hall of Fame in ceremonies at a Texas Tech Mass Communications Week luncheon Feb. 16, according to Dr. Billy I. Ross, chairman.

Mayes, a 1949 Texas Tech graduate with honors in electrical engineering, served as chairman of the Mass Communications Advisory Committee 1971-74 and remains an ex-officio member of the group, which met Friday on campus.

Mayes' selection was approved by the Communication Department's faculty, Advisory Committee and Student Advisory Committee.

Mayes is associated with radio stations in Austin, Midland, Victoria and Snyder and cable television companies in Houston, Snyder, Corsicana and Pauls Valley, Okla. He is president of the Texas Broadcast Education Foundation, director of the Broadcast Education Foundation, trustee of the Television and Radio Political Action Committee and a member of The University of Texas Communications Advisory Council.

He is an ex-student of Schreiner Institute, Kerrville. The University of Texas at Austin and Daniel Baker College, Brownwood.

Two Agricultural Men Honored

Dr. John R. Abernathy and William E. Turner, both of Lubbock, were honored here Wednesday at the awards banquet of the 25th Agricultural Chemicals Conference at the Southpark Inn.

The conference is sponsored annually by the West Texas Agriculture Chemicals Institute.

Abernathy received the institutional award and Turner the commercial award for "outstanding contributions to West Texas agriculture."

Abernathy has been weed research project leader at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station in Lubbock since 1973. Previously he worked for Velsicol Chemical Corp. in Chicago, first as field development manager and then as regional manager of field development for the Midwest.

He received the bachelor of science degree in agronomy from Oklahoma State University in 1967, master of science degree in weed science from OSU in 1969, and Ph.D. in weed science in 1972 from the University of Illinois.

He recently was elected secretary-treasurer of the Southern Weed Science Society.

Turner is senior field research representative for CIBA-Geigy Agricultural Chemical Corp., responsible for research in West Texas and New Mexico. He began work for the company in 1968 after receiving the master of science degree in agronomy in 1967 from Colorado State University. He also received the bachelor of science degree from CSU in range conservation.

Turner is a member of the Southern Weed Science Society, the Texas Chapter of the American Society of Agronomy, the Southwest Branch of the Entomology Society of America and the Texas Tech Research Center Advisory Board.

He is a past board member and president of the West Texas Agricultural Chemicals Institute, past chairman of two SWSS committees, past board member and secretary for the TCASA, and past advisory board member of the West Texas Vegetable Committee.

Turner is vice president of the Friendship Young Farmers.

Dallas Man Named To State Post

AUSTIN (UPI) — The only man ever to come close to defeating Jesse James for state treasurer has been appointed by Gov. Dolph Briscoe to fill the late James' unexpired term.

Warren G. Harding, 56, Dallas County treasurer since 1951, Wednesday was appointed to replace James, who died last week.

Harding ran an unsuccessful campaign against James for the job in 1956. Although Harding lost to James in the Democratic primary, it was the closest race James faced during his 36 years in office.

Harding's appointment is effective immediately, and he will serve until Dec. 31, 1978.

"Naturally I was most appreciative that Gov. Briscoe chose me," Harding said in Dallas. "This is a dramatic occasion for me and my wife."

"I think the people will be very proud of me. I plan to do the same job for the people of Texas that I've done for the people in Dallas County."

Harding was named outstanding treasurer in the United States by the National Association of County Treasurers and was the first recipient of a similar award presented by the County Treasurers' Association of Texas.

Former Bexar County auditor Charles Sanders and Harry Ledbetter, former assistant to Lt. Gov. William Hobby, already have announced as candidates for the Democratic nomination for treasurer in 1978. Rep. John Bigham, D-Temple, said he will announce his candidacy formally within a few weeks.

Houston businessman Don Johnson, a Republican, has announced he will seek the GOP nomination for the office.

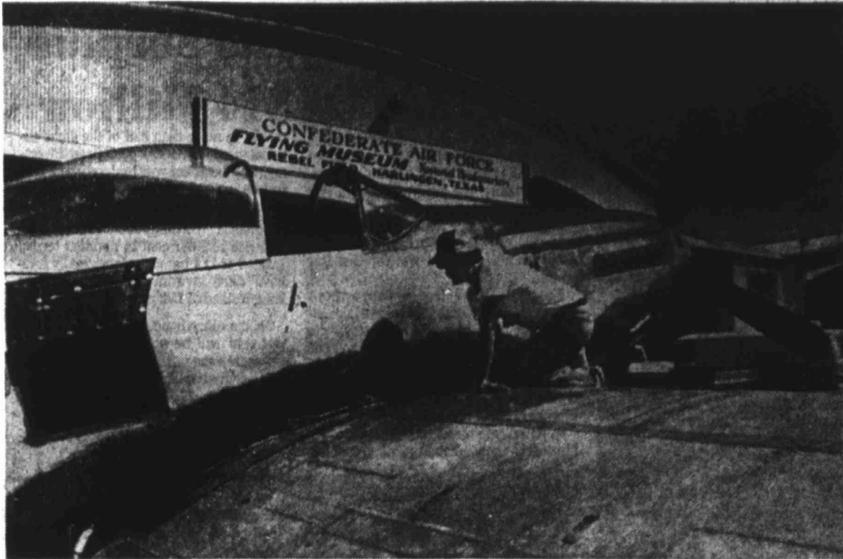

Briscoe's appointment of Harding to fill James' unexpired term would give the Dallas County treasurer a distinct advantage as an incumbent if he chooses to seek election to a full term in the office.

James, 72, had indicated before his death he planned to seek re-election in 1978 despite ill health and a circulatory problem which forced amputation of a portion of his left leg in January.

Thornton Resigns From State Board

DALLAS (UPI) — R.L. Thornton Jr., who had been boycotting Alcoholic Beverage Control meetings for more than one year, quietly resigned from the board Aug. 15, the Dallas Times Herald reported this week.

Thornton, a Dallas banker who served 5½ years on the ABC, submitted his resignation about 90 days before his term would end on Nov. 15. Thornton began boycotting ABC meetings in June 1976 when the other two commissioners voted to dismiss administrator Luke Robinson.

Thousands Expected To Attend Terlingua's Chili 'Happening'

By K. MACK SISK
ARRIBA TERLINGUA (UPI) — The 11th World Championship Chili Cookoff will be this weekend at the usual desert site near Terlingua which is so remote the only benefit is 10,000 acres of free parking.

The event will attract a motley crowd of thousands, ranging from wealthy jet-setters to bearded motorcyclists and desert wanderers to politicians.

Choosing the world's foremost chili chef is the announced purpose of the gathering on the Texas-Mexico border, but equally important during the two-day bash are absurd costumes, spoofs, general frivolity and showmanship.

Bob Marsh, a British public relations man for Pearl Brewing Co., says the cookoff is "more of a happening than anything else."

A big dance is scheduled Friday night to begin the celebration, the chili contest begins at noon Saturday and there is another dance Saturday night. Beyond that, what goes on is spontaneous.

The first cookoff was at nearby Terlingua in 1967, when Frank X. Tolbert, a Dallas newspaperman, arranged a showdown between author H. Allen Smith and Wick Fowler, chief chef of the Chili Appreciation Society International. That strictly stag cookoff, used to promote Tolbert's book, "A Bowl of Red," was put on before a sparse audience and ended in a tie. Both Smith and Fowler since have died.

But because the 250,000 acres containing Terlingua, a mining ghost town, was sold to a new owner who last year hired 300 police officers for crowd control, this year's event was moved to Arriba Terlingua, a sort of suburb located seven miles to the west-northwest.

A large contingent of laymen, which one chili buff described as "just about every cop West of the Pecos," arrested many revelers and put them shivering in a portable tiger cage for the night last year. Marsh, a judge this year, called it "an extreme case of overkill."

Glen Pepper and his wife, Donna, operate a tiny resort of 11 rooms, a cafe and swimming pool at Arriba Terlingua.

Bill Neale, one of the honchos of the cookoff, reportedly wrote Pepper suggesting upholding the old Texas theory of "One riot, one Ranger," meaning law enforcement this year might be considerably limited.

Main guest judge for the 1977 championship will be Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., and Texas Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong. They must share top billing with an honorary judge, a chimpanzee named "Deena" and a "peculiar marlini judge" named Chastity Fox, a striptease dancer. Deena will be flown in on one of two DC3 aircraft Dallas "chili head" Tom Tierney, master of ceremonies, will use to fly in guests. The airplane is one of up to 50 that are expected to land on an airstrip four miles from the cookoff site.

Charlie Fowler, who helps run his late uncle's Two Alarm Chili operation at Austin and is official scorekeeper for the cookoff, said the outlandish costumes and skits put on by the chili cooks are integral to any good chili cookoff.

One year, a wealthy contestant backed a six-wheel truck up at Terlingua, lowered a ramp and out drove a limousine. Inside were two couples dressed in tuxedos and evening gowns who left the auto, sat down at a table in the desert covered with a silk table cloth and dined on chili from a silver setting.

"Part of cooking chili is the little showmanship you put into it," Fowler said. "Even if you're having a backyard cook, you like to add a little flare now and then. The atmosphere created while creating a good bowl of red has tremendous impact on your chili, and possibly the judges."

Although spoofs are the order of the day at cookoffs, many of the chili cultists take the dish seriously, and an occasional fistfight has been reported at the world championships.

Gordon Fowler, son of Wick Fowler, describes as "a fighting offense" the serving of an inferior bowl of chili or trying to foist off a dish of red containing kidney beans.

"We have what they call a 'chili fit,'" Gordon Fowler said. "Like when you go into a place like at the Houston airport coffee shop and you get chili and it's real bad. What you do is throw a chili fit, throw your bowl across the room, you turn your table over; maybe punch out the chef. Then pay for all the damages and leave."

CAF Kicks Off Four-Day Show

By MILLER BONNER
HARLINGEN (AP) — The roar of vintage World War II piston-powered aircraft will be intermingled with the whine of modern-day jets today as the Confederate Air Force kicks off "Airshow 77."

The CAF, a South-Texas based organization dedicated to restoring and flying World War II planes, expects more than 250,000 persons to attend the four-day show.

Last year, the CAF attracted international attention for its re-enactment of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima.

The re-enactments of famous World War II air battles are scheduled again this year, but the Hiroshima bombing has been dramatically altered.

A B-29 Superfortress, billed by the CAF as the only plane of its kind still in flying condition, will be flown again this year by Paul Tibbets, the man who commanded the Aug. 6, 1945 bombing of Hiroshima, but the atomic bomb simulator that produced last year's controversial mushroom-shaped cloud has been deleted.

The Hiroshima re-enactment highlighted last year's show and sparked protests from Japanese officials.

On Aug. 22, the CAF announced the Hiroshima re-enactment would remain unchanged, but after a Sept. 2 meeting in Washington with congressional, state and defense department officials, the CAF reversed its decision.

"The decision to omit the A-bomb (simulation) was made solely on the basis of defense and national security considerations as outlined by Department of Defense officials," said Lloyd Nolen, one of the CAF's founders. "No pressure or threats of government retaliation were made by the defense department."

Searchers Unable To Locate Plane

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The fifth day of an aerial search for a private plane missing with seven young Houston-area persons aboard again failed to locate the aircraft, the Utah Civil Air Patrol reported.

The CAP said the search Wednesday was heaviest between Price, Utah, and Cortez, Colo. Price is about 100 air miles southeast of Salt Lake City.

More than 30 planes from Utah, Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico were involved in the search in the Price area, the CAP said.

The missing Piper Cherokee 6 disappeared Friday after a refueling stop at Farmington, N.M., on a flight from Houston to Salt Lake City.

"However, the State Department did indicate that the government could not support the original CAF program and could not agree to support federal participation and other support could be withdrawn."

"The objections of the Japanese were not a factor in this decision," continued Nolen. "Considering the unprovoked events of Dec. 7, 1941, it might be difficult for the men of the CAF to find concern for Japanese sensitivities to the events of Aug. 6, 1945."

The CAF's "World War II Air Power Demonstration" re-enacts the major battles of the war. The two-hour presentation follows the historic air battles chronologically, including the Pearl Harbor attack, the Battle of Britain and the Normandy Invasion. The history lesson concludes with the CAF's B29 flying at a low altitude before the grandstands lining Rebel Field at the Harlingen International Airport as the show's narrator refers to the atomic bombing of Japanese cities that hastened the end of the second world war.

The CAF said this year's show will cost about $120,000 including $20,000 to fuel the 72 vintage CAF aircraft.

Today and Friday, the show will feature aerial aerobatics with the re-enactments highlighting the final two days.

City, Counties Join To Gain Extra Funds

Lubbock and Garza Counties and the City of Lubbock should have nearly $300,000 in additional funds for federally funded job training and employment programs for the poor because the three have banded together.

The three formed the South Plains Employment and Training Act Consortium for fiscal year 1978 to receive funds under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

Truett Mayer, executive director of the South Plains Association of Governments, said the consortium will get 10 per cent more funds as a bonus from the Department of Labor for consolidating.

Labor Department figures indicate the consortium will receive $1,194,263 in planning funds, with additional funds to be allocated soon.

Japan Forecasts Surplus In Trade Of $14 Million

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's trade surplus for the fiscal year to next March will total $14 billion instead of the $7.3 billion forecast originally, the government said this week.

The cabinet stood by its original 6.7 per cent real growth rate projection for the fiscal year, a rate that was forecast last winter.

The outlook for the current account ledger, which includes trade items not included in the larger trade category, was put at a surplus of $6.5 billion, instead of the original $700 million deficit forecast. Japan already has built up a $4.4 billion current-account surplus in the first five months of fiscal 1977 through August.

In its revised forecast, the government also said consumer spending, which makes up more than half of the gross national product (GNP), and fixed investment by business will be less important factors in this year's growth than earlier thought.

Personal consumption expenditures will rise 13.2 per cent in nominal terms, instead of 13.7 per cent as originally forecast; fixed investments will rise 6 per cent, instead of 12.2 per cent.

On the other hand, private housing investment will be up 16.6 per cent (16.5 per cent in the original forecast); government capital spending, up 20.8 pc (15.9 per cent).

Export earnings will rise 4.2 per cent, instead of the 11.7 per cent forecast earlier.

Disease Can Hurt Vision

DALLAS (UPI) Persons suffering from sickle cell anemia, a blood disorder which strikes about one per cent of the black population in the United States, should have their eyes checked regularly and carefully, according to a Chicago ophthalmologist.

Dr. Morton F. Goldberg, chairman of the ophthalmology department at the University of Illinois, says the disease can cause painless loss of vision that can sometimes be prevented if detected early.

Goldberg is one of more than 10,000 physicians, guests and exhibitors attending the 82nd annual convention of the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology. Dozens of scientific papers on eye, ear, nose and throat diseases will be delivered before the convention ends today.

Sickle-shaped red blood cells, characteristic of sickle cell anemia, often obstruct small blood vessels in the eyes, causing tissue death and loss of vision, Goldberg says.

The regrowth of new, extremely fragile, blood vessels also threatens vision, he said, because of their tendency to rupture and bleed.

In an address to the academy, Goldberg said the regrowth of new blood vessels can occur in the front of the eye as well as at the rear.

New blood vessel growth in the back of the eye has been treated successfully with laser beams, Goldberg said, but when the new growth occurs in front, the result is "usually disastrous — total blindness."

At a news conference, Goldberg said up to 10 per cent of the black population in the U.S. were carriers of the disease, thought to have originated in central and western Africa.

Carriers themselves do not suffer from the disease, but if two carriers conceive a child, there is a 25 per cent chance the child will be affected.

"Sickle cell anemia is a particularly unpleasant disease because it hits at a productive age," shortening lifespan and causing vision problems, Goldberg said.

Discoveries relating to vision loss stemming from sickle cell anemia would have an impact on similar losses in the diabetic, Goldberg said.

Satellites Crowded In Key Space Zone

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There are so many communications satellites in "stationary" orbits around the globe that engineers are worrying about where to put them all.

For a satellite to remain over one point on Earth, it must be in an orbit 22,300 miles above the equator. That is the only altitude where a satellite's orbital speed matches Earth's rotation.

Not only is such a stationary outpost ideal for a satellite relaying communications between distant points on Earth, but it provides an unexcelled vantage point for weather satellites and military surveillance craft.

Space along such a lofty 82,500-mile long belt around the globe may seem unlimited, but desirable locations are not. The busiest stretch is that segment reaching from the Atlantic Ocean to Hawaii.

Many satellites must be kept 1,000 miles apart to avoid radio interference problems and at least 100 miles apart to avoid collisions. As of the end of last year, there were more than 60 satellites of various kinds in stationary orbits.

There are now 10 different communications systems — most of them commercial — operating about 30 satellites, and more are going up all the time as the demand increases for new communications services.

Dr. Burton Edelson and Walter Morgan, officials of the Communications Satellite Corp. which is the biggest user of the orbital parking lot, estimate that more than 100 satellites may be operating in stationary orbit by 1980.

They suggest a few giant space platforms strategically spotted around the world could solve the overcrowding problem. They would serve as switchboards in the sky.

Edelson and Morgan said in a report in the technical journal, Astronautics and Aeronautics, that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's space shuttle rocket plane will be able to serve as the truck needed to haul space platform equipment into orbit for final assembly.

The two engineers estimated it would take three or four shuttle flights to carry up the necessary material for men to assemble a station in low orbit. It then would be boosted by automated rockets into the stationary orbit.

Edelson and Morgan said by the early 1990s, a few of these platforms could handle a broad range of radio relay services that would otherwise be provided by dozens of small satellites. These would include domestic and intercontinental telecommunications plus maritime, aeronautical and land mobile services.

In addition, they said a multipurpose orbital platform could provide weather watching services and serve as navigation aids for ships and aircraft.

Edelson and Morgan said combining missions of many satellites on a single spacecraft could save money as well as space.

But they said there also could be technically or politically incompatible missions and difficulties in forming the consortiums that would be necessary to build and operate such a multipurpose platform in space.

Air Shuttle Profitable First Week

LONDON (AP) — Freddie Laker's low-fare Skytrain air shuttle between London and New York ran at a profit for its first complete week, Laker Airways said today.

"We are definitely running at a profit and Mr. Laker is delighted with the first week," a spokesman said.

He denied weekend reports that the no-frills passenger service between the two cities lost an average of $1,750 a day.

Laker is the 54-year-old maverick British businessman who fought regulating agencies and major airlines in Britain and America for six years to get Skytrain off the ground.

Figures supplied by the airline showed that the 345-seat DC10 making the round-trip each day between London and New York flew at 70.5 per cent capacity last week. That means an average of 243 seats were filled. Laker had calculated he would need 220 passengers per trip to make a profit, or 64 per cent of seats occupied.

Skytrain's inaugural flight to New York took off Monday Sept. 26 with 272 seats filled, and every seat was taken for the first return trip from Kennedy International Airport.

The fare from London's Gatwick Airport is $103.25, while in the opposite direction travelers pay $135. The round-trip cost of $238.25 compares with a regular economy fare of $626, although there are many advance purchase and excursion fares in between, and some off-season charter flights that are even cheaper than Skytrain.

Laker grossed about $377,482 for the first week, with business much more brisk from the New York than from London. There were a total of 1,554 full-fare passengers, plus 11 infants at 10 per cent fare, going on the seven flights to New York, while figures for return flights to London showed 1,606 passengers plus eight infants.

The average on flights from New York was 267 passengers, while the number was 222 from London.

There were just two fully booked flights, the first New York-London departure, and Sunday afternoon's Skytrain to New York. The worst day was last Wednesday, when 144 left London and 148 came back.

Skytrain passengers telephone Laker Airways for a recorded message on ticket availability the day they want to depart. They then go to Laker's desk at Gatwick Airport, or to the Laker terminal in Queens, N.Y., and wait in line to buy their ticket for cash. There are no reservations, and meals and drinks are extra.

Bank Awarded $1.7 Million

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A Paramus bank has been awarded $1.7 million for losses from illegal loans approved by the bank's executives to Greek shipping companies.

The Fidelity and Deposit Co. of Maryland was ordered this week to honor its insurance obligation to the Midland Bank & Trust Co. of Paramus for losses suffered from more than $2 million in fraudulent loans.

The loans were approved by former New Jersey Assembly Speaker Peter Moraites, formerly on the bank's board of trustees, and John Pensec, president of the bank. Moraites and Pensec were indicted in 1970 on charges involving concealment of more than $2.4 million in unsecured loans. Moraites pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 16 months in jail. Pensec was convicted and received a similar term.

The Maryland security firm argued it should not be required to secure the losses because Moraites was not officially employed by the bank.

The bank claimed the losses were the result of "dishonest, fraudulent and criminal acts" of Moraites and Pensec, both acting as bank officers.

U.S. District Court Judge Lawrence Whipple agreed with Midland that Moraites and Pensec had the sole responsibility for ship loans.

Zenith Move Attributed To Costs

By NICK GREGORY
CHICAGO (UPI) — Akter battling imports for years, a U.S. television manufacturer known for its loyalty to the American worker, decided to fire 5,600 employees within a year to preserve the company.

Zenith Radio Corp. announced recently it no longer could compete effectively with imports from Japan and would switch some operations to Mexico and Taiwan. The announcement by John J. Nevin, president and board chairman, came as a shock to many being dismissed but it shouldn't have.

Zenith's earnings have shown a sharp decline in both fiscal quarters of 1977. There is nothing to indicate the third will reverse the trend.

Zenith employs 21,000 U.S. workers and has more than 44,000 owners of its 19 million shares of common stock. In 1951, the company had only 600,000 shares traded at $44 a share. Since then, Zenith has had 22 stock splits.

A 100-share holding of Zenith common bought in 1951 for $4,400 would have been increased by the splits to 3,600 shares worth about $14 each, or some $49,950. The figures attest to Zenith's management talent.

Zenith's well known TV commercial on the skills of American workers has been junked but the company slogan since 1927, "The quality goes in before the name goes on," will remain. So will 16,000 employees, because Zenith will retain all final assembly work in the United States.

When Nevin moved from Ford Motor Co. to Zenith as its president in 1971, he pinpointed the company's major problem as competition from abroad, primarily Japan.

Cheaper labor and government tax breaks overseas made it difficult for U.S. manufacturers to compete. The first noticeable impact of imports had been the virtual surrender by U.S. firms of the black and white sets to Japanese firms. The struggle eventually extended to color sets and Zenith wound up as the major U.S. holdout against overseas production.

Japanese color exports reached the United States initially in 1967 and made rapid strides.

Nevin promptly challenged the legality of Japanese imports after he took over Zenith. He succeeded in winning legal battles, but imports kept coming — capturing 3.6 percent by the first half of 1976 and 46.1 percent in the second half.

Nevin accused the Japanese of illegal "dumping." He said a tax advantage enables them to sell their sets in this country at about $200 less than they sell for at home. The U.S. Customs Court in New York agreed with Nevin last spring, ordering that penalty or offsetting duties be imposed on imports to combat the tax rebate.

The ruling was overturned by a higher court, however, and Zenith intends to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court in what could be a historic decision.

"The Justice Department — the Treasury Department would never tolerate a situation," Nevin said, "in which an American company became involved in a series of agreements which said, 'we will keep prices so high in this portion of the market as to make it possible for us to price our product at much lower levels in other markets to drive competition out.'"

The Zenith dismissal announcement was emotionally difficult for Nevin, who just six months ago had been hailed for trying to maintain color operations in Chicago and several other cities.

Nevin, whose father went broke during the Great Depression of the 1930s, noted that taking the major industry out of towns like Paris, Ill., and Watsonville, Pa., could mean "economic tragedy."

But, he said, it would cost Zenith only 25 cents an hour to do the work abroad as compared to more than $6 in Chicago. And, there are those 44,000 shareholders he must think about.

Probe Slated On Medicaid

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The federal government is underwriting a $6 million, two-year, joint federal-state Medicare and Medicaid fraud investigation in New York, Gov. Hugh Carey and Joseph Califano, secretary of health, education and welfare, have announced.

A special task force under nursing home prosecutor Charles Hynes will investigate hospitals participating in the Medicaid and Medicare programs, Carey said, specifically to determine whether the hospitals are paying "reasonable" prices for goods and services that the taxpayers eventually finance.

Califano said New York was picked for the demonstration project because of the steps it has already taken to check abuse, and because New York's health care programs are among the largest and most expensive in the nation.

New York's Medicaid program consumed some $3 billion last year, of which the federal government funded about half. New York Medicaid accounts for 21 per cent of all Medicaid expenditures nationwide.

Australia Signs Pact With U.S.

CANBERRA, Australia (AP)—The Australian government signed an agreement with the United States recently for construction of a $16 million radio navigational station in the southeastern corner of the country.

The station will be constructed in the mountains of Victoria state and will be designed, built, operated and maintained by Australians, the government said. The money will come from the United States.

The agreement was signed despite four years of opposition from Labor party politicians, scholars and environmentalists. It will allow the U.S. government to complete its Omega navigation system for the Pacific and Indian Oceans.

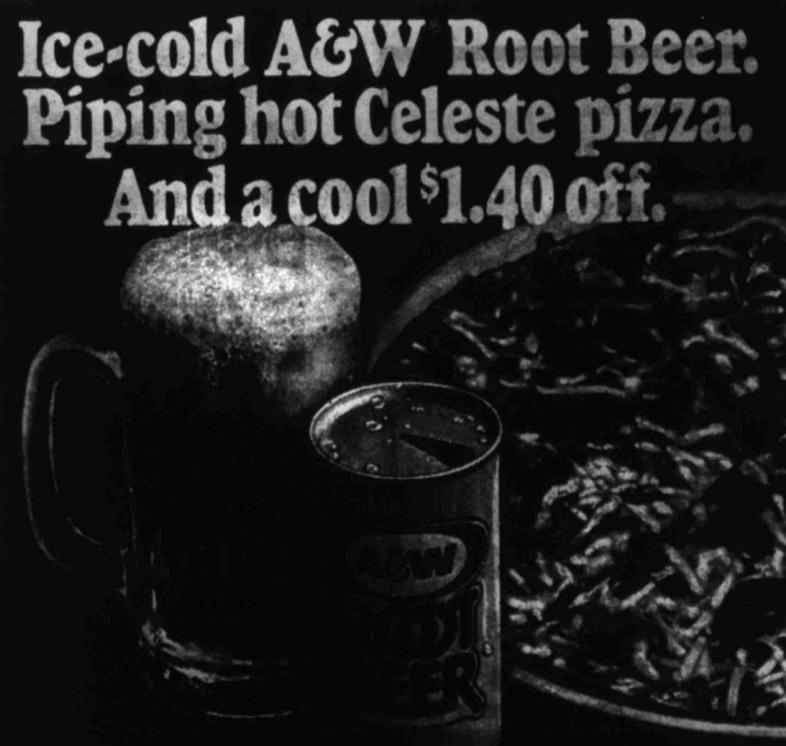

Omega is a chain of strong radio beacons that send out phased time signals with which planes and ships can pinpoint their locations.

Opponents charged the United States would use the station for military purposes, including tracking nuclear submarines, and that it would become a target if a nuclear war developed.

The government said the terms of the agreement allowed it to shut down the station if it was used for military purposes.

The station should be in operation in about two years, the government said.

INTRODUCING THE NEW 1978 CHRYSLERS & PLYMOUTH

NEVER BEFORE HAS THERE BEEN SUCH A CHOICE OF LUXURY & VALUE.

INTRODUCING THE NEW '78 CORDOBA.

The ultimate personal car.

Cordoba has been the choice of many discerning car buyers over the years. In fact, it's the most successful Chrysler ever introduced. And that's quite an accomplishment. But then, Cordoba is quite an automobile. Stop in and drive one and you'll agree.

If you have a family, or just like the feel of a wagon, this could well be your choice for 1978. LeBaron Town & Country. A lighter, more efficient size luxury wagon.

INTRODUCING THE NEW '78 CHRYSLER LeBARON TOWN & COUNTRY.

'78 PLYMOUTH FURY. FAMILY-SIZE ROOM FOR A MID-SIZE PRICE.

INTRODUCING THE CAR THAT HAS AMERICA SINGING. THE NEW 1978 PLYMOUTH VOLARÉ.

THE 1978 CHRYSLER NEW YORKER. THE FEEL OF LUXURY AND A SENSE OF VALUE.

POLYGLYCOAT

PROTECT THE FINISH OF YOUR CAR — POLYGLYCOAT

The revolutionary new protective sealant that is not a wax or polish and can only be applied by your new car dealer GUARANTEED

FOR THREE FULL YEARS — Your auto purchase today is a necessity. Buy with the future in mind.

POLYGLYCOAT PRESERVES! NO NEED TO EVER WAX YOUR CAR AGAIN!

Polyglycoat is a paint and chrome sealant finish — guaranteed to protect your car against fading, corrosion, oxidation, and loss of gloss for three years. Composed of Dow 500, paraffin, silicone, with a kerosene base, Polyglycoat breaks through the tiny paint pores in the surface and penetrates 2-3 layers into the paint, sealing it and shielding it against the foreign elements that cause corrosion, rust, and loss of gloss.

Not only will Polyglycoat eliminate the need for waxing, but it will virtually maintain your car's showroom finish, thereby enhancing resale potential.

It should be applied to all new cars and properly prepared used cars.

Shallowater Lions Plan Festival

The Shallowater Lions Club has scheduled its annual Harvest Festival celebration on Saturday, and has included a full day of activities ranging from a parade and barbeque luncheon to the selection of a new queen to represent the organization for the coming year.

A parade of floats, bands and riding clubs will initiate the event at 10 a.m., and will be followed by a pass and punt contest for grades one through six.

The barbeque luncheon will be held from noon to 1 p.m. at the Community Club House, focal point for the day-long celebration. Games have been planned for the afternoon.

An introduction of queens and princesses has been scheduled for 5 p.m., with formal entertainment from 5:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.

The Shallowater Lions Club will hold its auction at 6:30 p.m., with items ranging from toys and bicycles to farm and automobile equipment, plus an occasional novelty item.

The organization has issued a special invitation to Lubbock and area residents to participate in the festivities.

Candidates for the 1977-78 Lions Club Queen designation, with their respective escorts, include: Lesa DuLaney and Tom Sinclair; Lori Harrison and Lance Morris; Cindy Jackson and David Levins; Jamie Myers and Rod Warren; and Belinda Seale and Billy Glenn.

A princess candidate also will be selected as a highlight of the event. Candidates and their escorts include: Daria Ellis and Matt Burgett; Brandi Kiz Ratliff and Trey Wolaki; Carl Schatzle and Darren Procter; Sherry Schumann and Blain Oden; and Kymber Tuttle and Chad Tubb.

The parade committee has announced that prizes of $25, $15 and $10 will be given for the best float. In addition, prizes of $10, $7.50 and $5 will be awarded for the best decorated bicycle in the parade.

Antique car enthusiasts have been invited to drive their automobiles in the event.

The event will conclude with the coronation of the queen.

Public Hearing Set On School Program

A public hearing has been set for Tuesday by the Lubbock Independent School District on an application to continue the Title VII bilingual education program. The meeting will be at 9:30 a.m. in the materials center of the School Administration Building, 1628 19th St.

The application will seek approval for the federally funded program during the 1978-79 school year. A Title VII grant of $130,571 now provides support services for the district's bilingual education program in five elementary schools. A state-funded program in bilingual education is also operated in these schools and 11 other elementary schools.

Cottonseed May Bring Profits

Cottonseed sold this year to feed cattle, instead of to offset ginning costs, may make growers more money, according to Dr. Delmer I. Davis, livestock specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in College Station.

He says a cow-calf man may pay cotton growers more for their seed than a ginner.

The gin price for cottonseed is related closely to the market price for lint, and the projected market price this year about equals production costs.

Davis says whole cottonseed require little processing to be fed, contain about 20 per cent natural protein, and provide from 20 to 25 per cent more feed-energy than most commercial grain cubes containing 20 per cent protein. As much as five pounds of cottonseed can be fed each cow per day.

He says feed-energy is critically short for a lactating cow on nearly all native ranges during the winter, the time when producers must provide supplemental energy and protein.

Whole cottonseed also is usually a good source of phosphorus, a mineral deficient in all Texas ranges. Producers must provide it as a supplement if calf growth and cow reproduction are to be maximized.

Davis says a cattleman should consider feeding whole cottonseed when its price per pound does not exceed the price for two-fifths pound of cottonseed meal containing 41 per cent protein, plus the price for three-fifths pound of sorghum grain containing 10 per cent protein.

Because the feeder usually cannot buy cottonseed direct from the gin, Davis recommends that the cotton grower retain ownership of the seed even after the ginning so that he may sell them later. Such direct selling, says Davis, means more profit because it eliminates a middleman.

Despite the advantages to feeding cottonseed, Davis says the cowman ought to be aware that these seeds are harder to handle than wheat or shelled corn, require more storage space, and do not move as easily through an auger. The oil in the seed also can turn rancid if they are stored too long, particularly in a hot summer.

Signs Forecast More Murders

NEW HOPE, Minn. (AP) — "You Are Next," "Maybe You" were the ominous messages in black spray paint on two houses in the middle-class suburban neighborhood where a young newlywed was stabbed to death.

Susan Rosenthal, 29, was found dead of multiple stab wounds — perhaps as many as 13 — in the kitchen of her one-story home on a quiet dead-end street, authorities said.

The warning, "There Are More" was painted on the kitchen wall. The writing matched the signs on the outside of two neighboring houses, police said.

Prior to the killing Tuesday, nobody could remember so much as a burglary occurring in their peaceful block of 900,000 to 970,000 homes in this Minneapolis suburb.

On Wednesday, dozens of children gathered at the Rosenthal house trying to get a peek inside. Sightseers cruised by regularly. Some parents kept children indoors and many neighbors were double-locking doors.

The first neighbors knew of the killing was when one saw two policemen running, pistols drawn, from the Rosenthal house.

Mrs. Rosenthal's body was discovered by a sister who was concerned because she had not shown up at the downtown office where she worked as a paralegal assistant.

Her husband, Allen, 34, was on a business trip in California at the time, police said.

Police would give few details of the killing and no indication of the motive.

The Rosenthals were married Sept. 16 and moved into the house eight days later. Even their closest neighbors said they did not know them.

"I couldn't even tell you what she looked like, tall or short, fat or thin, dark or light," said a woman who lives across the street.

They discounted persistent rumors that Mrs. Rosenthal's death had ethnic overtones.

Police Chief Kostanos said that "although rumors and stories are abundant, the investigation has revealed nothing to indicate any anti-Semitic, ethnic or racial overtones."

Police said the Rosenthals were of the Lutheran faith. No particular religious affiliation predominates in the neighborhood.

Dave Laughlin, 30, occupant of the home sprayed with the message "You are next" said, "We're concerned, that's all."

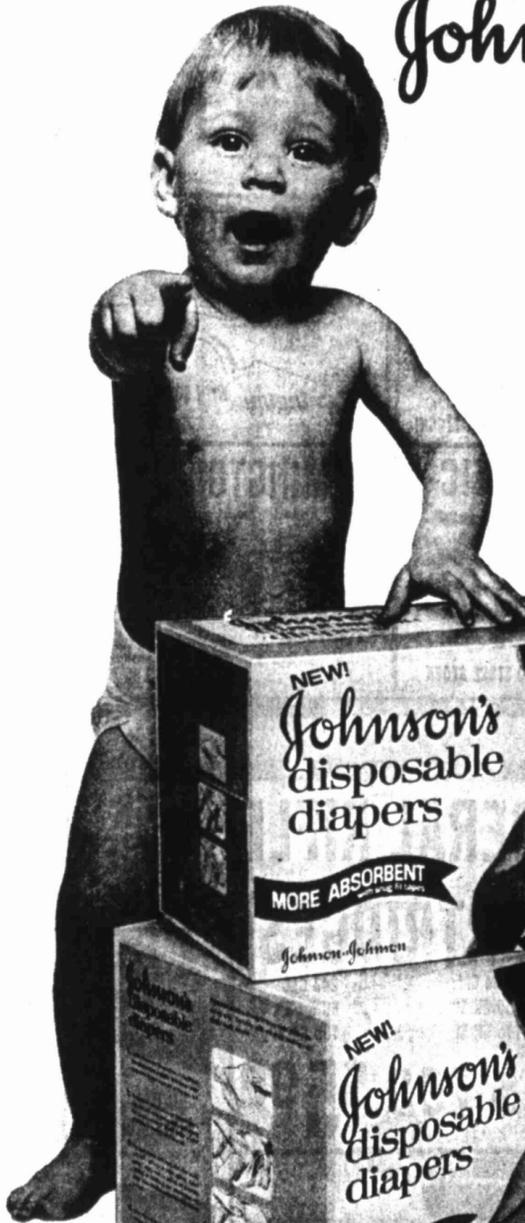

"You can't get excited," he said. "The police are doing a pretty decent job, a super job."

Darryl Johnson, 30, and his wife moved into their home on the block Sunday and Johnson said they were now taking "a few extra precautions."

"Usually when you go outside you leave the garage door and the back door open," he said. "Now, I don't."

Kostanos said, "Really there's not much that you can do to assure people they're safe after something like this, but we've no indication that anyone else is really in danger — despite the signs."

Heavyweight Title Bout Tops Nielsen's Weekly TV Ratings

By JOAN HANAUER
NEW YORK (UPI) — The most popular show on television for the week ending Oct. 2 was the Muhammad Ali-Earnie Shavers fight on Sept. 29.

Ali and friend on NBC were in first place on the Nielsen ratings. NFL Football was in 13th ratings place for ABC. If that high interest in television sports continues, it could result in phenomenally high numbers for the baseball playoffs and the World Series.

CBS, without a strong sports entry, had to content itself with the fine Sunday showing of some of its old favorite sitcoms that premiered Oct. 2.

A special "Best of All in the Family" was in fifth place, "Alice" was in seventh, and "Rhoda" tied for 16th with ABC's "Love Boat," which is a lot better than the Valerie Harper comedy did last year. The difference may be the return of Nancy Walker as Ida Morgenstern.

Another CBS comedy made its season debut last week — "One Day At A Time," which finished 19th, although it came in second in its time period, trailing ABC's "Soap."

Among the specials, NBC's "In The Matter of Karen Ann Quinlan" took the best numbers, tying for eighth with ABC's "Baretta." The "Trial of Lee Harvey Oswald" was a disappointment to ABC, rating in the 32-33 spots for its two-part performance.

The Ali fight wasn't enough to put NBC over the top — ABC was first again this week, closely followed by NBC, with CBS a dismal third. CBS had a lock on 12 of the bottom 20 shows.

For the record, the ten top network shows for the week ending Oct. 2, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., were:

1: Ali-Shavers fight; 2: "Laverne & Shirley;" 3: "Happy Days;" 4: "Charlie's Angels;" 5: "Best of All In The Family;" 6: "Three's Company;" 7: "Alice;" 8: (tie) "Baretta" and "In the Matter of Karen Ann Quinlan;" 10: "What's Happening!"

While the networks battle for prime time ratings, millions of people and dollars are involved in daytime television, much of it soap opera, game shows and sitcom reruns.

A major exception is CBS' "Magazine," with the first edition of the season scheduled for today, 9-10 a.m. Central time, anchored by Sharron Lovejoy. "Magazine" will be broadcast the first Thursday of every month.

The October issue investigates three subjects. First there is the sad situation in which the families of convicts find themselves. Next comes a profile of Bob Barker, host of the frenzied "The Price Is Right;" and finally a touching, frustrating, agonizing story of a couple with the double burden of worrying about their baby's survival — and his $100,000 medical bills.

The Barker middle piece is amusing — he enjoys karate lessons, he says, like some people enjoy meditation — but it jars abrasively with the mood of the segments between which it is sandwiched.

It is the final segment on little Danny Dayhoff, his battle for life and his parents' battle to pay for it, that rivets a viewer's attention.

The problem of supplying super-expensive medical care was summed up by Dr. Fred Wirth, Danny's pediatrician who specializes in the care of very sick newborns.

VICTOR VISITED — Actor Yul Brenner and his wife visit Victor Borge, left, backstage in a dressing room at New York's Imperial Theater after Borge opened on Broadway in "Comedy with Music," a musical entertainment production. Brenner saw the show on a night off from his leading role in "The King and I," also on Broadway. (AP Laserphoto)

Heston, Fonda, Peck Uncomfortable At Parties

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — There's no better way to put a damper on a Hollywood party than to invite Charlton Heston, Gregory Peck and Henry Fonda to the festivities.

Chuck, Greg and Hank fail to lend a devil-may-care flavor to any congregation. All three are hampered by legendary characteristics, partly their own, partly because of the roles they've played and the honors that have befallen them.

To be sure, none of the three accept all that many invitations else they'd be going out three or four times a night.

But they are as misplaced at a typical swinging Hollywood soiree as redwoods in a bougainvillea garden.

Fonda is more socially active than Heston and Peck. But then his wife, Shirley, is young and popular with the party-giving set. Both Lydia Heston and Veronique Peck are immense assets to their husbands socially.

When Hank Fonda does attend a private party he generally can be found alone in the library or den inspecting the host's book collection. Peck usually stands in a corner looking self-conscious and flushed of face.

Heston tries to circulate, but generally fidgets on the periphery of groups eavesdropping rather than participating.

Their presence at a party does nothing to encourage the open snuffing of cocaine or firing up of pot. Not a soul remembers seeing any of the trio tipsy, much less roaring drunk.

All three superstars are bereft of small talk. Oh, they'll discuss show business and the arts, but they are strangers to gossip and trivia.

They have excellent analytical minds and communicate brilliantly on a one-to-one basis. But put them in the swirl of a cocktail party or a cattle call buffet and they die on the vine.

Their Herculean reputations intimidate some people, but the bottom line is that they are born gentlemen and all three suffer terminal shyness.

Heston, his famous face wreathed in a grin, said, "My son, Fraser, told me the other day he'd finally discovered I was shy. That took some insight. I thought I'd concealed it behind a cool and collected facade of professionalism."

"He said I do better at parties at which I'm not supposed to have fun. Those would be the banquets and formal affairs I attend for the Motion Picture Producers Association, the Screen Actors Guild, The American Film Institute, The Motion Picture Academy and the Center Theater Group."

"No matter how square and uncomfortable Greg and Hank and I are at parties, we go when asked. It goes with the franchise."

"They don't give you a percentage of the gross just to make a picture. You have to sell it too. You're not just promoting your own films. You have a vested interest in the on-going success of all movies."

"My criticism of some of the young stars today is that they feel they're compromising their integrity if they do an interview. They feel burdened if they attend an academy function. That's self-indulgent and deceiving."

"I don't attend many private parties because I'm involved in five or six industry events a month. And, to be honest, I really do feel uncomfortable at a social gathering unless I've known the people for 30 years."

Hank, Chuck and Greg are great front men, heavyweights to adorn a dais for visiting VIPs. Inevitably they are called to participate when visitors are being feted.

Henry Kissinger visited Hollywood recently and for three nights in a row Heston was present at dinners honoring the ex-secretary of state.

"I'm sure Henry was sick and tired of seeing me," Heston said, laughing. "And I was tired of him. But it is part of my work."

"Prince Charles of England is coming to town soon. There will be a formal dinner and lunch given in his honor. I was called to attend both."

"With all this activity, I can't be called a social recluse. But like Greg and Hank, I'm not a social butterfly either."

YOUTHS IN 'SUPERMAN'
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two youths have won a contest to appear in the "Superman" movie now in production in New York and Calgary, Alberta, Canada.

Ed Fineran, 14, of Springfield, Mass., and Tim Hussey, 13, of San Lorenzo, Calif., were selected from among thousands of entrants in the contest.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: I was distressed to hear that Sally Rand, whom I first saw doing her famous fan dance in 1933 at the Chicago World's Fair, was hospitalized with a respiratory ailment. How much plastic surgery has she had to undergo to keep that youthful figure? — Lenore Dougherty, St. Louis.

A: "None," Miss Rand answers. "Except for a face lift, whatever you see is the original me!"

Q: About the body audiences still pay a 73-year old woman to reveal, the dancer, who scandalized St. Louis society in 1934 by taking a Lady Godiva horseback ride credits her trim lines to Ringling Brothers.

A: "Doing a trapeze act is a great exercise," she comments.

Q: To today's gals who don't mind showing all their assets, trouper Rand has some advice. "Don't show everything. Use wispy feathers or fluttering fans or balloons or anything — but just tease 'em. And do what you do fast. I've always danced that way and proved the Rand is quicker than the eye."

Q: What sage said: "Do not try to live forever. You will not succeed?" — Tim O'Connor, Jersey City.

A: George Bernard Shaw.

Q: I admire composer Richard Rodgers' wife, Dorothy. I understand she has quite a few inventions to her credit. Wasn't one a cooling device? — Mrs. Sidney Segal, Yonkers, N.Y.

A: Yes, it was to help people keep cool. The basic idea was a bracelet for women and a watch band for men which held dry ice. When her collaborator died, Dorothy cooled the idea, and another inventor improved and patented it.

Q: Now that he's hit 51, has Rock Hudson any regrets about his career, successful as it has been? — Miss Sally D., Eugene, Ore.

A: "No. I should have taken on challenging parts a long time ago," he says. "But I was too busy being Charley Movie Star."

Q: Whenever we watch a pro football, basketball or baseball game on TV we notice that often there seems to be more black than white players competing. Are the blacks better athletes than the whites? — Leroy A. (I'm Black), Birmingham.

A: Most black superstars lean towards that conclusion. Joe Morgan, voted the National League's most valuable player last year, thinks they're faster, more agile, have more natural ability. O.J. Simpson of the Buffalo Bills theorizes: "It's our skinny calves, long legs, high heels — all built for speed."

Q: Basketball's Dr. J., Julius Erving, says black athletes not only jump higher than most hoopers, but also can "do something else while in the air." The consensus of the black sports stars is that even the kids realize that developing their latent abilities in sports is the quickest way out of the ghetto.

Q: Is it true that syndicated radio interviewer Barry Farber is able to speak more than a dozen languages? — Sid Levine, Miami, Fla.

A: True. Barry reads, talks and understands German, Russian, French, Italian, Swedish and several Oriental languages. Unlike many politicians speaking with forked tongue, Farber — who is on a long shot hoping to succeed Abe Beame as mayor of New York — talks turkey in any language.

Q: I recently saw a TV movie, "Ambush in Arizona," in which there was mention of a Roy Rogers Jr. Is there actually such a person? Weren't all of Roy's and Dale's children adopted? — K.V. Tatt, Lakewood, Colo.

A: No. Roy Junior is one of two children the cowboy superstar sired when he was wed to Ariene Wilkins, who died in 1936. Besides Roy Jr. there were two sisters, Linda and Cheryl (adopted). After Roy senior married Dale Evans in 1947 (his leading lady in 20 films) a second family was produced. Roy and Dale had Robin (who died at the age of two). They adopted three: Dodie (an American Indian), Debbie (deceased) and John (also deceased) — and provided a home for a foster child, Marion (from Scotland), and Dale's son, Thomas Fox, by a previous marriage.

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 11748, Chicago, Ill., 60611. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

"I can hardly wait to become a full-fledged character actor professionally. Then I can become a curmudgeon and sit in a corner and have the host bring me drinks."

"Then when people come up with their tentative questions I can poke them with a walking stick and say, 'You young 'uns, what do you know?'" Heston cackled like an old man and polished off a glass of noonday wine. He will soon be seen in "The Last Hard Men," his first horse opera since "Will Penny" back in 1968.

"I like doing westerns," he said, "and I'd like to work in more of them. I'll tell you one thing, the social amenities were a lot simpler in those days."

Actor Sylvester Stallone Retains Sense Of Humor

NEW YORK (UPI) — With his bulging, oak-veined arms and size-18 neck, Sylvester Stallone looked out of place in his finely furnished hotel suite in New York.

He sat before an eight-foot-long, glass-topped dining table and began to eat lunch. Had he been an ambassador or an historian, the baroque and fragile setting would have been appropriate. But for the man who all America knows as "Rocky," the benign bum of boxing, the French provincial interior had an obscene, almost mocking effeminacy to it.

But it did not seem to bother Stallone. He sat motionlessly, eating his salad. He speared a piece of lettuce now and then, and between bites, talked about himself, his new novel, Paradise Alley, which he was in New York promoting, and his concept of reality.

"After a while you start to believe what everyone writes about you. They are relating to your 35-foot image, your fictional sense. I've never gone 15 rounds with anyone in my life. I've never been beaten to a pulp. But everything is ephemeral, man. Even rocks are going through metamorphosis," he said.

Metamorphosis. A strange word this, especially when said with the tough intonation contours of the street. But the 31-year-old Stallone seemed to like to make sport of convincing everyone he really was just a "lucky bum who's played a character much nobler than I really am."

He smiled whenever he said something solemn, like the high school football captain who friends had just discovered reading poetry. "Look," the smile seemed to say, "I was only looking for the dirty pictures." Stallone looked around the room constantly as he talked, first at his manager then at the interviewer, then back at the manager. He obviously enjoyed playing intellectual ping-pong.

He talked about being an Old World person with ancient values. He talked about women ("the ugly Adrians are always more interesting than the super-pretty girls"); he talked about justice and politics. His voice rose only once and that was when he described his secret desire to be a benevolent dictator.

"Let me run the country for three months. I would say: 'I WANT airbags. I WANT the steel companies to pay 40 per cent taxes.' And I would tell Egypt about having all that oil — 'What are you guys, crazy? A bunch of shepherders are going to take over the world? No way, man.'"

He shifted in his seat and began a discussion about "bad guys." For Stallone, the bad guys are people who have really no talent, but yet want to be supported by people who do. He said that with the gravity of a man who has known what it means to be talented and unemployed, and as a man who knows what it now means to have long-lost friends suddenly surface to try to inhale some of his success.

The solemnity was beginning to bore him and he turned the conversation to something less lofty: his 65-pound dumbbells. He lifts them daily to keep in shape and to discipline himself for writing and acting, he said.

He flexed his right arm, glanced down at his bicep and then looked up.

"You know, for actors who take themselves seriously this business is a nightmare," he said and smiled.

And his smile was reflected by the glass of the table and reflected again by the walnut-framed mirror on the wall and re-transmitted throughout the suite until it was lost in the deep carpeting of the room.

Metamorphosis, man.

New Yorker Nabs Hood

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Simon, writer and singer of songs, player of the 12-string guitar and sometimes actor, now has dabbled in police work with the same success he had in those other fields.

It was about 2 a.m. when Simon heard a racket outside his door. He went to investigate and saw a man with a gun in the hallway.

Police say the man, armed with an automatic pistol, walked up to doorman Jim Kelly, 20, at the Central Park West luxury apartment house and demanded to be taken to apartments where he could find "diamonds or cash."

Kelly first took the gunman to the 12th floor, where all the apartments were empty. Angry and frustrated, the robber forced Kelly back into the elevator and down to the second floor where Simon lives. He rang the rear doorbell of Simon's apartment.

Curious about the unexpected caller, Simon walked down to the lower level of his duplex apartment and opened the rear door. There he saw Kelly and the gunman.

When the gunman was momentarily distracted by a passersby, Kelly knocked the pistol from the gunman's hand. The would-be robber pulled a knife, menaced those around him, and fled.

But Simon, 36, was hard on his heels. He hailed a taxi and drove to a subway station opposite Lincoln Center in midtown, and found two Transit Authority policemen.

The officers went to the apartment house in their patrol car, picked up Kelly and searched the neighborhood.

At 72nd Street and Broadway, they arrested a man identified as Gary Braverman, 32, of the Bronx, and booked him on charges of attempted robbery, possession of a weapon and assault.

Kingston, the capital and largest city of Jamaica, has 170,000 residents.

LIKES PLAY — Playwright Israel Horowitz, a 39-year-old Wakefield, Mass., native, stands outside Boston's Charles Playhouse, where his play, "The Indian Wants the Bronx," is being produced. Horowitz says the Boston production of the play is "clearly the best that I've seen since New York City." (AP Laserphoto)

Many Shows To Get Axe, Critic Says

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's cancellation of "Sanford Arms" suddenly reminded us this week that once again it's time for the annual Fearless Forecast of the new, somewhat bad television season.

As in the past, we, ah, guess which new series will poop or prosper. "Sanford," of course, already is disqualified from the forecast.

So is Richard Pryor of NBC. He canceled himself by reducing his series commitment from 10 to four shows before the new season began. The last of his series, NBC says, airs Oct. 20.

As in the past, all new-show forecasts are made without benefit of tea leaves or their equivalent, ratings. The forecasts now begin.

SUNDAY — "On Our Own," starting this Sunday on CBS, concerns two young ladies who work in an advertising agency. They'd be wise not to plan any Christmas sales campaigns.

MONDAY — CBS' "Young Dan'l Boone" is another show that is permanently lost in the woods, already having been canceled. "Rafferty," a medicine show, also probably will expire, but "Betty White" gets a full season, maybe two.

ABC's "San Pedro Beach Bums" will be all washed up by December, provided we all pray real hard.

TUESDAY — CBS' "Fitzpatricks," a close-knit family, will not be around for Thanksgiving dinner. But "Lou Grant" and his newspaper are good for at least a season's circulation.

No call yet for a new Tuesday family, NBC's "Mulligan Stew," airing Oct. 25. But ABC's not-for-all-the-family "Soap" will float until January, then assuredly gurgle down the drain.

WEDNESDAY — NBC's "Oregon Trail" will be covered over before December, likewise "Big Hawaii," which started on aloha note.

THURSDAY — NBC's "CHiPs," a motorcycle hour, roars into oblivion in November, at which time "Rosetti and Ryan" will be disbanded. "Man From Atlantis," in what seems a salvage operation, moves to Tuesdays on Oct. 18. But the man and Atlantis will sink for keeps in December.

At ABC, "Carter Country" will be plowed under by January. A month earlier, Redd Foxx, who made a much-publicized network shift last spring, will prove that NBC's loss was ABC's loss.

FRIDAY — CBS' modernized "Wonder Woman" and new "Logan's Run" obviously aimed at the "Star Wars" trade. But The Force is not with them. Out they go in November.

SATURDAY — A similar fate awaits CBS' "We've Got Each Other." But it'll take at least another month before ABC's "Operation Petticoat" is pink-slipped and "Love Boat" joins the Titanic.

Ah, there's good news today for viewers who hate "Tonight" but dug "Fernwood 2-Night," the syndicated Norman Lear series that ran for 13 weeks this summer in only 31 markets.

Lear's office says the show, a spoof of talk shows, will start taping again at the end of this year.

CB Convac

By INK DIPPER

Channel One, as an advisory channel for CBers, is truly feasible and interest in creating this designation has growing support. This column has talked with the FCC and the Federal Highway Safety Department as well as CB-oriented officials in various states across the country.

"Anything that will get the pressure off channel nine has our vote," says Lt. Rod LaNore, of the Michigan State Police. "Getting channel one recognized as an advisory channel wherever you are could certainly go a long way toward accomplishing that."

In Washington, D.C. one of the authorities at NEAR (National Emergency Air Radio), Joe Bernard, reports his agency was interested in anything that made Channel Nine more effective.

"The Federal Highway Safety Program was designed to make fullest use of CB, even to the point of helping states fund their portion of the project," he explains. "There are 24 states now participating, one — Illinois — is fully operational, and 23 are in various stages of development."

The idea for channel one as an advisory channel evolved with the efforts of three states using it as a promotional device in their tourism campaigns. Tennessee, Maryland and Georgia have located base units in their Welcome Centers. Attendants there monitor channels nine and 19 for inquiries from CBers passing through and ask them to go down to one, the Hot Line, so questions can be answered.

All states report the program, conceived in the spring, has enjoyed definite success.

"The response has been good," says Tom Jackson, head of Tennessee's Tourism Department. "As more CBers have become aware of channel one when they visit Tennessee, the more queries we have been getting. In a year I think we'll have it established."

Neither of the three states utilizing channel one for advisory services are participants in the NEAR program. However, though the reasons for establishing channel one as a place to go for information wherever you travel are different, the result is essentially the same. It takes the pressure off channel nine, the designated emergency channel, and helps to relieve Channel 19, the truckers' channel. It should be noted, too, that the FCC has designated only one channel for specific use: channel nine: Emergency!

"The FCC has felt that any efforts to establish a channel for a certain purpose should come from the CBers themselves," says John Small, FCC executive in the personal communications section. "That is how channel 19 became known as the truckers' channel. To get channel one known as the advisory channel sounds like a great idea to me, and it certainly would help channel nine."

The combination of state tourism departments and highway safety programs which are worked in cooperation with the Federal government makes a nationwide network of information and advisory sources on channel one a very real objective. This utilization of channel one also would mean the beginning of the evolution of CB into the highly personal communications form for which it was intended.

Write your governor and let him know CBers can help the state through the greatest communications device ever: Citizens Band Radio!

LA Draws Even; Royals Slam Yanks 7-2

Sutton, Baker Key Bums' 7-1 Triumph

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers and Philadelphia Phillies are tied at one game each in the National League championship series today because of a pitch that was described as three feet too high, a foot and a half too far inside and hit 390 feet too far.

The picturesque description was made by losing pitcher Jim Lonborg, who threw the pitch to the Dodgers' Dusty Baker with the bases loaded in the fourth inning and the score tied 1-1.

Baker hit a grand slam home run to put Los Angeles ahead 5-1, a lead righthander Don Sutton protected as the Dodgers went on to a 7-1 victory that squared the best-of-five series at a game apiece.

So the series shifts to Philadelphia, where Burt Hooton and his knuckle curve will go for Los Angeles against power pitching Larry Christenson for the Phillies on Friday afternoon.

The second game simply narrowed down to that fourth inning after Bill Russell and Reggie Smith had singled and Ron Cey sacrificed. Then Phillies' Manager Danny Ozark took a slow walk out to talk to Lonborg.

"I had made up my mind to intentionally walk Steve Garvey," Ozark was to say later. "I just wanted to talk about how we would pitch to Baker."

Ozark said he reminded Lonborg to keep the ball down, so the infield could get a ground ball and bail out of the one-out jam.

"It was sound logic," said the crestfallen

Lonborg, who threw a sidearm curve on a 1-2 count to Baker that the Dodger slugger hammered into the left field seats, the second grand slam in two games for Los Angeles.

"Danny didn't know I was going to hang a curve ball," said Lonborg. "I knew when the pitch was 10 to 15 feet toward the plate that I had made a mistake."

Baker said he wasn't insulted when the Phillies elected to walk the clutch hitting Garvey to get to the former Atlanta Brave who hit 30 homers during the regular season, one of four Dodgers to do that.

"I knew it was a good percentage play," Baker said. "I just tried to remain calm, not to get too excited. I wasn't trying to hit the ball out of the stadium. I just wanted to hit it hard and not into a double play."

Ozark and Lonborg knew that Baker was 0-for-7 against Lonborg this year, including a fly out in the second inning.

Baker, of course, was elated after the game. "When I was a kid playing in the backyard in Riverside, (Calif.), I used to pretend I was the hero in a big game," said the Dodgers' left fielder. "I guess all kids play pretend games like that. But I never dreamed it would come true."

After Baker's big hit, the Dodgers turned the job over to Sutton, the righthander who posted a 14-8 record in Los Angeles' drive to the West Division championship.

"I'd give myself a seven or an eight on a scale of 10 for my performance," said Sutton, who gave up nine hits, including a third-inning home run to Bake McBride.

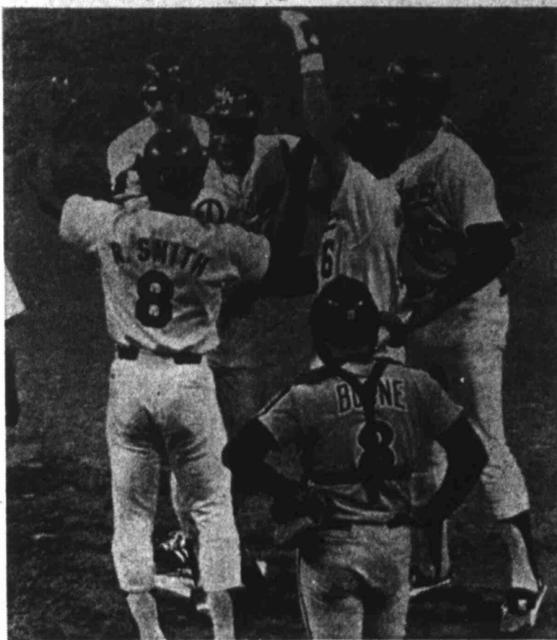

The Dodgers tied the game in the third on Rick Monday's double and a two-out single by Davey Lopes.

Lonborg left after four innings and was followed by Ron Reed and Warren Brusstar.

The Dodgers scored a run off Reed in the sixth on Ron Cey's single, a stolen base and Steve Yeager's single. In the seventh, Reggie Smith tripled across Bill Russell, who had singled off Brusstar.

The Dodgers now have to win two out

Kansas City Homers Pepper New Yorkers

NEW YORK (AP) — The Kansas City Royals, those Missouri riverboat gamblers, are playing a confidence game that they think will make them the first American League expansion team to float into the World Series.

The Royals, rolling an unbelievable string of winners since mid-June, continued the fun Wednesday with an easy 7-2 victory over the New York Yankees, those big-money sharpshooters from the East Coast, to take a 1-0 edge in the best-of-five AL playoffs.

The Yankees' also lost starter Don Gullett because of an injured shoulder and New York Manager Billy Martin said he doesn't expect his ace lefthander to pitch again this year.

The Royals, who raced to a 6-0 lead in the third inning, got a big lift when leadoff batter Freddie Patek walked to open the game and Hal McRae followed with a home run over the left field wall.

"It helped to get off in front when McRae hit it out," said the speedy little Patek. "We realized we could score off Gullett. The adrenaline was flowing and our confidence was flowing."

The confidence has been building for the Royals since June 17, when they began an amazing streak of 68 victories in 92 games, a winning clip of .786. Along the way, they had stretches of 21 victories in 22 games and 32 in 36.

Last year, the Royals were an uncertain club when they met the Yankees in October and lost the AL playoffs in five games. They had lost seven of their last eight regular-season games and 22 of their last 35.

"The difference was like night and day," said McRae. "Last year, we were terrible in the second half. This year we had a terrific streak in the second half. It's better to win. It builds your confidence and gives you lots of momentum."

"We had the best record in baseball this season. Naturally, we think we have the best team in baseball."

Wednesday, they played with the assurance of a card shark holding four aces, adding power to their game of speed, timely hitting and effective—if not spectacular—pitching.

They profited from three homers, two-run shots by McRae in the first and John Mayberry in the third off reliever Dick Tidrow and a solo blast by Al Cowens in the eighth. Patek's two-run double down the third base line in the second knocked in the only runs not scored on homers. Thurman Munson's two-run homer for the Yanks was all the AL East champions could manage before a home crowd of 54,930.

"We hit with authority," said Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog. "But we're still a running ball club."

The man most responsible for the Royals' increased home run production is Al Cowens, who has gotten Herzog's vote for the AL's Most Valuable Player.

"He's the best defensive right fielder in the league," said Herzog. "He batted a steady .300, had 23 homers and more than 100 RBIs (112)."

Cowens, in just his second full season in the major leagues, said he wasn't going to worry about the MVP Award. He also said he wasn't concerned that, coming from the Midwest, he and his teammates were underpublicized, despite having the best record in baseball.

"The lack of publicity won't keep me from playing hard every day," Cowens

Estacado, Lake View Vie For Loop Lead

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Prior to the start of the 1977 football campaign, the Lake View Chiefs were considered one of the havenots rather than one of the haves.

With only five offensive and the like number of defensive starters returning from a 10-1 district championship team, it was little wonder that some teams took them about as serious as they would a glee club.

However, that hasn't been the case this season. No sir, not by a long shot. It has been the Chiefs who have decided, despite having the fewest returnees in the loop, to again challenge for the district crown—ah, rather, the district head-dress.

And they have been doing it with vengeance.

Lake View will hope to continue its winning ways and Estacado will try to stop them when the two District 3-AAA powers collide at 7:30 p.m. tonight on the

Re-Evaluating
The SWC Race

PRIMARILY BECAUSE OF the 30-and 95-scholarship limits, more college football teams have chances to win than in years. For the same reasons, the foals trying to predict the outcomes have even better chances to lose.

Nevertheless, it's too tempting, so here's one view of the Southwest Conference after four weeks of play.

That pre-season Big Three of Texas A&M, Texas Tech and Houston looks kind of shaky now, although it's not inconceivable that any or all of the three could be at or near the top by the season's conclusion.

The Aggies, of course, hold an advantage because of their win over Tech, but the Raiders weren't manhandled, despite what the score indicates, and then the Farmers got destroyed by Michigan last weekend. So A&M has been exposed as much less than a super team.

The Aggies, 3-1 and 1-0 in the league, are average at quarterback, are rather stereotyped on offense and aren't quite as good on defense as they have been the past two seasons.

Tech's problems center around the loss of quarterback Rodney Allison and injuries in the offensive line. Allison is expected to return for the Texas game October 29, and Tech, 3-1 and 1-1, has contests versus Arizona and Rice and an open date before playing the Longhorns.

If the Raiders can win until Allison comes back, and if the defense continues its good play, they will still have a shot in the race.

HOUSTON, 3-1 AND 1-1, is also without its No. 1 quarterback, Danny Davis, but Delrick Brown has led the club to victories over Utah and Baylor. With Brown, Houston hasn't had as much trouble scoring as Tech—minus Allison—has, but quarterback is still a large question mark for the Cougars, as the heart of the SWC schedule nears. U of H must improve its defensive performance, too.

That brings us to the pre-season middle three of Texas, Arkansas and Baylor. Currently, Texas (3-0) and Arkansas (4-0) have performed like they should be in the top three, but the tougher parts of their schedules are coming up.

The Longhorns, who have defeated a trio of less-than-nobodies 184-15, battle Oklahoma this Saturday and then travel to the hills to play Arkansas October 15. After an open date this week, Arkansas hosts UT and then plays Houston at Little Rock the following weekend. It could be a make-or-break period for each team.

UT AND UA had quarterback problems in 1976 that were key factors in their demises to 5-5-1 marks. This year, the quarterbacks—Ron Calcagni of Arkansas and Mark McBath and Jon Aune of Texas—have remained healthy thus far.

At this time, Texas doesn't appear to be a great team, but it is a good one, barring a serious run of injuries. Arkansas, which has an impressive victory over Oklahoma State, along with wins over New Mexico State, Tulsa and TCU.

Slam Gives Baker New 'Memory'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dusty Baker, one-fourth of the Dodgers' Murderers Row, had hit his "most memorable" home run just last weekend, but it didn't take for that memory to fade.

The Los Angeles leftfielder hit his 30th homer of the season last Sunday, making the Dodgers the only team in major league history to have four players with 30 or more dramatic shot Wednesday night. But Baker hit an even more dramatic shot Wednesday night — a grand slam home run in Los Angeles' 7-1 National League Championship series victory over Philadelphia.

"This home run was the biggest of my career," said Baker after he'd snapped a 1-1 tie in the fourth inning to help the Dodgers even the playoffs at one game each.

"It's funny, I know I said that just a few days ago."

Baker's grand slam was the second in as many nights for the Dodgers. Ron Cey had hit one — the first in NL Championship series history — in Tuesday's 7-5 opening loss to the Phillies.

Cey also hit 30 home runs during the regular season. Steve Garvey had 33, and Reggie Smith 32 to give Los Angeles its home run record.

Dodger pitcher Burt Hooton, who faces Philadelphia's Larry Christenson in Friday's third game of the best-of-five series, said he's happy to have those four hitters on his side.

"I know Philadelphia has two fine power hitters in Mike Schmidt and Greg Luzinski," said Hooton, "but we have more balance in Garvey, Cey, Baker and Smith."

Baker was predictably elated following his towering blow into the leftfield bleachers against the Phils' Jim Longborg.

"When I was a kid playing in the backyard in Riverside (Calif.), I use to pretend I was the hero in a big game," Baker said. "I guess all kids play pretend games like that. But I never dreamed it would come true."

"It was particularly gratifying that Dusty hit his home run after they had walked Garvey to get to him," said Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda.

The Dodgers had runners at second and third with one out when Longborg intentionally walked Garvey.

"You hope he will pop it up," Longborg added. "But he didn't."

"Everyone is making a big deal about their record in Philadelphia," said Yeager, "but we've done well there overall."

Smith added, "I hope they aren't relying on their home field advantage. That will just put pressure on them. We still have to play the games. We're not going to lay down just because it's Philadelphia we are going to."

The Phillies, on the other hand, feel they accomplished their goal in the playoff series — a split in Los Angeles to give them the home field advantage.

"I feel very confident," said Ozark. "We're going home where we play very well and before a different kind of crowd."

Got An Extra Greenberg?

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Sylvester Krock wouldn't trade Ty Cobb for two Lou Brooks, but he's still looking for a Hank Greenberg.

The 73-year-old Krock, a retired insurance man and former newspaper printer, recently uncovered about 30 old baseball cards he had collected more than 60 years ago.

He had all but forgotten his collection until a trip to the attic produced the early-1900s cards of such stars as Cobb, Honus Wagner, Christy Mathewson and John McGraw.

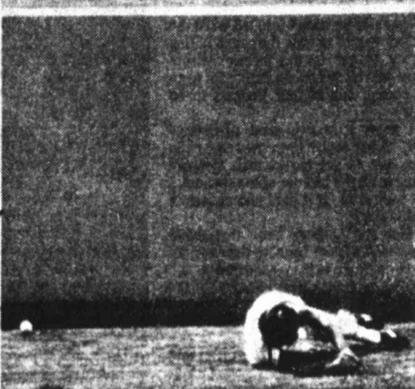

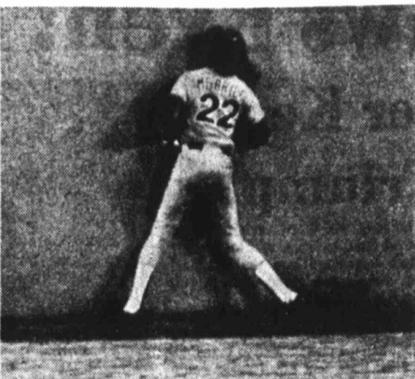

In those days, many cigarette companies produced the baseball cards, and Krock recalls "just picking 'em up" after the cards had been discarded by adults who bought the cigarettes.

"We would get 'em and trade 'em, if we had duplicates," Krock said. "All baseball players, we looked up to 'em."

Yet Krock does not have a baseball card of Greenberg, the player he probably admired most, who played for the Evansville Braves of the Three-I League before he reached the majors.

"We'd stand around outside at Bosse Field, and if we got a foul ball and brought it back we'd get in free," recalled Krock, who also admitted to sneaking into games on occasion.

"When ol' Hank Greenberg played out there, he'd line all of us kids up before the game and have us race, maybe 60-75 yards. To the kid who won the race, he'd give 'em a dime."

Kelly's Improvement Keys Tech's Defense

By CARTER CROMWELL
 Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

It came to Don Kelly very suddenly.

"It's kind of strange, I guess," the Texas Tech linebacker said, "but, during the third quarter of the Baylor game (Tech's season opener), I just all of a sudden decided that I had the ability to do the job."

"I had been doing fairly well until then, and I'd had a couple of quarterback sacks in the first half that helped my confidence."

Kelly also had an interception late in the fourth quarter that stopped a last-ditch Baylor offensive push, and he's steadily improved since then.

His improvement at the weakside linebacker spot has been one of the factors in the Raiders' strong defensive showing thus far in the 1977 season. He had been switched from the middle in the spring, and he was still somewhat of a question mark in the fall, but he's erased doubts about his ability to play. Linebacker had been a question mark for Tech before the season.

"Kelly has improved a lot," defensive coordinator Bill Parcells said. "He made some mistakes in the first two games, but still played well. Then he's played well the whole game against A&M and North Carolina."

The 6-0, 217-pounder says the switch from the middle to the weak side hasn't been that tough.

"There are some differences, particularly more pass coverage where I am now, but it hasn't been that big an adjustment."

"I like the weakside better than the middle. I really love it. I'm freer at the weakside. I get to move around more. In the middle, you've got people coming at you from both directions, and you stay bunched up the whole time."

He's pleased with his progress this season, but sees room for improvement.

"I had a real good spring, so I was pretty confident at the start of the fall," he said. "I've made a good bit of improvement this season, but I still need to become more consistent, overall."

Kelly sees this week's opponent, Arizona, as being more explosive than North Carolina.

"They throw more, and they've got a lot of speed, too. And they've got a good quarterback. This ought to be a little faster-paced game than the North Carolina game was."

NOTES: Tech went through a two-hour drill Wednesday, working on the passing game and reviewing plans for Arizona, head coach Steve Sloan said.

Sloan said Tech's starting quarterback for the Arizona contest might be decided on today, but added that "we might wait until we get out there before deciding." Either Tres Adams, last week's starter, or Mark Johnson will get the starting nod Saturday.

Sloan said that offensive strong-side guard Greg Wesells is questionable for the next two games with the disc problem in his back that he's been troubled with since before the season began.

He might be able to play against Texas October 29, though.

Outfielders Parker, Luzinski, Foster Top UPI's NL Squad

NEW YORK (UPI) — Duve Parker, George Foster and Greg Luzinski, three muscular outfielders who created more havoc than the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse on their greatest day, were overwhelming selections today on UPI's 1977 National League All-Star team.

Parker, who led the league with a .338 average, hit 21 homers and knocked in 88 runs for the Pittsburgh Pirates, was the only unanimous choice of the 25 sports writers who participated in the UPI's annual post-season survey.

Foster, who had a .320-52-149 offensive performance for the Cincinnati Reds, received 24 of a possible 25 votes while Luzinski, whose offensive performance was .309-39-130 for the Philadelphia Phillies, received 23. The trio forms perhaps the hardest-hitting, most productive mythical outfield in NL history.

Also voted onto the team were catcher Ted Simmons of the St. Louis Cardinals, first baseman Steve Garvey of the Los Angeles Dodgers, second baseman Joe Morgan of the Reds, shortstop Garry Templeton of the Cardinals and third baseman Mike Schmidt of the Phillies.

Steve Carlton, the league's leading winner with 23 victories for the Phillies, and Tom Seaver of the Reds, who finished the season with a 21-4 mark, were named the starting pitchers with Bruce Sutter of the Chicago Cubs a lopsided choice as relief pitcher.

Broken down by teams, the Phillies and Reds each had three all-stars, the Cardinals two and the Dodgers, Pirates and Cubs one each. Seven of the 11 players were on Eastern Division teams — an unusual geographical breakdown for an all-star team.

Seaver's election was the closest, with the three-time Cy Young Award-winner beating out 20-game winner Rick Reichel of the Cubs, eight votes to seven.

Seaver had a 14-3 record with the Reds after being acquired from the New York Mets on June 15.

Otherwise, Templeton's 12-7 vote over the Reds Dave Concepcion was the closest vote.

Reggie Smith of the Dodgers and Dave Winfield of the San Diego Padres received the only outfield votes that did not go to Foster and Luzinski.

Pats Open 'Second Season'

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The New England Patriots have begun what the team hopes will be its second season, even though the 1977 schedule is only three games old.

Back on the practice field Wednesday were All-pro linemen John Hannah and Leon Gray as coach Chuck Fairbanks returned to fundamentals in a two-hour workout that included typical pre-season blocking drills.

"They worked out fine in practice," said Fairbanks of the stars who had sought improved contracts, walked out on the team Sept. 11 and returned reluctantly Tuesday to avoid sitting out the year.

In the interim, New England lost close games to Cleveland and the New York Jets, and is 1-2.

"I was in the right frame of mind today when I got a warm reception from the players," Gray said after practice.

Hannah had virtually nothing to say, and Fairbanks asked reporters to drop the issue.

"I'd like to get it out of the way as fast as I can," he said. "I've had 23 days of it."

Hannah, a guard, and Gray, a tackle, will start Sunday as the Patriots try to take out their troubles on the visiting Seattle Seahawks.

It shouldn't be too hard, because Seattle coach Jack Patera said in a telephone interview that his two-year-old team "can't expect to compete with Super Bowl contenders. New England is out of our league."

The Patriots offensive linemen worked hard on the blocking sled Wednesday and Gray said he and Hannah will be in top shape within a week.

Fairbanks said Hannah is three or four pounds overweight. Gray said he has not gained a pound.

To make room for the stars, Fairbanks sent defensive tackle Arthur Moore to the Browns Wednesday for an undisclosed draft choice, and put veteran center Bob Hyland on waivers.

Gray said the walkout "is history now. Some (fans) may be a little sore, but I hope they understand it was just a little family dispute."

The pair's teammates said little, but the mood in the locker room seemed exuberant.

However, Fairbanks said some players are "out of shape, while others need 'mental discipline' on the field."

And the financial bickering by Hannah and Gray, who earn a reported $60,000 to $65,000 per year each, only has been postponed until after the season.

"There were lots of smiles, lots of handshaking, lots of arms around each other," Gray said. "It was almost like training camp."

But training camp ended weeks ago, and the playoff-hopeful Patriots already have lost two games they were expected to win.

"I have confidence in this team, that it can come back," Fairbanks said.

PERKINS

Giant QB Not Jewish

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ And STEVE PERKINS

Q. I would like somebody to answer now all the experts who cried that the Tom Seaver trade guaranteed the Cincinnati Reds a pennant. What are the experts saying now?

—Ed White, Dayton, Ohio

A. Well, they are saying that Seaver guarantees the Reds a pennant in 1978. In fact, at the time Seaver joined the Reds they trailed LA by seven and a half games. When the Dodgers clinched the division title, the margin was 10 1/2.

Q. Can you tell me about the rookie quarterback with the New Jersey Giants? Is he Orthodox?

—Jay Samuels, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

A. New York writers have had a lot of fun with this rookie: "They laughed when Jerry Golsteyn could not spell his own name," etc. Golsteyn is not Jewish. His name stems from his Dutch ancestry.

A low-round draft choice out of Northern Illinois, Golsteyn quit his first training camp in 1976 and went home to his wife. The Giants' coach at the time, Bill Arnsparger, enlisted the help of Mrs. Golsteyn in talking the 6-4 quarterback into coming back. The Golsteyns stayed at the Arnsparger home for a while. He later hurt his knee in practice, and missed the entire season.

Q. What will happen to the barefooted placekicker at Texas A&M, Tony Franklin, when he tries to make it in the NFL? Do pro scouts ask him to work out with his shoe on?

—George Hendricks, Alice, Tx.

A. Contrary to popular belief, Franklin will not be required to wear a shoe in the NFL. The director of NFL officials, Art McNally, when briefing the CBS announcers on rules changes, said: "There is no rule requiring the wearing of shoes. There is a rule requiring socks. It's possible a barefooted kicker could wear a stirrup sock and kick legally."

Q. Our local sports editor uses every opportunity to take a cut at coach John McKay of Tampa Bay. Unless McKay has changed drastically since he was at USC, this criticism is hogwash. Can you tell me the truth of the matter? What are the prospects for the future?

—S.G., Gainesville, Fla.

A. At this point, NFL people do not rate McKay's field tactics very highly. For example, he has Tampa Bay running out of the I-formation 60 percent of the time, way too much, because you cannot get the deep back into a pass pattern from the I. Also, McKay calls for the bomb about 30 percent of the time. Most teams employ it only four or five times a game.

Finally, there is McKay's favoritism toward his son. The young McKay runs a 5.0 in the 40, which is impossibly slow for a wide receiver in the NFL. McKay would never let a pro scout tell his son the true clocking. "Whatever he runs," McKay would say, "tell him he did it in 4.7, because that's what I been telling him all his life."

But the Tampa organization is slowly gathering good athletes through the draft and should be competitive by 1980.

EHS-Chiefs Vie For 3-3A Lead

(From Page One)

Lowrey Field turf. Some folks feel the game between the unbeaten Chiefs and the Matadors (2-3) could decide the whole ball of wax—the district championship, in other words.

Everyone with the exception of Estacado coach Lewis Kelley.

"The winner will have a good shot at it," Kelley told newsmen gathered at Underwood's Wednesday. "But I think there is still a long way to go. You cannot go into the second district game of the year with that kind of idea."

What Kelley is trying to say is that you don't need to count your district championship before it hatches.

The Matadors, the team chosen by the loop bosses as the squad to beat for the crown, opened the conference chase last week with a narrow 12-0 win over Dunbar. Down in San Angelo, the Chiefs were scoring the most lopsided victory, a 36-0 win over Brownfield, during the opening evening of play.

Behind the strong running of John Maberry, a starter for the past three years, Lake View has managed to roll up an impressive 163 total points this year, the most of any 3-AAA team.

The 175-pound speedster has gained 2,925 yards during his high school stint and garnered all-district honors for the past two seasons.

Not bad for a have not.

The Chiefs also lead the loop in total points allowed against its defense, 33. The number is exactly how many the Matadors scored during their first four games.

On the injury scene for the Matadors, defensive gem Michael Sims will miss the game, quarterback Mike Chatham is expected to see some action and speedster Kenzie Burrell has a hand injury but will start.

Kelley believes the key to the Chief attack is its quarterback Gary Speck, a senior signal-caller who recently transferred from San Angelo Central.

"He (Speck) runs their offense extremely well," Kelley said. "And we will have to stop him if we hope to stop Lake View."

On defense, the group runs a split-six setup which worries Kelley somewhat.

"We had a meeting of the coaches to decide what to do about it (the defense) and I have five different thoughts from my coaches," Kelley said. "I guess that means I'll have that many many people to blame if something goes wrong."

Four Americans Snare Match Play Victories

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — "I don't mind playing 36 holes of golf a day," said Tom Watson as he prepared to trudge around Wentworth's rain-soaked "Burma Road" course for the second time today in pursuit of the World Match Play golf title.

"It's not a difficult course to walk," he added. "I just hope I can start playing a bit better."

Sixteen of the world's top golfers, at the end of a long and tiring season, struggled to find their form in Wednesday's first round of the year's most grueling event. The eventual winner faces a maximum of 144 holes in four days before earning the first prize of $52,500.

Watson, this year's Masters and British

Open champion, was one of the eight winners in the first round, played in damp and chilling conditions. He beat Hsieh Min-Nan of Taiwan 2 and 1.

"We both played poorly," Watson said. "I didn't drive the ball very well. I didn't do anything very well."

Watson faced Severiano Ballesteros of Spain in today's second round.

Other matches today included: Hale Irwin, two-time winner of the title, vs. Hugh Baiocchi, South Africa; Graham Marsh, Australia, vs. Manuel Pinero, Spain, and Lanny Wadkins vs. Ray Floyd.

Irwin, trying to win this title for the third time in four years, edged Peter Oosterhuis of Britain, thanks to an eagle three at the 33rd hole.

That was another match which failed to live up to the reputations of the players. For 10 holes of the afternoon, neither player broke par—a spell of indifferent golf which ended with Irwin's eagle.

"It was a classic case of one guy hitting a bad shot and the other guy following him into trouble," Irwin said.

Yet the day produced some of the unpredictable thrills of match play.

Floyd led Ernesto Acosta of Mexico by four holes after 20, played four bad holes and lost the lead, but fought back to win in a playoff at the 37th.

Gary Player of South Africa, who has won the title five times, was five holes up on Pinero after seven holes. But the Spaniard won 13 of the next 20 holes and ended with a 6 and 5 victory.

Hubert Green, U.S. Open champion, suffered from bad putting in losing 5 and 4 to Marsh.

Baiocchi, a late replacement for Ben Crenshaw, ousted defending champion David Graham of Australia 2 and 1.

Three 300s Within One Hour Span

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Don't even try to figure the odds, but...

Three Lafayette bowlers competing in a Midwest Bowling Association tournament last weekend at Lincoln, Ill., threw perfect 300 games within a span of one hour.

"I can't begin to figure the odds on three of us doing such a thing," Jerry Wyrick, 29, said after returning home this week.

Wyrick, Skip Thayer and Terry Clayton all threw the required 12 strikes in a row, with Thayer, 22, winning the 124-man tourney with an association record 247 average for the first eight-game qualifying round. For the tourney he averaged 226.

Wyrick, who finished eighth in the tournament, got his perfect game first, on his fourth game in the qualifying round.

Thayer rolled 300 on his third game. He also bowled a perfect game about a year ago.

Then, with their 300 games tucked away, Wyrick and Thayer began rooting for Clayton, who was bowling a short time later.

"Hey, I can't go back empty-handed after what you guys have done," said Clayton, who manages the Purdue University lanes. So he proceeded to bowl his perfect game.

"The management said it had been 10 years since there was a 300 game rolled on any of those alleys," said Wyrick.

Carter Cromwell

should be placed in the same category. Both have some potent offensive guns. But who knows what will happen in the coming weeks? A couple of big wins and a small injury list could lift either club higher; a disappointing loss and a run of injuries could send them plummeting.

Texas has the least favorable remaining schedule of the two. The Longhorns play Houston, A&M and Arkansas on the road and have only Tech, of the contenders, at home. The Razorbacks will host Texas and Houston and travel to play A&M and Tech. The Aggies actually have the best remaining slate of the contenders, hosting Arkansas, Texas and Houston in the last four weeks of the campaign.

BAYLOR HAS YET to get things together this season, primarily because of injuries to all three of its quarterbacks. The Bears, 1-3 and 0-2, are most likely eliminated from the SWC race because of their two conference losses, but have ability and could make trouble, for they still must play A&M, Arkansas and Texas.

The pre-season bottom three are still at the bottom. SMU, with a 2-2 mark, is the best of the lot. Rice, with a win over lowly Idaho and three crushing defeats, will play without TCU this weekend in what is quite likely the last chance for either team to win this season.

Predicting isn't easy nowadays, but the bottom three, at least, aren't expected to shake things up much.

Tech Plans Tucson Pre-Game Reception

A pre-football game reception for Texas Tech ex-students, friends and supporters will be held at the Plaza International Hotel, 1900 East Speedway Blvd., in Tucson from 5-6:30 p.m. (MST) Saturday.

The Texas Tech Red Raiders meet the University of Arizona Wildcats in an inter-sectional game at 7:30 p.m. in Tucson. The hotel is within walking distance of the stadium.

Ex-Students Association executive director Wayne James said the reception is open to all supporters of the Red Raider athletic program.

ABC Still Struggling With Series Lineup

BY HOWARD SMITH

NEW YORK (AP) — The World Series gets under way Tuesday and ABC, which will cover the classic for the first time ever, is still struggling with its line-up card.

The network hasn't decided how many bodies to crowd into the booth and which bodies will be so honored. Keith Jackson will be there to handle the play-by-play. Howard Cosell will be there to do his thing. But Bob Uecker, the third man on the network's Monday Night Baseball team, probably won't be there, which is a shame because, in our humble opinion, he's the best baseball man ABC has got.

It has been traditional to use announcers from the participating teams to bolster network World Series coverage. NBC has done it for years. Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn would like to see that tradition followed and ABC apparently is planning to do so. But there is nothing official from the network on who will be used or how they will be used.

In addition, there is a report that Cincinnati pitcher Tom Seaver will be on the announcing team and another that Reggie Jackson will be there if the Yankees fail to get into the Series. Both worked the playoffs on ABC last year. ABC says it will pick the announcers itself and that's that. The baseball commissioner's office says ABC will make the picks but must "consult" with the commissioner. Why? Can the commissioner veto ABC's choices? What if ABC picks Sonny and Cher to do the game, does the commissioner have to approve?

The bottom line is that ABC must "consult" but then can pick whomever it wants.

No matter what ABC comes up with on the Series, it is going to have to go some to beat NBC's excellent coverage of the playoffs. The camera work, in particular, on Tuesday night's Philadelphia-Los Angeles game was outstanding and credit for that must go to veteran director Harry Coyle.

Coyle's experience in directing baseball games goes back to the 1947 Series matching the Yankees and Dodgers. Since then, Coyle has directed almost every televised World Series game.

This year, however, with ABC handling the Series, Coyle will be at home in New Jersey. How does he feel about missing the Series for the first time in 30 years?

"I feel good," says Coyle, "because I'm gonna sit back and relax, put my feet up on a hassock and second guess ABC."

Coyle's handiwork was apparent in the excellent pictures on Tuesday night's game. He called up camera shots catching virtually all of the important action from different angles. We got a great shot of Dodger shortstop Bill Russell missing second base on a putout attempt, some fine replays of the Phils' Mike Schmidt around third base and, on Ron Cey's dramatic grand slam homer, we got the play, Dodger team reaction, a marvelous isolated shot of the Dodgers' Dave Lopes bounding down the third base line watching the ball go out and, to complete the sequence, a closeup of Phils' pitcher Steve Carlton, grim and stony faced.

ABC has a tough act to follow.

Even CBS, which has nothing to do with baseball, is making an effort to keep up with the national pastime. The network has hired Pete Rose, the outspoken Cincinnati third baseman, to offer his comments and analysis on the playoffs and World Series. Rose will appear on "Sports Spectacular" and "The NFL Today" over the next two weekends.

It has taken Don Meredith a couple of weeks to get back in gear after his much-heralded return to ABC's Monday Night Football. Last Monday night he hit stride with an assortment of hoots, down-home chatter and pointed exchanges with Howard Cosell. The following took place after unheralded Kansas City linebacker Dave Rozumek, from the University of New Hampshire, made a jarring tackle:

COSELL: That kid came from nowhere.

MEREDITH: No he didn't. He came from New Hampshire.

COSELL: Yeah, but he came from nowhere.

MEREDITH: No he didn't. He came from the outside linebacker spot.

COSELL: I know, but I never thought that kid would still be around.

MEREDITH: Well, he never thought you'd still be here either.

The exchange also prompted a telegram from New Hampshire Gov. Meldrim Thomson, chastising Cosell and pointing out the glories of New Hampshire football.

Jones Wouldn't Recognize Phils

By SANDY GRADY Philadelphia Evening Bulletin

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — They are tycoons whose salaries rival the board chairmen of the Fortune 400. They are TV stars in tailored, sleek polyester uniforms. They are a Mod Squad in flared jeans and dry-blown curls.

They are the 1977 Phillies, that glossy and high-priced machine that matches the Dodgers in the playoffs, and compared to the old Phillies ball clubs their style is different as — well, AstroTurf and grass.

I mean, will somebody here page Willie Jones?

No, I don't know where you'll find him — in a Trappist monastery maybe — but I'd like to check out Willie's reaction to these mod-styled '77 Phillies plutocrats.

Willie, see, was the quintessential Old Breed ball player. He read comic books and chewed tobacco and played third base with a glove the size of a frying pan and pants as baggy as tow sacks. He could be a tough hitter, give you .280 and 20-25 home runs, at least when his bionics didn't hurt and his hangover wasn't too severe.

They called him Puddinhead and he came out of a dusty Carolina hamlet and played 11 years here, including the '50 World Series year, and never made more than $25,000, which the loan sharks were usually after by mid-July.

I'd like Willie Jones to meet Mike Schmidt. It would be like Rutherford B. Hayes meeting Jimmy Carter. Or Herman Melville with Norman Mailer. Or John Philip Sousa with Mick Jagger.

If Willie could walk through the Phillies clubhouse now, it would be like putting Orville Wright in the cockpit of a 747 jet.

The salaries, Willie, would blow your cork. The third baseman's making $440,000 and the left fielder's around 400,000 and the shortstop's pulling down 190 big ones and the starting leftfielder's around 250.

The top salary on the Phils '50 World Series team was probably $25,000 — Richie Ashburn made only $10,000. Now the utility infielders make $50-60,000 and have agents and contracts that run until 1980.

They play on plastic grass and hit a Rawlings baseball loaded with glycerine and wear polyester uniforms tailored like a Brooks Brothers suit and travel by chartered jet — remember the all-night train rides on the old BO rattlers, Willie?

And hair dryers, Willie. That's right, hair dryers. In the clubhouse after a game, the Noreicos and Sunbeams sound like a sorority house on prom night.

That, of course, is because they have hair — ringlets and muttonchops and beards and mustachios and the sweeping locks of Gen. Custer. And they wear Gucci belts and velvet suits.

And — I'll swear this on a stack of

Detroit Raises Price of Ducats

DETROIT (AP) — The renovation of Tiger Stadium means fans will pay more to see the ball game.

"Our costs of operation continue to spiral upward with no sign of letting up," general manager Jim Campbell said Thursday.

The Tigers are adding $1 to the charge for all seats but those in the bleachers next season. Box seats will be $6, reserved seats $5 and general admission seats $3.50. Bleacher seats will rise 50 cents to $2.

Fifty cents will be taken by the city from all tickets to retire a $10 million bond issue that's helping to modernize the stadium.

Sporting News. Willie — one infielder carries a handbag.

The style now, Willie, is Supercool. There isn't as much wild booting. These guys are into Transcendental Meditation and judo and biorythms, and they commute to the suburbs like young lawyers.

One more thing, Willie — it's the way the New Breed talks. Oh, privately, these still employ baseball's favorite four-letter cuss word. But this is the TV age, and they give interviews with all the suave sophistication of a Henry Kissinger press conference.

Your idea of an interview, Willie, was to unload tobacco juice on a reporter's shoes and tell him your corns hurt "only when mah feet hit the ground."

The New Breed is articulate and talks of "team character" and "our defensive depth" and "velocity" and "bat control." They all dream of someday becoming Frank Gifford or Tony Kubek or maybe network anchormen.

You'd like most of them, I think, Willie. You'd like Greg Luzinski, who's tough and stolid and bears down in the old style. You'd like Tug McGraw's daffiness and Larry Bowa's Dead End Kid insolence and Richie Hebner's old-fashioned casualness and Tim McCarver's guttiness at the end of a career.

And the manager, Danny Ozark, is out of your era, but he treats his loan sharks as gentle as a Scoutmaster on an overnight hike.

And you'd like the way this ball club hangs tough together, Willie. They needle each other ruthlessly, and their black stars, Garry Maddox and Bake McBride, are socially a solid part of a mostly white team. They celebrate hard together — the champagne bust in Chicago was a beauty, and one player ran up a $398 bill in his room later for a private bash.

And they've got enough of the old-style craziness to make you feel at home, Willie. I mean, a team that will go out at 1 a.m. to apply red spray paint to the statue of Phil Sheridan's horse doesn't lack imagination.

One more thing, maybe the most important, Willie. They're good ball players — yes, better than the Phillies of your generation in the 1940's and 1950's. Not tougher or more competitive, but bigger and stronger and certainly faster.

I get a little dissent from one of your peers, Richie Ashburn, on that opinion. Richie says some of the 1950's outfit, namely Robin Roberts and Curt Simmons and Jim Konstanty and Del Ennis, were as good as these '77 guys, and he insists it was tougher to win in 1950 because there were only eight teams, ergo, more concentrated talent. "But sure, this bunch has 25 better players," admits Ashburn.

So maybe you would be impressed, Willie. And maybe, if we see how this New Breed handles the pressure of the Dodger playoffs and maybe a World Series, I'll be impressed too. But it's different.

If they win it all, Willie, I'll buy you a hair dryer. Throw in a Gucci handbag, flared velvet jeans and a Rolls Royce Silver Cloud, and you're ready for a comeback.

said. "But by winning, we'll make things change."

Covens did some changing himself this year. Moving into the cleanup spot, he clubbed 23 homers in 606 at-bats. Last season, in 581 at-bats, he had just three homers.

"When I reported to spring training, Whitey told me he wanted me to pull the ball more and hit with more power. I had a long talk with (batting coach) Charley (Lau) and he and I changed my stance."

"He suggested I get my hands up higher and close my stance, which enables me to pull the ball better."

Covens, who pulled his homer to left field, also beat out an infield single before Mayberry's third-inning homer and singled in the first. He made three fine plays in right field, including one in which he reached over the wall to rob Mickey Rivers of a homer.

Another confidence man in the Royals' lineup Wednesday was starting and winning pitcher Paul Splittorff, who was 16-6 this year, including a 15-2 mark from May 20 to the end of the season. He scattered eight hits, giving way to Doug Bird after one batter in the ninth.

"Starting the opening game gave me a special feeling," said Splittorff. "My biggest battle has been staying aggressive and maintaining my confidence. I used to be shy and timid and scared in certain situations, but no more."

Two of the Yankees' scariest batters, home run threats Reggie Jackson and Graig Nettles, surrendered meekly to Splittorff.

Nettles, with 37 homers this year, never pulled the ball in hitting out to the shortstop three times and the left fielder once; Jackson, with 32 homers, struck out and popped to the shortstop, second baseman and the left fielder.

"I made good pitches on both guys all day, especially Reggie," Splittorff said.

Ron Guidry gets the Yanks' starting assignment tonight against Andy Hassler in a battle of lefthanders.

"Andy's pitched very well here. He hasn't been lucky," said Herzog.

Guidry said he's looking forward to trying the series tonight.

Royals Off And ... Trotting

NEW YORK (AP) — The Kansas City Royals are off and running ... or is that off and trotting?

The Royals did a little running—a stolen base and a successful hit-and-run play—and a lot of trotting—home runs by Hal McRae, John Mayberry and Al Cowens—in trouncing the New York Yankees 7-2 Wednesday in the opening game of the best-of-five American League playoffs.

"I think we can hit with power and run at the same time," said Manager Whitey Herzog. "The game dictates whether or not we will run. But we're a running team and we'll continue to be."

The Royals also are a relaxed team despite their quest for revenge after losing last year's playoff to the Yankees in the ninth inning of the fifth and final game.

"Winning the first game means we can relax even more," said Cowens, who delivered two singles in addition to his homer and made three sparkling plays in right field, reaching above the fence to rob Mickey Rivers of a potential home run.

The Royals demonstrated they had not cooled off from a late-season stretch in which they won 21 of 22 games and captured the AL West title by eight games over Texas.

"I know we were more relaxed in August and September than last year and that our experience last year is helping us now," Herzog said.

The playoff opener was settled quickly. McRae homered in the first inning. Fred Patek's two-run double made it 4-0 in the second and Mayberry slammed a two-run homer off reliever Dick Tidrow in the third.

The first four runs came off New York starter Don Gullett, who left the game with an aching shoulder and may not be available the rest of the series.

"He probably won't pitch again this year," said Manager Billy Martin. "I doubt it very much. How long was he out the other times he was hurt? Several weeks. This is the same thing—the same injury in the same spot."

Gullett, who led the league in winning percentage with a 14-4 record for a .778 mark although he spent most of August on the disabled list, said he wanted another chance, although trainer Gene Monahan concurred with Martin's diagnosis.

"I just couldn't get loose," Gullett said. "I just didn't feel good warming up. I didn't feel I had real good stuff. When you can't get loose you have no control of the ball and I had no velocity."

"But I've been in situations before when I didn't really feel that good warming up and I loosened up toward the end and things would be all right when I got out there on the mound."

But when Gullett got out on the mound he walked Patek on four pitches to start the game and, after a chat with Martin, served up a home run pitch to McRae.

"I saw he was pitching straight up and down and not following through properly," Martin said. "He corrected that but he just made pitches to areas where he didn't want to pitch."

Meanwhile, Paul Splittorff, with ninth-inning help from Doug Bird, checked the Yankees except for Thurman Munson's two-run homer in the third.

"I had good control and I went predominantly with the fast ball and slider," Splittorff said after raising his career record against the Yankees to 12-5, including three victories this season. "My approach was to keep the ball away from their lefthanded hitters and keep them off-balance."

"I made good pitches on both (Graig) Nettles and (Reggie) Jackson all day, especially Reggie. Those guys' power comes from mistakes out over the plate and I didn't really make any mistakes out over the plate today."

Matadors Face 'Must' Contest

Randy Hicks admits "everything's on the line for us this week" as he prepares his state-ranked Motley County Matadors for a 2-B North Zone showdown against Sudan.

Despite its 5-0 mark, Motley County has not impressed a lot of coaches in the area mainly because margins of victory in three games were 1, 3 and 12 points.

"Look," Hicks pointed out, "we could have scored 75-00 points against New Home (a 45-8 win) and we had eleven 15-yard penalties against Nazareth (an 18-6 triumph) and still gained 314 yards on the ground."

"We're not going to run up a big score like some people will. Forty-odd points will be the most we'll score on anybody. There are two reasons for this. One, this type game presents us an opportunity to play all our younger kids and get them experience."

"Second, I don't want to kill someone's morale like that. I've been on a team that people have walked all over (at McLean four years back where he finished 0-10) and there's not much fun involved."

The Matadors, ranked No. 6 on the AP state listings, have beaten a pair of Class A teams, Paducah by 1 and Crosbyton by 3. "Those were two super teams the nights we played them," Hicks said. "I don't think they realize how good they can be."

"Last year we scored 7 points against Paducah; this year we doubled that. Last year we got 18 against Crosbyton and this year we got 22, so that's about even."

"People don't realize that last year Nazareth and Lubbock were young teams and that they've improved a great deal. These rankings have been a morale booster for us, but they've also made everyone we've played try extra hard to knock us off."

Hicks indicated the defense hadn't jelled yet but was improving. "We've had to start a lot of first-year people on defense and they're just learning how to do the job and stay with their keys. We just don't have the experience on defense we had the last couple of years."

The Matadors are averaging almost 300 yards a game, despite the fact their biggest gainer has been 25 yards. "That's something I just don't understand," Hicks said. "We've got the people to break, but we've been a ball control, east-the-clock-up team all year."

Hicks as much as admitted that Sudan would finish undefeated if it gets past his Matadors.

Eagles' Davis Ups Area Scoring Lead

Clarence Davis tallied three touchdowns last week to lengthen his area scoring lead to four points. The Seagraves speedster now has 85 points on the year on 12 TDs and 13 PATs.

Runner-up this week is Jerry Lee of Motley County, who also managed three TDs a week ago and now has 81 points. Clifford Bailey of Tahoka, last week's runner-up, could manage only one six-pointer and fell to fifth.

Mike Jones of Petersburg is third with 76 points and Danny Murphy of Idalou moved into the No. 4 spot with 74 points. Jones accounted for 24 points in a 33-32 victory over Ralls last week and Murphy came up with three TDs last week.

Albert Rand of Three Way is running away with the Six-Man race, thanks to a 36-point performance last week. He now has 121 points and has increased his pad over runner-up Clay Freeman of Loop from six to 36 points.

Briscoe-UT

AUSTIN (UPI) — The No. 4 ranked Texas Longhorns, preparing for Saturday's clash with No. 3 ranked Oklahoma, received a surprise visit Wednesday from one of their biggest fans — Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

"I just came out to watch," Briscoe said. "I am here to get ready for a big day Saturday when Texas will decisively defeat Oklahoma."

"You know, the Oklahoma governor (David Boren) and I agree on everything, except on the day of this game, when his personality changes."

Longhorn coach Fred Akers, who in his first year with Texas has directed his team to a 3-0 mark, welcomed Briscoe and then invited him to join the team for dinner, which Briscoe did.

Cowboys

DALLAS (UPI) — If tradition rules this week, the Dallas Cowboys will not be the only undefeated team in the NFC next week.

The Cowboys (3-0) travel to St. Louis Sunday and will wear metallic blue jerseys. The Cardinals have beaten the Cowboys in St. Louis in each of the past three seasons. In all three games, the Cowboys wore blue.

"I feel fine about them (the blue jerseys) because I don't have to wear one," coach Tom Landry said Tuesday, drawing a laugh from reporters at his weekly news conference. "Seriously, we don't worry about it. But if we lose, it'll be the blue jerseys. Remember that next week."

On a serious note, Landry said there was no difference between the current Cardinal team and the one from last year, despite St. Louis' rather dismal 1-3 record this season.

"St. Louis is playing better defense than last year. Otherwise, I see very little difference," he said. "Their offense hasn't really gotten untracked but the weapons are still there. They are going to explode sooner or later."

"We've had some great football games in St. Louis and I would say this one probably will be the same type."

Landry, however, dodged queries as to how critical the St. Louis game and the Washington game the following week would be to Dallas making the playoffs. The Cardinals, Redskins and Cowboys traditionally are the strong teams in the NFC East Division.

"I don't know how critical they are," he replied. "The season is young yet and we just want to play well. I see a lot of things getting better but championships are won in the second half of the season. As long as we're in striking distance at the halfway point I'll be satisfied."

Landry said starting guard Herb Scott, who missed the 23-7 victory over Tampa Bay last Sunday, would play against the Cardinals.

Landry said game balls for performances against Tampa Bay were awarded to fullback Robert Newhouse, who scored on a 17-yard run, linebacker Thomas Henderson, who returned an interception 79 yards for a touchdown and Bennie Barnes for his work on specialty teams.

McBath

AUSTIN (AP) — The annual Texas-Oklahoma battle hasn't made much of an impression on Mark McBath, who'll quarterback No. 5 Texas against the No. 2 Sooners on Saturday.

McBath, a sophomore, said his fondest memories of the game was watching it on television. "It was always one of those traditions of the Christmas holidays."

The Texas-Oklahoma classic has been an October game for years.

Fem Golf

CROSBY, Tex. (AP) — Judy Rankin, who has won more than $100,000 this season and is first on the money list, heads the list of entries in the $50,000 Ladies Professional Golfers Association championship tournament which gets under way Friday.

Other favorites include Kathy Whitworth, the all-time money winner, and Debbi Austin, a multiple victor this season after breaking into the winner's circle for the first time.

Eighty-three pros and five amateurs will be in 54-hole event which will be played at the Newport Yacht Country Club.

The LPGA is returning to the Houston area after a three-year lapse. Whitworth was the winner the last time.

UH Probation

HOUSTON (AP) — A spokesman for the National Collegiate Athletic Association admits the association may have set a speed record in finding University of Houston guilty of recruiting violations involving freshman quarterback Darrell Shepard.

"This might have been processed more quickly than any case since I've been here," Bill Hunt, director of enforcement for the NCAA, told the Houston Post.

Hunt credited a larger staff as one of the reasons why it took less than eight months to resolve the case.

Dave Carwood, director of public relations for the NCAA, said, "I can't tell you of a case processed any quicker, but our staff has been increased so much that the trend in recent months is to act more rapidly."

Southwest Conference Commissioner Cliff Spurgeon said, "I've never heard of a case being processed quicker than this one. We (the SWC) had not completed our process yet, but we do have a meeting scheduled soon."

The Cougars will not be allowed to play in any postseason bowl game this season and will be banned from regular season television games next season.

Akers-OU

AUSTIN (AP) — Coach Fred Akers didn't predict his Texas team would beat Oklahoma, but he promised the Longhorn Club one thing — the Longhorns will know their plays.

Akers surprisingly had little to say Wednesday about Oklahoma at the club's last meeting before the two unbeaten teams meet in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas on Saturday.

The club observed a moment of silence for Texas A&M and watched film on the 72-15 "laugh" against Rice but couldn't get Akers to hazard a prediction on the outcome of the Texas-OU contest.

Texas hasn't beaten the Sooners since 1970 and is an underdog this year.

"How much are we going to beat 'em?" someone yelled to Akers.

There were a couple of seconds of silence, and Akers went to another question.

He noted on two occasions in the victory over Rice "half our team was running one play and half was running another. Believe me, when we're sitting here next week I won't have to report that."

Akers acknowledged that running back Earl Campbell and offensive guard Rick Ingraham were "having trouble" holding still until the ball is snapped.

He noted that Campbell was flagged five times in the Oklahoma game last year for moving too soon. It was later learned that OU coaches had asked officials to watch for that particular infraction.

Akers, then at Wyoming, said he didn't think Campbell was in error each time, but he added that the "bad thing about doing it is that people get to looking for it when they don't see it."

Club president Wally Scott asked club members to observe a moment of silence for the "calamity" that happened "when our dear friends went north" — an obvious reference to A&M's 41-3 loss to No. 3 Michigan.

"That's enough," Scott said quickly, "now let's get down to serious business. Coach, go get 'em."

Akers described the Rice game as "another laughter that we've gotten used to the last two or three weeks."

Texas has rolled over three week opponents — Boston College, Virginia and Rice — by a cumulative score of 184-15.

Rangers

ARLINGTON (AP) — The 1977 Texas Rangers had more victories, fans, home runs and pennant hopes than ever before. They also set records for most managers, on-the-field ambushes, fist-fights and angry words.

Internal warfare was declared during spring training in Florida when disgruntled infielder Lenny Randle bushwhacked Frank Lucchesi, punching and kicking the first of the Rangers' four 1977 managers.

"When Lenny Randle punched Frank, it made me think I was back in Oakland again," said relief pitcher Paul Lindblad, who came to Texas from baseball's original Cookoo's Nest, the Oakland A's. "Then I remembered that even the A's never punched a manager."

Not to be left out, pudgy Ranger owner Brad Corbett later cold-cocked a Cleveland fan who called him "fatso."

That was before an angry Corbett proclaimed some of his players "dogs on the field and dogs off the field" and bitterly announced at midseason that he would sell the team.

Meanwhile, Lucchesi, who had exchanged angry words with executive vice president Eddie Robinson, was fired June 22. He learned about it from a reporter.

Enter Eddie Stanky that afternoon to manage a 10-8 victory in Minnesota. Exit a "homesick" Eddie Stanky the next morning.

On June 23, bewildered Minnesota Manager Gene Mauch accepted the lineup card from Connie Ryan, the third different Ranger manager in a four-game series.

"This is getting to be like a Barnum Bailey three-ring circus," one player said at the time. "Who do you suppose will be here today?"

Then Baltimore coach Bill Hunter arrived to reverse the fortunes of the team crowded with high-salaried talent from Corbett's off-season free agent purchases.

"This team had a great deal of talent, but it was confused," Hunter said Sunday before Texas edged Oakland 8-7 for a team-record 94 victories. "I think they were really just looking for a little leadership. I just happened to be the fellow who arrived on the scene."

Under Hunter, the Rangers reeled off 31 victories in one 40 game stretch and grabbed the American League West lead for one day on Aug. 18 only to fade during a scathing win streak by champion Kansas City.

They drew more than 1,250,000 fans for the first time, won seven straight doubleheaders, recorded their first triple play, captured 10 extra-inning games in a row and shattered team records in all but one offensive category.

"These guys played under three different managers in a week and then Brad made the comment about selling the club," said Hunter, who installed pressure clinics on fundamentals. "We tried some things that worked, started winning and got a little confidence, that's all."

HOUSTON (AP) — Touring professionals Babe Hickey and Tom Jenkins shared the lead today going into the third round of the annual Southern Texas Section PGA Golf championship. Both fired second round six-under-par 66s Wednesday to give them a 36 hole total of 132.

Defending champion Tommy Aycock of Kingsville fired a second round 67 and was one stroke behind at 137.

HIGHLIGHTS

BASEBALL
NEW YORK — Brooks Robinson, who completed a 23-year career with the Baltimore Orioles this year as one of the premier third basemen in baseball history, received the prestigious Joe Cronin Award before the start of Wednesday's American League Championship playoff between the New York Yankees and the Kansas City Royals. Robinson's 23 Oriole seasons are a record for one team. He was a member of 18 consecutive American League All-Star teams, was the league's most valuable player in 1974, the World Series MVP in 1970 and winner of 16 straight Gold Glove Awards as the top fielding third baseman in the league.

TENNIS
ATLANTA — Second-seeded Martina Navratilova soundly defeated Wendy Turnbull 6-2, 6-1 to advance to the quarter-finals of the $25,000 Atlanta Women's Tennis Classic. Earlier seventh-seeded Kerry Reid of Greenville, S.C., defeated Betsy Nagelsen of Winston, Ill., 6-6, 3-4, 7-4 in a $75,000 women's tennis tournament.

KAANAPALI, Hawaii — Second-seeded Brian Gottfried beat Tim Gullikson 6-1, 6-3 to advance to the quarter-finals of the $100,000 Island Holidays Tennis Classic. John Lloyd eliminated Colin Dibley 6-2, 6-3 in another second-round match.

Clark, Archie Top AP Schoolboy Honor Roll

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

Opponents of No. 7 ranked Class AAA Huntsville have to make a choice—try to stop the Hornets' running game or stop No. 85.

Last week, Aldine Carver may have made the wrong choice when it stacked up an 8-man line to brunt Huntsville's running game and put single man to man coverage on No. 85, sophomore receiver Lloyd Archie.

Archie caught seven passes for 245 yards including touchdowns of 45, 24 and 50 yards from quarterback Royce Craft to lead the Hornets to a 44-12 victory.

Archie's 245 yards ranks seventh on the all-time Texas schoolboy list for most yards receiving in one game and earns him mention this week in The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Honor Roll.

Lockney tailback Danny Clark, whose coach changed an entire offense just to suit Clark's skills, also earns mention this week for his performance last week.

Clark, a 6-2, 167 pound senior, gained 232 yards on 29 carries in a 21-3 victory over Amarillo River Road last week for his fourth consecutive 200-yard plus rushing performance this season.

"All our opponents talk about is No. 85," Huntsville coach Joe Clements said of Archie. "He's so tall and quick, that he's on top of the defense before they realize it."

"We've got a pretty well balanced team. They played to stop our run and we just try to do what the defense lets us."

Archie was an all-district selection as a freshman last year in both football and basketball.

"Most of them were just real good catches," Clements said. "They were in man coverage and he just beat his man."

Clark has rushed for 940 of the team's 1,200 yards rushing this season after getting 700 yards in 10 games last season.

"I thought Danny would be a good runningback when the season started but I had no idea he'd gain this many yards," said coach Jim Warren, who switched to the slot-I formation. "And the number of carries he has a game doesn't bother him. He's running as hard on the 39th carry as he was on the first."

Clark's 200-yard string also includes 39 carries for 247 yards against Friona, 19 for 204 against Olton and 36 for 210 against Littlefield.

Warren says Clark improved after participating in track last season. Clark placed fifth at the state meet in the 330-yard intermediate hurdles.

"A lot of teams are starting to hone in on him now but the offensive linemen feel they've got to do a better job to block for him," Warren said. "Their job is difficult but they've risen to the occasion so far."

Other Honor Roll nominees this week included:

• George West halfback Steve Stean, who scored all of his team's points, including a game-winning 24-yard field goal with 25 seconds to play, in a 17-14 victory over Odem. Stean scored on runs of two and six yards and kicked both extra points as George West broke a 10-game losing streak.

• Jayton wingback Harold Parker, who rushed only three times in a 33-0 victory over Wilson, but gained 125 yards including touchdowns runs of 80 and 41 yards and snagged a 62-yard pass for a third touchdown.

• Santa Anna runningback Mike Warnock, who played in his first game of the season after recovering from a virus and knee injury. Warnock rushed 165 yards and scored two touchdowns on offense and intercepted two passes and recovered a fumble on defense.

• Sealy runningback Eric Dickinson, who rushed 257 yards against Needville last week to increase his season total to 1,124 yards rushing through five games.

Sundown, O'Donnell Join Poll

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

O'Donnell made its first ever appearance in The Avalanche-Journal area football poll and Sundown made its first appearance of the year among the grid elite.

And, needless to say, O'Donnell mentor Odus Summers was the more surprised of the two, despite the fact Sundown has the only sub-500 ledger among the 25 ranked teams.

"My reaction is one of a stunned nature," replied the Eagle boss. "We've never been ranked and I certainly wasn't expecting it. Not too many people around here feel we've played that tough a schedule."

"Our season is still ahead of us. We can win all our nonconference games and if we don't win any district games, the season will still be a loss. We have to get after it and play good football to compete in our district (5-A, with Seagraves, Stanton, Shallowater and Plains)."

The Eagles, presently 4-0-1, have the week off. "We're taking it pretty easy, trying to do a lot of polish work and eliminate a lot of mistakes we've been making. We've got a big one (Plains) to be ready for in two weeks, so we're not trying to change the pace that much."

Sundown stands 2-3, but lost to No. 3 (area) ranked Sudan 20-14 opening night, fell to No. 1 (both area and state in Class A) Seagraves 32-6 the second week and then was eked out by Plains 15-14 the third week.

However, the Roughnecks levelled Dawson (28-0) and Amherst (26-6) their last two outings and face two "must" games the next two weeks against Anton and Ropesville to keep their string of never having lost a 2-B South Zone game alive.

"Every week is a crucial one for us," explained Sundown boss Bill Dendy. "Right now the crucial one is Anton. We're just going to try and survive that game. We were able to survive the Amherst game."

"Our schedule has been pretty tough, but we've still lost some that we possibly could have won had we been a bit sharper. But that's the way it goes when you play good football teams."

"This (the ranking) is what we've been working for and playing for. I don't know whether we should be up there or not, but it's still a good feeling to know we are (ranked)."

Sundown replaced Meadow, which lost to No. 1-ranked Ropesville last week, in the B listings and O'Donnell replaced Hart, which fell 20-18 to AA Friona, in the A rankings.

Odessa Permian, Perryton, Idalou and Seagraves retained their No. 1 spots in AAAA, AAA, AA and A, respectively, as did Ropes in B.

Class AAAA underwent a shuffle of sorts as Amarillo Tascosa's 25-22 loss to El Paso Riverside dropped the Rebels from second to fourth. Monterey and Amarillo High each climbed a notch to second and third, respectively.

In Class A, Petersburg and Vega each moved up a spot to second and third as Farwell, stunned 29-26 by unheralded Shallowater, fell to fifth.

"Don't talk to me about retirement!"

Okay, let's talk about living at John Knox Village of West Texas!

Because it's not at all what you'd expect retirement to be about.

Lubbock. A beautiful city in the scenic high plains district. Noted for its many recreational facilities, and educational and cultural institutions. John Knox Village of West Texas. A Living-Care Retirement Community.

Living-Care

What is Living-Care? It's a lifestyle as imaginative as the one you lead now. As a Village resident, a one-time Entrance Endowment provides you with a comfortable home for the future, without the cares of expensive and tiresome home management and repairs.

Choice of Lifestyles

At John Knox Village of West Texas, you can choose from garden cottages, villa apartments, and studios, one- and two-bedroom apartments.

A Whole Life

There are activities aplenty at the Village. Facilities include an indoor pool, a woodworking shop and a kiln. There's an ice cream parlor at the Village, too.

You'll never feel any pressure to "join in" at John Knox Village, though. You've chosen the way you want to live, and you're in complete control. Quiet times with family and friends, or just curling up with a good book, are favored activities here, too.

Many residents of the Village have gone back to school, taking classes in degree programs at nearby colleges.

All Village residents and their guests can take advantage of the Village Dining Room, for all meals or just for an occasional night out. Those who require special diets, such as low-sodium or low-sugar, will have their menus personally supervised by the Village dietician.

Health Care

Living-Care is lifestyle, and Living-Care is health care, too. Every John Knox Village resident is provided the immediate availability of health-care services. The Village Med Center is staffed 24 hours a day with professional nurses and aides, should the need ever arise for their services.

Physicians are always on call for emergencies. Your own doctor is always welcome, of course, and you'll find it doubly reassuring that the Med Center Staff are people you already know and trust.

Living-Care Retirement is the creation of Christian Services, Inc., the nation's leader in the development of retirement communities for almost two decades.

Come and see John Knox Village of West Texas. We're in Lubbock, and easy to get to.

NUREYEV-CARON — Leslie Caron and Rudolf Nureyev kiss in London before the Royal Premiere of their film "Valentino," in which Nureyev plays the title role and Caron plays Alla Nazimova, a flamboyant Russian-born Hollywood film star. The biographical extravaganza based on the life of the 1920s silent screen lover Rudolph Valentino casts the actress as the woman who chose Valentino as her leading man in the 1921 movie "Camille." # Rudolf Nureyev Ready To Forget About Role LONDON (AP) — Rudolf Nureyev said this week he wants to forget about his role in the controversial and heavily panned new movie "Valentino," in which he plays nude scenes as the legendary screen lover Rudolph Valentino.

"It's done. It's all finished. Now it's their affair," he told reporters at his London hotel.

When asked about the newspapers' unflattering reviews, Nureyev said, "I have not read any of them."

Will he make another movie, perhaps? "If a film comes along, I may be interested as long as I can go on dancing," he said.

Asked about his immediate future in ballet, he replied: "There is a lot of dancing planned."

The critics seemed almost unanimous in thinking he should stick to dancing rather than take roles such as that of Valentino.

"Valentino" is a dislocated sequence of bizarre events: destructive, silly and dull," wrote Margaret Hinxman in the Daily Mail following the premiere Monday night.

"Rudolf Nureyev may have seemed the natural choice to play Valentino. But there is a Slavic toughness about him that doesn't square with the mild rather simple man who was the real Valentino."

Ian Christie of the Daily Express commented, "Veering between slapstick and realism, over-acted in the supporting roles and clumsily written, (the film) is simply tedious. Rudolf Nureyev dances quite well in the leading role and his performance is never less than adequate and never anything more."

Arthur Thirkell of the Daily Mirror said Russell "isn't at all bad. He looks better than he speaks, striding haughtily about, Latin and ferocious, mouthing courteous endearments to campily star-stricken ladies."

But Tim Radford of The Guardian said Nureyev "isn't at all bad. He looks better than he speaks, striding haughtily about, Latin and ferocious, mouthing courteous endearments to campily star-stricken ladies."

"Valentino," which opened in the United States Wednesday, was the 39-year-old ballet star's debut as an actor. He attended the premiere with Princess Margaret.

The sexually titillating scenes that are found in Russell's "Valentino" included nude love scenes between Nureyev and actresses Michelle Phillips and Penny Milford and an orgy in a crowded drunk tank in a California jail.

The critics had nothing to say about the nude love scenes but most of them objected to the jail scene. Miss Hinxman said it was "ghastly and inaccurate tastelessness." Thirkell said it was "crudely handled — not sickening, just sick."

Christie said it was one of the few things "to wince at" in the movie but in general "Valentino" lacked "the sensationalism, the wild extravagance, the sense of the grotesque we have come to loathe" from Russell.

Radford said the film was "full of good things" and "the overheated, sadistic sequence" in the jail was one of them.

Church Rejects Groppi's Bid

MILWAUKEE (AP) — James E. Groppi, a former Roman Catholic priest who led civil rights demonstrations in the 1960s, has been told his application to become an Episcopal priest is being rejected.

The rejection was by Bishop Charles T. Gaskell of the Milwaukee Episcopal Diocese, who said there is an understanding between his diocese and the Milwaukee Roman Catholic Diocese that neither will accept the transfer of a priest from the other.

The possibility that the Milwaukee diocese would turn him down had been known to Groppi, and he said he has applied to dioceses elsewhere in Wisconsin.

Groppi left the Catholic church a year ago after he was married. He and his wife have been attending St. Andrew's Episcopal Church while he works as a bus driver.

"We are a little disappointed" by Gaskell's announcement, Groppi said. "We will have to look around for a new diocese now."

VAUGHN MEADER

Meader Trying To Change Image

By JON HALVORSEN
WATERVILLE, Maine (AP) — Just once, Vaughn Meader would like to be known as Vaughn Meader the musician, the piano player, the song writer.
"I'd like my songs to get out, I'd like my music to get out," he says. "There's a lot of musicians, there's a lot of people in the business, that know what I do, around where I've done it. But the public is not aware."
"And it's difficult to make the public aware out in Los Angeles because, well, you're fighting the same thing. My image."

Meader's image, permanently fixed in the public's mind in the early 1960s, is that of a young comedian impersonating John F. Kennedy. Then in his mid-20s, he not only sounded like Kennedy, his hair cut like the President's and his toothy grin, he looked like him.
Meader's record album, "The First Family," sold six million copies and he was in demand for TV and the top clubs across the country. In August 1963, Waterville, his hometown, paid tribute to its native son with a motorcade through the business district and a dinner for him.
Three months later, Kennedy was assassinated, and Meader's career went into an eclipse as quickly as it had blossomed.

Since then, Meader has lived a hippie life-style in San Francisco and been a "Yippie" in New York, worked briefly in Kentucky in a federal programs office, started a country music band, cut another comedy album and several single records that failed to sell, made an R-rated film with porno star Linda Lovelace, portrayed a reporter obsessed with the Kennedy assassination in a play that lasted a month and played piano for the sound track of the movie "Bound for Glory," not necessarily in that order. And he's been married twice.

For the past three years, Meader has been living in Los Angeles, which he says is "like not living anywhere," surviving in the music business. Now, he's returned to Maine for the first time in six years to visit relatives and friends. And this time, he says, he intends to stay. But first he plans to return to Los Angeles and try to sell his "CB Santa" record in time for the Christmas season.
"I'd like to sing and play" in Maine, the Meader, 41, his long black hair flecked with gray, said. "Just rip it (his image) down and start locally. Maybe grow and maybe not, but at least play."
Meader returned to Maine once before to live, but his stay, in a cabin in the Sugarloaf Mountain area, lasted only six months.

Now "the music scene here is a little different, I'm a little different," he said.
He's working, too, on a Jimmy Carter impression. "I'm not working on it, I've got it," he says, standing up to deliver a sample. After a minute, he concedes, "It's a little off."

Does he regret his identification as a JFK impersonator?
"Yeah," he said. "Even then, I didn't get out right. And I was growing. I had been on the Sullivan show. I had been on Talent Scouts. And I was booked in the Blue Angel in New York and the hungry in San Francisco. I was evolving as a comedian."

Meader interrupted himself to repeat one of his old political jokes, and reconsidered his answer. "But then again, you know, I had a good ride with it, so I can't knock it..."

Lesley Warren Returns To TV

By JAY SHARBUTT
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It seems only yesterday that Lesley Ann Warren helped fight international evil in "Mission Impossible" and guested so often in other series you felt six of her were at large in TV.

Nope, says Miss Warren, there's only one of her. And that one hasn't done a TV show in over a year, the last being a sitcom called "Snip," which NBC dumped before it even had a chance to premiere.
But she returns to the tube Oct. 16, 17 and 18 when NBC airs its adaptation of Harold Robbins' potboiler, "79 Park Avenue."
Miss Warren, who first scored big in a TV version of "Cinderella," now will be playing a poor New York girl who, to survive, successively becomes a prostitute, a stripper and a madam.
Demure in a blue dress and sporting a small powder burn she suffered on the cheek while taping a CBS musical last week, she was asked what she's been doing during her self-imposed hiatus from TV.

Well, she said, she was in a three-woman play in Chicago, "Vanities," a film called "Harry and Walter Go to New York," and made her debut as a night club singer in a saloon here, Studio One.
She didn't recall the last as a time of much joy.
While she's faced live audiences before, in Broadway musicals, she said she had a severe case of the willies when, backed by a four-piece combo, she stepped before the Studio One crowd to sing.
"It was a heavy experience," said the brown-eyed actress, laughing about it now. "I was unsure of what I wanted to do, and that came through in the act. I didn't feel comfortable..."

"One reviewer said I looked like a lost little girl, trying to look funky on the stage. And that was not far from wrong."

But Miss Warren, who has perfect pitch and says she once recorded an album Capitol never released, plans to have another go at singing soon — but not in a saloon.
This time, she says, it'll be in a recording studio making another album with new songs by a composer friend, Allee Willis.

Lesley, who sets off Sunday on a four-city tour to publicize "79 Park Avenue," admitted that in her earlier years of TV acting she wasn't exactly picky about roles.
"I used to take whatever I was offered because I was crazy to work," the 30-year-old Manhattan native said. "I love to work, so I'd do it all the time. But there was no career direction."

Stars Give To Auction

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — Celebrity souvenir hunters should have a field day at tiny Brescia College in Owensboro, Ky., later this month.
An auction at the college Oct. 15 will feature some of the most unusual souvenirs from some of the most famous people in the country to help raise money for a new student activities campus.
On the block will be one of Telly Savalas' "tootsie roll" pops and a copy of the Pentagon Papers signed by Daniel Ellsberg.

- One of Cary Grant's pajama tops.
- An autographed self-portrait of Alfred Hitchcock.
- A handkerchief from country and western signer Roy Clark.
- A cigarette holder belonging to Phyllis Diller.
- An autographed copy of "All the President's Men" signed by Dustin Hoffman, who starred in the movie version.
- A cleaning bonnet belonging to Carol Burnett.

Cathy Foster, who heads the school's women's club, which is sponsoring the auction, said 600 letters asking donations of items were mailed.
"But no one dreamed we would get such a large response from so many famous people," she said.
Some of their contributions include:
—An autographed picture of Raquel Welch.

President's Brother Billy Enjoys Celebrity Status

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—President Jimmy Carter's most effective ambassador doesn't wear morning coat and striped pants, attend embassy functions, drink champagne in white gloves or fret about protocol.

His brother Billy, the president's ambassador from Dixie, envoy to show business and the best thing to happen to beer since the tab opener.

Sixpack Billy dropped into the UPI Los Angeles bureau the other morning and quickly attacked a king-size can of Coors.

Billy was accompanied by a bleary-eyed, bewhiskered man named Oscar Belinda, a new friend he'd met at a dance contest. Oscar grabbed a brew with alacrity crying, "I really need this."

Oscar, 75, a native of Leeds, England, is known as the Flying Yorkshireman. He placed third in the marathon dance at Knott's Berry Farm where Billy had made a personal appearance. Billy likes people and Oscar is definitely a people.

Brother Billy, unlike the brothers of Presidents Nixon and Johnson, is highly visible and enjoying every moment of it.

He's become a star in his own right. He's a warm extrovert who travels the country three or four days a week appearing at fairs, hoedowns and on television.

Show Gains Fans In Portugal

By ROB McCLOUGHIN

LISBON (AP)—Portuguese still debate the merits of communism, socialism and democracy but a new obsession is gripping the country for the first time since the long time right-wing dictatorship fell in 1974—a Brazilian television serial called "Gabriela".

Political strife seems to get less attention these days than this story of a Brazilian orphan girl, now barely halfway through a marathon 150 episodes. The show runs a half hour five nights a week.

Government TV programmers estimate that Gabriela attracts five million viewers on an average night, nearly half the population of a country that has only one million TV sets.

Once there were demonstrations and the noisy street life normal to a warm southern European climate. Now Portugal virtually closes down when Gabriela goes on at 8:35 p.m. Fans can catch up with earlier episodes they may have missed by tuning in the second TV channel an hour later.

Hostesses time their parties for after Gabriela or risk drinking alone. Trendy guests show up at costume parties in Gabriela outfits.

"We tried to avoid it as long as we could," said Teresa Mota, a boutique manager with a husband and two children. "Then we saw it by chance on a neighbor's set and found ourselves wondering what would happen next. We took another peek and that was it... We ordered our own TV set the next day."

Loosely adapted from a novel by Brazilian writer Jorge Amado, the serial deals with the schemes of merchants and the foibles of their glamorous wives in a small, Brazilian cocoa town in the 1920s. Gabriela is a dazzling orphan whose uninhibited behavior enchants the men and scandalizes the women. Gabriela is a Brazilian TV production filmed in Rio de Janeiro.

Portuguese viewers admire the serial's Brazilian guitar rhythms and its hint on the Amazon River jungle their ancestors set off to tame hundreds of years ago. The Brazilian way of speaking Portuguese is also catching on.

"It took us a few episodes to get used to the language," Mrs. Mota said. "But now we even find Brazilian words creeping into our speech, although mostly we just do it for fun."

In any case, Gabriela is easy to watch for the many Portuguese who cannot read and many more who dislike the Portuguese subtitles attached to some imported TV programs.

The serial is having other effects. Now the streets are full of Gabrielas, whose waist-length curls tumble untidily down bared backs.

The conversational clamor dies in cafes as Gabriela time nears, and all eyes turn to the TV set over the bar. Normally loud-talking Portuguese tell each other to be quiet.

Even the Portuguese enthusiasm for movies has been dented and attendance has declined.

"Everyone arrives late for films now but the worst is that most people just aren't making the effort at all," complained Jose Ferreira of the Cinema Companies Association. "We changed our schedules around but we don't seem able to compete."

Some movie theaters have put television sets in their lobbies to try to win back audiences.

"If people know they can see Gabriela while they stand in line to buy tickets, they'll come," a theater manager said. "It has helped a little, except that now the lobby is jammed before the evening session."

"What we should do is put the TV in the auditorium and show the films outside."

With half the series still to run, most Portuguese are putting off thinking about the day when they will have to kick the habit.

"Round about Christmas, I hope we'll get back to a normal routine around here," said Mrs. Mota. "But what would I do in the evenings?"

Said her husband, Fernando. "I don't even care to think about it."

Brazil's population of 5 million lives in an area of 10,700 square miles, about one-fifth the size of New York State.

Billy sipped his beer gratefully and said, "I'm kinda like a family black sheep, but I'm different from other Presidents' brothers. I don't peddle influence. I peddle Billy Carter. I don't represent any big corporations and I leave national politics alone."

"Show business and politics are the same thing. You shake a lot of hands and meet a lot of people and you smile a lot. But I've always smiled."

"I like to play politics, like campaigning for Jimmy. But I don't like to run for office. I ran five times and lost four. That told me something."

Billy has had offers to star in his own television show, but he isn't willing to commit himself to a show business career.

"I've enjoyed instant fame so far," he said. "I don't watch TV and if I had a show of my own I wouldn't watch that either."

"One thing I like about making all these appearances is that I got out of the class of being 'The President's Brother.' I'm Billy Carter. I'm in show business on a 90-day basis. When it isn't fun I'll quit and go hide in Georgia."

"I earn more money than the President, but I sleep in hotel rooms and he sleeps in the White House. And that makes a difference. But I wouldn't change places with my brother for anything. I only get drunk in hotel rooms."

Billy thinks he's the same good old southern boy he was before Jimmy made it to the Presidency. But he sees some changes in his brother.

"Before Jimmy became President we sounded so much alike when we talked that even our wives couldn't tell the difference on the telephone," Billy said.

"I still talk southern and Jimmy talks kinda mixed up now."

Billy said the President has never asked him to keep a low profile. The only time he's discussed politics with his brother was on the occasion of supporting Alabama's George Wallace for re-election. Jimmy neither encouraged nor discouraged Billy's endorsement.

"I don't think I'm an embarrassment to the President," Billy said. "I never say anything about him. But we talk on the phone all the time. I like to call and kid him."

Candid to a fault, Billy was asked why he is allowed to travel without protection of the Secret Service.

He said, "I don't need security because people like me."

Billy thinks of himself as a good ambassador for the south. But the term "redneck" puzzles him. He doesn't object to the appellation nor does he mind being called Sixpack Billy. He prides himself on being easy to get along with.

Billy is a man of integrity. When the new beer, Billy, is marketed in November it will be a brew of his own choice. Seven independent breweries brought six different brews for his approval.

"I tasted all of them and chose a medium-heavy beer," he said. "They told me I'd tasted so many it might be difficult to distinguish one from the other. So I went back later and chose the same brew."

Billy will soon be seen as a guest with Dinah Shore and on other national television shows. Offers continue to pour in for appearances around the country.

"When I first started making appearances I gave speeches," Billy said. "I found out quick that nobody likes speeches. No matter what you say it's boring. So I just talk to the people for two minutes and we're all happy."

The Flying Yorkshireman, revived by the beer, nodded wise agreement.
